STUDENT DAY-CELEBRATIONS Installation Dance.

The Installation Dance, Thursday night, was a most decided success. It was the largest students' ball ever held at Columbia. Of the seven hundred couples, there was a fair representation of Barnard students. The decorations for the Installation made the dance outwardly the most attractive ever given in the Gymnasium. There were twenty dances and many extras. Supper was served in the large lecture-hall above the gymnasium after the dance. The music by Van Baar was particularly good.

President Butler and his twenty-six class-mates of '82, reached the dance about ten o'clock. After the dinner given in honor of the President at Claremont they were enthusiastically received.

Student Day Events—Concert

On Friday evening, the Columbia University Musical Society gave a concert in the gymnasium. The doors were open to all the students and their friends. A program of fourteen numbers was most successfully rendered. The "Short Talk on Comic Operas," by Anson F. Robinson, '04C., deserves especial mention for its cleverness and originality.

Among the musical organizations taking part were the Glee Club, Mandolin Club, University Octette, Philharmonic Orchestra, and Alumni Quartette. There were also a number of selected solos, and recitations by undergraduates and alumni.

Athletic Events

On Friday afternoon, the annual Spring championship track games were contested on South Field. C. B. Marshall did the best work, winning the half-mile run.

The inter-class baseball game for the championship, resulted in a victory for the freshmen over the Sophomores by a score of 14-12. There was a large number of spectators present.

In the morning the oarsmen held a regatta on the Harlem river. There were five eight-oared crews in all which raced; three are in the Varsity and two in the Freshmen contest.

Earl Hall Reception

On Friday afternoon, April 18th, a reception was held at Earl Hall. The new building was for the second time opened to the public and nearly one thousand guests visited it. Most of these were Columbia students and their friends, but there were sight-seers, whose interest in Columbia had been aroused by the news of the installation.

The Reception Committee, consisting of Miss Gill, Mrs. Hutton, Mrs. Russell, Mrs. Kurchway and Miss Daniell, Direct-ress of Teachers' College. The guests were conducted through the building by members of the Students Committee, made up of undergraduates of Barnard and Teachers' College. On the first floor of the Hall a small orchestra furnished music, and in the Ladies' Parlors below, frappe was served to the guests.

Pres. Butler, much to everyone's regret, was unable to attend the reception.

Luncheon to Installation Guests at Barnard

Following the reception given on Saturday morning in the Avery Library at Columbia, by the University Council, to the out-of-town guests, was a large luncheon given in the Barnard Theatre. This was given by the Trustees of Barnard to women guests from out-of-town. Women Trustees of Barnard, the wives of other Trustees, and Miss Gill, acted as hostesses.

Among guests of note present, were: Miss Hazard, President of Wellesley; Miss Irwin, Dean of Radcliffe; Miss Thomas, Dean of Bryn Mawr; Miss Woolley, President of Holyoke; Mrs. Hadley, wife of President Hadley, of Yale; Mrs. Raymond, wife of the President of Union College; Miss Salmon, of Vassar; Miss Leach, of Vassar; Miss Jordan, of Smith College; and Miss Scott, of Bryn Mawr. The guests, many of them wives of College Presidents present at the Installation, numbered about one hundred in all.

Installation Day Program

From 10 a. m. to 2 p. m. the buildings of the University, including Barnard and Teachers College, were open to visitors.

At 10:30 there was a reception in the Avery Library by the University Council to the Presidents and representatives of other Colleges and Universities, followed by an inspection of the buildings.

At 12:30 a body of students assembled in front of the Library to welcome distinguished visitors. When President Roosevelt, at one o'clock, drove up before the steps, preceded by the men of Squadron A, and accompanied by Secretary Cortelyou and William C. Schermerhorn, he was greeted by the singing of "Sans Souci" and rousing cheers for the President. Governor Odell and Mayor Low, on their arrival, were also met with enthusiastic yells and cheers from the mass of students in caps and gowns on the Library steps.

From 12:30 to 1:30 there were various luncheons to invited guests: in the Officer's Dining Room to visitors from the Colleges and Universities; in Barnard College by the Trustees of the College to invited guests, and in Room 307 of the Library by the Trustees of the University to the President, the Governor and the Speakers.

At 2:30 p. m. the procession, in eight divisions, moved from the Library, where it had formed, across the campus and down the steps to the gymnasium, where the Installation ceremonies were held. The path of the procession was lined with on-lookers.

Installation Exercises

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Marwin R. Vincent, D. D., in which was incorporated prayer of President Johnson on laying the corner stone of King's College on August 23, 1756.

William Colford Schermerhorn, A. M., Chairman of the Board of Trustees, delivered an address in behalf of the Trustees, and presented the charter and keys of the University to President Butler. After taking the oath of office, President Butler was seated in the historic chair of Columbia's presidents, once the property of Benjamin Franklin, and was duly installed amid repeated and enthusiastic applause and cheers from the Columbia students.

Dean Van Amringe delivered an address of welcome on behalf of the Faculties, in which he traced the history of the institution as King's College, Columbia College and Columbia University, and gave a brief survey of the conditions which had met each of the presidents at his installation. He sketched the personality of the different presidents, and told what each had accomplished in the growth and broadening of the College. He spoke especially of Ex-President Low, the first president of the University. He expressed his fullest confidence that under the leadership of President Butler, Columbia will yearly become more powerful.

In an address on behalf of the Alumni, Robert Fulton Cutting, A. M., expressed the fullest confidence in the new president, with the assurance that Columbia's sons would always honor Columbia's President.

Next, A. B. A. Bradley, President of the Senior Class, gave an address of welcome on behalf of the students. He said that not executive ability alone or scholarship alone would suffice in the president of the University—above all was needed a man in the broadest sense of the term. He expressed the satisfaction everywhere manifest that President Butler had himself been a Columbia man, and would therefore be in close sympathy with the traditions of the place. He spoke of the spread and growth of Columbia activities, of athletics, Earl Hall, the need of dormitories and a field and the aims for which Columbia men strive. In mentioning college publications, he said that Presi-

COLUMBIA UNIV., N. Y.

TUESDAY, APRIL 22, 1902.

In entering heartily into the student and official celebration with which Columbia welcomed and honored President Butler, Barnard realized to the full the large privileges and rare opportunities of the great university of which she forms a part. The administration of a philosopher, whose watchword is scholarship and service, opens a new era of promise and progress in the history of the University.

The Sophomore Play

On Wednesday afternoon, April 16, the Sophomores entertained the college by the presentation of a three act play, entitled "Everybody's Friend." The characters were all well taken. Miss Fountain in her role of the little Militia Major, took her ridiculous part exceedingly well, while Miss Weck, as the neglected wife, Mrs. Featherly, did especially good work in the last act. Miss Aplegate, as Mr. Icebrook, was easily the best one in the cast, and took her rather difficult part with the ease and spirit which was necessary to make it a success.

The play was repeated on Thursday afternoon.

Entertainment by the French and German Societies

La Société Française and the Deutscher Kreis, assisted by the Glee Club, will give an entertainment for the College on Monday, April 21st, at 4:30. Two of the numbers on the program will be short plays,—one, "La Soupière," the other, "Herrengasse 17 A und B."

Undergraduate Play

The second annual play given by the Undergraduate Association, will take place on Friday and Saturday, April 25th and 26th. The students are reminded that the tickets should be purchased as soon as possible.

dent Butler had been an editor of the "Columbiad."

There followed addresses by the Presidents of the Presidents of Harvard, Yale, Princeton Universities, the University of Chicago and the United States Commissioner of Education.

President Eliot, of Harvard, pointed out the fact that Columbia, like many other colleges, had chosen a layman, whose life had been spent along lines of education, authorship and administration, in contrast to the policy of those colleges which had chosen ministers as presidents. "President Butler," he said, "has come to office at a fortunate moment, after a predecessor, whose work has co-ordinated the various schools of the university."

In speaking of college training, Pres. Eliot said, that through it the higher walks of all professions will be filled with men of broad culture, and the social and industrial powers which uplift society will be found in the advance and co-operation of the professions. A university set in this great city will accomplish much in influencing American life.

Pres. Eliot ended by congratulating Pres. Butler on entering a path for which he was so well prepared.

President Hadley, of Yale, recalled the fact that the first President of Columbia, Dr. Barnard, was a Yale man, and that the founder of the Law School had also hailed from Yale. Another evidence of the close connection existing between the universities lay in the awarding of honorary degrees. Pres. Hadley hoped that a yet closer organization might be more fully recognized.

President Hadley then spoke of the personal relationship existing between Pres. Butler and himself, saying, "You and I, Mr. President, have grown up together, have fought through many of the same controversies, sometimes on opposite sides, sometimes on the same side, but always with profit to me. I trust that when we, who are taking up these positions are old, the men growing up in the colleges now may say that our work was as well done as that of our immediate predecessors."

President Patton, of Princeton, congratulated President Butler on entering on his work while still on the "Morningside of life." He spoke of the larger horizon opening on university life, saying, in part, "The universities must come out of their cloistered seclusion,—must realize that they have a part to play in the national life in order to be worthy of the great gifts they have received or are about to receive. The period of undergraduate work must be shortened in order that the "strenuous life" may be entered upon.

Pres. Patton spoke of the uselessness of mere bundles of tabulated facts, saying, "It is a good omen for this university that you have put a philosopher in the president's chair. It is the philosopher alone who can make these cold dead facts of the world live."

President Harper, of Chicago University, brought greetings from another urban college, whose problems are much the same as those of Columbia.

The last address was made by Dr. William T. Harris, United States Commissioner of Education.

The inauguration address by the President came next. President Butler reviewed the general history of education, and came at last to the university problems of to-day.

In part he said:

"A university is not for scholarship alone. In these modern days the university is not apart from the activities of the world, but in them and of them. It deals with real problems and it relates itself to life as it is. The university is for both scholarship and service; and herein lies that ethical quality which makes the university a real person, bound by its very nature to the service of others. To fulfill its high calling the university must give and give freely to its students, to the world of learning and of scholarship, to the development of trade, commerce, and industry, to the community in which it has its home, and to the State and Nation whose foster-child it is.

"A university's capacity for service is the rightful measure of its importance. The university's service is to-day far greater, far more expensive, and in ways far more numerous than ever before. It has only lately learned to serve, and hence it has only lately learned the possibilities that lie open before it. Every legitimate demand for guidance, for leadership, for expert knowledge, for trained skill, for personal service, it is the bounden duty of the university to meet. It may not urge that it is too busy accumulating stores of learning and teaching students. Serve it must, as well as accumulate and teach, upon pain of loss of moral power and impairment of usefulness.

"The time-old troubles of town and gown are relics of an academic aloofness which was never desirable and which is no longer possible.

"In order to prepare itself for efficient service the university must count in its ranks men competent to be the intellectual and spiritual leaders of the Nation and competent to train others for leadership. Great personalities make great universities. And great personalities must be left free to grow and express themselves, each in his own way, if they are to reach a maximum of efficiency.

"Spiritual life is subject neither to mathematical rule nor to chemical analysis. Rational freedom is the goal toward which the human spirit moves, slowly but irresistibly, as the solar system toward a point in the constellation Hercules; and rational freedom is the best method for its movement. Moreover, different subjects in the field of knowledge and its applications require different approach and different treatment. It is the business of the university to foster each and all.

"It gives its powerful support to the learned professions, whose traditional number has of late been added to, by architecture, engineering, and teaching, all of which are closely interwoven with the welfare of the community. It urges forward its investigators in every department, and rewards their achievements with the academic laurel. It studies the conditions under which school and college education may best be given, and it takes active part in advancing them. In particular, it guards the priceless treasure of that liberal learning which I have described as underlying all true scholarship, and gives to it full hearted care and protection. These are all acts of service direct and powerful.

"The university does still more. It leads its members for expert and helpful service to Nation, State and city. University men are rapidly mobilized for diplomatic service, for the negotiation of important treaties, for the administration of dependencies, for special and confidential service to the Government, or some department of it, and, the task done, they return quietly to the ranks of teaching scholars, as the soldiers in the armies of the war between the States went back to civil life without delay or friction. These same university men are found foremost in the ranks of good citizenship everywhere, and as laymen in the service of the Church. They carry hither and yon their practical idealism, their disciplined minds, and their full information, and no human interest is without their helpful and supporting strength. It is in ways like these that the university has shown a thousand times that sound theory and correct practice are two sides a shield. A theorist is one who sees, and the practical man must be in touch with theory if he is to see what it is that he does.

"Scholarship and service are the true university's ideal. The university, of to-day is not the home of lost causes and forsaken beliefs, and unpopular names, and impossible loyalties." It keeps step with the march of progress, widens its sympathies with growing knowledge, and among democratic people seeks only to instruct, to uplift, and to serve, in order that the cause of religion and learning and of human freedom and opportunity may be continually advanced from century to century and from age to age."

At the conclusion of President Butler's address the entire audience arose and sang "My Country, 'Tis of Thee." Bishop Potter pronounced the benediction, and the procession filed out of the gymnasium.

On the library steps a crowd of students and others assembled, and cheered President Roosevelt as he passed. In a few words he responded to the ovation.

In the evening the Alumni of Columbia University gave an installation dinner at Sherry's in honor of President Butler.

Freshmen Play

The Class of 1905 will give a dramatic performance on Tuesday, April 22d, at 4 o'clock. Undergraduates and special students are invited to be present.
