we would like to thank the members of our staff for their enthusiasm and assistance. we are especially grateful to the girls who willingly worked with us on "last minute" problems.

special thanks to miss madeline jenkins for her advice and understanding; she was always there when we needed her. thanks too to miss carol murray of college activities office for her frequent and cheerful aid.

we owe a special debt to mr. charles clegg of comet press—without his encouragement, patience, and knowledge this yearbook could never have been completed.

the editors also wish to thank the photographers—keith a. brennan, sandy kirsch, and kenneth wolf—who worked on special assignments. credit also goes to the new york convention and visitors bureau for photographs of new york city.

To the woman whose untiring efforts have helped Barnard immeasurably . . .

To the woman whose office door is always open to students . . .

To the woman whose straightforwardness and honesty have made us sit up and think . . .

To the woman whose sense of humor has relaxed us and made us feel at home . . .

To the woman whose smile and spirit have made us glad to be a part of the institution for which she works . . .

To

JEAN T. PALMER
General Secretary of Barnard College

we dedicate this book.

barnard in new york

The ivory tower of pedantry is an obsolete building on the Barnard campus—dwarfed, one might say, by the skyscrapers of New York, which stand as constant reminders that there is a life beyond the Green Gate.

Opposed to the static world of books is the ever-changing world of the city; in contrast to the theoretical world of ideas is the practical world of people. New York constantly brings to one's attention and concern the real world and insistently reminds Barnard students of their relationship to that world.

What of the Barnard girl who wants to be a creative writer? Every type and every mood exists in New York City: silent, staring subway-riders; elegant, aloof Bergdorf-shoppers; friendly, funny school children with their disconcerting youthful independence; lonely, misplaced Village wanderers. With a little imagination and a lot of observation, situations and characters cannot help but spring to mind.

Majoring in government, a Barnard student can gain contacts, experience, and awareness: by working for the local political party, attending night court, or working for voter registration, she can see, first-hand, government in action.

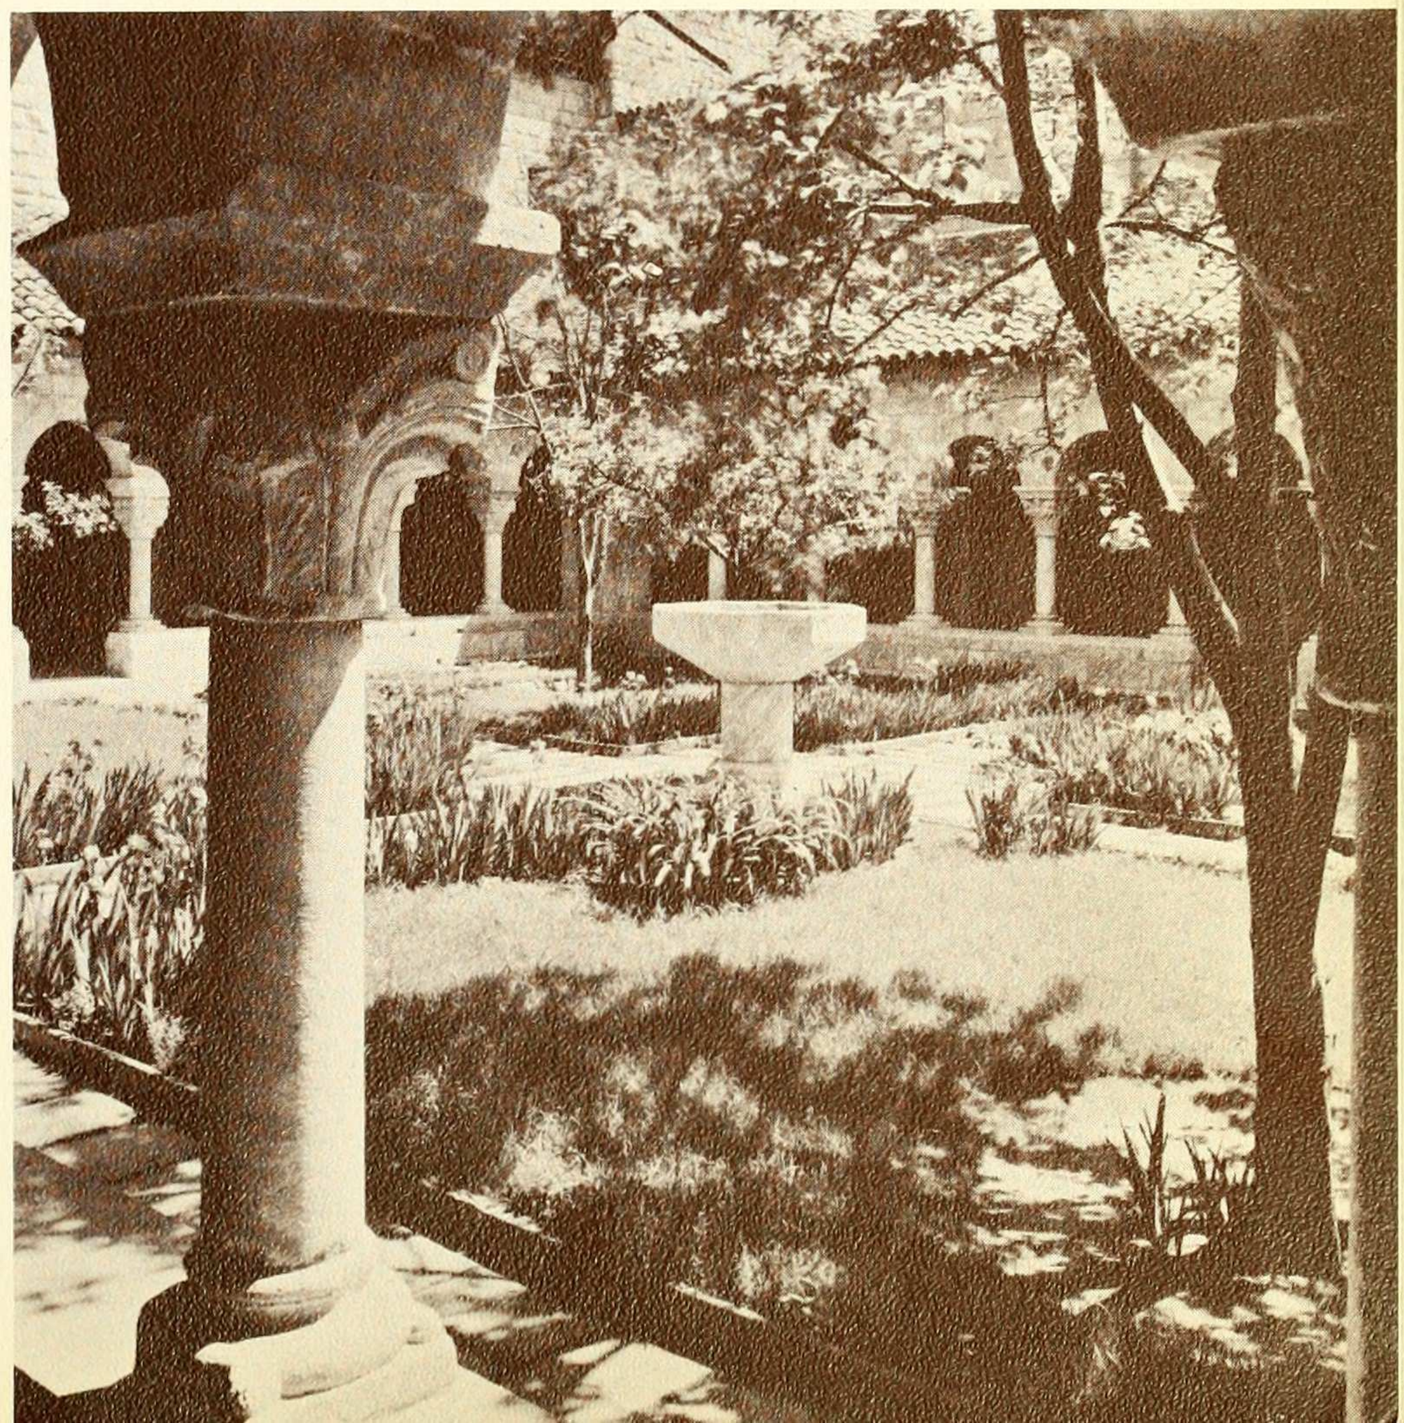
Even as New York City is the extension of the professional and academic life of the average Barnard student, so does New York City provide cultural enrichment and excellent entertainment to brighten her extra-curricular life: "Don Giovanni" at the Met, Picasso's "Guernica" at the Museum of Modern Art, Pirandello off-Broadway, Shakespeare in the Park, Bernstein at the Philharmonic, and medieval tapestries at the Cloisters.

Maybe it's the tangible cultural, social, and vocational offerings that make New York so attractive. Maybe it's just the secret silent thrill in knowing that if you've got to stay up until 3:30 a.m., somewhere, someone is up with you. Maybe it's just curiosity overcoming provincialism as you peek into the imagined lives of the strangers about you.

Whatever it is that has caught you, it's in New York, the city that has enriched Barnard and its students.

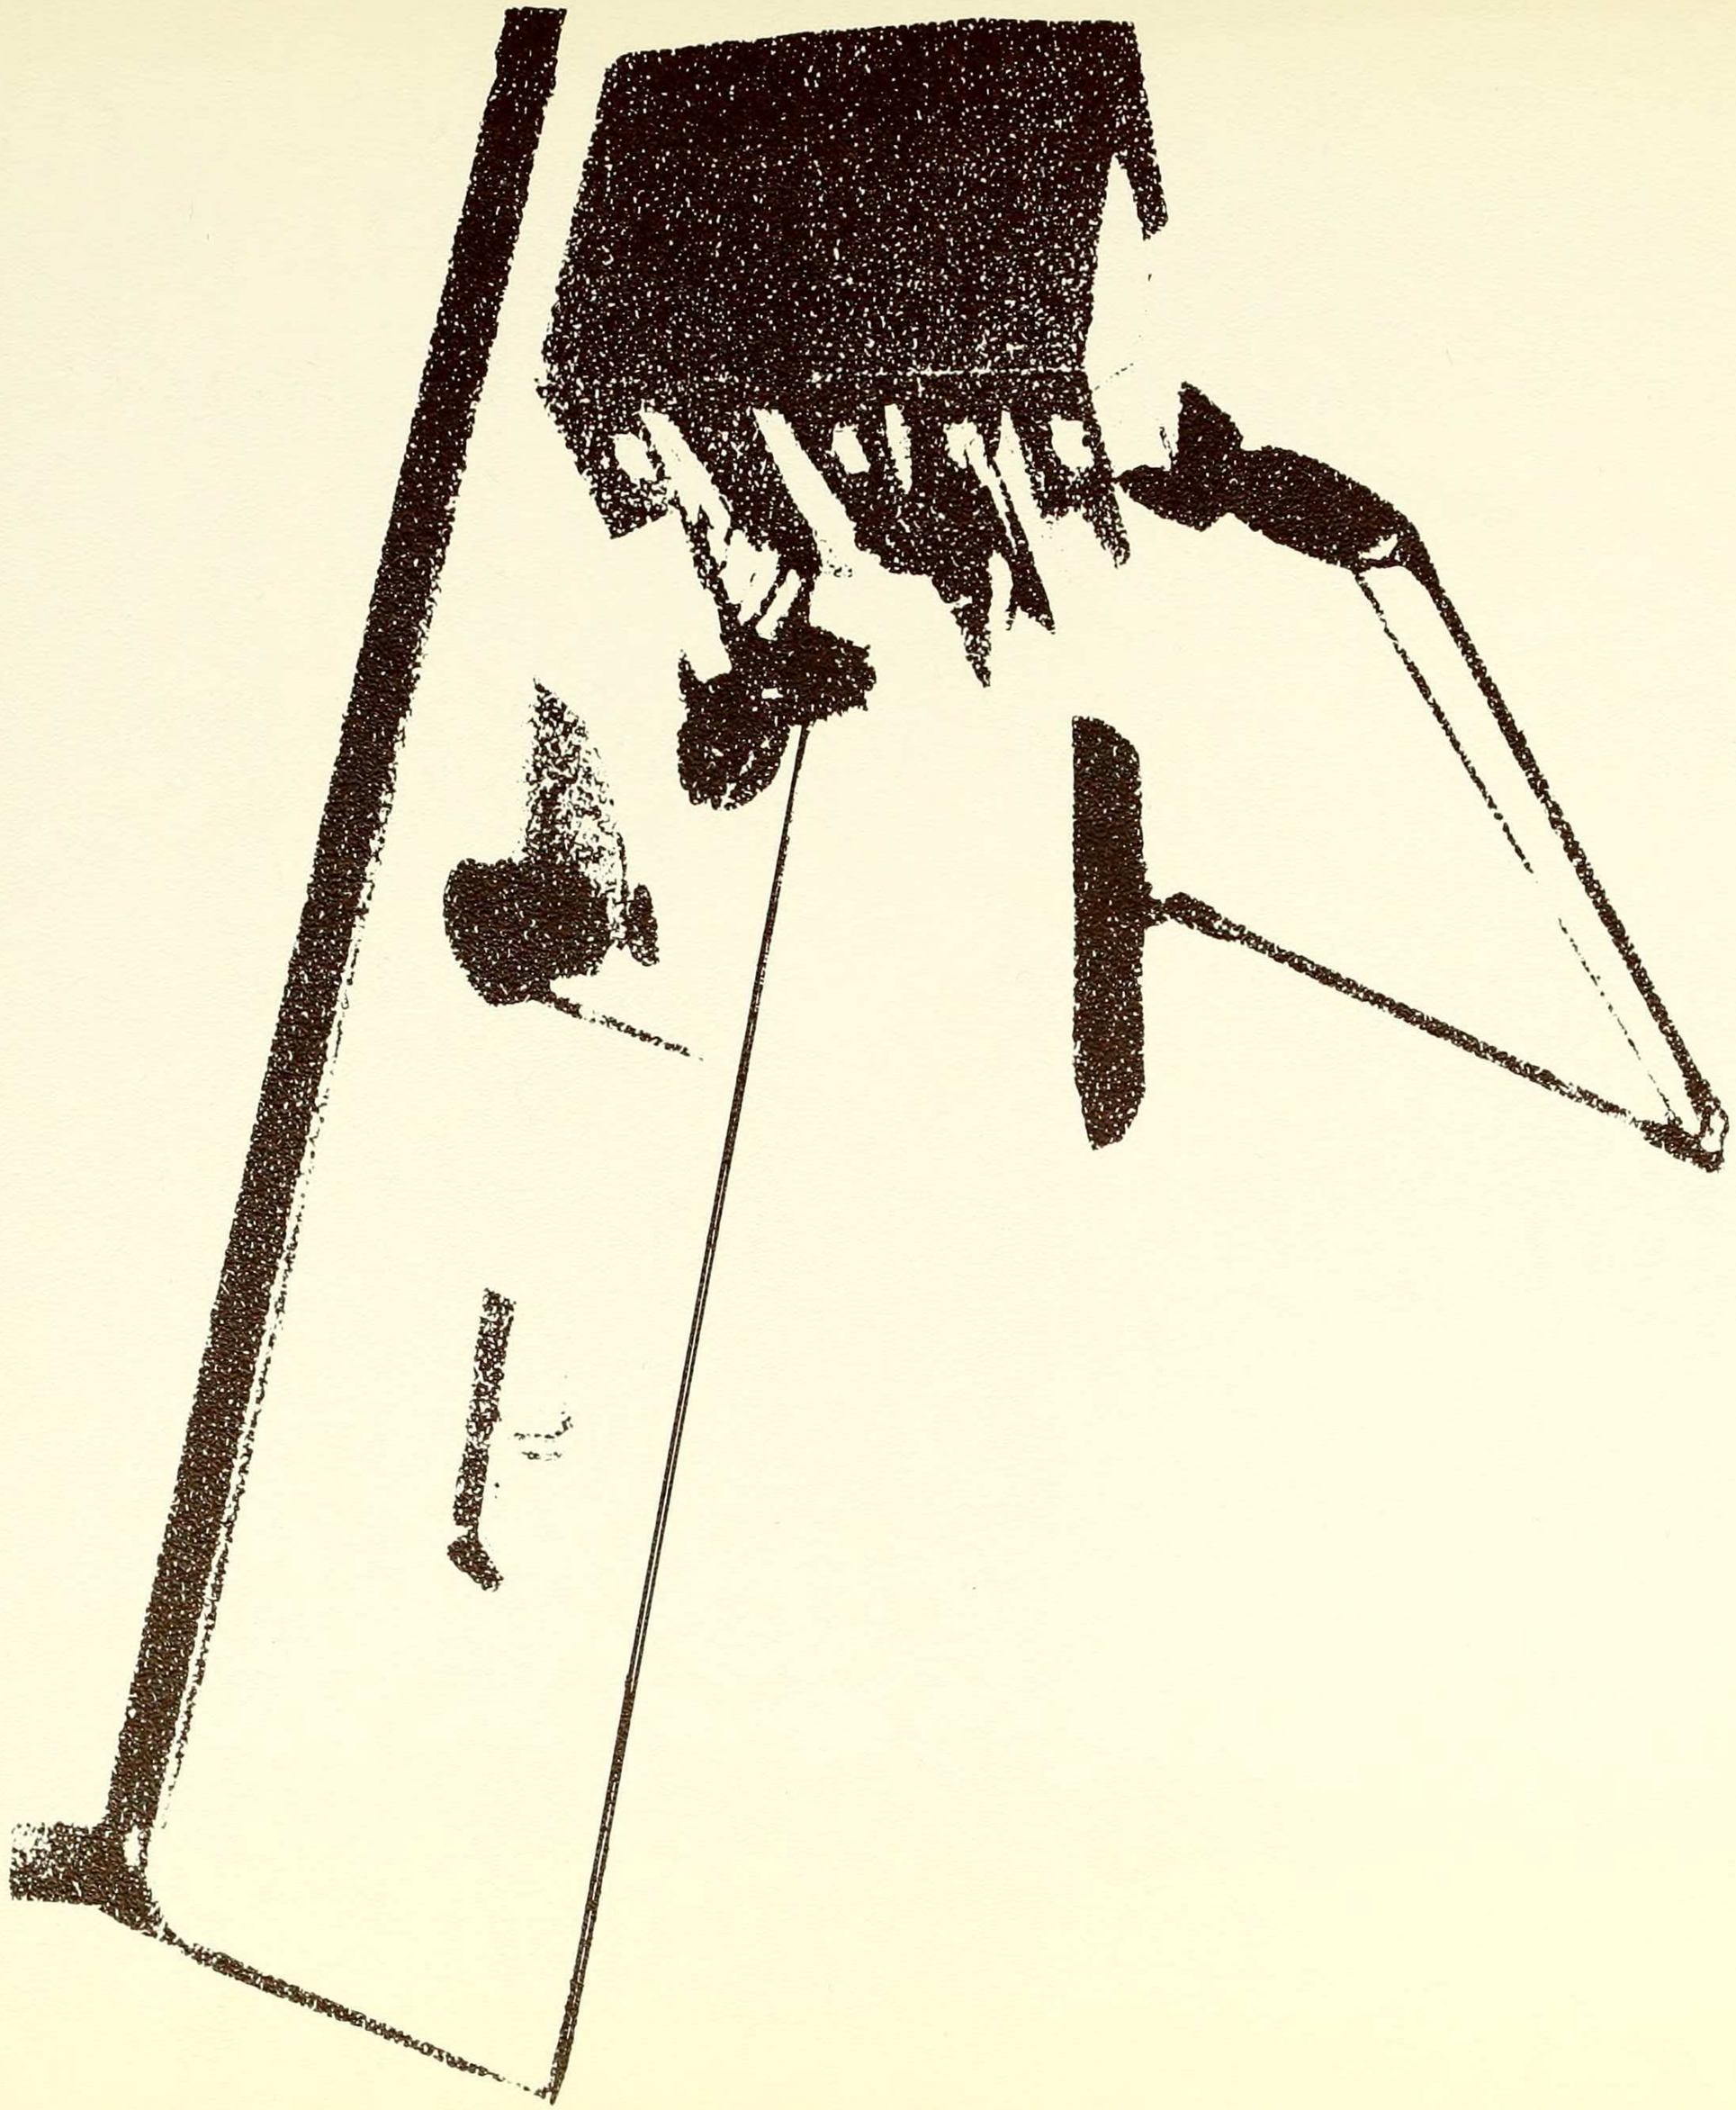


administration

Barnard has a unique set of problems not faced by every woman's college. It is part of a large university and must struggle to maintain its individuality. It must be acutely aware that it is not situated in its "ivory tower" but in the heart of New York. Moreover, it has to maintain the high academic standards it has set for itself.

These and many other problems must be attended to daily. Frequently, students are unaware of the many hours of planning, programming, and discussion that go into the making of one decision. Yet, in another sense, this unawareness should be considered a compliment. It is a mute acknowledgement that the administrators of Barnard College are performing their duties with maximum efficiency.

At Barnard we are fortunate to have an administration whose sole interest is the welfare of the college in general and of the student in particular.



Rosemary Park, president

"The way to greater understanding is the ability to respect others. We know what to respect through knowledge and knowledge comes through education," President Rosemary Park stated, stressing the importance of education in her first address to students, faculty and administration.

The former president of Connecticut College was greeted with two standing ovations from her audience when she officially assumed the presidential duties on November 15, 1962.

Her infinite curiosity, never-ending stream of questions and close contact with undergraduates enabled Miss Park to quickly gain an excellent understanding of all facets of Barnard.

Miss Park sees housing as one of the College's major questions. "What do the students want? What is a residence program supposed to accomplish? Is it just for shelter or is it a part of the educational environment?" she asks. "The Barnard student body must be kept national in character," she emphasizes.

Miss Park views the rising cost of higher education as a problem that will soon affect all students. She stresses the need "to bring students and faculty together on matters that are of concern to both groups."

To facilitate more independent study and study in depth, Miss Park proposes the institution of a four-course system and of a reading period.

Miss Park views the years ahead as vital to the growth of Barnard. We view the years ahead with confidence and optimism, for we are convinced that Barnard is in capable and sensitive hands.

Classrooms and conferences are the usual settings in which Barnard students see their professors. Barnard professors guide students' academic careers and inspire them to pursue individual interests. Barnard professors are a dedicated group of men and women who receive the greatest satisfaction from seeing their efforts awaken interest in their students. Their enthusiasm is of vital importance and their advice is requested and respected.

Their influence, however, is not restricted to the campus. Barnard professors have written for Harper's Magazine, Columbia University Forum, The New York Times, and Variety; they have spoken over WNEW-TV, NBC-TV, WNYC-FM, ABC-TV, CBS Radio; they have participated in panels and conferences in Washington, D.C., Los Angeles and as far away as Revenna and Tunis.

They have studied in Belgium and taught in Formosa. Among their many awards, they have received Guggenheim Fellowships and a National Institute of Health Research Grant.

Acute consciousness of a responsibility to educate and active participation in the "outside world"—these are the characteristics of the members of the Barnard faculty.

reunion—alumnae greet each other outside wollman library

what every '63er the associate barnard

Did you know that '63 takes the alumnae count to over 13,000?

Did you know that over 500 of these alumnae live in the greater New York metropolitan area?

Did you know that there are 35 Barnard College Clubs and over 100 official Barnard representatives in the United States and Puerto Rico?

Did you know that on graduation you automatically become a member of the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College and no dues are required?

Did you know that the Alumnae Magazine, published quarterly, will be sent to you free IF you keep the Alumnae Office informed as to your current address and name?

The Alumnae Association has its headquarters in 118 Milbank Hall, Barnard College, New York 27. It is to this office that change of address (or name) should be sent so that all communications from the College will reach you promptly.

The Alumnae Association has a board of 21 directors elected by the alumnae. Nine of these directors are chairmen of standing committees whose interests cover class and club organization, the Alumnae Magazine, fund-raising, the awarding of an annual alumnae fellowship, vocational advice to undergraduates and graduates, the preparation of an annual ballot, the bylaws and the working budget for the Association.

The Alumnae Magazine is mailed from New York in November, February, May and August. Your class correspondent is noted in each issue in the '63 section. Be sure to keep her informed about yourself. As you like to read what other members in the class are doing, so they want to read about you.

Remember the occasional alumnae who used to audit some of your classes? Don't forget that you have the same privilege. No charge; just check with the Alumnae Office. As an alumna, you can also use the Barnard Library, the tennis courts and the Barnard Camp.

If you are interested in joining a Barnard College Club, check with the Alumnae Office to find the one nearest you. If you find yourself in a strange town where there is no Barnard Club, the Alumnae Office can give you the names of local alumnae.

Barnard will be 75 years old in 1964. Watch the Alumnae Magazine for announcements of special activities on campus and in various cities throughout the United States. '63's first reunion will be in June of this anniversary year. The Alumnae Association will send out the invitations and reserve a room for the class supper. Plan now to attend.

Over twelve thousand members of the Associate Alumnae

of Barnard College

welcome 1963,

the newest class to join us.

It was alumnae who started the Barnard library and placement office, ran a co-operative dormitory for undergraduates, and purchased Barnard Camp for the College. It is alumnae who still administer our Student Loan Fund and advise on vocations.

We know that like their predecessors, 1963 alumnae will find pleasure in helping future undergraduates.
