DRAMATIC WORK OF THE PEOPLE'S INSTITUTE.

When tickets for "The Prince of India" and "Pippa Passes" were sent up to Barnard early in the winter the distributors were asked a great many questions as to where these tickets came from and why they were so cheap. It will be of interest to all students, and especially to those who attended performances of these plays, to know about the source from which the tickets came.

They were sent to Barnard by direction of the dramatic committee of the People's Institute, No. 138 East Fifteenth street. This is the third season during which such work has been carried on. Its object is to bring the best drama within the reach of people who otherwise would be unable to attend high-priced theaters. Special rates are secured by the committee from theatrical managers, and since October last over 15,000 people have taken advantage of the privileges thus obtained in New York and Brooklyn theaters. Hitherto these special tickets were distributed principally to schools, but now they have been extended to church societies, department stores, and various forms of organized labor.

One result of the movement is the discovery of a popular demand for Shakespearean plays. The greatest number of applications in one week came for Robert Mantell's Shakespearean productions. For eight performances 3,500 tickets were sold through the People's Institute, 1,000 for the last performance alone. But there is also a demand for good modern drama and the best music, which the committee tries to meet. Managers say that in some cases the success of a play has been assured by those attending under the auspices of the People's Institute.

Among the members of the committee in charge are Bishop Henry C. Potter, Dr. Lyman Abbott, the Rev. R. S. MacArthur, the Rev. Percy S. Grant, the Rev. Thomas R. Slicer, Dr. Felix Adler and the Rev. Samuel Schulman, representing the clergy; Edgerton L. Winthrop, Jr., and president of the Board of Education Superintendent William H. Maxwell, representing the Department of Education; James H. Hamilton, Miss Lillian Wald and Mrs. V. G. Sirokovich, representing the settlements; Robert C. Ogden and Abraham Abraham, representing business houses; Alfred J. Bolton and J. W. Sullivan, representing organized labor; and Samuel L. Clemens (Mark Twain), President Finley, of the City College, Richard Watson Gilder, Franklin H. Sargent and Frank Damrosch. The work will be extended to other cities, among which will be Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia.

DR. SCHUMACHER'S LECTURE.

The unusually large audience which assembled in the Barnard Theater on Thursday afternoon, January 17, was delightfully entertained by Professor Schumacher's interesting talk on "Social Problems of Modern Germany," given at the invitation of the Philosophical Club. Two groups of factors, he said, characterize the rapidly developed factory system. One, well represented by the shoe and textile industries, has developed from the old handicraft system so fast that one small town e. g., which in 1889 had but nineteen factories could within six or seven years boast of ninety-eight.

The other group of primary factors is represented by the new industrial factory. For the manufacture of new articles, which could not be produced by the handicraft or hand system, it existed as an isolated phenomenon in the Middle Ages, but its real development arose in the nineteenth century. It produces entirely new articles, such as electric lights, bicycles, etc.; new articles within old branches, and substitutes for the old articles—different, of course, but not necessarily imitations. For example, iron materials have, to a large extent, replaced those of wood, particularly in ships, bridges, etc. Indeed, the characteristic of modern development is substitution without deterioration, though at the present instant it must be confessed that with a view to cheapening production poor imitations are often substituted for articles of good quality.

The new form of industrial organization is significant for employers and their employees. For employers, because, first of all, owing to the necessity of maintaining a fixed standing invested capital, a factory owner cannot stop the business whenever he chooses. He has to pay interest on invested capital whether or not the factory is in operation. Moreover, he must allow for deterioration of the fixed capital, and both the standing and invested capital must be maintained.

Several advantages result from the factory system to the laborer. Whereas a home laborer must himself bear the risk of loss through lack of market demand for his products, the factory laborer can count on continuance of work and therefore of income. The owner of the factory will want to keep up the business if only to keep on hand good laborers. This interest of the employer in continuous work is the presupposition of a strike; for if the factory has to be closed on account of a strike its owner cannot undertake to fulfil new contracts, which are therefore left to new competitors.

In spite of the difficulties and problems which are thus brought out, the factory system represents, technically and commer-

The growth of the Christian Association has been so marked during the last few years, both in enthusiasm and in numbers, that it has been suggested that the statistics be published in the BULLETIN as an indication of the growth. They follow:

Number of students in college.....400
Members of Y. W. C. A.....197
(Active, 140; associate, 57.)
Number of standing committees..... 11
Number of students on committees.... 41
Enrolment of Bible study classes..... 75
Enrolment of Mission study classes.... 22

The Church affiliations of both active and associate members are also given as follows:

Active Members: Episcopalian, 50; Presbyterian, 40; Methodist, 15; Baptist, 13; Congregational, 8; Dutch Reformed, 8; Lutheran, 4; other denominations, 2.

Associate Members: Roman Catholic, 12; Unitarian, 3; Universalist, 2; Jewish, 2; other denominations, 3; number affiliated, 35.

All students are again invited to Miss McCook's Bible class on Monday at 12.25 in 139, and to the class devotional meetings on Wednesday at 12.45, as well as to the mission-study class on Thursday, and the weekly teas on Monday afternoons from 3.30 to 5 o'clock in Earl Hall.

In connection with these teas a new plan is to be tried during the present month—namely, to have different people connected with various outside interests come up and meet the girls informally and perhaps give a short talk on their work. Mrs. Labaree, of Persia, who addressed Chapel shortly before midyears, is expected for the 11th of February, and Miss Archibald, the general secretary for Huyler's factories, has been asked for the following week.

DORMITORY NEWS.

On the evening of January 18th the Dean entertained the Faculty and their wives and the resident students in the Theater at Barnard. Miss Gill invited her guests "to meet President Butler." She was assisted in receiving by Mrs. Shepherd and Mrs. Seager.

After the reception followed an informal musicale. Professor Rübner, head of the Department of Music at Columbia, played a number of selections on the piano. Among these were several from Chopin, Grieg's "Andante," and the "fire music" from Siegfried.

Other guests of Miss Gill's were Mrs. Esther Herrmann, Miss Caspero of Athens, Miss Adeline Wheelock, of the Alumnae Dormitory Committee, and Professor and Mrs. McWhood.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 6, 1906

The BULLETIN wishes to extend a welcome to the fifteen new freshmen who are entering Barnard to-day. Though coming too late to enjoy the early fun of the year, there are such compensations for them as missing the agonies of a whole mid-year period. Their advantages are nearly the same as those of the students who entered in September. There are still the athletic and the French and German and other societies to join, the Undergraduate Play is coming, and so, for that matter, is the Freshman Show; there are good friends to make, and many of us would admit that some of our best friendships were not made in the early part of freshman year. There seems to be every reason why the new students should feel quite at home before long.

At examination time it becomes more than usually apparent how unintelligently most students go through college. We refer to the absurd practice of cramming. Even the most skilful crammers confess that what they learn in those tense eleventh hours remains in their memories only one day after the examination, if it stays as long as that. In order to cover the assigned work they find it so imperative to keep their eyes riveted upon the printed words that there is left to them no vision to see and judge the real things about which they are reading. They learn things by rote; they bring with them to the examination-room a mental image of their notes, of the books they have been poring over, of a list of names and dates.

This method of wasting time and energy is absolutely unworthy of the trained mind. Those few students who do the day's work daily with interest, allowing a few minutes for reflection and appreciation, need never "cram" for an examination. They obtain a grasp of things, they develop a certain philosophical tendency in their thinking that will show in their work, whatever it may be. Such a student may forget dates, names, places; may make a dozen blunders; yet her work will bear the imprint of thought and intelligence, which counts infinitely more in the world at large than spasmodic recitations of statistical facts. Indeed, the "bluffer," great as her sins are, is better than the crammer. The former uses her wits at least; the latter only her memory.

We take pleasure in announcing BULLETIN elections for 1907-08 as follows: Editor-in-chief, Dorothea Eltzner, 1908; managing editors, Agnes Miller, 1908; Helen Loeb, 1908; May Ingalls, 1909, and Myra McLean, 1909; business manager, Florence M. Wolff, 1908; assistant business manager, Theodora Hall, 1909.

cially, a great step compared with other forms of industrial organization. The struggle for continuous production results in an increase of supply which must benefit all classes, including the workmen.

Some disadvantages there are connected with this system. The dependence of the laborer is increased. He loses touch with the market and his survey of all-but the smallest section of the whole work. His labor lacks the attraction of educational power, and he cannot rise to an independent position, which in modern times calls not only for knowledge but capital.

To this general dependence is added necessarily business dependence. While the home system is homogeneous, and the laborer has freedom in his work, the factory regulates hours of labor, meals, etc., to which the workman must conform.

Family life tends to be endangered also by the factory system of industry. When husband and wife are both working for long hours each day the home is apt too often to be greatly neglected; the men turn for comfort to the saloons and the children are left to grow up as best they can.

But these disadvantages are compensated for by several advantages as compared with the home industry. The risk for the workmen of market fluctuations is diminished, and the local concentration of the factory system gives the possibility of forming coalitions. These trade unions form the most powerful instrument in giving independence to laborers by making labor regulations more probable and by offering an opportunity of getting beneficial institutions for housing the workmen and thus rescuing their family life. And these are the principal aims of modern social science.

UNIVERSITY CHAPEL.

On Fridays during Lent, beginning February 15, Chapel for the whole University will be held in St. Paul's Chapel. As Barnard agreed to this arrangement after special request, it behooves the college to be well represented on these days.

BOTANICAL CLUB.

A meeting of the Barnard Botanical Club was held on January 12 at the home of Mrs. A. B. Hepburn, 205 West Fifty-seventh street. The following officers were elected for the year 1907-08: President, Mrs. Smythe Ely Jelliffe; first vice-president, Alice M. Isaacs, '98; secretary, Mabel Denton, '04; treasurer, May A. Parker, '04; Professor Richards, Mrs. Hepburn, Mrs. H. S. Gibson, Marion E. Latham, '03; Martha Thompson, '05, and Mary M. Brackett, '09, were elected directors.

Among other matters of business an appropriation was made by the club for the framing of more botanical photographs for the rooms and corridors of the Department of Botany. Representations of tropical and temperate flora will be added to the interesting collections of desert plants now on view in the hall.

Miss Thompson, of the Department of Botany, and Miss Staber, a graduate student in the department, were elected members of the club.

One of the four annual meetings of the society is regularly devoted to a lecture. This year Dr. Hazen will speak on "The Development of the Green Algae."

MABEL DENTON, 1904,
Secretary.
