Autumn: A time for political action...

The campus visil from Vice President AI Gore on Thursday October 9 attracted significant attention not surprisingly Students and faculty who were fortunate enough to get tackets for his speech formed an orderly time that wound across the expanse of the Low Library steps. The barncades that campus security had exected to control the crowds seemed to serve their purpose adequately. This time. Columbia students dat not reach backward to the long standing campus tradition of protest and disorder rather. Gore enjoyed a peaceful autience at his speech and emerged afterward into a bright sunny day and waved to an appreciative hand shaking crowd. The only shouls that could be heard were those of enthu sizebs students yelling "Gore 2000". No one stormed the building shout ing "Down with campaign finance crooks!

Students were clearly attracted by Gore's celebrity. People left their own personal politics at home in o one really caref about Gore's promi nent role in the national government. The appeal of the visit was being able to say "i touched the Vice President" For a campus thal glonfies the 1968 takeover of the administration building and spent almost all of the Spring 1996 semister railying and even starving for ethnic studies the response to Gore's appearance indicates a surprisingly politically apa thetc student body. Is this really the case?

Consider that the first vacation of the semester fails over Election Day weekend. Presumably the University wants to allow students to return home to vote in their local elections or else the break would fail over Columbus Day weekend as it does at most other universities. However few students particularly in an off year election will take advantage of this opportunity to exercise power in determining the future of local govern ment.

Both the College Democrats and Republicans claim farge member ships around 225 and 200 respectively Attendance all meetings though is relatively meager. Dan Fisher Executive Director of the College Republicans notes that although an event or a good speaker can bring in 50-100 people only 20-40 students attend an average planning meeting. The sit uation is the same with the Democrats Secretary Joaquin Tamayo says that on average 50 students attend general meetings.

It is probably not fair to label the University politically apathetic but politically inactive might not be far from the truth. At a school known for its academic rigor one would hope that students are not ill-advised but merely preoccupied.

... or a time to just play in the leaves

A cursus thing happened on September 22 the weather as if on cue switched from stocky summer hear to a breezy autumn chill New Yorkers suddenly found themselves searching for their new J. Crew sweaters to put on top of their thin summer I shirts. Around the city win dows shut at 9pm to stave off the bisk right air.

Fall exotement has hit New York. An autumn festival will overtake six blocks of Broadway next weekend. The boys of summer those cantan kerous overpaid players of the former national pastme baseball are wrapping up their long season before sellout crowds. Unfortunately for Yankees fans, their boys have gone home, but it was fun while it lasted (Note. Indians fans should probably keep quiet around native New York ers 1.

Although we are in the midst of midterns and other academic agony it is a perfect time to get outside. The leaves on the trees in Central Park will turn a mynad of colors in the upcoming weeks. After several months of refurbshment, the park's Great Lawn reopened last week, just in time for New Yorkers to be able to enjoy the spectrum of golds, oranges, reds and browns before it al turns to a fingle of black, naked branches against a gray wroter sky.

With the pressures of school mounting it is very easy to stay shull away in our bedrooms and the library burying our noses in Melville and Wittgenstein as our golden tans fade and our butts take on the shape of our chars. We must resist this urge for just a few more weeks

The Northeastern states are at their most breathtaking in October Now is the time to throw on a turtleneck grab a finend and dash off to Now England for the weekend to run through piles of leaves and drink hot apple cider After all he memories of beauty are the only thing we have to sustain us through the dreary short days and long rights of writer

Ethics of Animal Testing Put Barnard in Bind

by Mita Mallick

"Animals are just like humans in all important ways" in 1993 The Los Angeles Times found that 51% of the nation disagreed with this statement leaving America Cover just about dead sold over the issue of animal leating. Vivised tion known as animal experiment  $\sim$ o tation is described more graphically by NEAVIS (New England ŝ Anti Vivisection Society) as the burning shocking drugging starving irrediat ing blinding and killing of animals \* Twentyfive million animals in the U.S. will die this year in laboratories for educational and biomedical experimentation and for product and cosmetic testina

The healed controversy over animal testing is one that grows with advancements in tech nology and the ever escalating wars on cancer and AIDS. On one side of the fence are those who argue for the right to freedom from suffer ing to all living things human or not. Others contend that it is irresponsible and unethical to ionore human and animal suffering by banning animal testing of methods that could save lives The Foundation for Biomedical Research declares "Nearly every major motical advance of the 20th century has depended largely on research with animals." The Daclarabon of Heisanka adopted and revised by the 18th World Medical Assembly stales that medical research on human subjects 'should be based on adequately performed laboratory and animal experimentation *

As Barnard students many of us wonde where animal testing fits into our lives. Jonathan Balcombel Associate Director for Education with The Humane Society of United States says "As a student and as a human being you are entitied to an education consistent with your beliefs and there are many ways to learn animal structure and function that don't involve the terminal tion of an animals life " it is a choice every strident in the natural science, and particularly premeds must make is experimentation or an mais an essential part of education?

Under the federal laws of the Animat Well fare Act and the Public Health Service Act every institution involved in experimentation on living attimats must establish an animal care and use committee to oversee every potential

Leeches used in Barnard's biology department experiment to help ensure optimal animal care The Institutional Animal Care and Use Commit tee (IACUC) of Barnard and Columbia University composes faculty from different depart ments at the University who are involved in an mail research, two vetermanans, and another professional who is not a scientist and not affirated with the University A prolocol and detailed procedure must be filed to the IACUC for any eaching or research inyolying vertebrates a the University the experimental design is udged a different evels and the committee decides whether it is scient fically worth peforming. "To my recollection, nebody at Barnard, has performed research where the animal has undergone severe pain without the use of anes thesia" says Professor Bruce O'Gara of the Biology Denartment, who serves an the board " of IACUC

The committee also regulates animal care such as feeding, where the asimal is kept, the exercise of the animals and the psychological well being of orimates

"Animals in the Biology Department live in much higher stendards Iban Barnard Housing provides " says O Gara "Federal and NY State inspectors come to visit all animal facilities unannounced If there's peeling paint on the wall if the temperature is too warm or too cool or even if the food too old, we will be told to improve the conditions immediately "

He adds that "IACUC generales more oaperwork than anything else I am involved in If you have obtained approval for a certain, species of frog, but you want to use a different species you must submit an entirely new protocol but above all you have to be able to jusbly why you must use a living animal *

Considering the size of the Barnard Biology faculty relatively little research is done using animals. Roughly 4 out of the 10 faculty members use animals in their research including caleroillars leeches lizards fruit flies and the liver cells of rats. Invertebrates and leeches are not covered by the guidelines set by the gov enment but most of the work is non invasive "If you want good results, you want to keep the an mais healthy. Using sick organisms most probably won I give you the same responses as healthy organisms would " says professor Paul Pertz of the Biology Department

Fetal pigs frogs turtles rats and inverteb ates such as cravitsh cockroaches leeches and earthworms, are just a few of the animals. Bamard women may find themselves dissecting through the course of their work here. Some of the animals used may be strays, but most of the time animals are raised specifically for classroom or research use. Most of the fetal pigs used in the Biodiversity Lab are by-produots of slaughterhouses. Additionally, some species too difficult to raise domestically may be taken from the wild.

Barnard must be reapproved every year by IUCAC. When the courses affered by the Biology Department were changed and reorganized about eight years ago, the faculty was sensitive to the issue of using animals in labs At the present time, there is no animal work in any biology courses offered for the nonmajor sequence "I feel very strongly that we are not shortchanging our students by not using animals in lab," says professor Herlz, "We have worked very hard to create a senes of exercises for non-majors to learn what they need to know without using animals." In the Biodiversity Lab, which is taken research The Psychology department mostly uses rats but occasionally has used doves fish, and files for research and course work

Professor Peter Balsam of the Psychology Department says. "In some courses rais are used for two things First, to teach students about animel behavior, and second to perform experiments (exploring) the bological basis of behavior "Recording neural impulses studying Io fulfil requirements for veterinary or medical school without ever having done animal work in takes. This tere was a student who wanted to meror in Bedogy but was considering another major because she had grave objections to the use of animats in takes i would be very disturbed if I were the chars, i would have her suggest some attamatives to not using a imitals. Had says

For many, computer models appear to be a solution to ending the controversy over animal > testing. Some physical models are brought out in the labs for Biology, and there are a few filmstops but as of now, the department is not equipped for computer simulations. Reconlly, the faculty has been investigating ways to bring new technologies into intraductory classes. "We have received funding to buy videos and com outers for the department within the next two years." Hertz says But he adds that he cannot foresee a time when computer simulation will completely replace animal dissections "When you are using computers it's two dimensional not three-dimensional which is an Important difference. There is by many biology majors, pre-vets, and premeds, instructors are upfront with the students on the first day regarding the amount of animal work which will have to be performed. "We will occasionally encounter a student who raises objections to cutting the fetal pig" the says. "Since the students work in parts she can watch her lab partner perform the procedure. But di it becomes an issue of the student not being able to despect any of the animals she shouldnit take the course."

Biology is not the only department at Bamaid which uses animals in courses and

So you've never dissected an animal or performed any type of work involving animals?

How can animal testing affect your life? Out of the following companies, guess which ones manufacture products that are tested on animals.

Procter & Gamble (Pántene shampoo) Bic Corporation Mead Johnson & Johnson (Neutrogena skin care products)

> how a rat learns a behavior, studying sex differences, and studying the brane of an animal are some of the experiments students may perform Just as in Biology a student can fulfill the psychology major without ever working with animals Balasm adds however, tha' "Barnard is one of the leading colleges in producing the largest numbers of psychology majors who go on to get PhDs. We attribute our success to reaching students about the methods in the field. Understanding an mals is an essentia' part of traning "

While O Gara does use computer models in neurobiology he also believes there is a difference in the expension when working with ammals. "Computer simulations do exactly what they are supposed to do as opposed to animal experimentations when animals responses to schemental manipulation are somewhal unpredictable." O Gara explains of the simulation. "You can watch is heart beating on a scheme but holding the heart in between your fingers and feeling it beat is butly amazing."

Egg Donation Panel Scrambles Students

by Stacy Cowley

Twenty-five hundred dollars buys a lot of textbooks so is it any wonder those ads in the campus newspapers existing egg donors and offering four-digit payouls are attracting atten toon? In one day last week, "there were two quarter-page ads in the Columbia Daily Spec tator side-by side from two different places advertising these payouts," observed Tia Pow ell an ethicist at the Columbia College of Physi cans and Surgeons and Columbia Presbyter ian Hospital "its something Im sure a lot of young women wonder about."

Powell's concern led her to contact Leslle Calman Director of the Bärnard Center for Research on Women about holding an infor

the history of egg donation from Dr. Mark Sauer a physician et Columbia Presbytenan and a faculty member at the College of Physi cians & Surgeons. Saver has been involved in the field of "donor egg" as the professionals refer to it since its beginning and was responsible for founding the program at Columbia. He is ambivatent about the direction the field has been heading lately "In the early 80s donors pot $250 Risks have not increased exponent tally so why has the money? Just three years ago the $2000 egg was quite a sensation. Why has the rate increased? Because now it is a business and you have to pay the going Women are increasingly entranced by rafe the higher more lugrative offers from private firms. This is the practice of egg donation today.

In the early 1980s, when donor egg began as a research area, most donors were known to the women who received their eggs-they were friends, sisters, neighbors, and cousins.

mation session on egg donation. On Tuesday October 7 at 7pm in Barnard's James Room Powell moderated "Egg Donation Medical Social and Ethical Issues in the Donation of Eggs by Healthy Women" Co-sponsored by the Medical Ethics Committee of Columbia-Prostytenan Medical Center. The Center for the Study of Society & Medicine the Barnard Center for Research on Women Barnard Froject for Gender and Science the discussion attracted some 25 attendees primanly stu dents at local undergraduate graduate and medical sofiolds.

The discussion opened with an overview of

and you either say you won't do it or try to say you'll do it as ethically as you can "

In the early 1980s when donor egg began as a research area most donors were known to the women who recarved ther eggs—they were finends sisters neighbors and courses "Then the motivation was altrustic." Sauer recalled People were doing this because of a personal relationship with the recipient."

As the field grew the number of eggs required to meet demands encouraged doctors and patients to turn to anonymous donots. Cur rently around 3000 egg donatoons are per formed annually and financial incentives are the only way to attract the needed number of end of the only way to attract the needed number of the only way the attract the needed number of the only way the attract the needed number of the n donors Money became the biggest draw and the demographics of the field changed accord mgly Traditionally donors were working moth ers 28 30 years old The typical donor of today is a 20-24 year-old unmarned student "That's what the recipients are looking for now" Sauer said "Young educated college age o grad school students"

There is another side thin this debate—the issues involved for the infertile couple.' Sauer added Indeed the panelists placed a strong emphasis on the issue of infertility. Its not something you all are thinking about at this age.' psychiatrist Jane Rosenthal remarked 'You're 20. 22 you're worned about avoiding pregnancy. That's how it should be But ten years from now when some of you are dealing, with this its going to be a much bigger deal that you ever imagined it could be infertility is always shocking.

Sauer discussed briefly what the process is ike medically from the denors point of view "Many times the applicant has no idea what this is about" he observed "it's technically medically sophisticated—unlike sperm dona tion which is anything but".

To start applicants to the program at Columbia are asked to fill out a 27 page questionnaive on their medical biological and psychological biokgrounds. Medical and psychlogical screenings follow. Once accepted a donor begins a regimen of daily doses of farthity drugs to increase the number of eggs that will be available for harvest. Finally, the eggs are removed in a procedure known as aspiration during which a needle is insurfed into the ovaries and the eggs are extracted. Its actually a field will be available for harvest finally the eggs are bad as it sounds. Saver clamed, its actually a field with a needle. Aspiration takes about 15 minutes and after the procedure the donor is free to go home. Though many groups perform the procedure under general anesthesia the Colum bia program uses "conscious sedation, which Satura tables "a misnomer since we put you to steep and then use a local anesthesia. You re actually unconscious, you don Lifeet a thing and its a to safer than general anesthesia."

After Sauer's overview Dr Rosenthal a psychiatrist at the College or Physicians & Sur geons and Columbia Presbylenait took the microphone. She first became involved with the donor egg program white serving her residency when she noticed the tack of mental health sup port for donors and recipients. Though her early work with the program locused on donors she now works primarily with recipients. From a psychological perspective. Ittle information is a available on the consequences of egg dona bin

For recipients line is part of the larger issue of infertity "We expect to get pregnent when we want to "Rosenthal said "just like we expect the sun to go up and down. For many couples infertity is the first crisis they contront. Of 200 infertile women surveyed in one study over half called infertity the worst crisis they dever confronted." The donor egg program is one of the most psychologically com plex options she scal because the woman has to reconcile the finality of her ability to genetically conceive her town child.

Dr Barbara Katz Rohman a sociologistion the faculty of Baruch College/CUNY had a markedly different view of donor egg programs than her fellow panelists. Writen these programs were first being though about in the late. 70s I privisioned a kind of reproductive communism is the said. Are there any problems in exposing these women to insks to acquire aggs for nch infertide women? asked one student, who said she had briefly considered donating eggs but now does not think she would ever do it.

I think there's a serious misrepresentation about selling eggs from poor women to rich women "replied Sauer. Thei's just not the case Yes the recipients are mostly upper class not white women but that's a whole other problem Most donors are educated mid die class women. Why? Beeause that's what recipients want. They're largeted. To go into indigent classes and recruit women is taboo."

"Most women want someone like them 20 years younger" said Rothman "Thats the eugenics argument Thats why the proce is going up it your type of women wonit do it for $2500 lets up it to $5000 and open negotia lons"

Mita Mellick is a Barnard sophornore and the Bulleon Office Manager quite bigoted behind closed doors about what they want and what they ill put into their body. And you have to accept that or you can't do this kind of work. This is not some conspiracy to create certain kinds of chill dren though. It's a decision being made on very personal levels.

Questions from students ranged from inquines about the possibilities of donors meet ing recipients (not very tikely Sauer said) the qualifications for donors (general good health and understanding of the issues involved) and concerns about the insks of the procedure which Sauer said were 'relatively low. The insks are those associated with any surgical procedure. The aspiration itself is safe. We vo never found any evidence linking it to any future medical problems whatsoever."

After the discussion concluded participants diffed out slowly often still discussing some of the points raised. One Barnard serior said she came to the panel because she was linking about donaling eggs. This hasn't helped me make up my mind at ell'she said. Many of the older women in atten dance were local midwilery students. Two midwives in Training said they came specifically to hear Dr Rothman "We ve heard her before said one "and she has a lot of interesting ideas. This will defindely have an effect on our field."

Afterwards Rosenthal acknowledged the academic nature of the discussion saying "Its a different panel than we would have had for premeds. We assumed people here would occme out of an academic interest not because they were thinking about donaling."

Powell reflecting on the discussion said "I wanted to arrange this because I worry about the young women donaling eggs I worry about the informed consent this procedure requires I have great faith in the ethics of the people making these decisions all Columbia Presbyter ian I don't have that same confidence in these free-standing clinics

Saver shared her concern nobig "Most people are honorable but the field is totally unregulated Ware this still a research project you would never get approval to pay $2500 Theres a line where financial incentives take over You don't want to make people an offer they can i refuse

A Whole Lot of Rauschenberg

by Betsy Crowell

Robert Rauschenberg has always pushed the boundaries of what is known as modern art He is identified with many artistic movements because he has been able to make them his own. He is never limited in material and always finds new mediums to use in new ways. The extensive exhibit at the Guggenheim museuos and Ace Gallery are testament to his expansive artistic philosophy.

The exhibition at the uptown Guggenheim is presented chronologically so his life's work unfolds as the viewer ascends the ramp. In this way we see him move from photography to Abstract Expressionist style painting to using newspapers to printmaking to using metallic objects and then back again. Though his mediums change so much we still always recognize his dynamic sivile and his commitment to extracting materials and images from his immedrate environment As Jul a Blaut, the assistant curator of this exhibit says "Expanding upon Marcel Duchamp's concept of the ready made Rauschenberg gave new significance to such promary objects as a patchwork quilt or an automobile tire by juxtaposing them with unrelated nems and placing them in the context of art. He paints directly on a bed as if it were a canvas. He also fills a ballfub with water and floats a glass lug in it, attached to a plank of wood helding so ap me all Besides pushing the boundaries of art, this piece seems to defygravity. He makes pright colorful prints on pleces of crushed metal. They are places of art in their own right but because of their reflective. quality they also serve to minor the immediate. surroundings. Metal is a perfect medium for Rauschenberg because he is so interested in

ine world around him

He uses a great deal of found images such as reproductions from newspapers and maga zines Photographs of popular figures run throughout his work. By paining President Kennedys he grean and focus ng just on his hand he turns him into an abstraction As he started to use the printmaking technique of photo silk screening ha came to be identified with Pop Art. This new medium enabled him to repeat identical images several times. He is a so able to transcribe his own photographs as well as those taken from the popular main stream press in this way he makes what is so common into something of his own. The colors he uses beautifully debict some otherwise depressing subjects.

Between 1984 and 1991 he actively engaged in Rauschenberg Overseas Culture Interchange (ROCI) This project exemptified his belief in the power of artistic co laboration in its attempt to bring about social change on an international level. He traveled to many differ ent countries around the world and teamed about different outures and an making practoes. Many of his own pieces from this time pened are on display at the Guggenheim His succession of photos from the cities he visited show his desire to understand others creative by They all depict different scenes but are presentiad similarly as he stinves for a feeling of universalism.

At the Guggenheim SoHo Rauschenberg's performance works and interactive art are on view As a finend of bolli the dancerichoreogra pher Merce Cunningham and the composer John Cage. Rauschenberg has always been interested in the connections between visual art and performance. He designed costumes and sets for Cunningham and Paul Taylor. He refed a great deal on improvisition in his work with the Jurison Dance. Theater JDT held smitar philosophies in their integration of dance in p everyday actions. He also made extensive use of technology in his performance art. In Pelcan he played one form of technology off another Rauschenberg gave his dancers rollerskates to enhance speed but then strapped parachules to their backs which counteracted the move ment. In Open Score he translates the movements of his performers into sound. Players of a live tennis game trigger an amplified bong and extinguish one of the auditorium's ligh's every time they bit the ball. This does on until the aud torium is completely dark and they can not play anymore. Here, technology and performance are completely merged and reliant on each other

In his First Time Painting Rauschenberg attaches microphones to a carves so that the audience can hear him painting but not see him. This turns the visual aspect of art on its head and makes it more of an event. He trans forms dance into light in his set design for choreographer Trisha Browns Astrai Convertible Aluminum towers are fitted with car head lights that blink on and off in response to the dancer's movements.

A $10 tickel gains admission to all three of these exhibits. Though it is expensive it is well worth it it is so extensive that just one exhibit seems like almost too much for one person to create in a lifetime. Because the work is so vaid it is always interesting and fun to look at The artist spanhags and sculpture are high lighted at the uptown Guggenheim at 1071 F.I/M Av (89 St) until January 7. His performance an is on view at the SCHo Guggenheim at 573. B oadway (Prince St) until January 4. #### Irony of Lightfoot Reminds Me Why I Listen to Music In the First Place

by Anna Goldfarb

Haling from Long Island Trony of Lightfoot is creating quite a stir in the hardcore. scene, I ve seen them play a couple of times and mostly thanks to the lead vocalist Kneel I thought that they were dropping with preten sion. I could smell it on him. He was rule and obnoxious and took himself way too senously Even the speiling of his name made me cringe because it reeked of self importance. I was annoyed and at the same time intropied by hisalblude. I figured he wanted me to mistake his brattmess for depth 1 didn't look into his eves because I didn't want to be dragged into his world However after listening to irony of Light foots new album released on Wreckage Records which is a CD compilation of their first two 7 unch records 1 realized that it was already too late-1 washit just dragged in it couldn | imagine being anywhere else This alburn is nothing less than perfection. Every thing written in their songs is too honest and hits about four paces too close to home. The band sounds like Nation of Ulvases (FNOU had read more books, challenged their teach ers, and were play with not being the coolest

most stylish kids in town

Every contradiction and every stumbled assertion in a strange way makes sense Maybe its the way ball he split the words all over the microphone. He is definitely convincing me of something. Throughout the record Kneel and company express their fruktation.

with relationships society and with their own decisions in the song "If I were You I d" there is a discussion that frue art in the twentieth century is a collage They explore the themes of apathy and disapopriment toward organized religion in the song "Playstation (blood of Christian children part II)" irony of Lightfoot refuse to be ignored and I wish that most bands had this much enthusiasm and direction in their musical efforts. This album is essential to anyone who is dissatisfied with this world of McDonald's and styrofoam personaltes irony of Lightfoot can articulate the thoughts that you wish you had come up with first.

The Kelley Deal 6000 Play Continental

by Anna Goldfarb

The Pixles, and later The Breeders, were two of my favorite bands back in high school I had a crush on Kim Deal's singing. She purred and screeched some of the most beautiful sounds. I was excited that someone could vocally pounce and attack just kie my cal would do to any exposed toes it was her voice that made me in an unexplainable way proud to be a girl i never really understood the lyncs, but the way that she samp them made even the most mundane works sound alliver.

ing and naughty From the ashes of the Breeders, we now have The Kelley Deal 6000, fronted by Kelley Deal, Kim Deals twin sister and former Breeders bandmate

The Kelley Deal 6000 played Continental

they thought and not feeling initialized by their thoughts

Keiley Deal brings this attitude to her new band I witnessed the band play and heard Deal blaze through her set with no apologies offered The band mostly played selections from their new album or New West/ Nice Records, Boom' Boom' Dne songs offered were mixed with equal amounts of verom and puring

But don't take my word for it. There is an indisputable testament to how we'll the band performed. Mr. "18-and-Life" himself, Sebastlan Bach of Skid Row fame was in allendance. Not only that, but he actually was headbanging to the band's set and was flashing the devi sign at Deal (even when she was singing the ballad "When He Calls me Kitten"). And yes, I am sure that it was our Slave to the-Grind fined for four reasons. First, because he was wearing white cowboy boots. Second,

But don't take my word for it. There is an indisputable testament to how well the band performed. Mr. "18-and-Life" himself, Sebastian Bach of Skid Row fame, was in attendance.

on Thursday October 2 When Kelley took the stage, I was reminded of the Breeders cover story in Rolling Stone a few years back Kim and Kelley were photographed soaking wet in tight and revealing black clothes. Someone in the magazine made the comment that they "unapplogetically" exhibited their rather untoned thighs After being disgusted that the state of their thighs were evaluated within the pages of a music magazine. I decided that I liked them for being unapologetic about themsetives. It had nothing to do with their thighs—II had to do with them getting up and samy what because he was wearing black leather panls Third because he was wearing a Motley Crue leather jacket complete with lassels around the edges And fourth because i actually over heard him say to some member of his entourage in a joikal way "Get the fick out! For all of you uneducated Skid fans that is the tile of a Skid Row song

The moral of this story is that Sebasiran tikes them--so should you

Album of the Year: Boom, Boom, Boom!

By Minam Elder

Undoubledly one of the best albums reteased this year Boom' Boom' Boom' is The Kelley Deal 6000 s sophomore effort A mixture of fun pop punk songs beautiful balads and oxperimental rock this album or belongs in any serious music its teners CD collection

The album was recorded this February after the band finished promoting their first album. Go

To the Sugar Altar with a U S and European four The Xelley Deal 6000 is currently on a four supporting Boom/Boom/Boom/The band is fronted by Breeder guitanst and singer Kelley Deal with Todd Mund on rhythm guitar Marty Nedlich on bass and Todd Johnson on drums

"Balla Hunt" is undoubtedly the most fun song on the album. A very energenc song it d sujays the skilled musicianship of the band and the strength and beauty of Deal's voice. The song slats with an eddictive drum beal and bass line. The first line draws the listener in now dig this you tickle me." Deal's voice is sweet and inviting. Then shit and the band explode into the chrous. "Getting of the balla hunt "What you got is what I want. Been beaten black and blue' now it beats for you." The seemingly nonsensical lyincs add to the playfuiness and catch ness of the song lif the song doesn I make you want to dance and jump around nothing will

'Boil's Hunt is preceded by the most beau tiful song of the album "When He Calls Me Kilten" is a slow and quiet ballad. The simplicity of the song adds to its beauty Just Deals voice one guitar and one slide guitar one can hear the innocent words perfectly. When he cause me later latter when its quiet and darket say yes yes what is it my heart? He says rolling its just I miss you so? You know I hate it. I hate when you go. The innocence and simplicity of the song donjure up memories of eighth grade dartices and lost owes. The slide guitar and soft mythm guitar give the song a Patay Cline country feel as it. Deal is sitting under a mid western sky. Singing her wess eway.

Keiley Dea' is clean sober and ready to rock

The theme of love and specifically lost love splexitenton in his arbum in Future Boy Dealsings. There are twelve kinds of people in this world' but only one boy for this girl. If never the without yoy. Cause in never leave fulure boy" In Box, she wonders about an old boyfriend in "Baby Im King, Deal sings, "Baby its hard to keep on missing you? Baby I hurt because Im missing you

Yel Breeders fan should not wuitty The weirdness that was the essential factor in Breeders songs makes an appearance in numerous songs on Boom' Boom' Boom' in "Sinper' Deal takes on a ch 154 ke volke and persona singing 1 wanna be a sinpper/ Some girts were bom to dance 'To music that sounds like children song she opes on to describe what a good stripper she would be and what she would do during her performance. She then proceeds to tra la la" for a good minute ending on a whimsical and childlish high note.

The Kelley Deal 6000 explore their exper imental side on numerous songs. "Total War" features Deal doing a spoken word to drums "Confidence Girl features a screanwing Kelley Deal and "Scary" features the odd chcinus of "Ooss" Uh oh/ Scary".

One of the most eclectic albums of the year Booml Booml Booml truly has something for everyone. If you don't buy it for the beautiful love songs, buy it for the screaming purk rock or for the jump-around pop or the ingenuous lyncs (which a nice change from most albums are listed over a ton of pictures in the CD cover). After you buy the album check out The Kelley Dear 6000 sivelyage for which Deaf won a design award. And finally you must read the Kelley Dear interview.

"Un Peso para un Taco"

by Jillian Cohen

I have finally admitted to myself that I am a permanent tourist. If has been the first of many steps in learning to enjoy my frequent weekend travels in Mexico. While everyday I expensive "Mexico." I reatized long ago that UDLA, the university I attend is not very representative of Mex ico. It is an my lings that I encounter the true beauty and diversity of the country the environment, that I environed before I came. I spent a long weekend in a pueblik four hours north ensconced in the mountains called Cuetzalian. My finends and I and our large backpacks sought out the sizes with the help of our young tour gludes. Miguel and Juan. Water fails pyramids caverns and anazing hidden attractions avaited us.

You know you're in Mexico when you nde in the back of a decrepil pickty truck along mountain roads -- well "roads" by Mexican standards -- for one peso. We didn't encounter many other backpack tobrg tounsis even though it was lestwal time. This was fine with us of course although our presence was all that more exciting to the hordes of women wanting to self us local treasures "Por favor pic favor" they plead

It is more difficult to deal with the children who aren't setting anything "Un peap para un face" they cry in a voice perfected for the occasion. Perhaps New York City has better prepared me for these encounters but nothing can really preper you for the poverty and the barefoot children beging for a peso. My own concept and definition of poverty has changed drastically but I slill wonder how these women can survive when they are all selling the same bracelets neptil holders and belts

I am often amazed by the simplicity of life in a place like Cuetzalan and as lounsts we sometimes act tike the culture is a show for us to enjoy. We cringed at the sight of a Nike I shirt that seemed so out of place among the indigenous dress I was more embarrassed at the culture and associations attached to the Nike label a culture where prior bes are so different. People have told me that this is a natural reaction part of "culture shock." Nevertheless I have become extramely self-con scious and aware of being from the United States. In addition to my Mex ican comparters, my finends from other countings such as Australia Cahada and Europe have pointed out my many bisses.

These are the things that I am supposed to be learning on the mythical "study abroad experience" I try to observe with an open mind, but each expenence proves that my much has a long way to go. For now I will continue to practice professional fourism, take pictures and enjoy it white it least. It can be frustrating to see beautiful and different customs and lives when you cannot be a part of them, but it is worth the discom fort. Each try proves that Mexico is a dynamic and proud country about which I learn more with each new adventure.

Better Dead than Co-ed: Tolerance and Equality in the Military

by Lisa Dean-Kluger

In 1994 Shannon Faulkner made national headlines as the first female to enter the Ciladei. Although she dropped put shortly thereafter her admission into the all male military academy broke the Citadel's tradition and sparked heated debate across the nation. In recent news. Vir oma Millery institute admitted their first temple cadets on August 17 ending 158 years of an all male legacy. The continuing frend has become a controversial issue across the nation, as more women fight for the nohl to enter such academies

In my correspondence with a student at one of the nation s noted mil itary academies. I asked him to share some of his feelings about this issue The replies I received shocked me. The first response written in the library was "it's a very touchy subject I can't write about it here. Someone might see but I II wate later " The tension in his letter struck me as unusual unbit i received ibis second response. If was at this point that I realized that women will not fit in at these institutions until those on poposite sides of the issue are able to reach a middle ground

"The females get a much easier time as far as bazing goes None of the upperclassmen bother them because they are afraid of being told on for sexual harassment."

This issue noses a Catch-22 for most modern femiliats. On one hand the special treatment is necessary to ensure a female cadet's safety. On the other hand this principle denies equality for which women have lought for many years and instead delivers special treatment. This creates under standable resentment from the male cadels enduring typical hazing rites. Unfortunately there is no simple solution. The idea of military academies as co-ed institutions is relatively new and the barrier between the sexes is still well-defined. Hopefully over time, the gender barncade will begin to fail and women will achieve equal treatment without feeling threatened

"The women also don't have to pass as difficult a physical test every month that the men do. They are quite literally almost doing haif of what we do "

The issue of equality versus special treatment comes into play again One philosophy says fif you can t take the heat get out of the kuchen -women should be allowed into these all male institutions if they are required to perform the same physical tasks as the mer. This was the issue in the case of Shannon Faulkner, Faulkner was unable to endure the same reprous training as the men and eventually dropped out after spending four days in the infirmary. Such a case defeats the women's - Lisa Dean Kluger is a Barnard first year movement in the academies because it proves the opposition right, per petuating the idea that women cannot handle the physical stress of a mill itary academy. Faulkner should not have attended the school solely to be the first female cadet if she knew that she did not have the physical ability to excel there

The flip side of the coin says that women have different physical compositions than men and cannot be expected to endure the same physical hardships therefore women should have different physical standards by which to abide. The problem with different standards is that it widens the schism between the sexes. Men already resembing the women's presence are further angered by what they consider special treatment. The reality is that women have fought for equality not superonly or preference--- and therefore must abide by the same standards as their male counterparts

"I am not the slightest bit sexist, but I don't think that they fit in here. Maybe at West Point where women have been doing there for I don't know how long "

My correspondent's concluding words drove the point home. The hailways of some military academies are filled with signs that read "bet ter dead than colled " while the female cadets try hard to earn the respect of their fellow officers. They are not gaining acceptance because they are new and because they have perpetrated change Over time, these women will become proneers, women who paved the way for equality in the military. Now however, they are the victure or vicious slander and opssib

The two mam sides to this heated debale are those who aroue that women descrive to be all these academies and those who feel that women are disrupting a contury of tradition and do not belong. Both sides make vahid points in their arguments. Women deserve to be at the acadernies, but only providing that they can succeed there. Special treatment of women undermines all that has been fought for in terms of equality by emphasizing that women need to be protected

The only solution to this issue is time and understanding on both sides. Supporters of women in such schools need to realize that the change is difficult to accept. Those who are against co-ed military acad. emies need to recognize women's changing role in society. Perhaps when each side recoonizes the other's valid points, women in such insttutions will be able to fit in belter with their male counterparts.

The pressure was on last Tuesday hight when the last two undefeared teams of the league came face to-face on the vol leyball court. While both the Pink Ladies and the Verve demonstrated why they have made it this far undefeated the Pink Ladies are unstoppable. The Pink Ladies show no. mercy on the court making their record 6-D. These were not the only teams to plovide excitement feilline hight The Jerns showed stamina and consistancy in a doubleheader. They played two matches back. to back against the Joycals and the Choco tate Chips. The energy kept flowing for the Jems They bumped set and spiked their way to victory in both metohes. Catch the exciting end to volleyball intramurals next week. Somer intramurals will kick off on Octuber 26

Tennis intramurals are still in full force. Keiko Okuda continues to be an ace on the court earning a recoid of 2-0
