ING

What would be the best way to encapsulate four years' worth of happenings into a nice section, we wondered. A nearly impossible task, we decided. We therefore chose to focus on a few (perhaps obvious) events, changes, and sights that seemed quintessentially Barnard. We think they are noteworthy and hope you do too.

BARNARD SPIRIT

If you have not yet noticed, Barnard students are fiercely devoted to their college. And why not? We do go to the best women's college in the world, so why not be exceedingly proud and enthusiastic about it? The Barnard spirit thrives in every Barnard woman, all twenty-five thousand or so. From the Class of 1936 to the Class of 1996, the memories of the experiences at Barnard never diminish or fade, but remain forever in the minds and hearts of every Barnard alumnae. Barnard inspires loyalty in all who pass through her gates.

PRESIDENT SHAPIRO'S FIRST YEAR

Has it been over a year already? One year ago, Judith Shapiro was officiallly inaugurated as the sixth president and tenth leader of Barnard College. It was a memorable day. The Barnard campus was decorated with brightly colored banners and balloons. The atmosphere was happy and excited, as the college prepared for President Shapiro's inauguration ceremony. Now one year later, President Shapiro remains a bright figure in the Barnard community.

Through the past year, President Shapiro has placed an emphasis on the further improvement of student-administration relations. She has always presented herself as an extremely personable and friendly administrator. Attending numerous campus activities on a regular basis over the past year, President Shapiro is a familiar and active presence on campus. During the November blood drive, she made an appearence to support the blood donors. She also has hosted many dinner parties for Barnard students and faculty.

Her contributions and presence have been well-received by the Barnard community.

BARNARD TURNS 106

Founder's Day is a relatively new Barnard tradition that celebrates the very essence of Barnard: its founding in 1889 by Frederick A. P. Barnard. Sponsored by the Student Government Association, this year's celebration featured a vendor fair on 116th Street and Claremont Avenue, live musical and dance performances, free souvenirs, and, of course, food. Performers included a jazz group and a preview of the Barnard College Musical Theater's upcoming show, "Little Shop of Horrors." Students, faculty, administrators, and curious passersby shopped, ate, and mingled outdoors in the beautiful Indian summer weather. Originally scheduled for October 6th, the threat of rain had postponed Founder's Day until October 13th. (Who ever heard of postponing a birthday?) The second attempt proved successful, with the weather, the performers, and the vendors all cooperating to make Barnard's 106th birthday a very happy one indeed.

DID YOU KNOW?

Here are some miscellaneous tidbits of information about Barnard for some yearbook fun:

The founder of Barnard, Frederick A. P. Barnard, served as the President of Columbia University from 1864 until 1888.

Barnard's original location was 343 Madison Avenue.

The original faculty consisted of six members.

Milbank Hall was the first building erected when Barnard relocated to Morningside Heights in 1900.

The first edition of the Mortarboard, then known as the Barnard Annual, was published in 1894.

COLUMBIA CONSTRUCTION

Since last summer, Columbia University construction workers have been feverishly improving the appearance of the campus. Bright yellow tape and dumpsters have become familiar sights on campus, serving as indicators of repairs and renovations underway.

Many dangerous sections of College Walk have been repaved. There are new campus location signs which help unseasoned students or visitors find their way. Lawns have been re-sown, adding welcome color to the campus. Major renovations are being made to Furnald Hall and the journalism and law schools. Ferris Booth Hall--FBH--is due to be torn down shortly, to give rise to a new student complex, Alfred Lerner Hall.

THE NEW QUAD CAFE

The Quad Cafe has always been an important part of Barnard life. It is the site of some first-year seminar classes, a place for meetings, a study break haven, and munchies headquarters.

This year, the Quad Cafe reopened with a new look. Decked out in new tablecloths and offering Starbucks coffee, the Quad Cafe is trendier and much improved. The coffee and hot chocolate hit the spot on cold, winter days or on long, studying nights. The atmosphere is cozier and more inviting. The new and improved Quad Cafe is a success! --Evelyn Wah

LIFE

Barnard life means so many different things to so many people. Students either live in college residence halls or commute from the greater New York area. We profile each alternative. Students go to classes, do internships, hang out, chat on the telephone, surf the Internet and write e-mail, sunbathe on the lawn, rollerblade, party, and, oh, yes, they do occasionally study.

RESIDENCE HALLS

So you are a Barnard student and you live in campus housing. That sounds simple enough but it really is not quite that straightforward. There are so many options. First-years live in the Quad, mostly in the ring floors. After the first year of assigned roommates, everything becomes the luck of the draw: namely the famous Barnard room selection process. The Tower, 620 West 116th Street, and the rooms with fireplaces in Brooks Hall are the places most likely to be taken by seniors who have waited their entire college careers for the best room selection possibility. Some people like the cozy confines of Elliott Hall, across Claremont Avenue from the campus; others leap at the chance for a Hewitt single. The room selection process demands that the student weigh the comparitive merits of a view versus privacy versus a kitchen.

COMMUTERS

For the ninety-something percent of Barnard students who live in campus housing, college is a time of real independence, of being away from family and home. For the commuter, college is still a time of self-reliance, but she must work harder to define her independence. During the day, all Barnard students share a common existence, studying in the same classrooms with the same professors. Then after a long day of classes, the resident student goes to her dorm room, while the commuter student retreats to the subways and buses for a trek to a home that may be as distant as Long Island or central New Jersey. Despite the extra adaptation and adjustments that are sometimes necessary because of late or weekend meetings, commuters are active in college life. Even with occasional logistical difficulties, commuting is an educational and unique experience that is the right choice for some.

LAWN & STEPS

On any warm, sunny day, crowds of students can be found camped out on Lehman Lawn, soaking in the rays. It's a great spot for eating, reading, studying, tanning, or just hanging out. Special events that take place on the Lawn include musical performances, barbeques, vendor fairs, clubs recruitment, and marketers distributing their merchandise.

What the Lawn is to Barnard, the Low Library steps are to Columbia. The sun doesn't need to be shining for people to gravitate to this site. No matter what the weather is, you can always find people there. During winter storms, the snow-covered steps are used for tobogganing and snowball fights. Rumor has it that the track team has been spotted running there naked at night. Of course, both Lehman Lawn and the Low Library steps are the sites of the ultimate college moment, the Barnard College and University-wide commencement exercises.

HITTING THE BOOKS

The Butler Library scene: Women wearing red lipstick, hair sprayed just perfectly, guys reeking of cologne, and the entire Reserve Reading Room sounding as if there's a party going on instead of people studying. If you are one to join the social scene or just want to enter the meat market, just bring your books to Butler. It's a great place to meet friends with whom to socialize and/or study. Of course, Butler is not the only library on campus. There are so many others from which to choose.

On the other hand, many people enjoy the comfort of their own dorm room. With the telephone forwarded to phone mail and the stereo playing somewhere in the background, serious students can hit the books. Others prefer the television and stereo to be on maximum volume. Either way, the studying gets done.

CLASSES, CLASSES

It is the first day of the fall semester, a chance to start anew and to redeem myself of my typical excesses of last semester. The first class of the day is in 202 Altschul. I heard the professor is really great, but then again, all of Barnard's professors are. Entering the lecture hall, I begin to fill with dread. The room is so absolutely crowded. I'm going to be lost among the sea of students. As I sit down, I notice a phrase written in big block letters on the center blackboard: "Always ask." A new sense of hope springs up within me. "Always ask"-- how personable, how encouraging, how BARNARD. It's a chance for me to stand out in the spotlight. "Aways ask" is a subtle invitation for me to show my true genius. It is a chance for all of us, all three hundred of us in the lecture hall, to be great. --Evelyn Wah

CAMPUS ACTIVITIES

The first sunny day of spring usually brings out the restless athlete in many of us. Though many students like to relax, others like to enjoy the fresh air as they participate in various campus activities. During the winter months, most of the activities take place indoors. Club meetings reach their highest levels of attendance when it is cold outside. There are also intramural sports teams meeting and playing regularly. Low Plaza, the lawns, and various outdoor campus gathering places, peaceful all winter, are suddenly crowded once again with people. Everyone seems to be enjoying the great outdoors. From volleyball to ultimate frisbee, there's always something in going on. There is usually a football or softball game in progress and joggers and rollerbladers sometimes seem to have taken over the campus. --Susan Dee

STUDY BREAKS

What word is most closely associated with the phrase "study break"? Food, of course! Pizza, ice cream, hot chocolate, Entenman's cookies and cakes (fat free, reduced fat, the real thing), Hydrox, wings, pretzels, chips, salsa...What better way to entice a student to take a break from the books than to advertise free food? No real occasion is needed: a holiday, midterms, or any random day is fine for a study break. Once students are dragged from their rooms, it takes a fire drill to make them leave the lounge. Between movies, "Seinfeld," and good conversations with "Friends," students enjoy every last second of their time outs, as long as they remember to bring their own mugs!

TECHNOLOGY

Picture Barnard College just a few short years ago: hall phones and a slow communications system between Barnard and the outside world. Now, step into 1996: Rolm phones in every room, computer labs equipped with access to e-mail and the Internet. A student can have access to Columbianet simply by means of a computer and a Rolm data phone in her room, as well as from the public terminals scattered throughout campus. Rolm phones incorporate many functions for which the telephone company charges added fees, including call waiting, the "busy signal fix," and voice mail, as well as free on-campus calls. The newer Rolm phones even include Caller ID. Barnard students have free e-mail, a cause of delight to many (including those who have become addicts), but a source of anxiety to those who are fearful of computers. The Internet, including the World Wide Web, can be used for anything from doing research for classes to finding concert tickets to checking out the latest news from Sri Lanka. --Meira Sobel

THURSDAY

It's Thursday night, the begining of a weekend of possibilities. You'd love to take the city by storm, but you're feeling a little worn down. The week has been hectic, harsh as usual, packed with exams, readings, papers, and classes. You need to let out all of the frustrations of the week and regroup, without tiring yourself out. The solution? Hit the local scene, whether it be going out or just to the nearest residence hall lounge.

Just down the street, glorious laughter and music permeate the darkness.The Barnard student doesn't have to go far to find something "a brew." There are several places in the vicinity, including the West End, which arguably is a don't miss in the college experience. The rustic decor can be easily missed surrounded by the walls covered with memorabilia and tables carved with Columbia history.

But why go out when Thursday is "Must See TV" night? Reid Lounge is always crowded for the Quad Hall Council's free food and weekly presentation of the ongoing saga of "Friends" Ross and Rachel.

FRIDAY

It's Friday night, and you're ready to hit the town. The city awaits. So much to do, so little time. Friday is the first opportunity to have a decent meal (read: not predictable meal plan food) without feeling the need to rush. New York offers any type of cuisine at a fair price. Nightlife is never boring in New York City, especially on a Friday night. There are good parties of all shapes and sizes, whether sponsored by clubs or friends. The party is yours to enjoy, a time to bury tests and papers deep in the recesses of the mind. So much can happen on a Friday night, there is an excitement in the air.

SATURDAY

Saturday promises time to do whatever your heart desires. It's the day best spent with other people because the pressure of school and work is less intense. As you wake up late, you try to decide what to do. There is always so much going on, all of it easily accessible. Saturday is a day to relax and to take your time.

Why not begin the day with brunch? How about doing something cultural? There are countless museums, specializing in just about everything. There are concerts, recitals, and performances constantly. Are athletics your thing? You can do (miniature golf, rollerblading, biking, boating, ice skating) or you can watch (baseball, basketball, football, hockey, depending on the season). Saturday night holds many possibilities for fun and relaxation. --Evelyn Wah

SUNDAY

Where did the weekend go? The week's impending schoolwork and classes are far too depressing to think about, but you do what you must. After dragging yourself out of bed, you collect your thoughts. What needs to be done? Once you've decided, you grab your books and head to the library.

Once you reach the library, you realize that all your friends are there too. The reserve room becomes the day's social hangout, the place to go to pretend you are doing schoolwork. (Hey, at least you're trying.) There, stories are told as students compare weekends. When the last tale is told, you realize it's late. Now it's really time to start doing some work.

Eventually, you return to your dorm room, somewhat guilt ridden by the fact that you've only done a fraction of what you needed to do. You realize what a great weekend it's been. The only thing left to do now is to look forward to next weekend.

New York C

...k City skyline
...Studies

ity

New York, New York... The City is Barnard's extended campus. There's so much to do, four years couldn't possibly be enough time to do them all. New York is a world class city, diverse like none other, with world class attractions around every corner. With so much to choose from, we've chosen to focus on parks, museums, landmark buildings, shopping, and of course, Barnard's own Morningside Heights.

CITY BUILDINGS

New York City has the most diverse mixture of buildings anywhere, both in design and in function. The City has the most recognizable skyline of any city in the world. There is perhaps no better symbol of the City than the skyscraper. Likewise, the City is profoundly associated with culture and is celebrated as a magnet for culture and the arts. Here, we acknowledge four quintessential New York sights that are instantly recognizable but that did not easily fit any standard categories.

DID YOU KNOW?

 The Chrysler Building, an Art Deco skyscraper, was completed in 1930 and named for its owner, the car magnate Walter Chrysler. It was the world's tallest building for a short time.

 The Empire State Building opened in May of 1931 and was the world's tallest building until the 1970's.

 The title World Trade Center actually includes more than just the Twin Towers; there are other, smaller buildings that are part of it as well.

 The Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts was yet another New York City project spearheaded by Robert Moses, who designed the highway network connecting the City to Long Island and many bridges within the City.

SHOPPING:

From high fashion to toys to antiques, New York City offers anything and everything. Anything your heart desires can be found around any corner or down a narrow alley. From haute couture to Village grunge, you can find it in any New York neighborhood. Even if you are not one to spend a lot of money, window shopping in the City can make anyone happy. You can always dream. The windows of Saks Fifth Avenue during the holiday season tell a wonderful story every year. At F.A.O. Schwarz, a toy soldier greets visitors and there are toys to play with even if you aren't buying. New York stores satisfy everyone, whether buying or just looking.

NY PARKS

A familiar motto of Columbia University is "all of New York City is our campus." While it is great for students to have such easy access to the City hotspots, C.U. students miss having a campus. There are no rolling hills, no lush wooded areas--just Lehman Lawn and the fields by College Walk. So where do students go to bask in nature? City parks. The City is famous for its oases in the middle of a polluted metropolis. Most popular, of course, is Central Park, home of the Great Lawn, a zoo, a skating rink, and many other amenities. On weekends, it is closed to vehicular traffic, making it the ideal place for rollerbladers and cyclists. Riverside Park is just a few seconds from campus. Its convenience can't be beat for jogging, walking, and pick-up basketball games. Center island gardens have been renovated and built up by neighborhood residents and they are now mini-jungles of greenery. Nothing beats Riverside's breathtaking view of the Hudson River. --Rebecca Geller

No city can lay claim to anything that remotely compares to the museums of New York. New York is so huge, she even has a museum to celebrate herself. If you want to see art, you'll have to decide what kind because there are just too many from which to choose. Traditional art, folk art, modern art, ethnic art, photographic art and museums devoted exclusively to each. What other city has a museum that features dinosaurs? New York is the most ethnically diverse city in the world and what better way to reflect diversity than to house the museums that celebrate so many of the individual groups. Fifth Avenue may be the "Museum Mile" of the city, but what about the countless others that are spread throughout the rest of Manhattan and the five boroughs?

--Evelyn Wah and Peri Horowitz

ONLY IN NY

How many times have we heard someone exclaim, "Only in New York!" They may have meant well by it or they may have been trying to be nasty but in either case, they are right about the uniqueness of the City. Where else would events like the Rollerblading Championships take place? And where else would a marathon attract over 25,000 runners of all ages, nationalities, and abilities? In what other place do so many different ethnic groups peacefully co-exist? What other city boasts of as many professional sports teams? As many department stores? What other city has so many songs written about it? So many movies set in it? So many taxi cabs? As many lights? Theaters? ..... --Peri Horowitz

The name Morningside Heights evokes thoughts of beauty and serenity. Within the boundaries of the neighborhood lies a world unique in the city. There is diversity in design: the islands of trees and bushes that divide Broadway, the unfinished towers of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, the decaying grandeur of Grant's Tomb, the elegant apartments that line Riverside Drive. Broadway offers wonderful shopping opportunities and food to please all palates. Riverside Park is a jogger's paradise and Central Park is within walking distance.The subway takes you anywhere you want to go, making the great beyond easily within reach.

Seniors have been waiting four years for this moment--the chance to see their portraits in their yearbook. The graduate section is, essentially, the highlight of the book. This section includes Barnard seniors, as well as those graduating from Columbia College and the School of Engineering and Applied Sciences. Respondents to the annual senior survey were given the chance to submit quotes and lists of their activities. Selected responses to survey questions are excerpted for entertainment purposes.

Most Important Lessons Learned

1. It doesn't have to be good, it just has to be done.
2. Trust and be yourself.
3. Don't be afraid to question the world around you.
4. The importance and value of friendship.
5. Pick roommates wisely.
6. How to write a paper.
7. Most of what you learn in college is not lear d in your classes.
8. How to live without sleep.
9. Nothing is ever as bad as it seems.
10. Live one day at a time and enjoy the mom t.

Jen, Dirk, Rani, of course Rudy, Thanks for making it great. Love, T.

le most Seniors expect to face change, they usually think they have until May. Barnard's only late night pus snack shop, the Quad Cafe, was one place most did not expect to be faced with the real world. The bucks coffee was a plus on most Seniors' lists but not when it meant giving up everything else.

Top Ten Quad Cafe Disappointments

1. Too expensive
2. Not open late enough
3. Too gourmet/pretentious
4. Too fat free
5. No more ice cream or frozen yogurt (except in HEWITT!)
6. No smoking
7. Less packaged food
8. No Snapple
9. Over-rated ambiance
10. Lost its homey feel

Faculty, & Staff

The process of education would be impossible without educators and a dedicated network of people to support them. Here, Mortarboard pays tribute to the people of Barnard, from the professors who inspire us, to the administrators who plan the College's programs and chart its future, to the workers who keep the grounds of the College so beautiful.

President Judith Shapiro

BARNARD

Office of the President

Dear Class of 1996:

You are the second senior class I have known at Barnard, and I have enjoyed watching you take on this role with confidence and finesse. You are a daring, inquisitive and vibrant group of young women who ask important questions, seek many truths and actively serve your community. By doing all of this and more, you continue to uphold Barnard's reputation as a home for dynamic women who try to make a difference in the world. As you step outside our gates to face the new demands and responsibilities of your future, remember to confront each challenge with the same panache and intellectual rigor you demonstrated at Barnard.

Your four years at Barnard have certainly prepared you for this moment. Soon you will emerge from the final cocoon-like stages of your senior theses and discover just how much your liberal arts education has armed you with the necessary skills that you will use throughout your lifetimes. You have learned how to investigate and analyze new issues successfully, find solutions to complex problems and confront change in a determined fashion. This will become more apparent after you finally tear yourselves away from the mesmerizing glow of your computer screens and see how well you have mastered the skills of scholarly analysis. In fact, no matter where you go, and no matter what you do, your Barnard education will always travel with you.

Don't forget, too, that the friends you made here will always remain an important part of your lives, no matter how much time or distance intervenes. You also have the good fortune of having so many new technologies to help you maintain these life-long connections. Now, even if you travel to such far-off places as Kathmandu or the icy plains of the Arctic, you can continue to keep in touch via satellite or e-mail.

Endings are also times for beginnings. So, as you set off on new adventures, remember that your College will always be waiting to welcome you back through its gates, time and time again. We hope that you will return often and share your many stories and discoveries with us.

With all good wishes and affection,

Sincerely,

Judith R. Shapiro

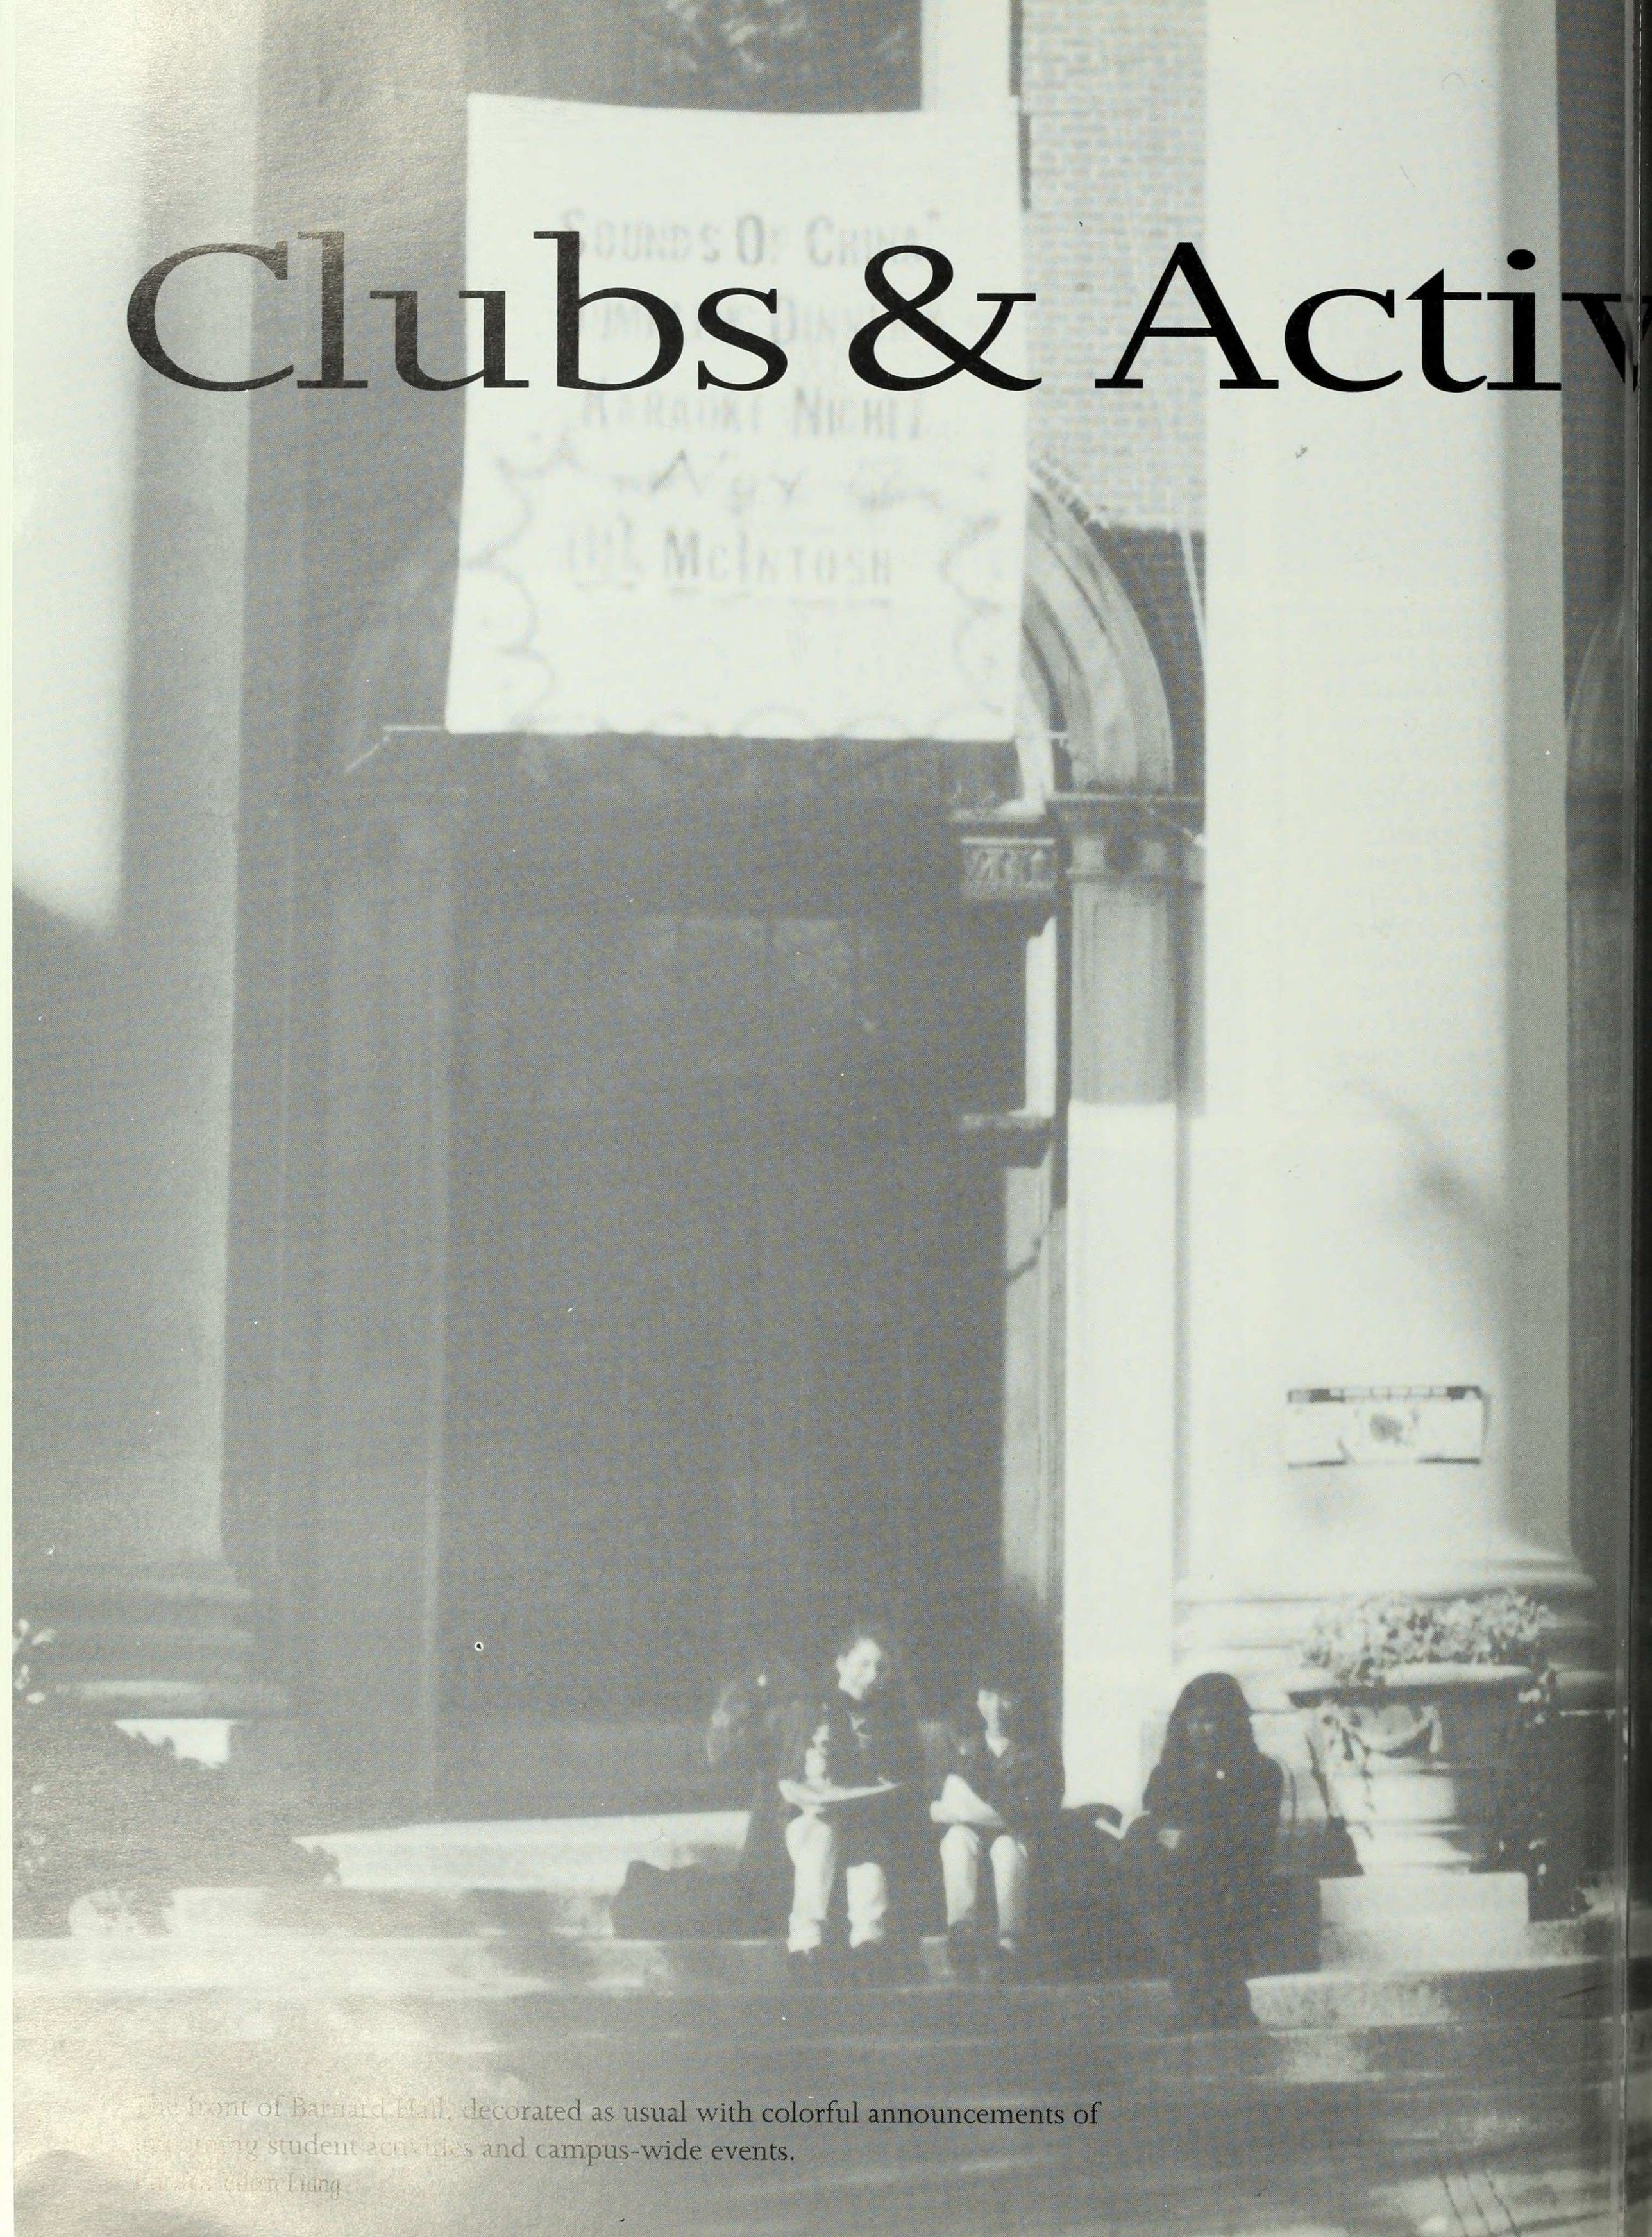
Clubs & Activ



In front of Barnard Hall, decorated as usual with colorful announcements of coming student activities and campus-wide events.

There are over two hundred student organizations on campus. Most are recognized by SGA or USO. Funding allocations range from $150 to a whopping $32,500, depending on the number of members and activities sponsored during the year. The variety of clubs and organizations reflects the diverse interests of the student body: the arts, culture, politics, media, pre-professions, and community service. Whatever your interests are, you are sure to find your niche. If not, you can always create your own by presenting a constitution of purpose to the SGA. All you need is a membership list of ten.

Activities are great ways to justify your procrastination. Most of all, they are fun! (despite all the meetings and grunt work, dealings with bureaucracy and people you don't agree with, and thoughts of why you are sending out phone mail messages at 4AM instead of writing that overdue paper...)

CLUBS/ACTIVITIES DAY

Clubs/Activities Day is the yearly event that allows you to sample the diverse range of student organizations all at once, while you leisurely browse past the tables lining College Walk and Lehman Lawn. Enthusiastic current members will try their best to persuade you to sign up for their general club membership list (for funding purposes) or invite you to interview for their OCM (organization committee member) positions (if they like you). Still, it's a great way to kill some time on a sunny Friday afternoon on campus. Chances are you'll never see some of those clubs again or attend their events during your four years at Barnard. On the other hand, you just might find one that's perfect for you!

Barnard Hall

Once you walk through the Barnard Gates, you'll immediately notice artistic and original banners hanging on Barnard Hall. These creative banners are great ways to publicize events and activities. By the way, ever wondered what they are? (answer below)

Located on 3rd and 4th floors of Barnard Hall are two popular spots to hold events and activities, Sulzberger Parlor and the James Room. The trick is early reservations (before other clubs beat you to it at College Activities).

Barnard women are strong women, strong women of words, politics, cultures, and knowledge. Barnard students are not only intelligent, talented, and strong-minded, many are also athletes, some of whom participate on Columbia University sports teams. The Barnard athlete combines a strong mind and a strong body.

Turf. Two coaches. Trainers. New equipment. New coaches. Die-hard players. The Columbia field hockey team began its first official season in 1995 as a fully reorganized sport with these elements in place. Although the team doesn't have varsity status yet, successful seasons like this past one will insure promotion within a few years. Success in field hockey cannot be measured only by score. This year's women's soccer team had an outstanding season under the direction of head coach Kevin McCarthy. In only his second season at Columbia, he has made a huge impact on the soccer program. This year's team was even stronger and more dangerous in the middle of the field. Seniors Kate Galanek, Sarah Robbins, Trisha Cunnane, Vivian Mougios, and Dana Jones all contributed to the rewarding season; their sturdy soccer shoes will be difficult to replace next year.

ition here. The team will be ething impressive to watch in years, but the exciting birth of program will have been in '95.

Senior Anastasia Yatrakis and junior Kristie Overton, two dominating middle blocks, led the women's volleyball team this year. Both captains led the team in blocks and kill consistency. Senior Sue Roadfeldt and first-year Erica Loberg supplied strong hitting, aided by the setting skills of sophomore Cheryl Bucci.

Seniors Yatrakis and Roadfeldt will graduate with successful seasons under their belts. Next year, the Lions will have lost only two from their roster. With a team consisting primarily of first-years, head coach Peggy Schultz will have a familiar and experienced team to work with next season.

Archery, an extremely successful varsity team sport at Columbia, includes members from all colleges of the University. Incorporating a large mix of students from Columbia College, Barnard College, and the School of Engineering and Applied Science, the archery team is routinely successful, year after year. This year, led by captains Diana Diep (SEAS) and Heather Friedman (BC), they are again looking forward to a rewarding season.

First-years are taking the tennis courts by storm this year. Out of a roster of eleven women on the varsity team, seven are first-years. With a new team, the future is unforeseeable. The new women are ready for stiff competition nevertheless; they are all skilled players. A Columbia graduate himself, head coach Rob Kresberg is looking to his captains to guide the new members of the team. Senior captains Elizabeth Alina and Kelly Koch are expected to do much this season, and will be the only two members graduating from the team at the end of the year.

TRACK & FIELD

The women's cross-country and track teams had some inner turmoil this year. With a change of coaches in the middle of the year, it is impossible to predict the outcome of the spring season. The small yet dedicated group of core members will be expected to lead the team through the competitive season. The new coach, Willy Wood, attends to work the team into racing shape for the outdoor season. Track and field is one of the only sports in the Columbia University sports program that has the team made up of both men and women.

Years in Rev

The former Yugoslavia was torn apart by war and constantly in the news over the course of the past four years.

iew

College may often seem like an insular place, but world events are important. In this section, we briefly examine some of the things that shaped history and occupied the collective attention while we were busy studying for exams. This is by no means a definitive presentation. All of the photographs and the basic text information has been provided by the Associated Press Wide World Photos.

First Year

The people of Somalia suffered from one of the worst famines in history. Three months after the world woke up to the situation, food started to reach the hundreds of thousands of Somalis. Estimates of the dead ranged from 100,000 to half a million, but no one knows just how many perished in the Horn of Africa nation. American involvement in the relief efforts raised questions about the role of the armed services in non-war situations. (Right)

Arkansas Governor Bill Clinton and his vice presidential running mate, Senator Al Gore of Tennessee, ended twelve years of Republican control of the White House by defeating incumbents George Bush and Dan Quayle. Chief Justice William Rhenquist administered the oath of office to Clinton with his family at hand. (Below)

Haitians fleeing political uncertainty and poverty were initially allowed to remain at the U.S. base at Guantanamo Bay and to seek asylum. The Bush administration's policy changed and the Coast Guard began intercepting refugees at sea, before they could even apply for asylum. (Left)

Ross Perot proved to be a major factor in presidential politics, entering, exiting, and then re-entering the race, ultimately garnering a respectable independent showing. (Below, right)

Two earthquakes rocked California in June. The first registered 7.4 on the Richter scale, radiated out from a remote stretch of the Mojave Desert, and was felt as far away as Denver. The second measured 6.5. (Below, left)

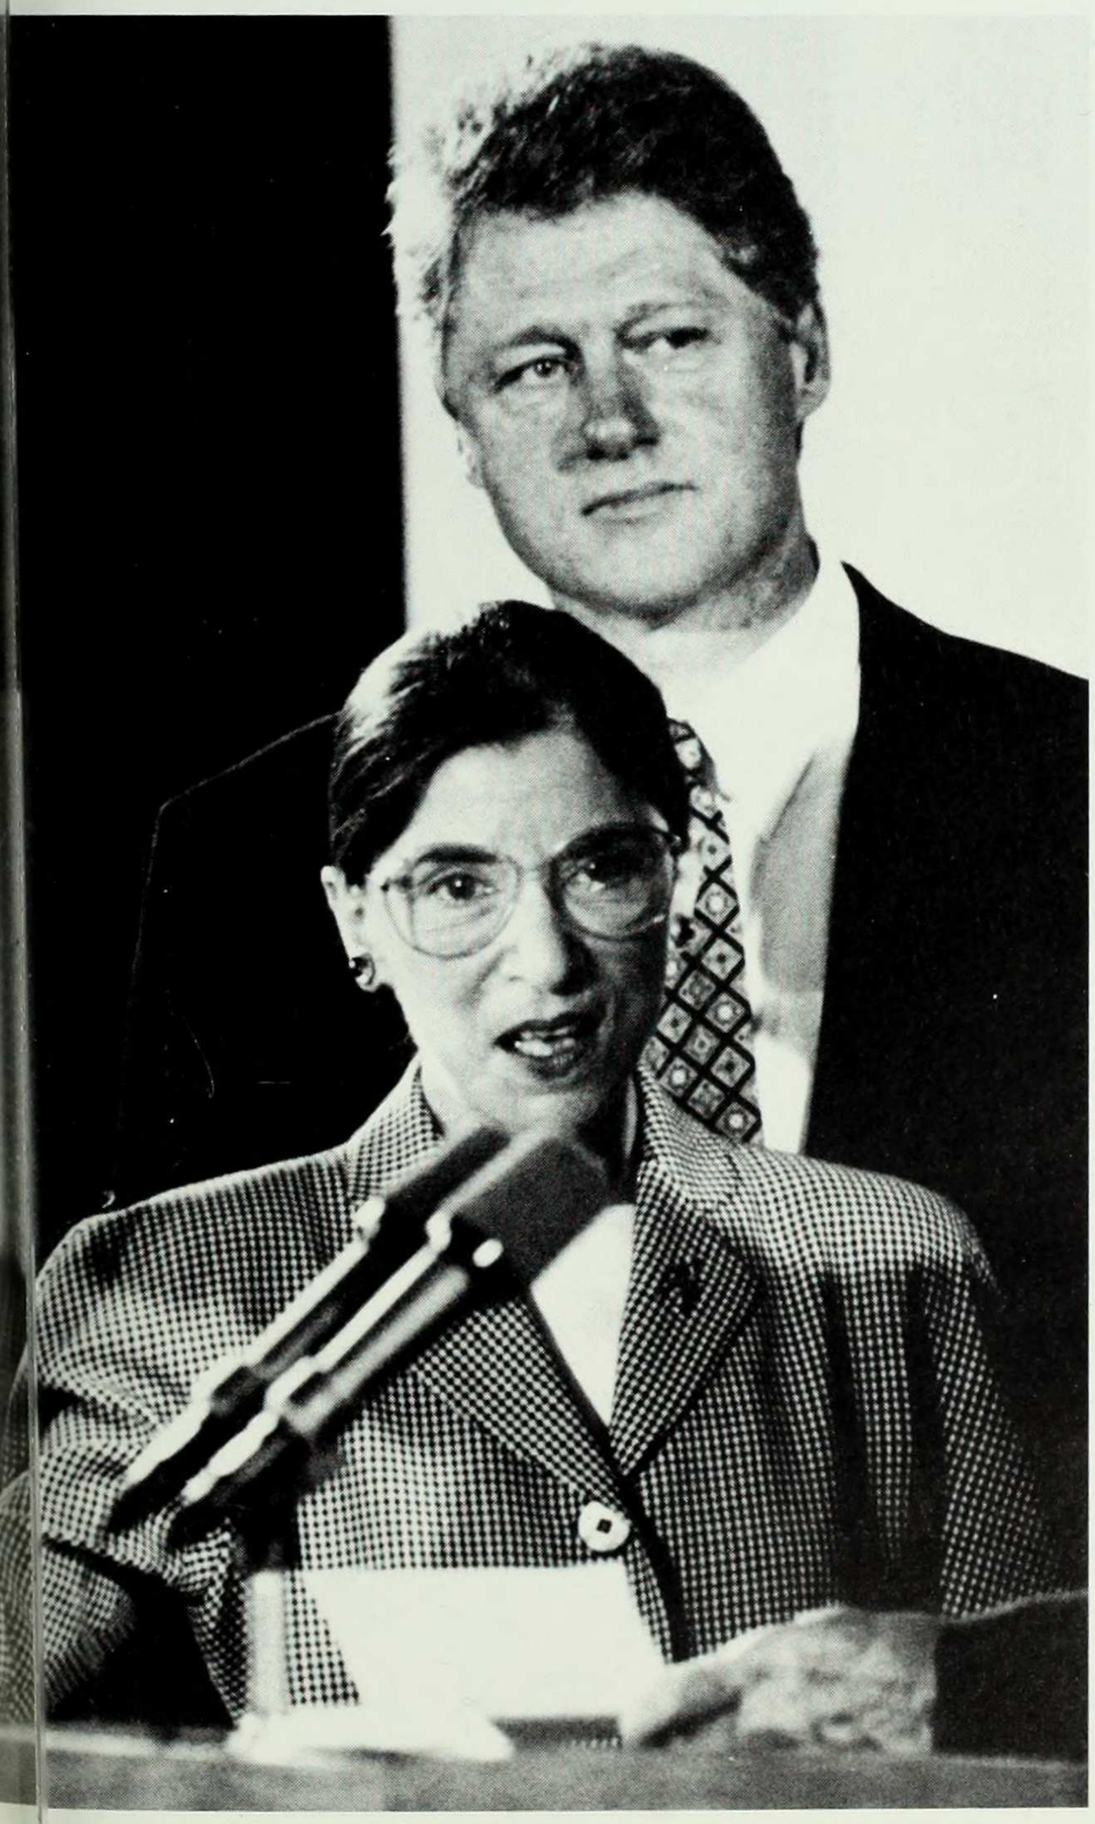
On September 13, two longtime enemies, Yitzhak Rabin and Yasser Arafat, shook hands at a White House ceremony marking the signing of an historic peace treaty between Israel and the P.L.O. (Top)

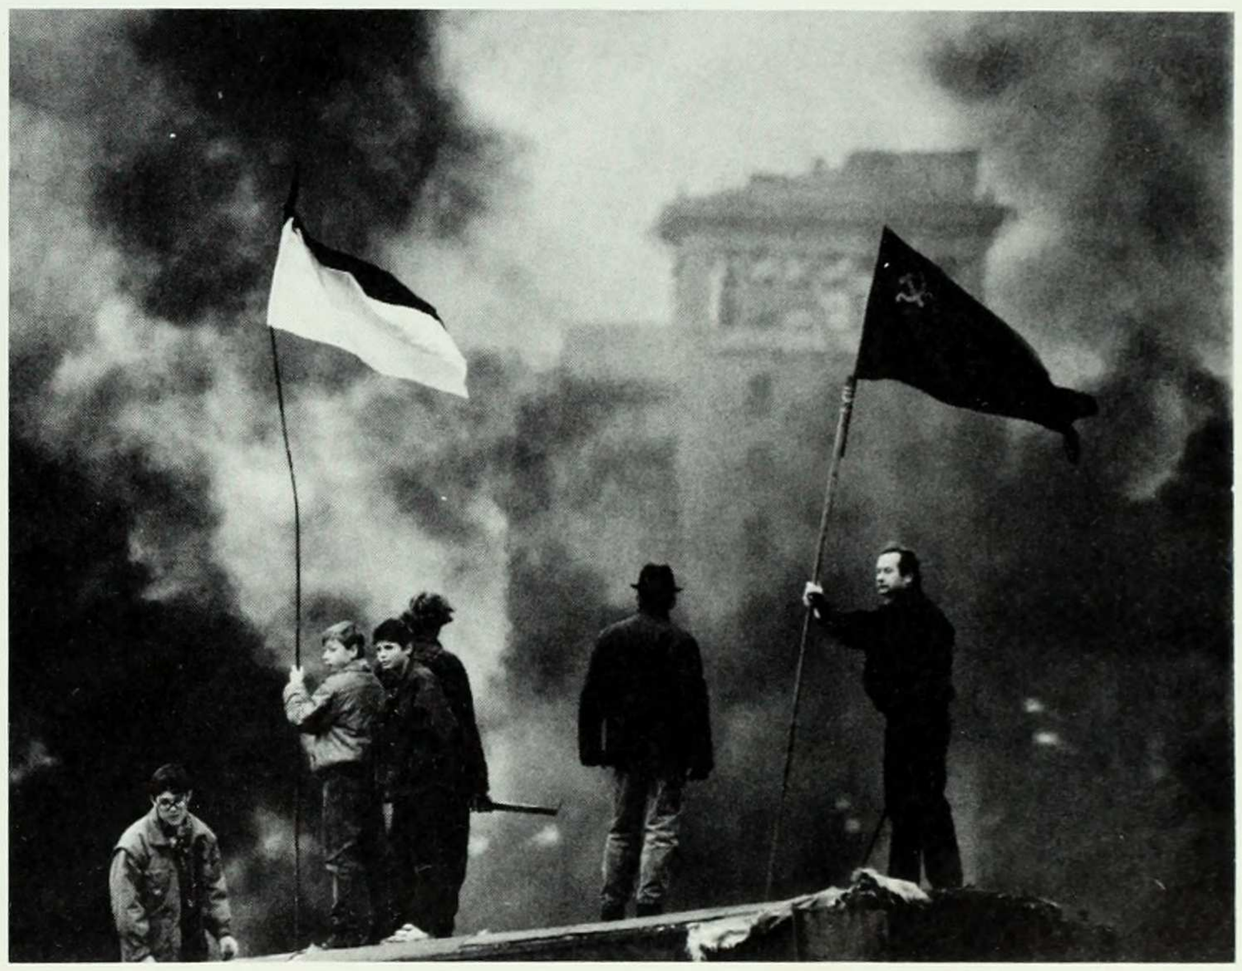
Sheik Omar Abdel-Rahman was accused of commanding "a war of urban terrorism" against New York, including the bombing of the World Trade Center. (Above)

Nancy Kerrigan, a medalist favorite in figure skating before the Olympics, was injured in an attack, courtesy of her rival, Tonya Harding, and Harding's associates. (Right)

Unusually heavy snows during the winter and rapid thawing in the spring, plus heavy rain, led to major floods in the Midwest. The floods were the worst in American history, and they captured the concern of people across the nation. The casualties ranged from the thousands left homeless to investors and consumers throughout the United States. (Left)

Russian hard-liners barricaded themselves inside the parliament building when President Boris Yeltsin disbanded the legislature. The military was brought in to put down the rebellion by those opposed to free market initiatives. Leaders of the rebellion were jailed. (Below)





Declaring that "the times are changing," Ruth Bader Ginsburg became the second woman to sit on the United States Supreme Court, joining Sandra Day O'Connor, a justice since 1981. Ginsburg is the 107th Supreme Court justice. She was President Clinton's first nominee to the high court, and was overwhelmingly confirmed by the Senate. (Left)

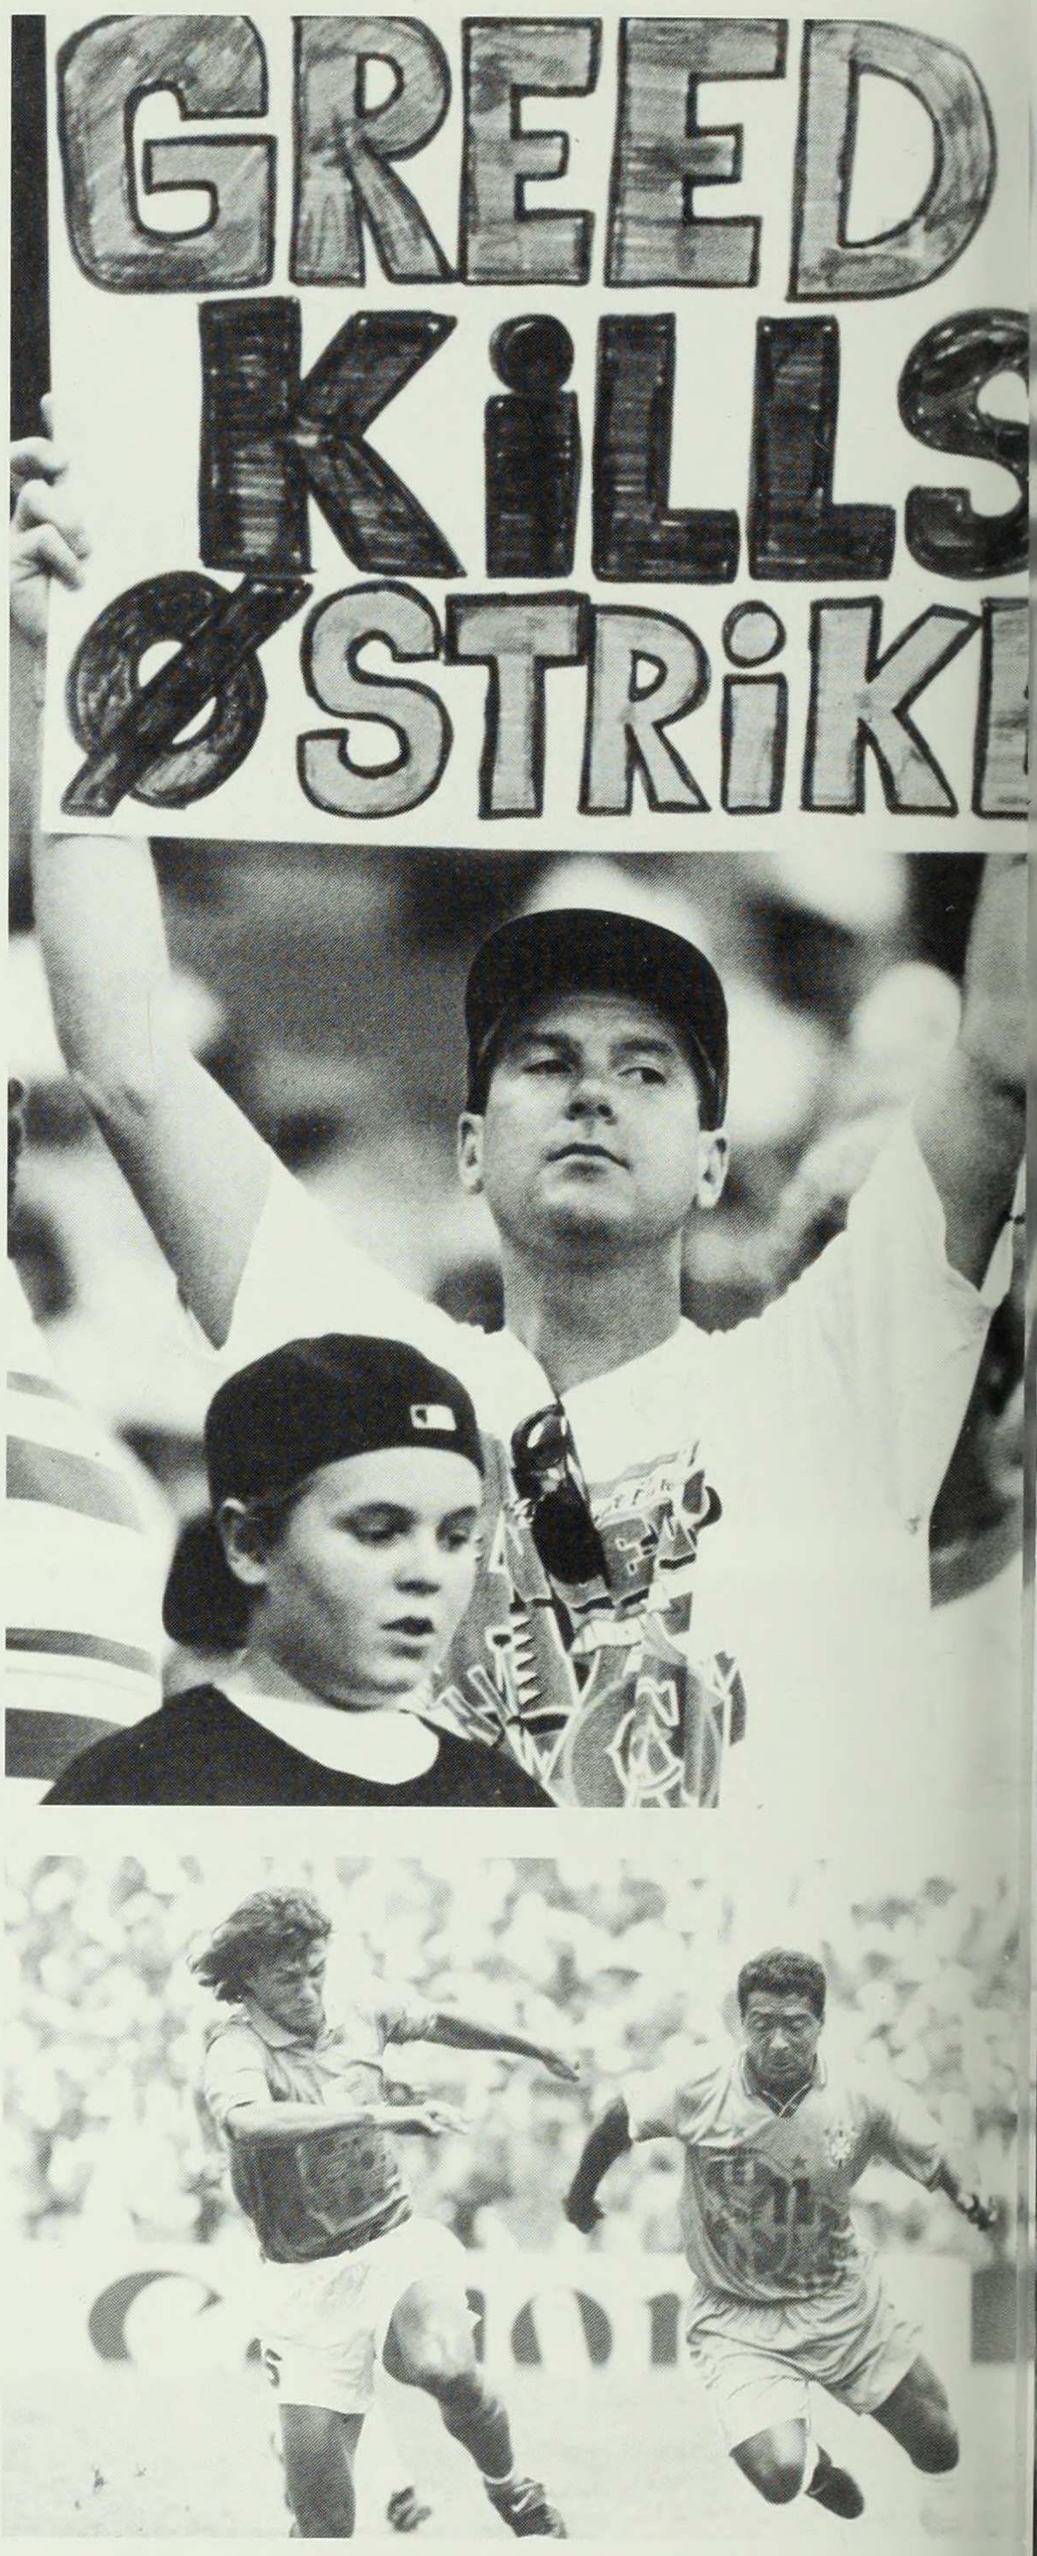
Junior Year

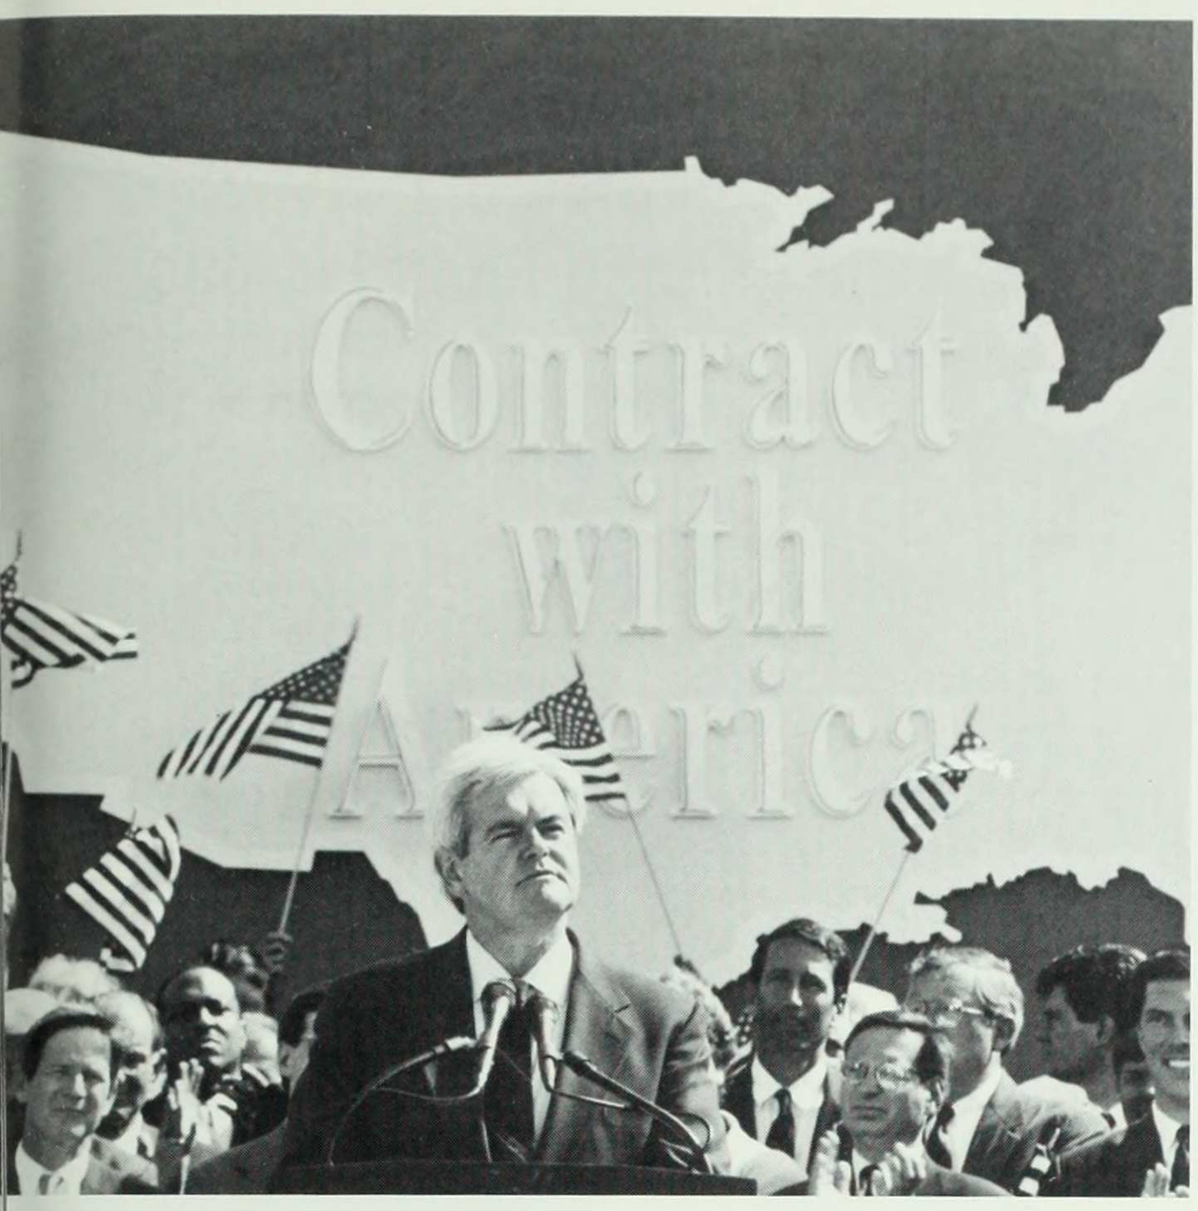
The 1994 baseball season ended on the 34th day of the major league players' strike, when team owners cancelled the rest of the season. Players struck when owners insisted on imposing a salary cap. Fans suffered through the first fall without a World Series since 1904. (Right)

Thousands of firefighters fought a summer-long battle against scores of fires that burned more than three million acres of woodlands across the parched Western states, including western Wyoming's Grand Teton National Park. (Below)



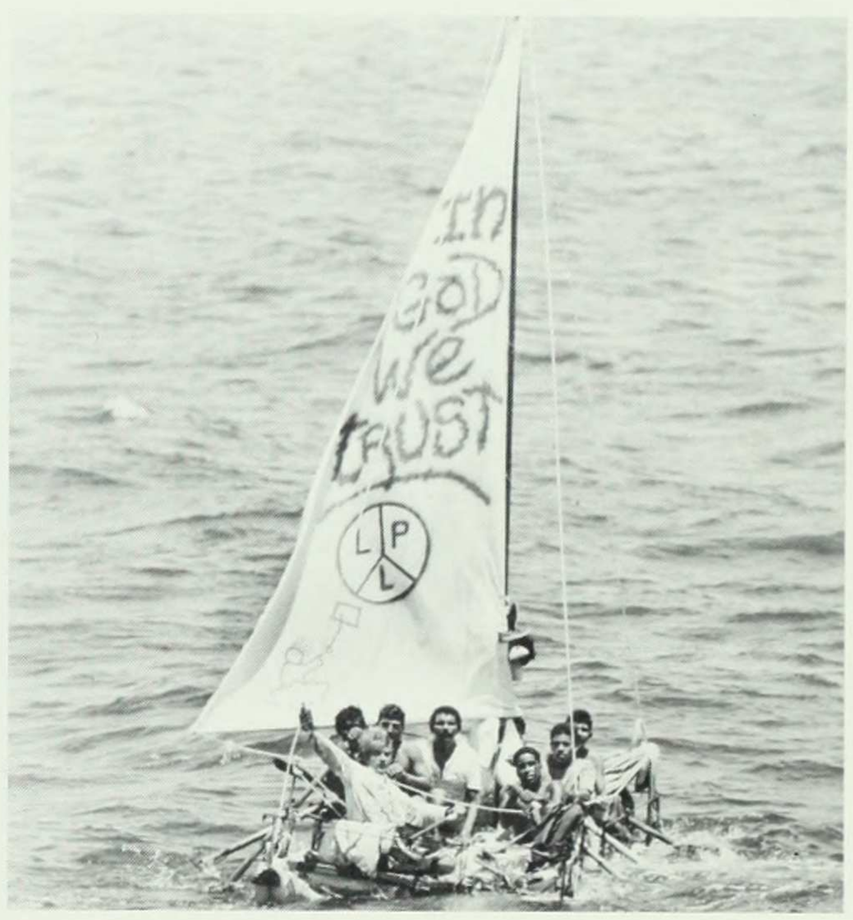
500,000 Rwandans were killed and two million fled the African nation for the relative safety of refugee camps in Zaire and other neighboring countries as a result of a civil war. (Right)

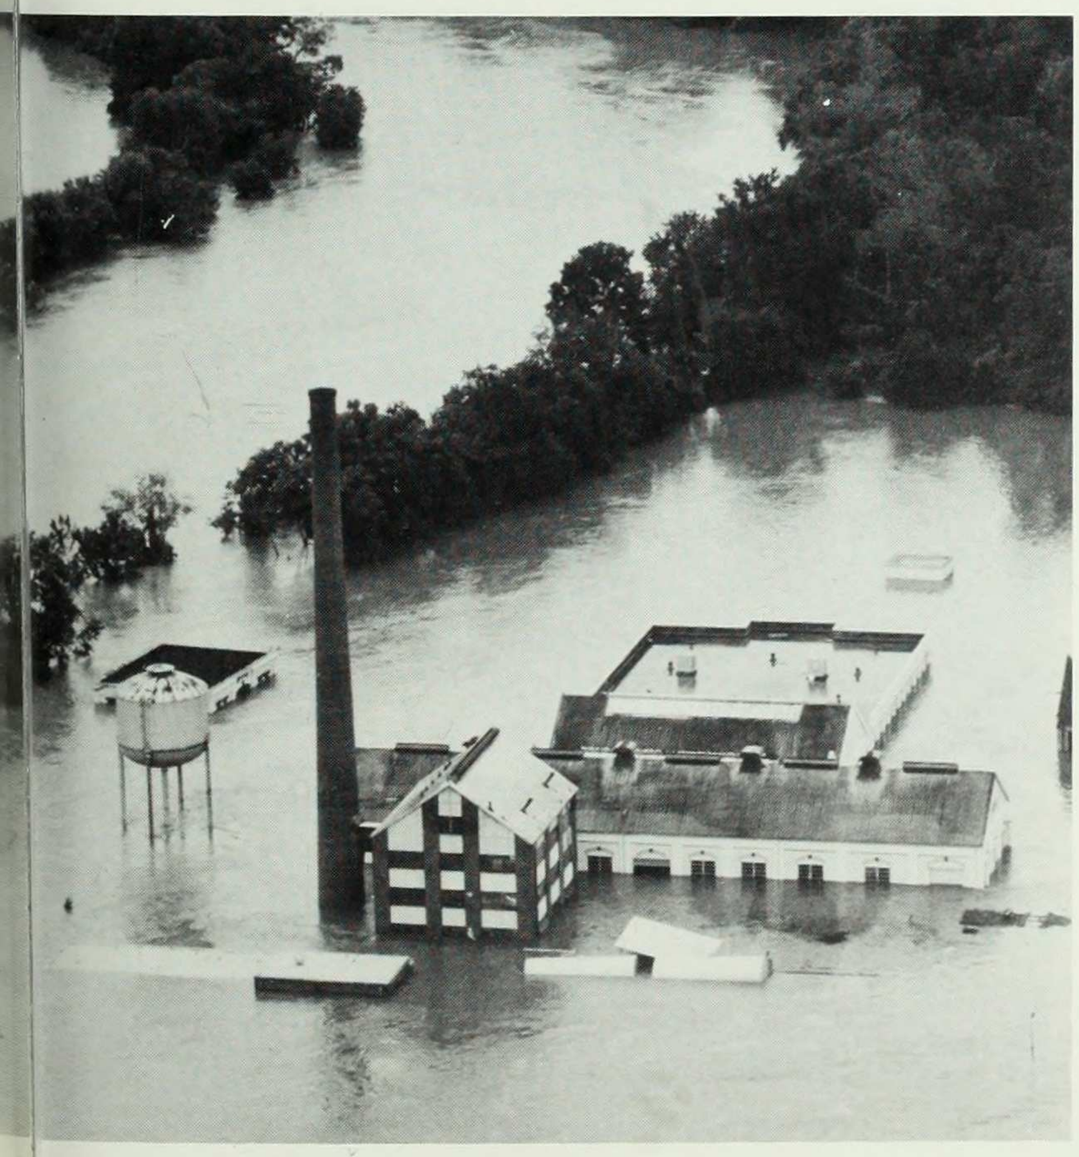
Brazil played Italy in soccer's championship match and won the World Cup, the sport's ultimate prize. Qualifying rounds of the tournament were held in locations throughout the United States. (Above, right)



Newt Gingrich became Speaker of the House when Republicans won a majority of seats in the 1994 elections. He and other lawmakers signed the "Contract with America" to implement changes in the way government does business. (Left)

A powerful earthquake measuring 7.5 toppled hundreds of buildings, touched off raging fires, and killed more than 5,000 people in Japan. (Below)





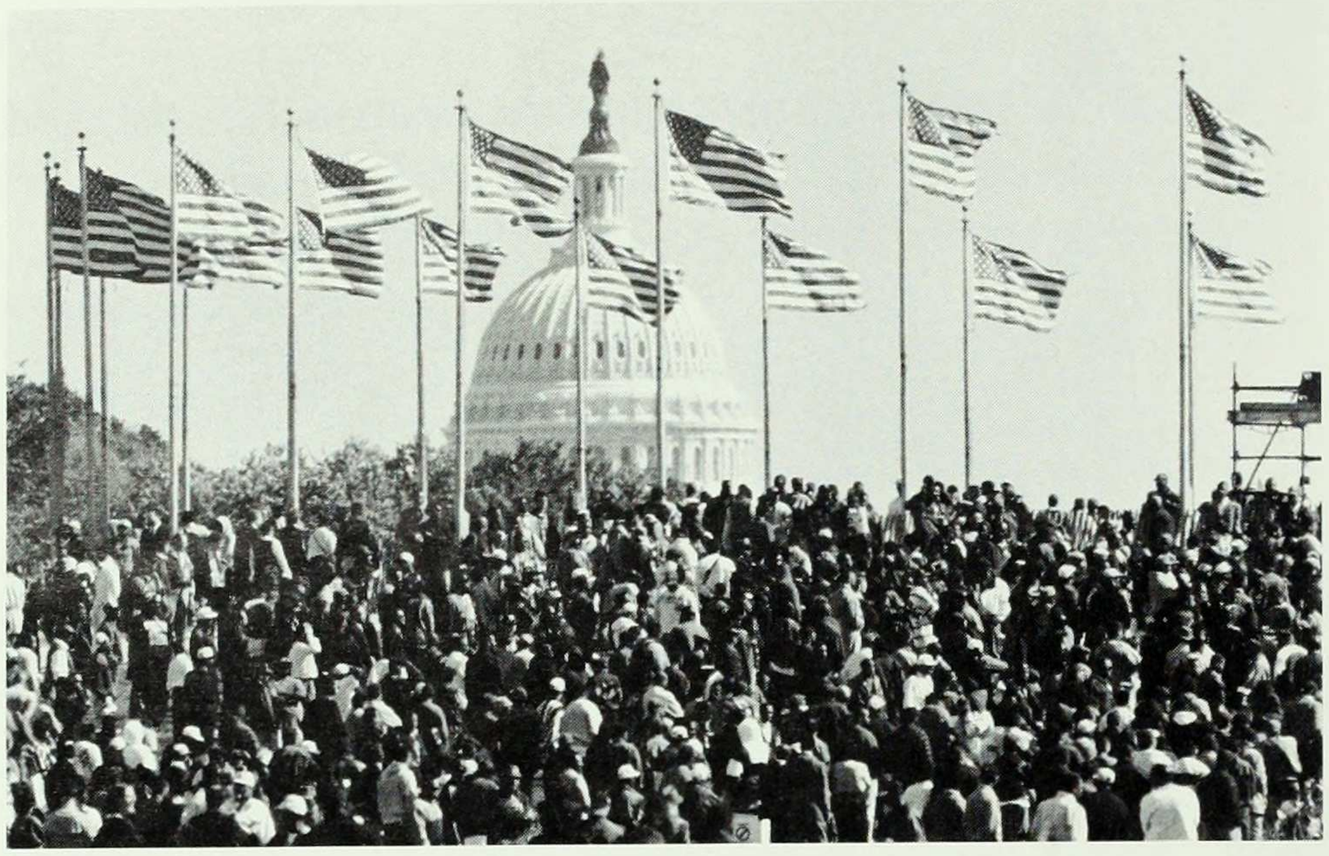
O. J. Simpson was suspected of murdering his ex-wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman. He surrendered to police after a Los Angeles highway chase.The subsequent trial would blanket the media for the next year and a half. (Above, left)

Tens of thousands of people desperate to escape the poverty and hunger of Cuba attempted to come to the United States on vessels made of flimsy materials. (Above)

In Georgia, two weeks of record flooding killed 31 people, destroyed hundreds of bridges and roads, and even uprooted caskets from cemeteries. (Left)

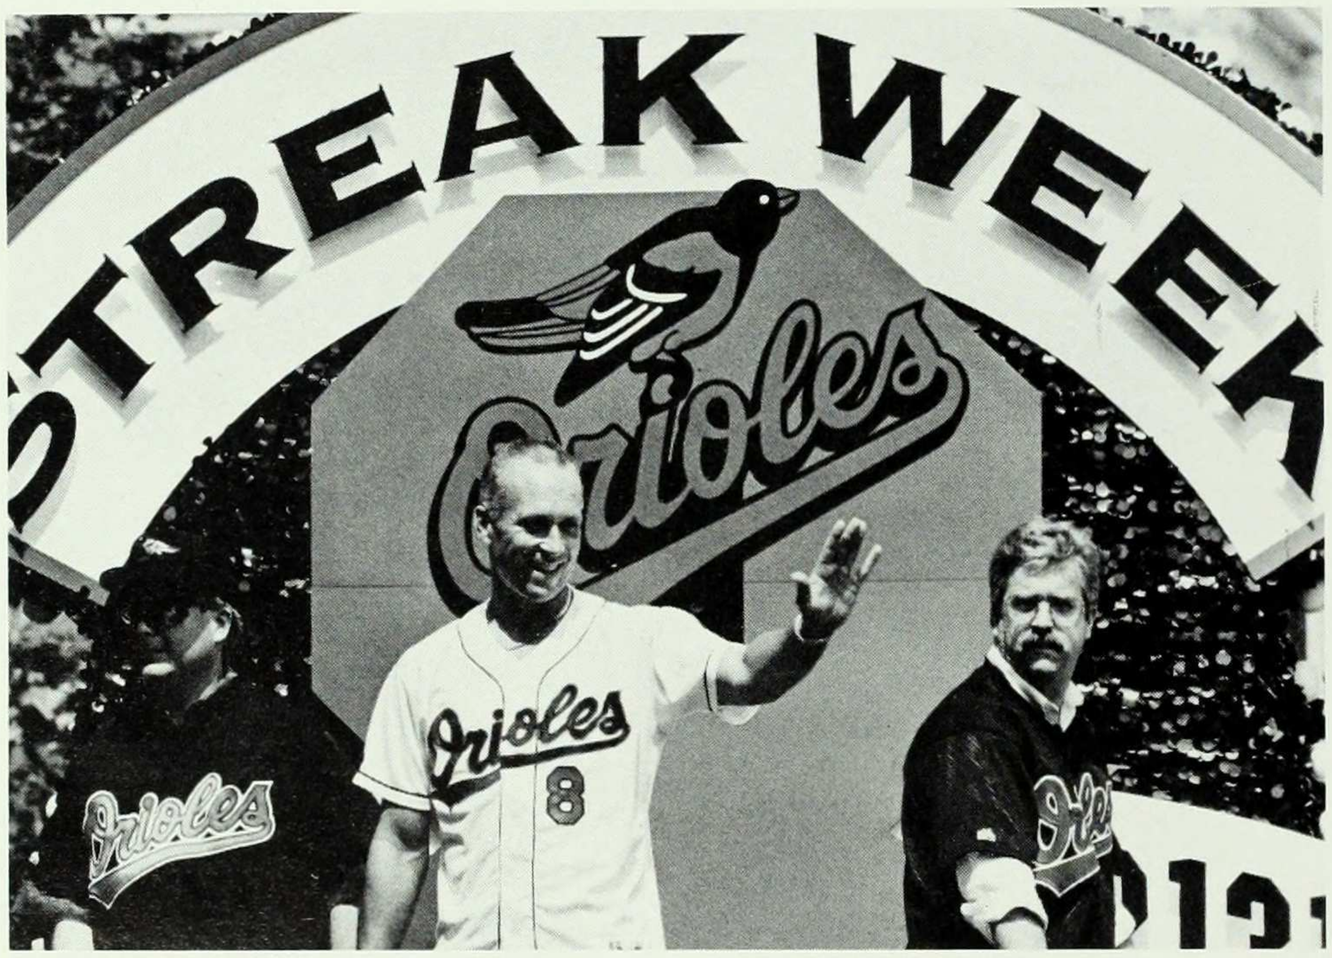
1994-1995

Senior Year



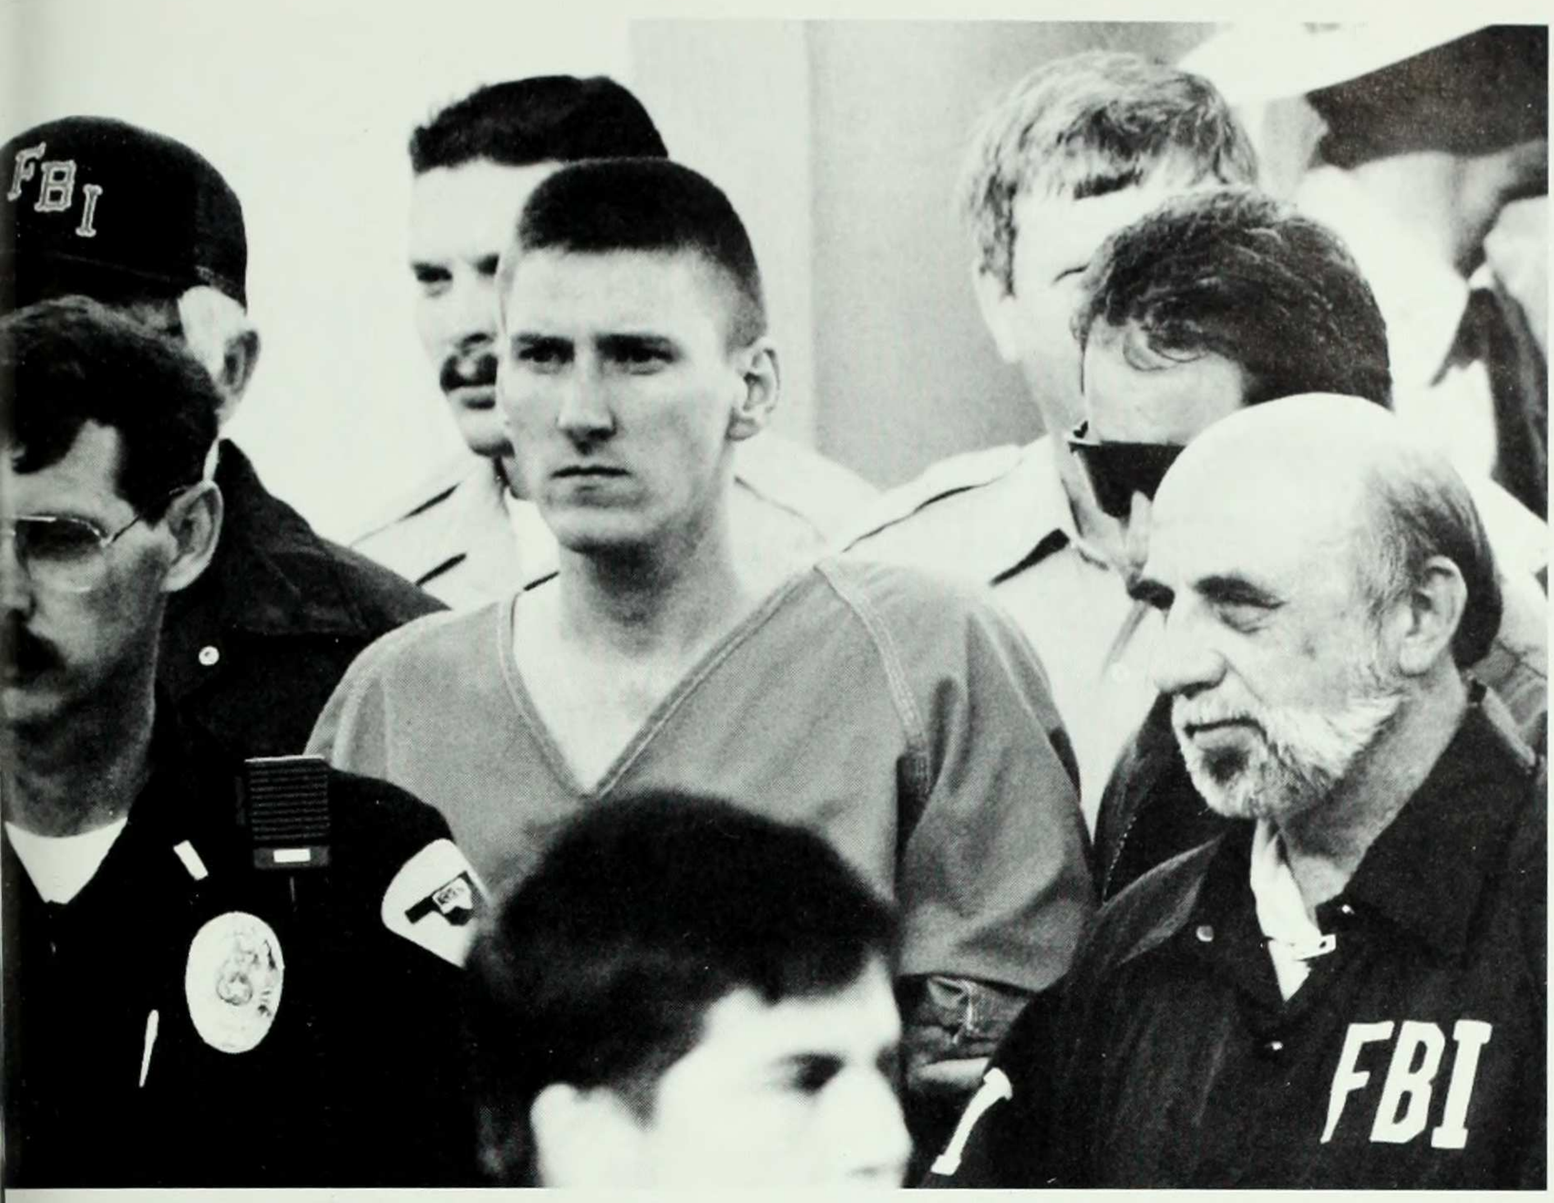
In the fourth largest demonstration in Washi ton, D.C.'s history, hundreds of thousands of rican American men converged in response t call from Louis Farrakhan, the controversial lea of the Nation of Islam, to rally for unity brotherhood. (Left)

Jerry Garcia, age 53, co-founder of rock mus the Grateful Dead, died of a heart attack while a drug rehabilitation center in suburban San Fr cisco. (Below)



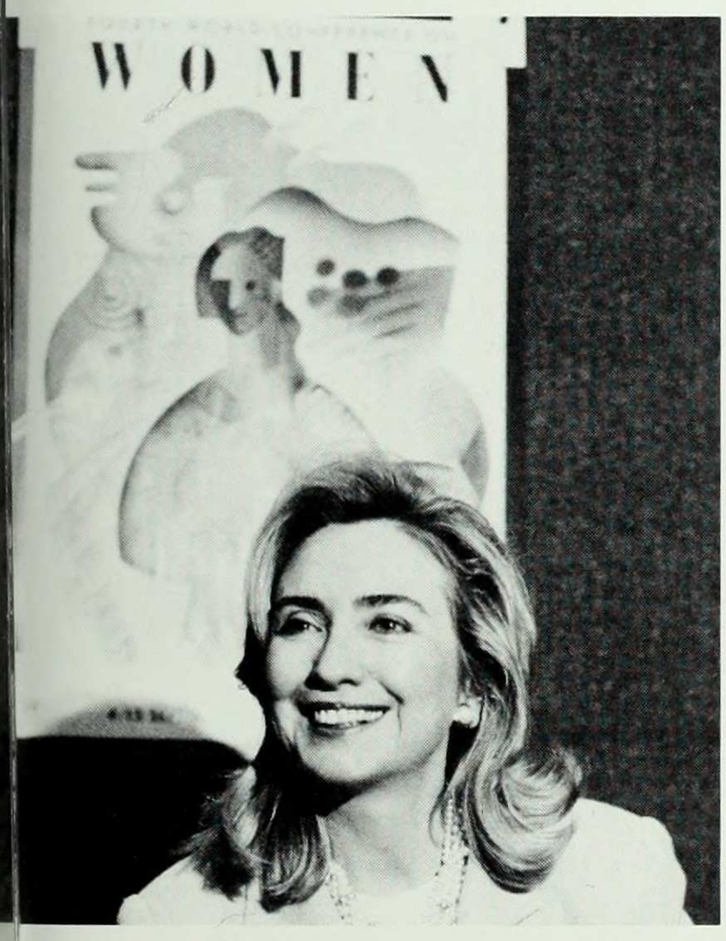
Baltimore Orioles' shortstop Cal Ripken, Jr. took the field against the California Angels on September 6th. The game was the 2,131st consecutive game he played, breaking the 1939 record of Yankees' first baseman Lou Gehrig. Ripken was honored with a long ovation and a downtown parade. (Above)

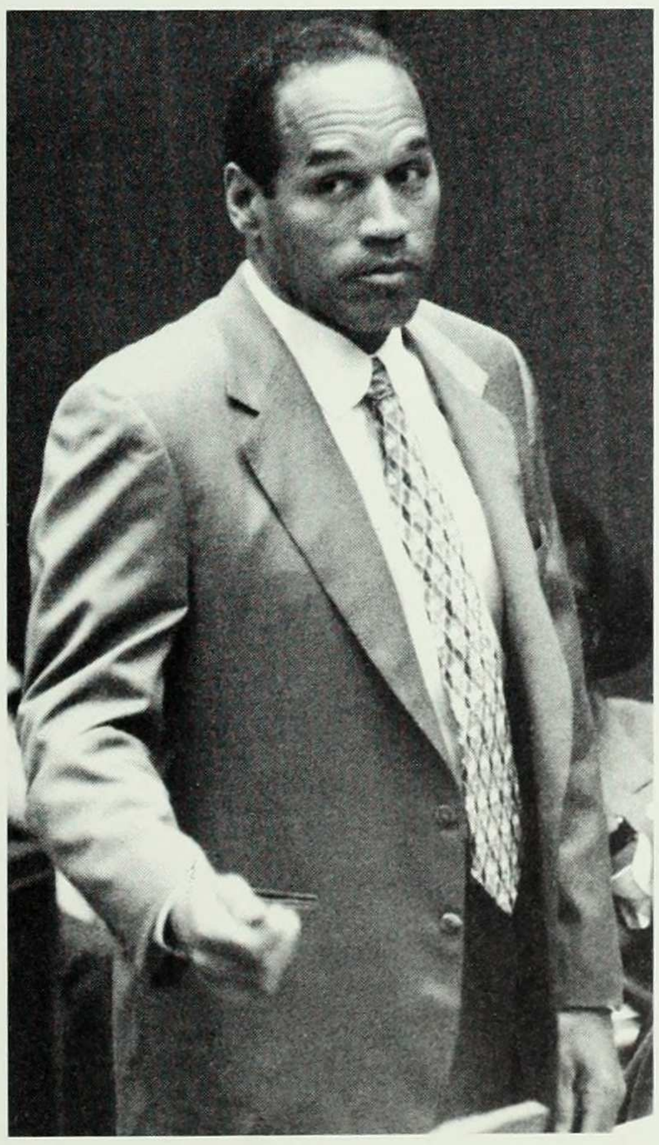
The former Yugoslavia was the victim of a civil war since June 1991. More than 200,000 people were killed or are missing since the fighting began. NATO forces attempted to bring peace to the region and the United States began sending troops in late 1995. (Right)



A car bomb exploded in Oklahoma City, destroying the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building and killing scores of people, including young children from the building's day care center. Timothy McVeigh, a Gulf War veteran, was charged with the bombing. (Left)

Hillary Clinton participated in the United Nations' Fourth World Conference on Women in Beijing. The conference platform called for measures to alleviate women's poverty and to improve health care, job oppurtunities, and education for women. (Below, left)





In September, Israel and the P.L.O. signed an accord that would end Israel's occupation of West Bank cities and lay the foundation for a Palestinian state. In November, Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was murdered by an extremist Israeli opposed to the peace process. (Above)

O.J. Simpson was acquitted in the stabbing murder of his former wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman. The jury reached its verdict in less than four hours of deliberation, after listening to 133 days of testimony, and viewing more than 800 pieces of evidence. (Left)

Take this baton and run my dear, given to me by Gram and Pop and some board of trustees, and the list does not stop.
For aeons events have preceded the time when one, me the first,
was given the chance, to quench that educational thirst.
Grasp it tightly, feel its warmth in your hand bask in its heady glow, revel in its achievement.
It's yours GREAT GOD if only for now, until the time unimaginable when you pass it to your child.

And when that time comes you'll feel as tall as a tree and when that time comes, perhaps you'll think of me.
Me sitting here popping my buttons, searching for words to clearly relate how thankful I am that you are you, and have become,
A most admirable successor and acceptor of my pass.
Julie my love, on me you can forever count. WE DID IT!
Almost against all odds. You know the how and the why so suffice it to say that the best word invented suffices today:
DADDY

After many frenzied hours and lots of hard work, the 1996 Mortarboard is finally complete! This epilogue is a tribute to the efforts of the diligent Mortarboard staff. Our goal was to create a lasting reminder of our Barnard years. We hope that we've succeeded with this volume. Here's to us and to everyone who helped!

I would like to thank all photographers who took club pictures for me, especially Jane, Bonnie, Suchi, and Mousumi ("Why are there so many clubs?")

Special thanks to Susan Quinby, of ODS for being so helpful, and to Dionne, for periodically checking up on me to make sure I'm still sane in the midst of Mortarboard madness.

Michelle: thanks so much for your layout expertise; hope to see you soon at Hopkins!

Yong Ping: you are the best co-business manager anyone could ask for! Remember our creative budget proposal, our carried-away shopping spree at Purchasing...please forgive me for conning/dragging you into the yearbook mess!

Last, but certainly not least, PERI! our beloved Editor-in-Chief (NOT!) Thanks for everything; it was great working with you over the past year. Remember our heroic/tragic deadline crunch at 4:30 am, (after WBAR had gone off the air and Security wondered if we were going to leave before the sun came up), the endless check for box coordinates (39p2), and working in the unheated office with frozen fingers on Blizzard '96 Sunday. It has been fun!(despite all that grunt work, zillions of phone mail messages, and thoughts of why we weren't working on our theses or applications or cramming for exams...)

Peri, although you have driven me crazy all of the time, it has been great to work with you. Thanks for helping me with the Columbia section, for catching the mistakes I made, for staying late with us, and for doing so much of the business section. Couldn't have done it without you.

Eileen, thanks for offering me the opportunity to be the Business Manager with you, for helping me with the Columbia section, and for keeping me company when I worked on it. You have been a great friend and partner.

Thanks to Michelle for helping me with the layout. Without your help, I would be completely lost in PageMaker.

Finally, I want to thank my supportive family and friends for being great listeners and for calming me down when I was about to reach the point of madness.

You have made my yearbook experience valuable and memorable. I am so glad that the yearbook is complete. I am going to miss everything, but most of all I am going to miss all of you.

Thank you Meghan for being such a great co-editor. I couldn't have done this job without you! Special thanks to my parents and sisters for their constant support and encouragement these past four years. To all of my friends: I want to thank you for all of the fun times we shared. I'll always remember my experience at Barnard with a smile! With fond memories,

--Elizabeth

In creating the Student Life section, I tried to include everyone's fondest memories of Barnard, which was no easy task. I would like to acknowledge and thank all the people who made it possible for a student life section to exist. First, a big warm thanks and congrats to my friends and my third floor Reid hallmates who put up with the overwhelming shutterbug frenzy in the fall. I hope you guys like the result. I also want to thank my family for always being so supportive and proud of everything I've done. I can't forget my boyfriend, Tony, who never failed to back me up. A loving thanks to him for putting up with my insane schedule, acting as my life's anchor, and for chauffering me around the city and most of Long Island to help me get the section done. Thanks to Betty and Peri, too, for spending some pretty crazy nights with me in the Mortarboard office. Most of all, I would like to thank everyone who made my memorable four years at Barnard the best!

It's really almost over. The 4 years of my life at Barnard flew by. Thank God for getting me through them and for all the blessings He's given me.

Thanks to my parents for their love and encouragement throughout my life. I'm here at Barnard doing what I'm doing because of how you brought me up. To my brothers: I wouldn't be the way I am without the two of you. Whether that's good or bad is another story.

Phil, words can't express what you've meant to me these past 4 + years. You've been so wonderful, and I can't wait to start our life together.

My staff--though I don't even know what a lot of you look like, you've been great. Thanks for putting up with all my messages asking/demanding that you take pictures and meet crazy deadlines. Sorry for the haphazard way things were run. Jane, my life would've been much more difficult if you weren't willing to take care of club pictures. Thank you and good luck next year.

Thanks to my friends who were willing to step in and help out before I even had a staff. I probably would've flipped if not for you. Pei-ling, you're responsible for getting me this position. Thanks for your friendship and for watching out for me like the older sister that you are.

Good luck to the Class of 1996! Get out there and break some serious legs! --Winnie

Thank you all for making it happen!

A special thank you to Peri, Eileen, and Melissa. Don't forget about me out there in the real world. I will miss you.

Beijos,
Michelle

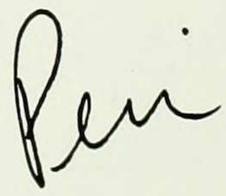
MORTARBOARD 1996 would like to thank the following individuals for their assistance:

--Associate Provost Flora Davidson and her assistants, Anne Klarer and Gwen Williams, for their help with the faculty section.
--Michelle Kerr of the Barnard Office of Public Affairs for giving us access to files and for granting permission to use faculty photographs.
--The entire staff of the Office of College Activities: Joe, Stacy, Doris, Michelle, Cynthia, and Paul (for telling Security to let us into McIntosh).
--Dean Sandy Johnson for her advice and extra help with proofing.
--Columbia Sports Information for providing photographs and rosters.
--Jessie from Facilities Services who tried to keep the office clean.
--Marissa Heller and Stephanie Zee, editor-in-chief and graduates editor of the Columbian, for their help with the Columbia graduates section.
--Arden Studios: photographers Gary and Lisa, and especially Lena, who coordinated operations from the office.

Closing Remarks

Shortly after I entered Barnard three years ago, my high school English teacher presented me with an almost one hundred year old copy of the Barnard Annual (the predecessor of Mortarboard). At a time when I was less than happy with myself and with my college, it was a poignant gift. It gave me a strong appreciation for Barnard and its history. I never imagined that I would one day be writing the editor's note. When Lisa Tan and Patricia Marin approached me about taking charge of the 1996 book, I thought I understood the ramifications of accepting the job. I was wrong. I thank them for their confidence in me. Thanks to Stacy Robinson for learning a lot about yearbooks very quickly and for listening and to Sandy Johnson for late hours spent checking pages and for offering to supply food when that was a secondary concern. To my editors: THANK YOU, THANK YOU, THANK YOU, no matter how utterly inadequate that is. Ev, thank you for retaining a sense of humor during the wee hours and for going above and beyond the call. Eileen, thank you for doing two jobs well and for reminding me repeatedly that I am the biggest idiot of all. Yong Ping, your willingness to contribute to the book has been incredible; I thank you most for your calm demeanor and for delaying your trip home after finals. Michelle, thank you for your ingenuity and for not calling me at home at 2 A.M. to tell me that the computer would not shut down (and for cropping, cropping, cropping). Meghan and Elizabeth, I'm glad that you finally made it into McIntosh. The result is beautiful, even if dealing with all those surveys was not. Betty, thank you for volunteering for photography trips and late hours (not that I gave anyone much choice about that,) all the while smiling. Naomi, you know more about Columbia athletics than the athletic director. Winnie and Jane, thank you for the wonderful photography. Perhaps in a hundred years some future Barnard student will feel the same awe that I did when I first saw that old edition. A special thank you to my friends (in no particular order): Shira, Rochy, Mindy, Orly, Jen, Judy, Rivka, Meira, Robyn, and Ronit, and anyone whom I inadvertently forgot. Besides moral support, their contributions ranged from labelling postcards to keeping me company in the office when I was too scared to stay here by myself to playing mail carrier to identifying faculty photos. Thanks to my (non-Barnard) friends, especially Debbie, Havivah, and Soroh for boundless faith and infrequent calls. Please forgive me if I haven't been as good a friend as I could have been. My roommate, Stephanie Mindlin, is the person most responsible for seeing me through this experience. Steph, I don't know how to begin describing the T.L.C. you have given me. Since we are the same person, you know what I mean; more words are unneccessary. I add two more anyway, with gratitude: thank you. I am blessed to be a member of an extraordinary family. Thank you to my grandmothers for tons of love and for asking, "What's with that book you're working on? Is it done yet?", to my aunts, uncles, and cousins, to my siblings for (I thought I'd think of something; I'm still working on it), and finally to my parents: Daddy, thank you for giving me my earliest editorial experience for encouraging me to take on this responsibility, and Mommy, thank you for never once telling me I was crazy, no matter how often you thought it. I love you both very much. Best of luck (and much sleep) to my successor(s?). You will need both.



Peri Horowitz,
Editor-in-Chief
