1975 BOARD MOTION

"Not everyone is called to be a lawyer, a physician, a philosopher, to live in the public eye, nor has everyone outstanding gifts of natural capacity, but all of us are created for the life of social duty, all are responsible for the personal influence which goes forth from us."

Annie Nathan Meyer
from Autobiography

When, a little more than a year before my marriage, I confessed to my father that I had passed the examinations into the Collegiate Course for women at Columbia College—having studied in secret and never failed to play my nightly game of whist with him, so he would suspect nothing—he drew me gently and lovingly to him and announced, "You will never be married."

My heart sank. I distinctly remember how it sank. I desired marriage. I had fully intended to marry. Nevertheless, the immediate goal of a college education seemed at the moment even more delectable. So bravely, though not without a twinge of misgiving, I declared my willingness to forego all chances of winning a husband.

Papa was tremendously concerned. He kissed me tenderly, as I sat upon his lap. "Men hate intelligent wives," he declared, with a finality that it never occurred to me to question. Doubtless then and there I sorrowfully recited to myself some verses that were going the rounds at the time:

'Where are you going, my pretty maid?'
'I'm going to lecture, sir,' she said.

'May I come with you, my pretty maid?'
'You won't understand it, sir,' she said.

'What is the subject, my pretty maid?'
'The final extinction of man,' she said.

'Then you won't marry me, my pretty maid?'
'Superior girls never marry, sir,' she said.

What do you go to college for?
"I go," she straight replied, "To cheer my days with balls and plays, and lessons on the side."

1972

The class of 1975 is the end of an era for Barnard and Columbia. We were freshmen in the spring of 1972 when the last whimpers of student revolt were heard. Since then, the campus has changed. Newspapers harrangue us for our political apathy and castigate us for our rampant pre-professionalism. However, to one who has been there, the mood is serious, not grim. In these past four years, we have found strength within ourselves as women and scholars. Now we take with us all that we have learned, so that we may affect others, and possibly change the world. As we leave the college, we leave part of our past behind, and we become part of the past of Barnard College.

The New York Times

The trustees of Columbia University and Barnard College have agreed to replace what has often seemed a policy of reluctant co-existence with a new relationship of institutional and fiscal "integration without assimilation." Under the plan undergraduates on either side of upper Broadway's great divide will be able to take full advantage of courses, libraries and research facilities on both campuses. The arrangement means that the two institutions prefer to live together and share each other's wealth, without binding marriage ties—not an unfashionable compromise.

The long-overdue entente cordiale will touch the purse strings of both schools, thus offering reasonable assurance that the pledge to cooperate in the hiring of new faculty members and in the general planning of staff and curriculum will be more than a statement of good intentions. Efforts to eliminate duplication could, if they are considered more than a money-saving device, open up new opportunities for each college to concentrate on its areas of potential strength.

Critical observers will want to see whether rejection of a full merger has indeed been motivated by faith in their separate identities rather than by the conservatism of two proud institutions. Meanwhile, the Barnard-Columbia action offers one more hint that the faddish momentum of a national bandwagon rolling toward coeducation as the only approved higher education model may be slowing down. Wellesley and Chatham have recently upheld the banner of the separate women's colleges, and Amherst last month opted for remaining male.

Some feminists may interpret the Barnard-Columbia compromise as an accommodation to male dominance; but we find greater merit in the trustees' statement that the search for effective cooperation in no way precludes "the maintenance and development of distinctively different programs in response to different needs."

For many of us, Barnard began with Reid Hall. Reid meant the ever-cursed switch–board, the perpetually ringing hall phone, the meal plan which went from bad to better to bad again. All the same, we always remembered the faces from our freshman floors.

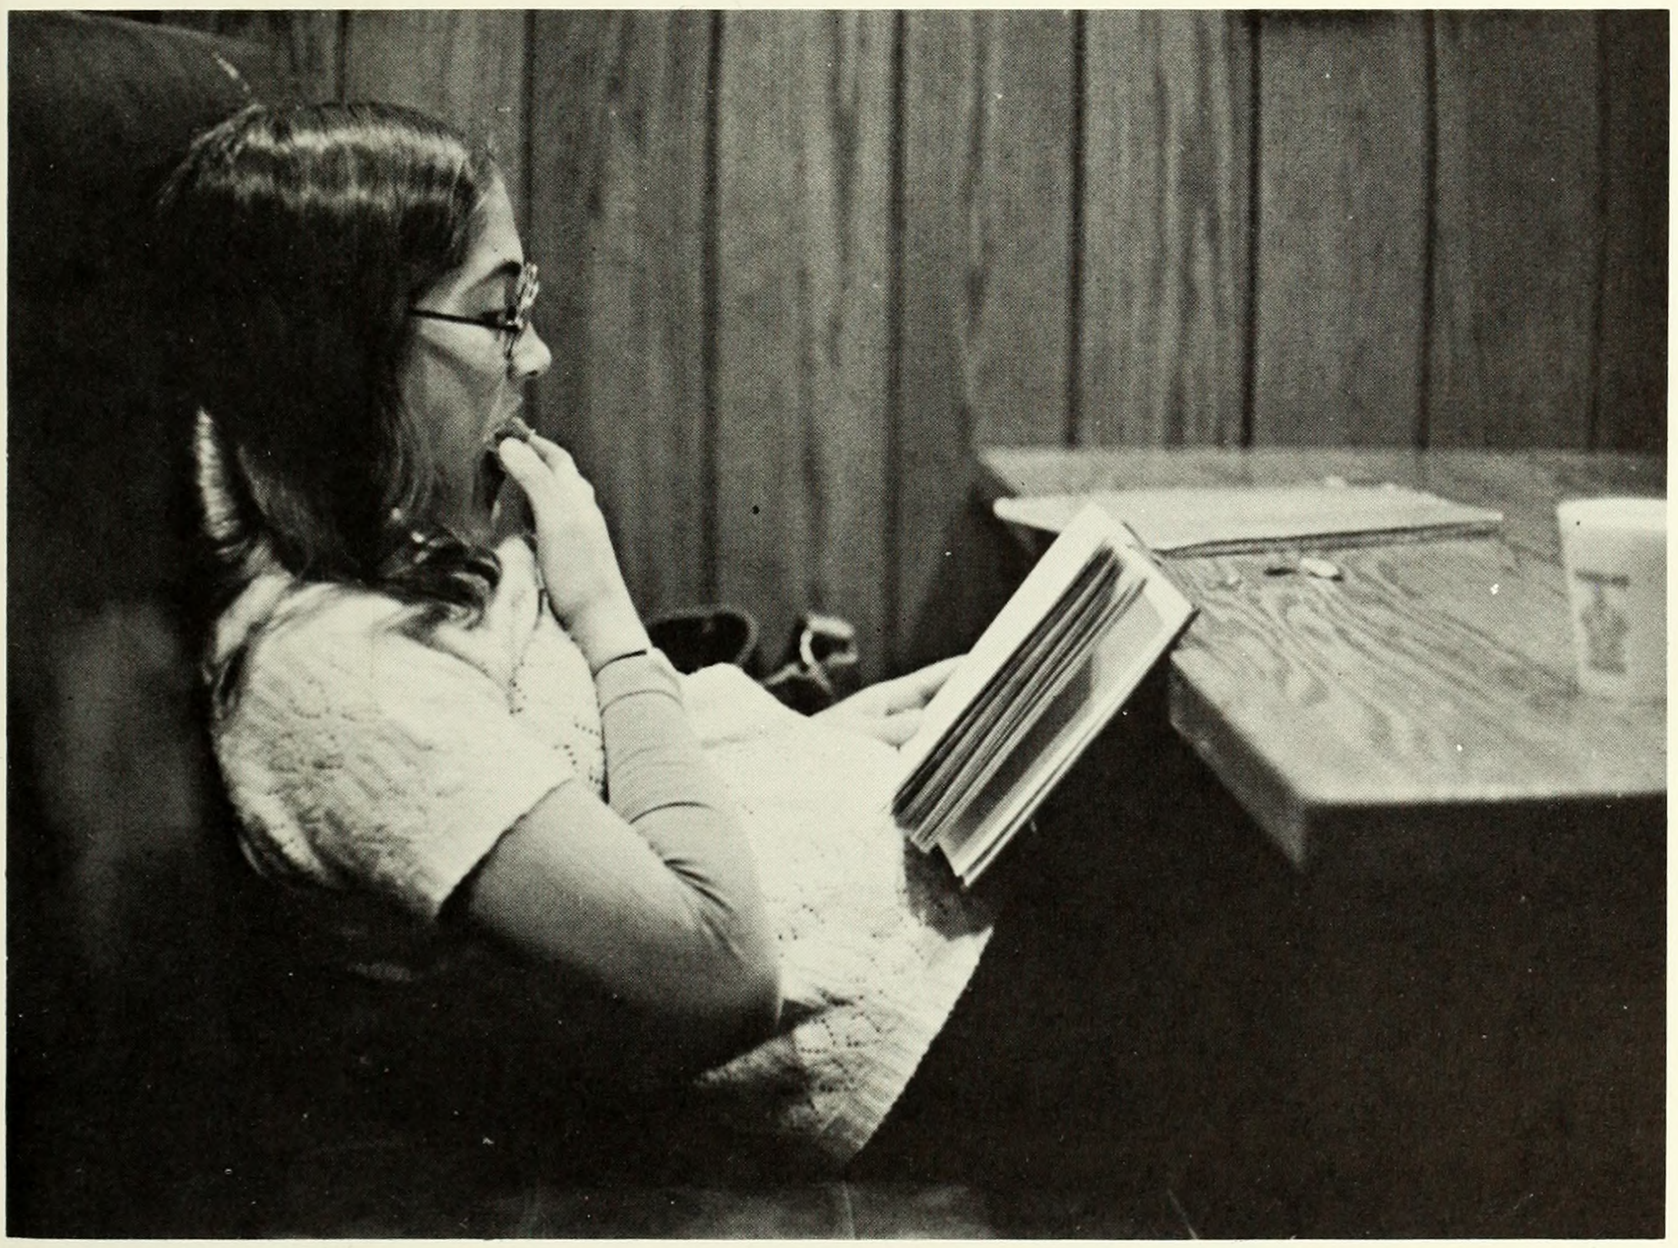
WORK AND PLAY



In classrooms, in libraries, in dorms, work is one of the controlling factors in our lives at Barnard. Work as intellectual stimulation, work as career preparation, work as a way to spend an evening with friends: it is why we are here, it is much of what we will remember.

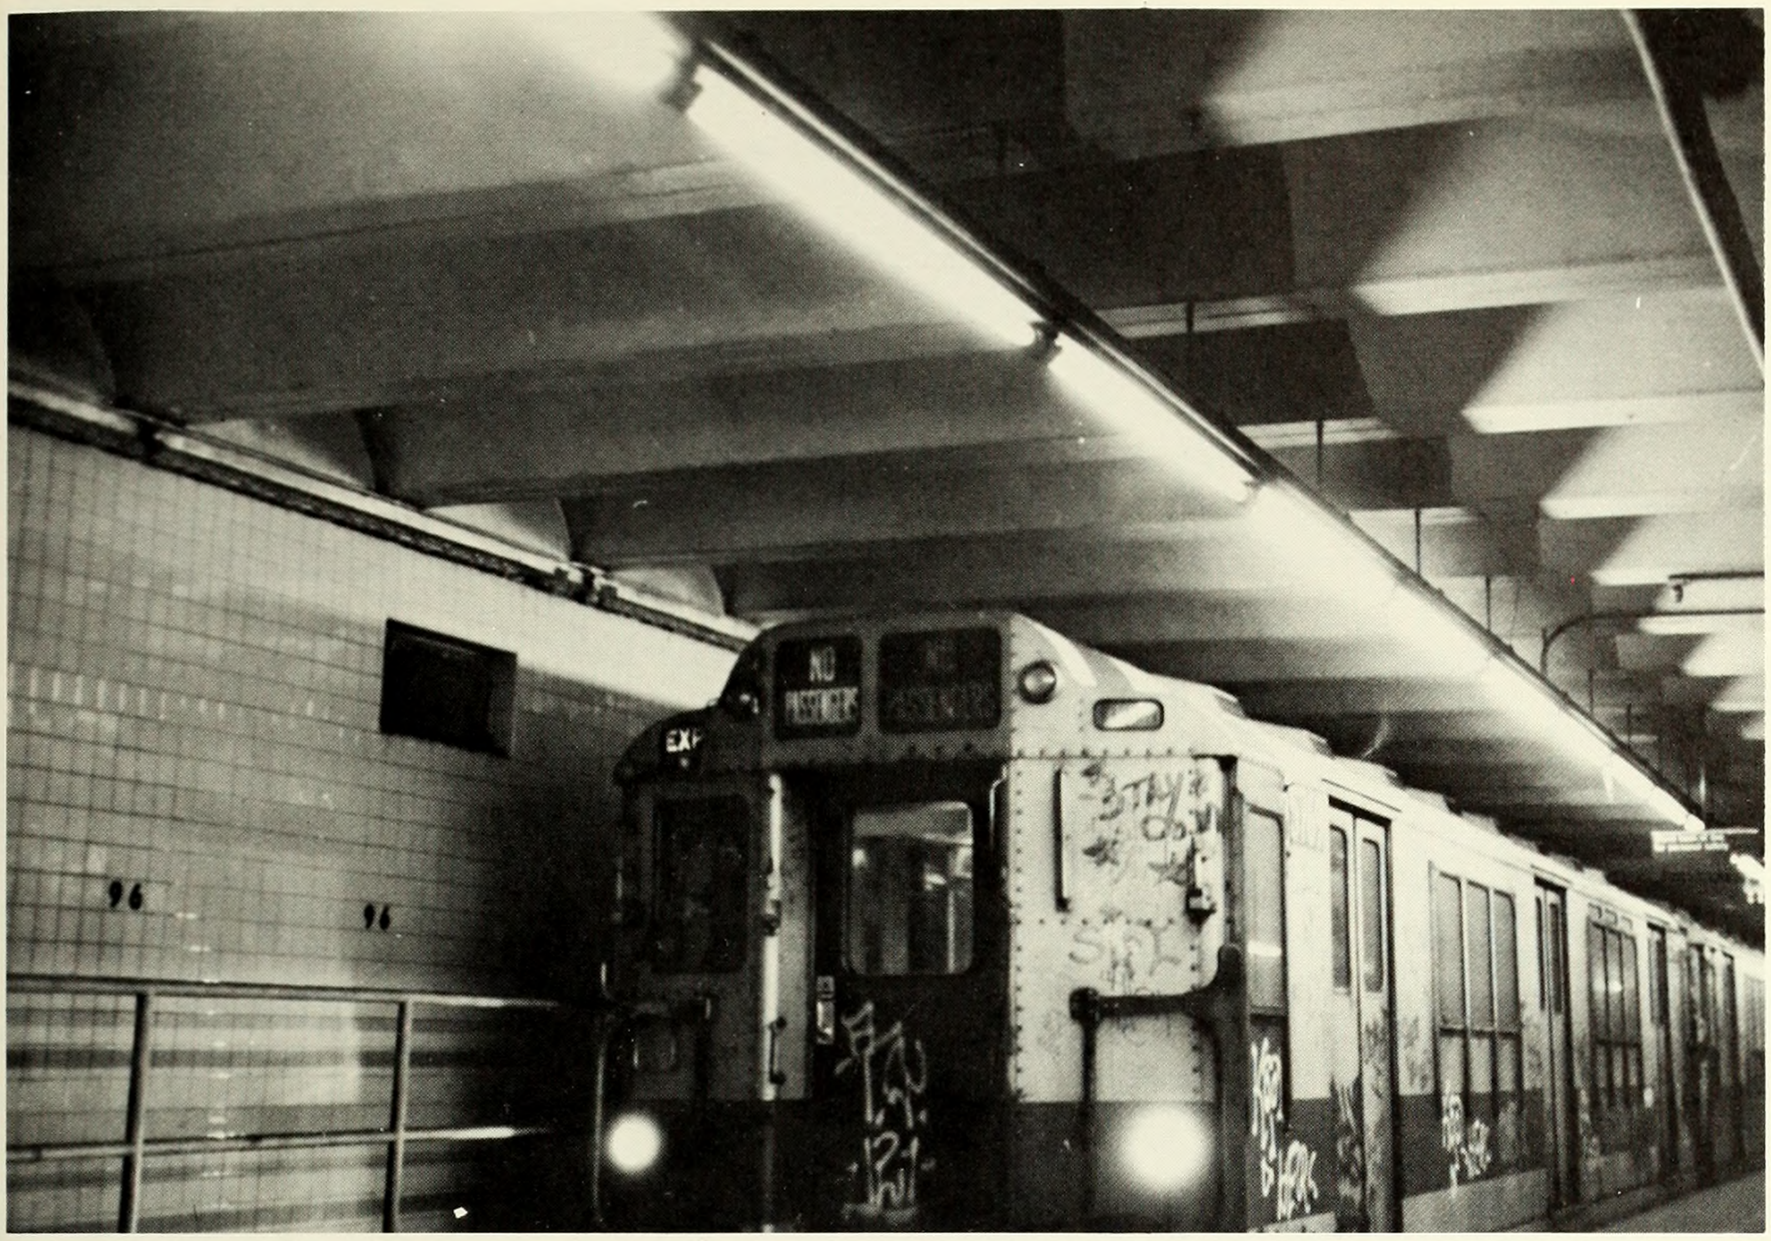
New York is Barnard's Laboratory

More than fifty years ago, Nicholas Murray Butler, one of Columbia's great presidents, observed, "New York is intensely cosmopolitan and contact with its life for a short time during the impressionableness of youth is in itself a liberal education." The city is an extension of the campus, utilized by every department to narrow the gap between learning and living. Barnard is a university college in an international city, and today the curriculum affirms and encourages precise and graphic use of its vast metropolitan laboratory.



A Reminder . . .

"Why are you going, my pretty maid?"
"To build a bridge to China," she said.

BARNARD COLLEGE

TO Jane D. Moorman

FROM Class of '75

SUBJECT A special thank you DATE May, '75

Jane Moorman, Assistant to the President, left Barnard College to assume a position at the University of California at Berkeley in November, 1974, but few people realized the significance of her departure. What exactly did Jane Moorman do here? She did everything that needed doing, from counselling and mediating between faculty and students, to deciding where the evergreen tree should go. She worked with immeasurable competence, humilty, and honesty, and without the need for anyone to know that she was behind the scenes. Despite the demands of an indescribable job, she remained a close and invaluable friend to students, faculty members, and administrators. We, the class of '75, thank Jane Moorman for all that she has done for Barnard, not only for the tangible products of her energy but for sharing her warmth, humor, and abilities with us. We will always remember her as a part of Barnard College, and we wish her luck in every endeavor.

So why do we do it?

What good is it?

Does it teach you anything?

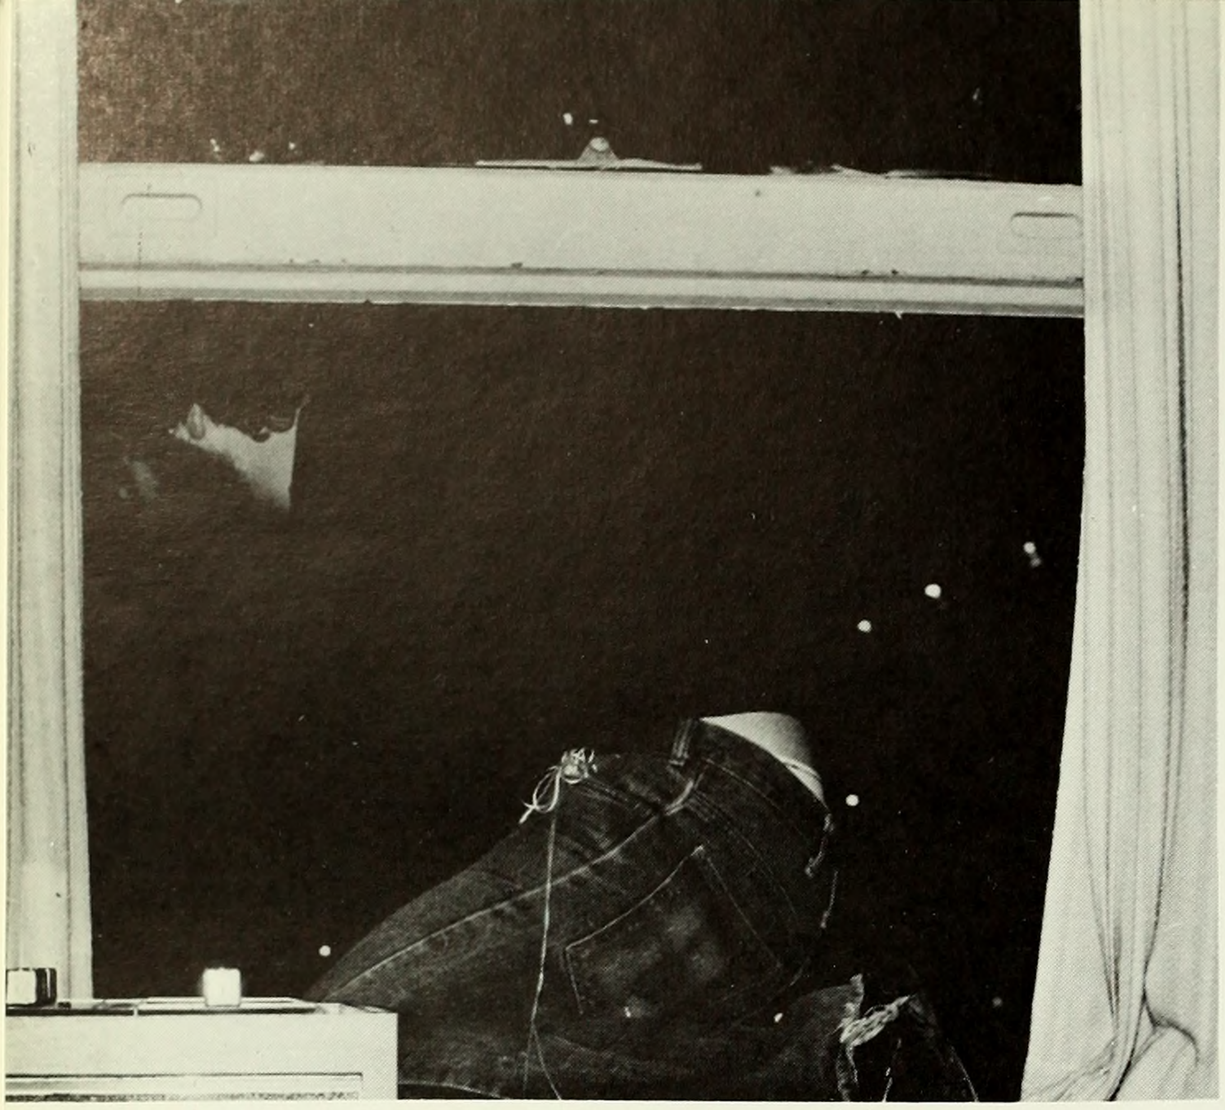
AND SO ALONG WITH ME THE BEST IS YET TO BE



Barnard College

OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

COLUMBIA UNIVERSITY, NEW YORK 10027

August 1971

A Word to the Class of 1975:

Soon you will be on campus for the beginning of the 1971-72 year at Barnard College. Perhaps you wonder what college will really be like; and we are wondering what you -- individually and as a class -- will be like.

We know that there are 430 of you; 243 from the metropolitan New York area and the remaining 187 from places as far away as Bellevue, Washington and Tokyo, Japan. Sixty-three percent of the class graduated from public high schools and 37% from independent and parochial schools. Nineteen of you have been out of school at least one year; 30 enter after three years of high school. Almost 10% of you indicated that you intended to major in biology and/or Pre Med. Seventeen percent of you are interested in a major in English and 20% in the Social Sciences. But many of you said that you are coming to Barnard to find out what really interests you.

We have other facts about you: You are able enough academically to succeed at Barnard (with work). You are interested in all kinds of activities from collecting old sheet music to studying China, past, present and future to scuba diving; and you chose to come to Barnard because it is in New York City, a part of Columbia University, small, liberal arts and woman centered but not segregated.

But with all this data we cannot predict what college will really be like for each of you nor do we want to. Your own college experience depends on the choices you make each day while you are in college.

This spring I asked several members of the class of 1974 what I could say that would be helpful to the Class of 1975. Betty-Ann Hyman of Falmouth Foreside, Mainesaid there wasn't really a lot that anyone could do in August except to be friendly and encouraging. She thought it would be wise to remind you that "to conform to the norms at Barnard is to be an individual." Lisa Kleist of Cheshire, Conn. said you should know "There's a lot to handle but you wouldn't be here if you couldn't do it." Michelle Friedman of Fairlawn, N. J. identified the characteristics of Barnard she most values in these words: "the respect for the individuality of each student and the attention she receives." She added that the more a "student realizes this the better the education she receives." She urged me to invite each of you to write me or to come to see me once on campus to discuss "what is important to you as an individual."

And so I shall close this first, official word to you with Michelle's recommendation. I would like to hear from you -- by letter now or in person when you come to campus -- to know what you expect from Barnard, how you plan to go about making these expectations possible and what we can do to help.

You have an exciting and busy year ahead. I look forward to sharing it with you.

Cordially,

Martha Peterson

Invitation to a Wine-Talk

The Place: Our Place.
The Time: Anytime.

Come in anytime, browse around, let's talk about wines. It's a fascinating subject, we'll talk about it, endlessly, to anyone who'll listen.

If you insist we'll even sell you a bottle or two, domestic or imported, from $1.00 to $100.00. As long as we can help you find a wine you'll enjoy we're happy, whether you buy it or we just talk about it.

. . . and so there ain't nothing more to write about, and I am rotten glad of it because if I'd a knowed what a trouble it was to make a book I wouldn't a tackled it and I ain't going to no more. But I reckon I got to light out for the territory ahead of the rest, because Aunt Sally she's going to adopt me and civilize me and I can't stand it. I been there before.
