Alumnæ Lectures

The Associate Alumnae will continue this year the course of lectures and informal teas to undergraduates, begun last year with "Architecture for Women." The exact date of the next lecture has not yet been decided on, but it will take place November fifteenth, and will have as its subject "Journalism for Women." Several successful women journalists have been invited to speak of their experiences, and the opportunities offered in this field.

The Dean Addresses Undergraduate Meeting

Before the regular meeting of the Undergraduate Association on Thursday, Miss Gill informally addressed the students. Miss Gill spoke on the value of the Association to the College. On its ability, if properly conducted, to be not only the best possible influence within the College, but also to influence public sentiment in favor of Barnard.

In the matter of social representation, the Dean laid stress on the newness of the College, and on the importance of forming social traditions, which, while simple and inexpensive, should be also dignified and finished.

Miss Gill extended her greeting to the Association and assured the students that she would be ready, in any matter which they might lay before her, to aid them in every way possible.

Y. W. C. A. Constitution Amended

On Tuesday, November 12th, the Y. W. C. A. will hold a meeting for the purpose of amending its constitution in such a way as to admit the Barnard branch into the State Association.

With this end in view the following amendments to the constitution will be advocated:

ARTICLE III.

Membership.

Section 1. The membership of the Association shall consist of Active, Associate, Sustaining, and Honorary Members.

Sec. 2. Active Members.—Active membership, i.e., the voting and office-holding membership, is limited to young women of the undergraduate body who are members in good standing in evangelical churches, and we hold those to be evangelical which, maintaining the Holy Scriptures to be the only infallible rule of faith and practice, do believe in the Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten of the Father, King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, who was made sin for us, though knowing no sin, bearing our sins in his own body on the tree, and that His name is the only name under Heaven given among men whereby we must be saved from everlasting punishment.—Constitution of Young Women's Christian Association of the States of New York and New Jersey.

Sec. 3. Associate Members.—All other members of the student body, alumnae, and officers of the college and their wives, may be associate members, and may share in all other privileges of the Association.

Sec. 4. Sustaining Members.—Any trustee or friend of the College who pays not less than the annual membership fee

BARNARD BULLETIN,
BARNARD COLLEGE,
COLUMBIA UNIV., N. Y.

MONDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1901.

It is generally conceded by both undergraduates and alumnae of Barnard that the resources of the English Department of the College proper are too limited to supply the needs of the students. This assertion does not touch the Rhetoric Department, which in its Freshmen, Sophomore and Junior courses is designed to do broad practical and thorough work and to lay a stable foundation for supplementary literary researches. It has to do only with those elective English courses, which in number, value and scope seem so noticeably inadequate. And what serves to make this more apparent is the fact that across the way at Columbia, besides having a markedly greater number of courses from which to choose in the English Department itself, rich opportunities are opened to undergraduates in the five really excellent courses in literature and criticism in the Department of Comparative Literature under Professor Woodbury, Dr. Spingarn and Mr. Chase. It certainly seems rather a pity that with our boasted and recently acquired equality in university privileges, there should not come a corresponding equality of advantages in the number of our courses.

At Barnard, aside from the routine work in rhetoric and composition there are but six elective English courses, specifically English, 15, 16, 19, 21, 23 and 24. The first two are Anglo-Saxon, and are usually considered too technical for students not specializing in English. Of the four remaining courses, 19, Professor Price's Shakespeare course, is the only one dealing with a special and detailed subject. The others, as they are catalogued, are merely general surveys of American literature. English poetry and prose, which, covering as they do extensive fields in a limited space of time, are necessarily somewhat "scrappy" and superficial. English 24, moreover, being a new course, hitherto practically included in the Sophomore Rhetoric Course, is not at the present time especially desirable as a Junior or Senior elective.

Naturally, in this state of affairs, the ridiculously few possible English courses are elected by the students during their first three years, leaving the Seniors desirous of specializing in English, and there are many, powerless to continue their work, and forced, if literature be their aim, patiently to await graduate days when Columbia barriers are less obstructive.

To prevent this state of affairs from becoming more and more of a grievance, the BULLETIN hopes a way out of the difficulty may be obtained, if the conditions of the Rockefeller fund are realized, by founding and maintaining new professorships and courses in the English literature department at Barnard.

It might perhaps be well to make a statement in the BULLETIN of a subject that is likely to be brought up for discussion at an undergraduate meeting in the near future, so that students may be prepared to vote intelligently on the question.

Owing to the fact that this year nearly all of the students of the College lunch at 12.30, the number to be served is quite beyond the powers of the waitresses, and there is a good deal of delay and confusion in getting lunch.

For this reason, there will be a motion put to the Society, whether or not there shall be a petition submitted to the Dean that the system of self service and trays used at Teachers' College be introduced into Barnard.

It is the pleasure of the BULLETIN to say a word of thanks for the books that Mrs. Meyer and Professor Robinson have been instrumental in placing in the Reading Room. For the students of History 11 these books are hardly less than a boon, and the whole study of history at Barnard has been greatly aided.

1902 Notes:

At the meeting of the class of 1902 called for Friday, November 8th, there was no quorum obtained. Another meeting will be held on Monday, November 11th, at 12.20, to elect the chairman of the committee for the Undergraduate play. This meeting is of the utmost importance, as the work of the play committee cannot commence until this election. A quorum is earnestly desired.
