Barnard's division of the Columbia University Sailing Club placed second in the Women's Regatta at the University of Pennsylvania last Sunday.

The two Alphas, fifteen foot sloops, raced down the Schuylkill River to defeat Manhattanville, Monmouth, Bryn Mawr colleges and the University of Pennsylvania; Drexel placed first in the competition.

In the "A" division, Kathy Prendergast '68 skippered, with Anne Ehrlich '65 as crew. Carol Woodward '67 skippered in the "B" division with Ann Porter '65.

The Regatta was organized by Jerry Miller of Penn under the auspices of the Middle Atlantic Inter-Collegiate Sailing Association, according to Christine Nordini '67, Barnard coordinator. Paul Kammerer '66C coached the winning Barnard team.

Barnard will sail against the same teams this Sunday at Princeton University. Another group may participate in MIT's Women's Invitational at the same time.

Students interested in joining the team should contact Miss Nordini through Student Mail.

Hubert Doris Presents His Compositions

Professor Hubert Doris is getting no measure's rest this year and next. October 13, Prof. Doris took part in a symposium on graduate education sponsored by the Mid-Hudson Valley Harvard Club. Five days later, he appeared in recital with soprano Gina Davis at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio. The performance was repeated November 1 at the Gardner Museum in Boston.

Mr. Doris' Cantata for soprano and string quartet, "Resurgence," will be performed by the Riverside Quartet with Miss Davis at the Carnegie Recital Hall November 16. The work will be performed as "Erdgeist" in its German version by Miss Davis with the Luxemberg Quartet in Brussels, April 4.

The text is from a modern German poem by Hans Carossa which has been translated into English by Edith Snow Sewall.

Wigs & Cues Present Dylan Thomas Drama

Wigs and Cues, the drama society of Barnard College, will present "Under Milk Wood," by Dylan Thomas, November 19-21 in the Minor Latham Playhouse. The play was last performed in New York two years ago.

A cast of thirty Barnard and Columbia students will act in the play, which was completed one month before the author's death in 1953. Mr. Kenneth Janes, director of the Minor Latham Playhouse, will direct the current production.

"Under Milk Wood" is usually presented as a reading, Mr. Janes explained, but "this will be a full production, with the accent remaining on the poet and the poetry." The only change he made was to divide the narrator's lines, which are usually given to two voices, into four separate parts.

In the play, the audience hears the dreams of a sleeping town, and it sees the sleepers going about their business. Dylan Thomas worked on the piece for about ten years before he completed the relatively short "play for voices."

Miss Ellen Terry, technical director of the Playhouse, will stage "Under Milk Wood" with a single setting.

The public is invited to all four performances of the Wigs and Cues production. The curtain will rise at 8:30 on Thursday and Friday nights. There will be two shows on Saturday, at 7 and 9 p.m.

"Under Milk Wood" is the Barnard drama group's first production this year. Last year they staged Arthur Miller's "The Crucible" and Garcia Lorca's "Blood Wedding."

NSA, NSM Sponsor Fast For Freedom

The National Student Association in cooperation with the Northern Student Movement and the United States Youth Council will sponsor a Thanksgiving Fast for Freedom in which Barnard students have been asked to participate.

The money collected from the more than one hundred twenty colleges across the nation expected to participate will buy food in bulk for Negro families in Mississippi.

Students are requested to forego the evening meal November 19. A rally between 6 and 8 that evening will feature Senator Constance Baker Motley, Executive Director of NSM William Strickland, and Columbia Professor of History James P. Shenton.

Eleanor R. Smith, Director of Barnard Food Services, has agreed to contribute the cost of the raw food for any girl on the meal plan who signs to forego her dinner.

The food is intended to help compensate for job dismissals and suspension of state and county-option federal aid which resulted from voter registration activities.

According to Lyn Alexander '66, Barnard coordinator of the fast, President Rosemary Park "heartily approves" of the plan. Other University officials have also endorsed the plan. Further information may be obtained from Miss Alexander through Student Mail.

Guest Speakers To Talk Informally with Students

by Barbara V. Cohen

Barnard students will have the opportunity to meet anthropologist Margaret Mead, philosophy Suzanne Langer, and Nigerian lawyer Jaiyeola Moore at an informal coffee hour Saturday morning at 10 in the College Parlor.

These three distinguished women are slated to receive honorary degrees from the University Saturday afternoon, at the Closing Convocation of Barnard's Seventy-Fifth Anniversary celebration.

The coffee hour in their honor was proposed by Barnard President Rosemary Park, according to the General Secretary of the College, Miss Jean Palmer. "Ordinarily students would have no opportunity even to meet for informal conversation."

Asked if this has ever been done at Barnard before, Miss Palmer explained that Barnard has never had a convocation or honorary degree recipients before. Convocations are sponsored by the University, and honorary degree recipients are selected by the University Board of Trustees.

Barnard's trustees are of course free to suggest candidates, but according to Miss Palmer such suggestions are seldom accepted by Columbia — she says very few women ever get honorary degrees from this University.

For Barnard's Seventy-Fifth Anniversary the Columbia trustees made an exception; they promised to award degrees to three women named by the Barnard Board. Thus why Dr. Mead, Dr. Langer, and Mrs. Moore will receive honorary degrees from Columbia University, they will be guests of honor at Barnard College.

Editorial

An Insult

Ten cents an hour is what it's worth to Columbia University to keep the Union out of the Dining Halls and the workers out of the Union. But a man who earns $2,912.00 a year with his "raise" cannot afford to be so cheaply bought.

Ten cents an hour makes very little difference. It doesn't change the figure of $3,000.00 a year which the United States Department of Labor gives as requisite for a barely decent existence. It doesn't give the workers job security or a pension plan or unemployment insurance or adequate health coverage.

Ten cents an hour, as a matter of fact, performs only one useful function. It reveals the rather transparent hypocrisy of what was previously the University's strongest anti-union argument. A Union was bad for us, we were told, because a Union would mean higher prices in the Dining Halls. The Food Services, we were asked to believe, could not afford to pay its employees any more than they were getting.

Ten cents an hour has been found, the one thin dime per worker, per hour, which Columbia hopes will induce its students to sell out its workers and its workers to sell out themselves.

But ten cents an hour won't do. Nothing will do but a free election in which workers can freely choose who will represent them. Who is Columbia protecting?

"616" Council Names Duties Of Floor Representatives

Delegation of responsibility provided the focus for discussion at the first meeting of the student government at "616" last Monday night.

Floor representatives considered alternative positions and decided to adopt temporary offices to fulfill the needs of the Residence Hall.

Chairman Marilyn Ross '65 will preside at all meetings and represent "616" on Rep. Assembly, Judicial Council and the Student-Faculty Committee on Student Affairs.

Vice-Chairman Helen Stambler '66 will assume the responsibilities of Chairman when Miss Ross is unable to do so. She will also channel the suggestions of residents to the appropriate committee.

Naomi Achs '66 will serve as Corresponding Secretary. She will handle all correspondence, including appeals for campuses, and compile the precedence book.

Susan McClelland '67 will take on the duties of Recording Secretary. She will compile and distribute the minutes from each meeting, handle bulletin boards and notices, and take charge of House Council publicity.

The duties of Treasurer will be undertaken by Diana Bermingham '65. She will prepare the budget and handle finances. This position tentatively includes the responsibility of Social Chairman.

Finally, two committees will handle general House affairs. The Research Committee — Nancy Klein and Ellen Zimmerman, both '66 — will investigate residents' suggestions and provide the Council with details and information concerning these suggestions; e.g., the purchase of a television, piano.
