A MAN WORKS HARD TO GET $1,000,000 He wants the bank that works hardest to keep on top of it.

Chemical New York has been selected to be custodian for securities worth billions of dollars. What attracts so many executives? Our thoroughness.

Consider one man. A top executive in the plastics industry, he hasn't time to give day-to-day attention to his securities. He has established a Custodian Account at Chemical New York, where details are handled with care.

How it works: Detail work is supervised by officers with average experience of over 20 years. Income is collected and remitted; called and matured bonds are presented on time; exchange offerings, stock purchase rights and warrants, conversions, and other options are made known. Records are kept for your tax returns, statements sent, and your securities are safe in our vaults.

Your orders followed. You retain complete control. We do the detail work, carrying out your orders for purchases, sales, and other transactions. For this thoroughness, you pay only a modest fee, all of which is tax deductible.

Wouldn't you like to discuss soon what our hard work and skill can accomplish for you? Telephone 770-3221, Personal Trust Department, Chemical Bank New York Trust Company, New York 15, N.Y.

Editor's Notes

Women workers in the civil rights movement (see article on p. 3) are taking their place in that proud line of American women who defied the established order. One of the first in that line was Ann Hutchinson, who in the 1600's challenged, among other orthodoxies, the Puritan view that a woman's conception of God should come "from the contemplation of other husband's excellencies." For the story and pictures of other rebels, see Women in Politics (p. 11) . . . BARNARD ALUMNAE'S new campus correspondent (p. 18) is Anne Wollam '66. Also on the staff of Barnard Bulletin, Miss Wollam spent the summer working at the American Embassy in Port of Spain, Trinidad where her father Park F. Wollam, is Deputy Chief of Mission.

Function of the Magazine

To the Editor:

The functions of an alumnae magazine undoubtedly include giving us news of our school and of each other. But must we be bombarded with this? Is the world of Barnard alumnae limited to nostalgic commentary on buildings, finances, reunions and Barnard-Columbia relations? It seems to me an alumnae magazine must also reflect the values and purposes of the school it represents. A magazine reflecting Barnard should open doors to continued learning and intellectual stimulation. Some discussion of world issues by appropriate faculty or alumnae in the particular field would certainly be welcome.

It is certainly not that all of us don't like to know what is happening at Barnard or in the lives of our former classmates, but at the risk of repeating myself, surely this is not where the world ends, even for an alumnae magazine. I, for one, would like to see a magazine which does justice to the Barnard name and reflects the exciting introduction to the world of ideas we received as its undergraduates. Perhaps there are others.

Following "The Leading Women"

To the Editor:

I was delighted to read Annette Baxter's article on The College's Leading Women in the spring issue. My one criticism is that she made only passing reference to Emily Smith Putnam's teaching. She was a brilliant lecturer, and her course on Classical Civilization was my most stimulating experience at Barnard. Mrs. Putnam is remembered by many more than the "surviving members of her family." I wish there could be a personal memorial to her.

The Author Replies

To the Editor:

I would have been surprised to learn that any Barnard alumna had failed to understand my recent article on The College's Leading Women and Their Roles. Thus I was almost appalled to find it grossly misconstrued by Mrs. Madeleine Hooke Rice, an alumna who is herself a teacher of history, in the letters column of the Summer issue of BARNARD ALUMNAE. And surely embarrassed at the derogatory tone in which a colleague saw fit to present her misconceptions. My effort to make some comment about each of Barnard's leading ladies in a limited space was necessarily foreshortened, and in replying to Mrs. Rice I welcome an opportunity to elaborate.

First, as to Mrs. Rice's general accusation that I "failed to assemble and present the full magnitude of (Dean Gildersleeve's) accomplishments," I did not of course undertake that panoramic task. And rather than gracelessly argue the relevance or accuracy of what I did write, I prefer to turn to Mrs. Rice's specific accusations and examine their relevance, their accuracy.

Mrs. Rice charges that "it is perhaps understandable that one who was a student at Barnard during the very last years of Dean Gildersleeve's leadership may not have fully appreciated the measure of her greatness." If she is fearful that Miss Gildersleeve's message of "intellectual and personal excellence" had diminished in forcefulness in the later years of her deanship, she was badly out of touch. If she is insinuating that Barnard students were in those years less heedful of it, she has slurred several thousand alumnae.

Next, Mrs. Rice labels as "arrant nonsense" my statement, "So dedicated to scholarship and public service, so formidable in her person and in the demands that she made on herself in the name of educated integrity, Dean Gildersleeve may have seemed to many of those who looked up to her to have denied the need for family and home that they themselves found insistent." Obviously this had nothing whatever to do with the ideas Miss Gildersleeve advocated or the advice she offered students. I still think it superfluous to italicize "may have seemed" in order to indicate that I was referring solely to the image of single-minded devotion to intellectuality inherent in her personality and her style of life. It was clear to all who knew her that her message of excellence did not exclude family and home.

Nonetheless, a leader's personality and style of life, especially a woman's, inevitably have their influence, often as great as her professed opinions; in equating, or at least confusing, the two in Dean Gildersleeve, Mrs. Rice is implying, without, I imagine, realizing it, that the former is somehow in need of defense. It was precisely because Dean Gildersleeve's personality and style of life need no defense—and to my knowledge she has never apologized for them—that I felt confident in referring to them as I did. During the years of World War II when the pressures for early marriage were accelerating, she continued to embody the notion that fulfillment does not necessarily depend on marital status, or any other specific status, but rather on what goes on within the mind and spirit of the individual woman.

(And yes, I do find it "carpish" that Mrs. Rice called my phrase "an endless series of committees" a "dismissal" of Miss Gildersleeve's career. This was the context: "As her years lengthened, Dean Gildersleeve came to serve on an endless series of committees, federations, boards and advisory panels, including the Democratic slate for the Electoral College, the American College for Girls in Istanbul, and the United Nations conference of 1945 in San Francisco. Her extracurricular activities were recognizably those of the most distinguished woman in American education of her time." Carpish? Fatuous.)

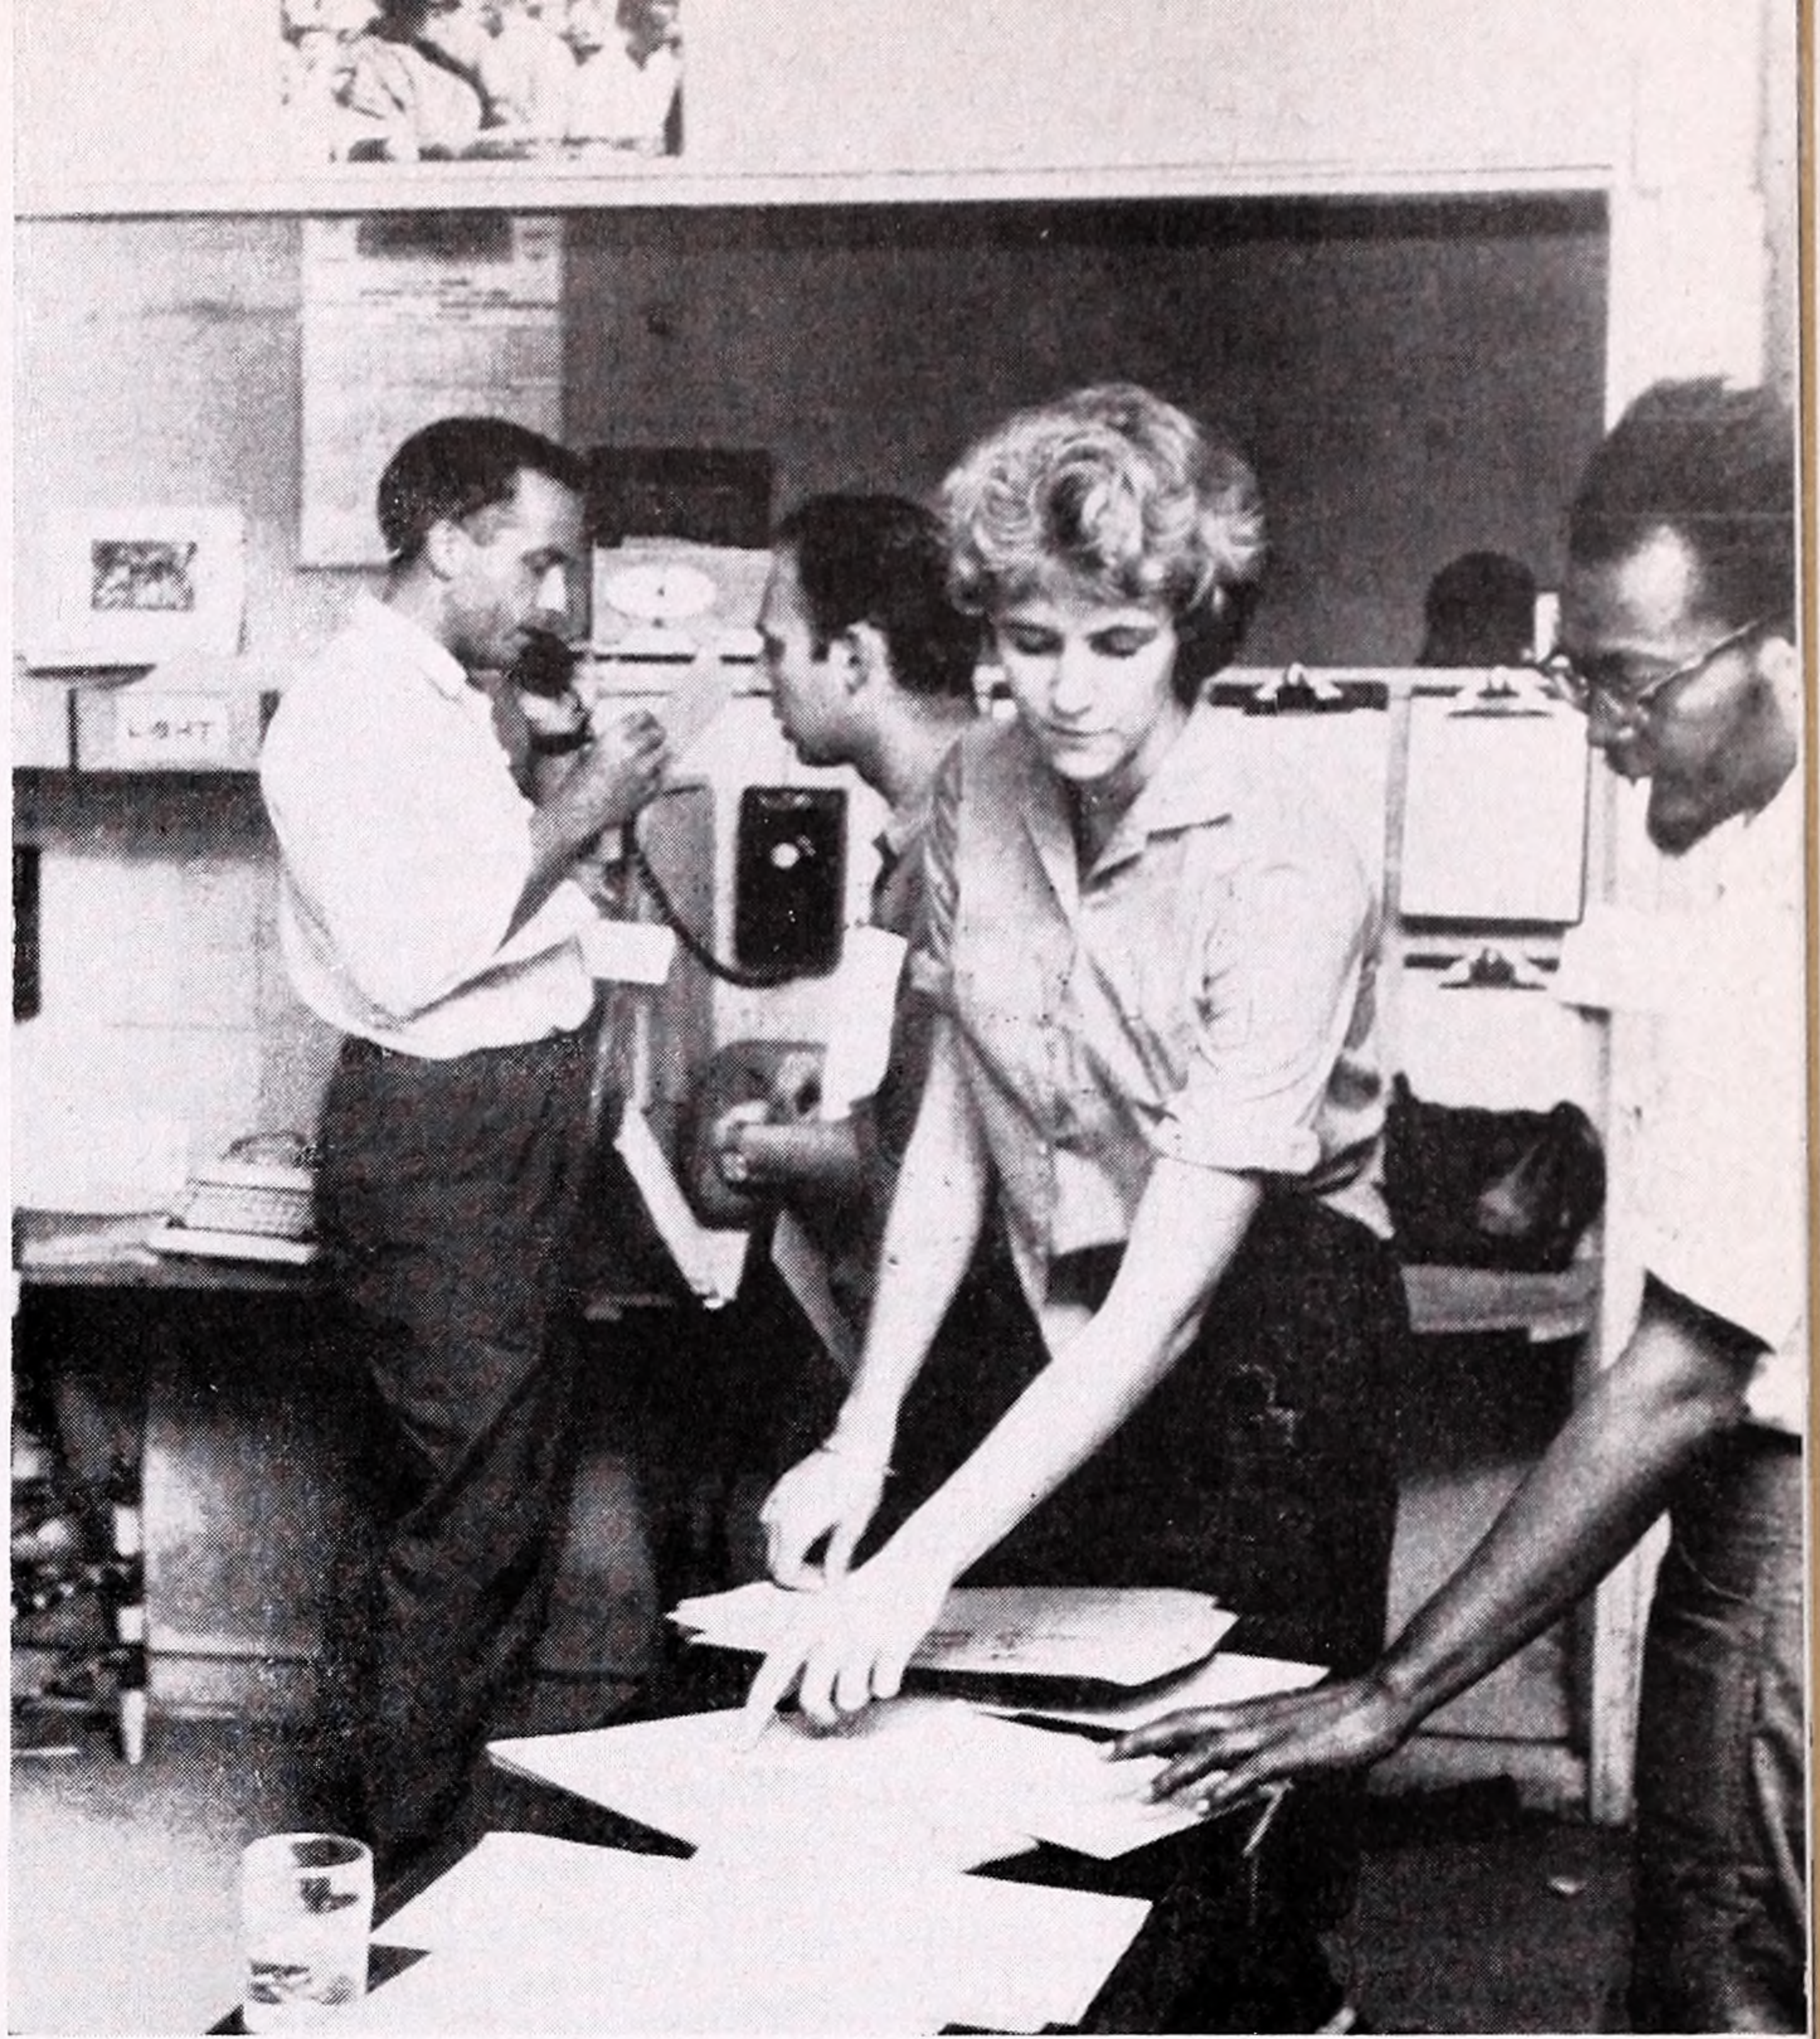

When Mrs. Rice goes on to speak of her own success in combining a teaching career with rearing a family, she asserts "Never for a moment have I, or very many of the alumnae of my acquaintance who have had a more or less similar experience, felt a conflict with the standards or goals which Dean Gildersleeve exemplified for us." Now if she really expects her readers to believe this, her confidence in their credulity is alarmingly high. I myself do not know of any female attempting to combine family and a serious career who does not every day of her life struggle with a constant conflict: her husband and children on the one hand, her career on the other, and Dean Gildersleeve's ideal of excellence in the middle. An inescapable fact of my own life, quite apparent to my family, and, I suspect, to my fellow teachers, is that I could do either job considerably better were it not for my obligations to the other. Never felt a conflict! Come now, Mrs. Rice, it's not a conflict, it's Procrustes' bed itself.

Another inescapable fact about those of Dean Gildersleeve's students who, like Mrs. Rice and myself, have managed to combine a career with a family, is that they owe whatever success they have experienced largely to luck. For, in addition to her confession of personal triumph, I wish Mrs. Rice might have expressed some sympathy for those of her sisters who were simply lacking in the good fortune to find a husband who would encourage or even tolerate their professional aspirations, and so chose to remain single; or for those who, rearing a family with every devotion to Miss Gildersleeve's ideal of excellence,

Civil rights volunteers in COFO office in Jackson

MISSISSIPPI LAST SUMMER

There are many ways of measuring the success of the Mississippi Summer Project, the statewide program of voter registration, freedom schools and other civil rights activities conducted by some six hundred volunteers and around 100 paid workers.

If we were to use violence as a measure, it might be said that the Project succeeded mainly in focussing national attention on white Mississippians' resistance to change and the lengths to which segregationists will go to maintain what has been termed "the closed society." According to information compiled by the Council of Federated Organizations (COFO), the Project's sponsor, at least four persons were shot and wounded, fifty-two were beaten or otherwise injured and about 250 were arrested in connection with the Project in addition to the shocking murder of three young civil rights workers. Thirteen Negro churches were destroyed by fire, seventeen other churches and buildings were damaged by fire or bombs, ten automobiles were damaged or destroyed, and there were seven bombings which caused no damage.

It was violence in its most brutal form, the triple murder, that put the Project in the headlines, forced even the most apathetic citizens to take notice of the civil rights movement in Mississippi, and brought the FBI into the state. While admitting that they want Federal intervention, civil rights leaders deny the charge that violence was their objective. Bob Moses, director of the Project, has said that the volunteers were merely putting themselves in the place of Mississippi Negroes who have continually been subjected to violence while the nation showed little concern. Moreover, COFO leaders insist that the presence of the FBI did not amount to Federal intervention because it was purely investigative force. They feel conditions in Mississippi warrant the calling of United States marshals or troops.

In the field of voter registration, Project workers encountered their greatest obstacles. Only in Panola County, where 350 Negroes were registered under a Federal court order, was a significant number of Negroes added to voter registration rolls.

But if tangible results were few, leaders were nonetheless encouraged. Mr. Moses who expects to renew the Project next summer, has said, "I think in general we succeeded in points that had been anticipated—bringing resources into the Negro communities and establishing the right for integrated groups to work there.”

Even if it reached only a small fraction of the 900,000 Negroes in Mississippi, the Project is believed by many observers to have accomplished much in an intangible way. It brought new courage to those brave Negroes who for so long felt they were fighting alone. It enlisted new recruits to the civil rights movement, particularly among the young and in rural areas, often people who had never before been reached. Indeed, it was with the young—and this is especially significant for the future of the movement—that the Project had probably its greatest success. Some 2,500 Negro youngsters attended freedom schools.

The extent to which these youngsters will in the years to come put pressure on white Mississippi cannot yet be measured, but even some of the most ardent segregationists were forced to admit that, after last summer, Mississippi would never again be quite the same.

Not all of the slow-but-sure change that began in Mississippi last summer can be traced directly to the Project. Some of it was brought about by a small number of whites, apart from the civil rights movement, who recognized the inevitable and acted on that recognition. In a surprise statement, the Chamber of Commerce of Jackson advised businessmen to comply with the public accommodations section of the new civil rights law. Even more surprisingly perhaps, of the 1400 firms associated with the Chamber only four resigned, and the mayor of Jackson publicly supported the Chamber's stand. Then a group, composed mainly of housewives, formed Mississippians for Public Education, whose purpose it was peacefully to accept desegregation, to oppose any scheme—such as the establishment of private segregated schools supported by state tuition grants—that might damage the state's public school system. Now, these developments are no indication that moderation has taken hold in Jackson, but they do show, as stated by a Jackson lawyer, that “some crack has been made in that wall of Never.”

Another way to appraise the developments is to talk with people who figured in the story of Mississippi last summer. Among them were three alumnae and a Barnard undergraduate who took part in the Project, and an alumna who headed Mississippians for Public Education. BARNARD ALUMNAE asked each to explain what she did and why, and to evaluate the results of her work. Following is a summary of their replies.

FRANKIE STEIN '63 took a leave of absence from the African-American Institute, where she is an administrative assistant in the African Graduate Fellowship Program, to go to Mississippi to help run the Jackson office of the National Council of Churches, a participating organization in the Project. In addition to running the training sessions for volunteer workers, which were held in Oxford, Ohio, NCC assigned minister counselors to student groups who were working throughout Mississippi.

Asked how and when she first became involved in the civil rights movement, Miss Stein said, “I can't remember when I didn't feel involved.” As a sophomore at Barnard, she went to Spellman University in Atlanta as an exchange student in the College's first Southern Exchange Program. In the summer of 1962, she worked Northern and Southern Rhodesia and Nyasaland in the Crossroads Africa program. She participated in the first New York City school boycott as an observer and volunteer, and has worked with the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC), an Atlanta based civil rights group that was the chief member of the sponsoring group of the Summer Project. From late spring until she went to Mississippi for the NCC, Miss Stein was volunteer communications coordinator for Wednesdays in Mississippi, a program which brought prominent women—Negro and white—to Mississippi to try to build a bridge between the Negro and white women of the state.

While Miss Stein has the highest regard for the dedicated student volunteers, she felt that for herself “it was time to get out of the student movement and attack the problem from a different angle.” Her work with NCC included manning the wide area telephone service (WATS) through which the main office kept in touch with every project in the state and maintained a security check on personnel moving from one assignment to another, and traveling to various parts of the state to talk with student volunteers to find out what they needed and how they were assessing their work. Living as she did in a recently desegregated motel in Jackson, wearing clean cotton print dresses to work everyday, Miss Stein felt separated from, and was often teased by, the students who lived under almost primitive conditions in rural areas, and dressed for the most part in old shirts and overalls. (This mode of dress, Miss Stein says had nothing to do with their being beatniks, as many Mississippians choose to believe, but the fact that the simplest way to make contact with a Negro field worker is to dress in a manner to which he is accustomed.)

If not an integral part of one any one volunteer group, Miss Stein was able to get an over-all view of the Project. Much of what she saw—the guerrilla-like tactics of segregationist forces, the need for elaborate security measures to protect the beleaguered civil rights workers, the ever-present danger of physical violence and bombings, the tremendous spirit of camaraderie among the volunteers—often made her feel she was part not so much of a civil rights movement, but of a state at war.

At the motel she met the professional people, doctors and lawyers, who were coming to the state to do what the young volunteers could never do—relate to the middle-class people in the South. The fabric of Mississippi society, she feels, must be approached at every level, but particularly the middle class who are in control and who must change.

She talked with the newsmen who were the channel for what the nation saw and heard of the work in Mississippi. Miss Stein believes the reporters did a good job, but is sorry that “it was necessary to stress violence to get the nation’s ear. There were constructive things, such as the building of a community center in Harmony, which deserved attention.”

In her office, she met ministers of all ages and from all parts of the country who came to work in Mississippi. These men, she believes, can and will give tremendous support to the civil rights movement by bringing the real story of the Project back to their parishioners. Miss Stein says she will always carry the vivid memory of the sessions in non-violent techniques during which the ministers new to the south learned the posture to take with authorities and how to protect themselves in the event of attack. “It gave one a strange feeling,” she said, “to watch dignified, grey-haired men of the cloth with their heads buried in their arms to protect their faces, lying on the floor in the foetal position in simulated beatings.”

In her travels around the state, she met with the student volunteers whose work she calls “the most creative thing I’ve ever seen. It draws on their highest skills and their idealism.” And the young people themselves she regards as “pretty much the cream of American youth.”

Her contacts with hostile white Mississippians made her really appreciate how the term “nigger” grates a Negro. “You begin to understand when you are called ‘nigger lover’ and you know they think it’s the worst thing they can call you. Almost the best moment comes when you know that the Negroes accept you and do not consider you ‘white folks.’” However, about that small minority of white Mississippians who are actively working in the civil rights movement, Miss Stein says, “They are probably braver than anyone. It takes incredible courage to risk losing your job, your home, and alienate yourself from the community for a cause.” Such is the atmosphere in Mississippi with frightened white people, who dare not band together against segregation, working quietly and independently of each other, that a visiting German newsman told Miss Stein it reminded him all too plainly of the “good” Germans in Nazi Germany.

One did not have to be a foreign observer to be shocked by conditions in Mississippi. Even Miss Stein, who thought she knew what to expect, was sickened at the sight of a chain gang, jarred by the “Impeach Earl Warren” posters, unnerved by the constant harassment by segregationists, disgusted by the obscenities hurled by white youths, fearful for the lives of her friends in the movement, and heartbroken at the funeral service in Meridian for James Chaney, the murdered Negro civil rights worker.

But if her summer was full of shocks, it also abounded in a sense of pride, a feeling that the Project had accomplished a great deal. “The summer’s activities,” she said, “added mass to the brave people in Mississippi and that mass will grow. The young people of the state were approached in significant numbers, and they are in many cases now prepared to move much faster. These are the people Mississippi and the nation will have to deal with. They are young enough to expect changes. Tokenism is not acceptable. You can’t expect people who risk their lives when they register to vote to be put off.”

There is a feeling of frustration, too, not only because the process of change is always slow, but because Miss Stein believes that until the Federal government is prepared really to do something about the situation in Mississippi there can be no significant change. “I am not an advocate of Federal troops unless they save lives,” she says, “but certainly Federal protection for the Negro in Mississippi is necessary.”

ANN LYNCH COOPER ’55, a lawyer with a Boston firm, took a leave of absence to go to Mississippi with the Lawyers Constitutional Defense Committee, Inc. (LCDC), which was organized in the spring of 1964 to provide legal assistance to the civil rights movement in the South. It was sponsored by the NAACP Educational and Legal Defense Fund, American Civil Liberties Union, American Jewish Committee, Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee, Congress of Racial Equality, the National Council of Churches, and Father Drinan, dean of Boston College Law School. LCDC set up offices in about eight cities in the South. The Jackson office where Mrs. Cooper worked during July and August covered the middle area of Mississippi.

Mrs. Cooper first became involved with the civil rights movement in College where she was a member of the Columbia University chapter of the NAACP. She did not participate during her years at Harvard Law School or the first four years of practice. She became active again largely through the influence of a law school classmate, Bill Higgs, a white native Mississippian. Mr. Higgs had returned to practice law in Mississippi and after a few years began to represent persons involved in civil rights. After being forced out of the state, he helped to recruit law students and lawyers for civil rights activities. Mrs. Cooper contacted Mr. Higgs to indicate her interest in helping out in the spring of 1963. Through persons he knew, she ended up in Danville, Virginia, for a total of about twenty days working with the Danville Movement and spending a great deal of time in court defending Three civil rights workers disappeared after being released by Sheriff Cecil Price, left, who had arrested them for speeding. An extensive search for them ended in the discovery of their bodies and in the anguish reflected in the faces of the parents of one of the workers. Violence also took the form of bombings such as the one that ripped building, right, which housed ten volunteers.

demonstrators accused of crimes such as violating the parade ordinance, resisting arrest, disorderly conduct, etc. Upon returning to Boston, Mrs. Cooper joined the Boston chapter of the NAACP and became a member of the Legal Redress Committee. She is also a member of a sub-committee of the President's Committee for Civil Rights under Law. In addition, she carried on fund-raising activities for the benefit of the Danville Movement during the fall and winter. The movement badly needed funds to defray legal expenses.

When Mrs. Cooper received literature from COFO concerning the Summer Project in the spring of 1964, she wrote to Bob Moses volunteering her services. Eventually, she affiliated with the LCDC which she says "was a very effective organization and which brought together a very fine group of lawyers to serve throughout the South."

After recounting for BARNARD ALUMNAE the events that led up to her joining the Project, Mrs. Cooper said:

"Perhaps what you were really asking is not how did I happen to go but rather why did I go. This always seems a strange question to me since I find it difficult to understand why practically everyone does not go also. Of course, there is a tremendous need in the movement for legal services. However, if I were not a lawyer, I would want to work on voter registration or teach in a freedom school or otherwise participate in whatever way possible in this most important task which must be done for humanity's sake, for the sake of human dignity for all people, for the sake of our country. There is not anything I would rather have done with the time my law firm very generously allowed me to take from my work. And there is nothing that could have given me greater personal satisfaction despite the anger, frustration and hurt I believe we all feel when our friends, including those we don't know, are beaten and abused and when those wonderful Americans—the enormously brave local Negroes who work with the movement—are subjected to unbelievable cruelty."

The LCDC dealt with a great variety of problems from helping to collect the insurance on bombed freedom houses to defending movement personnel in court to defending the Freedom Democratic Party in a state court injunction proceeding. In all of these activities, explains Mrs. Cooper, "we were associated with three Negro members of the Mississippi bar."

Describing her own work, she says, "I found most satisfying working on two aggressive suits—suits brought by movement persons against state officials—as opposed to the defensive type of action which consumed most of our time." She worked on a suit brought by COFO, Bob Moses and Hunter Morey against the Mississippi Fair Commission. They sought to desegregate the Coliseum which is operated by the Commission in Jackson and we sought an order restraining the Commission from refusing to rent the Coliseum to COFO. The case is still in the courts, but as a result of the action all segregation signs have been removed and a preliminary injunction has been issued granting part of the relief requested.

In the second suit, Charles Evers (NAACP Field Secretary for Mississippi), Doris Allison (president of the Jackson chapter of the NAACP) and Reverend R. L. T. Smith (president of the Jackson Movement) are seeking an order requiring Governor Johnson and other members of the State Permanent Capitol Commission to remove offensive racial signs from the State Capitol and other buildings under their control and to otherwise operate them on a non-segregated basis.

"Since the law is clearly on the side of the movement in these kinds of actions," says Mrs. Cooper, "it is a great pity that there is not sufficient time, money and personnel to require the removal of every segregation sign and elimination of every segregation practice in every public building and public office in Mississippi—and Alabama, Virginia, Georgia—and to obtain orders against every restaurant, hotel and motel that refuse to obey the Civil Rights Act of 1964. There are endless possibilities."

A very important non-legal function of the lawyers, according to Mrs. Cooper, was to demonstrate to the local white people, particularly the officials, and to the Negro community, that responsible adults were vitally, actively and very promptly concerned with the welfare of the volunteers and of local Negroes who were harrassed because of their rights activities. Doctors and ministers also fulfilled this role.

Evaluating the Summer Project, Mrs. Cooper concludes: “The mere fact that integrated groups managed to function openly in dozens of Mississippi communities was a triumph in itself. The freedom schools which I observed were well taught and enthusiastically received. The effect on the local Negroes is, of course, what counts most. The Project gave spirit and courage to the Negroes. Of course, many have that in full measure already, but to others, the fine, brave young volunteers brought inspiration—by their example more so than by their teaching.”

JEAN ELIZABETH MURPHY '64, who was a government major at Barnard and this year is studying at the School for International Affairs and the Near and Middle East Institute at Columbia University on a National Defense Foreign Language Fellowship, taught at a freedom school in Biloxi, Mississippi. Before taking part in the Project last summer, Miss Murphy had never been involved actively in civil rights.

“I think a combination of factors prompted me to teach in a freedom school,” she said. “The time had come for me when sympathy was not enough, and the summer was free from obligation to work (I had received an NDFL fellowship for the next year). But it was also the Project itself which seemed especially valuable to me. I liked the idea of working in an area where the injustice was severe enough and clearly defined enough to make at least the first steps toward correction obvious and unquestionable. I liked the idea of attacking the problem completely in one unified effort: voter registration, community centers, freedom schools, medical programs, legal suits, political organization and cultural programs. And I liked especially the feeling that I could bring something positive, other than enthusiasm, to the specific task of teaching.”

Miss Murphy taught a class of ten seventh graders. The curriculum was suited to their interests, which included Negro history, the history and current problems of the civil rights movement, American history and government. The class was run much like a seminar with little lecturing and much discussion. The questions raised, says Miss Murphy, covered a far wider range than suggested by the curriculum, and the topics most important to the children she taught were really not academic at all: What was her high school and her home like? Had she ever been in Harlem? Why was she in Mississippi?

School was held weekday mornings. In the afternoons and on week-ends, Miss Murphy sometimes worked with students on special projects. They held three intra-freedom school debates and published a newspaper. She also did voter registration canvassing, often with some of the older students, and worked in SNCC offices, mostly planning and publicizing meetings. She spent a lot of time helping to set up a community center and library.

“The rewards of her work, Miss Murphy explains, “were those experienced by every teacher but magnified tremendously. I was teaching kids eager to learn in an almost ideal situation: a small class, informal discussion, no absolute curriculum or tests. I was teaching kids with an emotional awareness of the freedom movement (many had gone to jail two years ago with their parents after a demonstration at the segregated beach) and a hundred questions they knew would never be answered in regular school. The rewards came also from the community as a whole, watching the people we had asked to be block captains in the voter registration drive begin to take over the whole project—planning and leading as well as working—and then even begin to plan a boycott of the bus company in an effort to get Negroes hired as drivers. And there were the rewards of a summer’s friendships and personal success—for example, the night a man confessed to me that the finest thing about the summer for him was that for the first time in his life he was not afraid to talk to a white woman.”

The two biggest frustrations, according to Miss Mur-

AN IMPORTANT MESSAGE TO ALL MISSISSIPPIS!

SUPPORT YOUR PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Here are some facts about our school situation that every citizen will want to consider:

1. The tuition grants given each taxpayer. If only half show eligibility for the grants which receive them, it would cost the state more than $500,000,000—a crushing financial burden on local towns, counties, and state budgets. Our citizens would be paying increased taxes.

2. Our state school budget is based on the ADA law (Average Daily Attendance). If the tuition grants are widely used, the ADA would shrink significantly. For example, a school with a current attendance of 100 students might have a teaching staff of 15 teachers. If attendance were reduced to 50 pupils, maybe a staff of 8 or 10 would be required for only 50 students. This means that if the private school tuition grant system does not work, many children attending in public schools might have no teachers. The long-range result might be the loss of qualified teachers and failure to attract new ones.

3. Private school education based on tuition grants usually means inadequate education for children as a high one in the taxpayer. Such private schools in other Southern states were marked by poor equipment, inexperienced teachers, inadequate sanitary facilities in many

4. Tuition grants, therefore, pose a grave financial threat to our schools. Just as dangerous, however, is the possibility of violence on school campuses when the first Negro children enter. The tragic examples of Little Rock and New Orleans demonstrate that violence leaves a permanent scar which stunts community growth, damages business, and can create a home-grown Depression. Recovery is slow and often never complete. We can't afford to take these risks in Mississippi.

This triple threat of inadequate education for our children, financial burden on our taxpayers, and the evils of violence, are the concerns of MISSISSIPPIS FOR PUBLIC EDUCATION. Ours is a statewide, non-partisan, independent organization, dedicated solely to the protection of our public school system.

Our goal is to give Mississippians the facts about their schools, knowing that their basic good sense will lead them to protect and preserve public education. We are not a forum for debating the pros and cons of desegregation or state's rights or any other political question.

As parents, taxpayers and citizens, we wish to create the kind of phy, were "first, that we had never done this before. I had never taught before, there had never been freedom schools before, there had never been anything like the Mississippi Summer Project that any of us, including the leaders, had taken part in. It's impossible not to think how much better the program would have been if I could begin working now after experience of the summer. The second is the feeling we had all summer that there was always so much more that could be done if only we had more people or more time or money."

When asked if she has any qualms about going to Mississippi after the murder of the civil rights workers, Miss Murphy replied, "We were told that the three were missing by Mrs. Schwerner [wife of the murdered Mickey Schwerner] when we were at the orientation session in Ohio. Yes, it scared us. Andrew Goodman, who was a volunteer as we were, had been there only one day. But it was the injustice in Mississippi that had brought most of us there. And as the wrong was made more real to us, the determination to change it became more real, too."

DENISE JACKSON, now a junior at Barnard and a sociology major, was a freedom school teacher at Mt. Zion School in Hattiesburg, Mississippi. Before the Summer Project, her only direct experience in civil rights work was with the rent strikes in Harlem last year.

The Mt. Zion freedom school comprised six freedom schools, all located in Negro churches. Morning classes, of which she taught two, were for teens and children. Hattiesburg was safe enough to run evening schools, so for a while she taught a class of adults from forty to sixty years old, and later another class of teens in the evening. "My favorite class," says Miss Jackson, "was a group of about fifteen eleven-year-olds—mainly boys—who were especially alive and quick to express their feelings even when the feelings were on unpleasant subjects."

Total enrollment in Hattiesburg freedom schools at the highest point was 575, making it the largest freedom school system in the state.

Evaluating the Summer Project, Miss Jackson said:

"It left Mississippi a changed state. However, the degree of this change only time will tell. Only a small percentage of the Negro youngsters in the state were reached, but those who were, were affected in a lasting way."

"The main emphasis of the freedom school system in Hattiesburg," she continued, "was the teaching of Negro history and African history in order at least to start building a sense of pride and dignity as human beings in these children. Another goal was to start undermining the system of brainwashing forced on the people in Hattiesburg as a result of their being black in white United States."

Miss Jackson feels that the Summer Project also proved to be an enlightening experience for the white freedom school teachers who were assigned to Hattiesburg. They, too, overcame some of the effects of their own brainwashing through the reading and discussion necessary to prepare for the teaching of Negro history—for once, she says, included in American history.

News of the death of the three civil rights workers did not dissuade Miss Jackson because, as she puts it, "before I decided to go had realized that there would probably be many deaths this summer. The point is Negroes are killed in Mississippi all the time. I expected more trouble than occurred, but it looks as though my expectations are being fulfilled by the twenty-odd bombings in the southwestern part of the state since Labor Day."

"For the immediate future," says Miss Jackson, "I plan to continue the idea of the freedom school by teaching Negro history to northern Negro children who are just as brainwashed and just as deprived as the southern."

MARY ANN McNEIL HENDERSON '53, a native Mississippian, is the wife of the chairman of the political science department at Millsaps College in Jackson. While her husband was in Columbia graduate school, she worked for the A. C. Nielsen Co. as a client-service analyst in their radio-TV ratings department. The mother of two young daughters, she has "done the usual stints as board member for the League of Women Voters and AAUW, but right now my time is fully occupied with MPE." The initials stand for Mississippians for Public Education, of which she is president. This organization represents the first public attempt by whites in the state to deal with the problems posed by desegregation. "We are not," explains Mrs. Henderson, "as many people assume, a civil rights organization. Rather, we are a group of reasonable citizens banded together by a single idea: that our public school system is too important to everyone to have it harmed in any way, for any reason."

The group launched its campaign last July with a full-page advertisement announcing its formation, goals and position in the combined Sunday edition of The Clarion-Ledger and The Jackson Daily News. The MPE's statement of purposes reads as follows:

Mississippians for Public Education is a state-wide, non-profit organization, independent of any other local, state, regional or national organization.

At this moment the State of Mississippi is concerned with the full development of all of its resources. Public education of the highest quality for all Mississippians is necessary to insure this development. Federal Courts have ordered several school boards in Mississippi to desegregate their schools in September, 1964. Our purpose is to help our officials maintain Mississippi's public school system in a peaceful atmosphere which will allow all Mississippi children to continue their education without interruption.

Mississippians for Public Education will not become a forum for the discussion of the pros and cons of desegregation.

We will not promote any special plan for desegregating the schools, believing that this is the duty of the school boards and courts.

We will not argue Federal power vs. State's Rights.

We believe that the people of Mississippi want law and order regardless of how they feel about the court order and that they prefer to act with courage and dignity to uphold the law. The possibility of the enforcement of the law by Federal troops is an alternative which most Mississippians would like to avoid.

Strong community solidarity is necessary to safeguard our children and our public school system.

Mrs. Henderson describes the formation of the group in this way: "After the 'Ole Miss crisis' pointed out what could happen to an educational system when faced with desegregation, a group of concerned Jackson women began meeting to discuss how a crisis could be avoided when public schools were desegregated. MPE is what was produced as an answer to that problem."

Mrs. Henderson became president because she was willing to give the necessary time to the job and because she was a native Mississippian. Descended from a family that came to Mississippi in 1803, born in Jackson and graduated from the public schools, Mrs. Henderson cannot be classified as an "outside agitator"—a favorite term of racists.

MPE has been very pleased with the progress made since it announced its organization. "We have strong groups in several places, some of them not yet faced with desegregation," says Mrs. Henderson, "but who are preparing their communities for the inevitable. In Jackson, we have increased our membership by having 'coffee' to which we send a discussion leader who explains our purpose and invites those present to join with us and, in turn, have a 'coffee' for others. The response has been very good."

Admitting that it is difficult to judge the organization's influence in the community, Mrs. Henderson says that when the Mayor of Jackson announced that the city's schools would be peacefully integrated, MPE members thought that perhaps their support helped him to make the decision.

A request for peaceful desegregation is, of course, no guarantee against violence, so MPE has been stepping up its educational program. Along with preventing violence, MPE had to face the problem of a possible boycott of the schools by white children. As Mrs. Henderson explains it, "Mississippi no longer has a compulsory attendance law, so if parents prefer to have their children attend no school rather than an integrated one, many children might grow up without any education. The tuition grant of $185 is not adequate for parents who cannot afford to supplement it."

Asked about the community's reaction to MPE, Mrs. Henderson reports:

"Much to everyone's surprise, we have received no personal attacks and very few organizational ones. The Americans for the Preservation of the White Race and the Citizens Council issued press releases against our newspaper ad, but they were both relatively mild. Our general policy is not to waste time answering such things.

"Again, to our surprise, we have received extensive coverage by newspapers all over the country. We have also been asked to give interviews to network radio and TV. People have written to use from all over the country wishing us well and sending clippings and sometimes small checks. It is too bad that conditions are such that the existence of a group of people in favor of public education and law and order should be such a surprise to the rest of the country.

"Our organization is based on the belief that there are many Mississippians who are in favor of these things, but that until now they could not find a way of 'respectably' expressing these feelings. Since Mississippi is a rather small-town type of state, people here are more subject to the pressures of their neighbors' opinions than in another sort of state, such as New York."

Women in Politics, a major exhibition on the role and responsibility of American women in political life, assembled by Barnard College, was toured nationally by the League of Women Voters during the College's Seventy-fifth Anniversary Year. The political influence of women throughout American history and the possibilities open to women for public service were portrayed in 100 pictures, a sampling of which appears on this and the following pages, and a text, which is reprinted in its entirety, starting on the next page.

WOMEN IN POLITICS

American women have always known that the achievement of most lofty human aspirations requires intelligence for political decision and energy for political action. In the nineteenth century they first seriously challenged the inequities that confronted them by invading the precincts of politics. Their courage was rewarded with notable achievements in the twentieth century: equality in education and at the polls has been assured. Will American women fully use their opportunities to meet the political obligations of their times? Here are some ladies, past and present, who did.

In the past they stopped at nothing . . .

From the days of Anne Hutchinson, who aroused religious controversy in the Massachusetts Bay Colony, there were women who defied the established order. Neither considerations of propriety nor fear of masculine ridicule kept them from attacking the evils they saw about them. In the last century they promoted a series of new sects, helped create the Underground Railroad, preached passionately for social equity, and swung their hatchets in saloons. In the twentieth century they went to jail for women's rights, they fought for birth control and greater social freedom, for pacifism and banning the bomb. The militant American female was determined that her voice be heard.

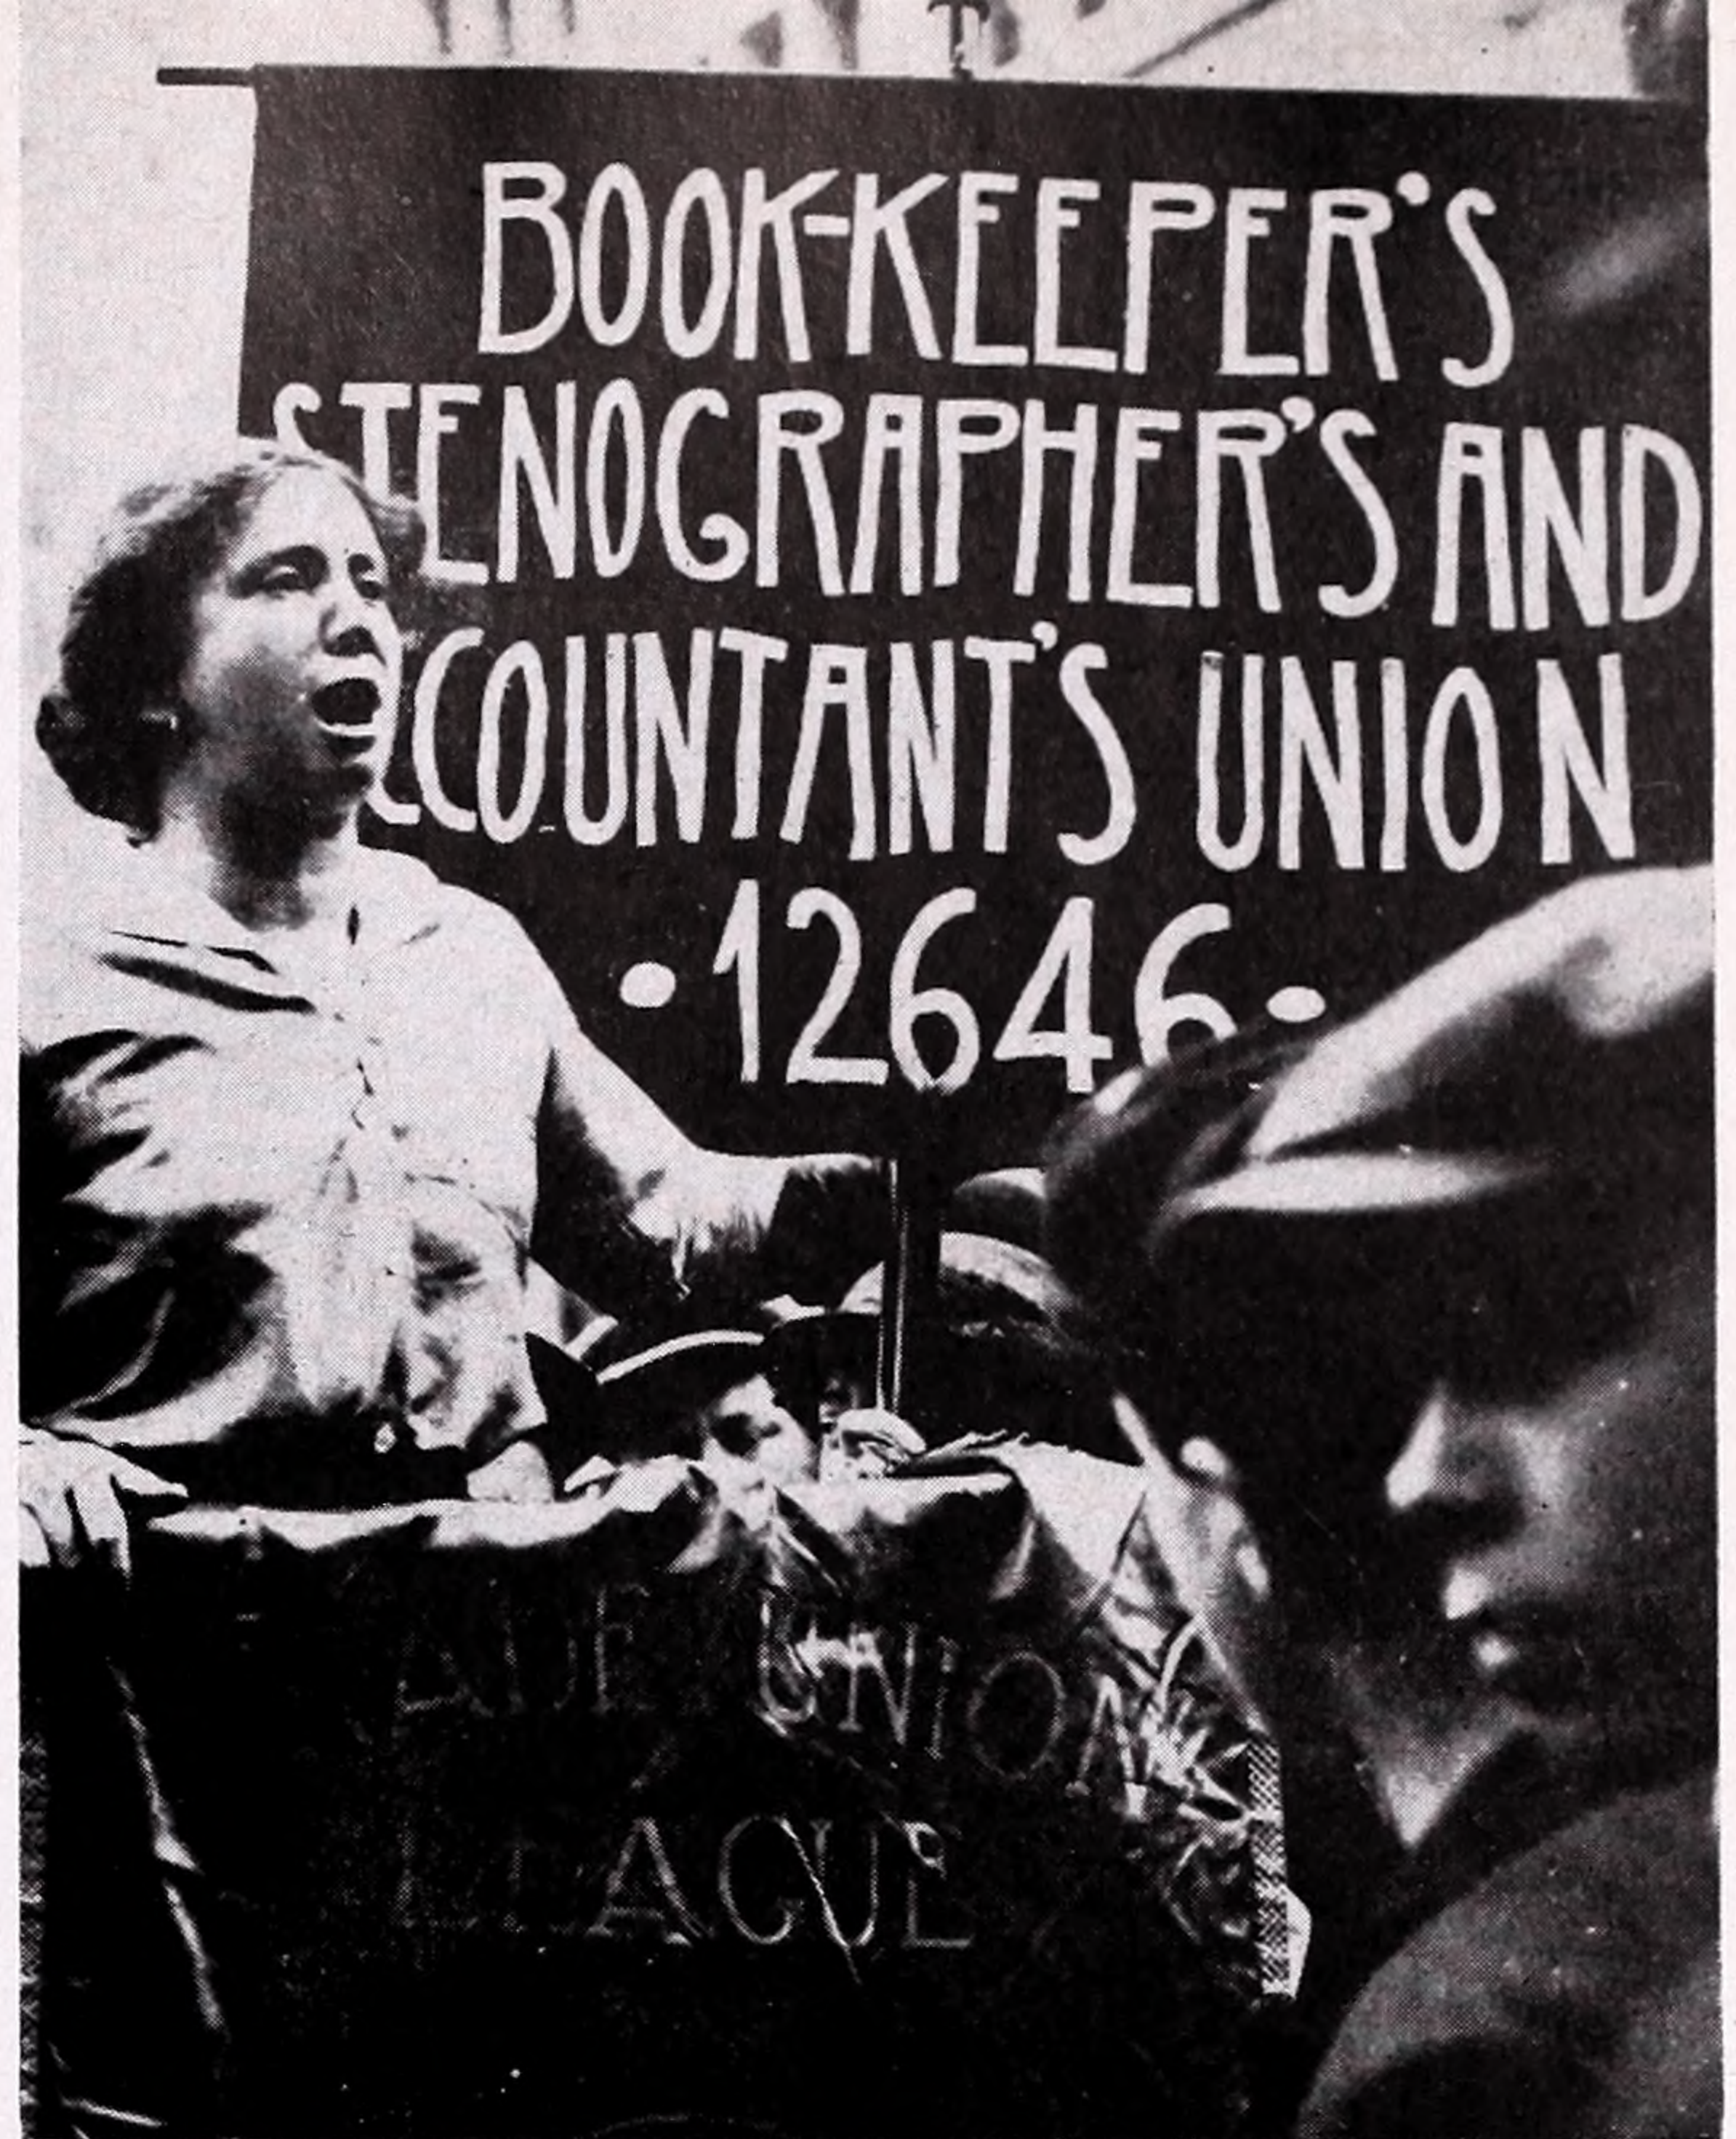

Spotting social evils . . .

Was it some heightened social consciousness in the American woman that urged her toward social reform or was it simply that so much around her needed reforming? Magazines had something to do with it: Godey's Lady's Book and later the Ladies' Home Journal brought injustices repeatedly, if rather gently, to her attention and pointed out opportunities for service. Prominent among those on the social firing line were Dorothea Dix, champion of the mentally ill; Jane Addams, grand old lady of Hull House; and Clara Barton, Civil War nurse, organizer of the American Red Cross. Other strong-minded ladies, aroused by the gulf between social conditions and democratic ideals, found a vehicle for their energies in the women's clubs that spread across the land in the late 1800's. After women got the vote, they spearheaded important social legislation: the Sheppard-Towner Act of 1921, for example, to combat the high death rate of mothers and infants, set the pattern for the system of grants-in-aid later utilized in the Social Security Act. Laboring themselves, and for the laborer . . .

When women raised their voices to protest injustice in the laboring world, there was ample reason; they had been among its chief victims for decades. The Lowell mill girls in the 1840's, notwithstanding their model community and genteel intellectual fare, put in a seventy-hour week for microscopic wages. Exposé novels were followed by articulate lady in-fighters, who indoctrinated and organized. Soon the compliment to labor was returned: the Knights of Labor and the AF of L put their weight behind the women's suffrage movement.

In the twentieth century, pioneering wage and hour

Rose Schneiderman, famous female trade unionist legislation for women set the pattern of broader labor reform for all. The establishment of the Women's Bureau in the Department of Labor in 1920 bolstered the campaign to secure improved working conditions. Just thirteen years later a presidential cabinet was graced by a female Secretary of Labor!

Speaking out for peace . . .

Ardent pacifists—from the eighteenth-century Shaker leader, Mother Ann Lee, through the feminists who also argued for peace, to the peace-marching housewives of the 1960's—called for a radical shift from man's approach to the resolution of international conflict. Other women worked for peace through collective security, international understanding, freer trade, and aid to developing countries. Women's groups opposed traditional American isolationism, backed the League of Nations, and urged public acceptance of the United Nations. Special recognition of the role of the educated woman in the establishment of peace came with the appointment of Dean Virginia C. Gildersleeve of Barnard College as the only woman delegate of the United States to the San Francisco Conference of 1945, which drew up the Charter of the United Nations.

Demanding and finally getting the vote . . .

The success of the women's suffrage movement was the achievement of generations of resolute women. Abigail Adams and Mercy Otis Warren had petitioned to have women's rights guaranteed by the Constitution. But it was not until the Seneca Falls Convention of 1848 that American women made their first collective protest against the legal, economic, and educational injustices which victimized them. Even then, when Elizabeth Cady Stanton suggested that voting rights be included among their grievances, the Quakeress Lucretia Mott admonished her, "Elizabeth, thee will make us ridiculous." Despite the vigor of the early feminists, the only pre-Civil War victory was in Kansas, where women were permitted to vote for school boards. After the war, tireless campaigning and enormous sacrifice widened the suffrage, especially in the new territories of the West. The movement for a federal amendment accelerated during the Progressive Era, shifting into high gear as women applied political pressure in the 1914 Congressional elections and the presidential election of 1916. Led by strategists like Carrie Chapman Catt, countless women pooled their efforts to secure the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment in 1920.

In modern times they take on everything . . .

Although a leading political pollster has asserted that there is no such thing as "the women's vote," there is a stubborn notion that women are influenced in their choice of a candidate by such irrational considerations as looks, voice, and baby kissing. Thus, when women were given the vote, the major parties hastened to double the size of their committees, creating women's posts to correspond to each of the men's, on the theory that only women could be trusted to penetrate the vagaries of the new electorate. A woman's knowledge of her neighbors, her spare time, together with her willingness to stuff envelopes, make telephone calls, and get the district organized right down to the precinct level, have endeared her to the party.

But it is not always appreciated that women have been innovators as well: they held the first meetings where candidates from opposing parties were heard together; they sent out the first questionnaires asking candidates of all parties how they stood on the issues; they conducted the first get-out-the-vote campaigns; they were the first to circulate records of how incumbents had voted on certain issues.

Seeking—and holding—office . . .

While the name of the first lady to hold a local political office is not known, legions of her sisters have been elected tax collectors, sheriffs, members of school boards, alderman, councilmen, city managers, and mayors. It is in local politics that women most frequently indentify with candidates of their own sex, often reversing long-standing political loyalties and the fortunes of entrenched politicians. On the state level women first made dramatic progress in the 1920's when "Ma" Ferguson of Texas and Nellie Ross of Wyoming were elected to succeed their husbands in the governorship. As members of state legislatures and delegates of their states to the national party conventions, women have been forging ahead at a still more rapid pace.

Attaining national influence . . .

The first Congresswoman was elected in 1916, during the years of the stepped-up suffrage campaign, and the first lady Senator was appointed in 1922, two years after victory had been achieved. Since then female voices have been heard increasingly in the houses of Congress. But on the national level, where stakes are high and pressures strong, party professionals still tend to honor their old rule of thumb: only when the candidate's fate seem assured in advance, whether for victory or defeat, should a woman be nominated. In recent years politicians like Congresswoman Clare Boothe Luce and Senator Margaret Chase Smith have indicated that women candidates are not pawns but personalities with ideas and principles all their own. To this day, however, many people flinch at the thought of a woman for President. Designed to overcome this skepticism, Senator Smith's forthright announcement of her candidacy for President may be the single most effective act of a woman in politics.

Serving as policy makers . . .

The appointment of a former social worker, Frances Perkins, to the cabinet of Franklin Delano Roosevelt marked the storming of another male citadel. Women in high appointive posts, like Miss Perkins and later Oveta Culp Hobby, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare in the Eisenhower administration, have generally been asked to oversee matters of social welfare. There have been interesting exceptions, however, like Anna Rosenberg who was called upon to help solve the vast manpower problems of World War II. Recently Katie Louchheim, Deputy Assistant Secretary of State, evidenced a spirit of feminine innovation when she called for a "getting-to-know-you" program which would enable American citizens and their representatives abroad to become better acquainted. In thousands of communities across the land, lesser known ladies formulate policy on commissions dealing with such matters as education, housing, zoning, and recreation.

Negotiating with other nations . . .

Except for those who were born into it, the arena of world politics has in the past admitted few women, but global politics today is more closely tied to many of women's traditional concerns—peace, social welfare, population control, medical advance, cultural and educational improvement. To many, hope for progress was embodied by Eleanor Roosevelt, United Nations representative to the United Nations Human Rights Commission. And in the Foreign Service itself, women have in recent years held posts as imposing as Ambassador to Italy and as challenging as Minister to Bulgaria. An asset that these and other ambassadors have enjoyed is cited by Marietta Tree, successor to Mrs. Roosevelt at the United Nations: "My sex has also been a help. Diplomats are very gallant by nature." As unofficial diplomats, women are playing a crucial role in the people-to-people programs that seek closer human ties among nations.

Shaping opinion . . .

The public demeanor of the official wife inevitably sways the voter, and hence, the political fortunes of her husband. Often she is content to remain helpmeet and homebody, but more and more she rings doorbells, cajoles voters, revels in backstairs politicking, speaks before women's groups, and takes an active interest in issues. Molding opinion more directly, women in large numbers, both in and out of political parties, have campaigned for new schools and amendments to city charters, worked for reapportionment of legislatures, new constitutions, city manager government. As persistent lobbyists, they have influenced legislators on a variety of vital issues. They have been writers like Ida Tarbell and Dorothy Thompson, leaving the stamp of their ideas upon millions of readers. And they have been academics like Vera Micheles Dean and Gwendolen Carter, making scholarly contributions to the understanding of international affairs.

The unfinished business of America constantly challenges women dedicated to the welfare of their own and of succeeding generations. In civil rights, education, urban renewal, community health, voter registration, the status of women, and the struggle toward peace, the problems are as urgent as they are difficult of solution. If women are to be more effective politically, they must accommodate their private domestic obligations to their public responsibilities and develop greater confidence in their own legacy of political action.

NEWS ROUNDUP

On Campus

In honor of the College's seventy-fifth birthday last October, October was proclaimed Barnard College month in New York City by Mayor Robert F. Wagner. The presentation of the proclamation was made at the opening assembly of the 1964-1965 academic year.

The Mayor's proclamation cited the strong link between the College's students, alumnae, administration and faculty, and the city. The proclamation notes that the students share in the rich resources of the City of New York, and maintain an interest in its welfare; that alumnae have contributed to its cultural, social and political life; and that the faculty and administration have in the seventy-five years since its founding consistently maintained standards of academic excellence and a sense of public service.

President Rosemary Park, welcoming the 1,550 undergraduates, a record number for Barnard, declared that young people "observe increasingly that adult men and women are retreating before the complexities of our time into neuroses, apathy, and promiscuity . . . into simplified economic and political doctrines and all the various postures of fear."

"Students come to college with the hope, largely unexpressed, that the college can help them to cope more honestly with modern life. They would not be in college," she continued, "if they did not recognize an obligation to come to grips with these problems."

Miss Park said, "Related to the complexities of our world and the expansion of the universe is the fact that neither in the social realm, nor in nature, is any authority established by history or revelation which we all accept. The lack of authority and the complexity have fostered the temptation to negate the confusions, not by examining or analyzing them but by accepting a simple solution.

"Since part of our complexity results from the collapse of authority and tradition in both political and ethical areas, experience of art is of particular significance." Miss Park suggested that from the study of history, science, and the arts "we can create a style and order our impulses, and expect that men will voluntarily adhere."

Dr. Henry A. Boorse, dean of the faculty, announced the completed renovation of the new "cooperative" dormitory at 616 West 116th Street. The new building houses 207 upperclassmen who occupy apartment-like suites and are responsible for preparing their own meals.

According to preliminary reports by the College's Dean of Studies and the Placement Office, the Class of 1964 (375 strong, the class was the largest ever to be graduated from Barnard) is maintaining the trend of this decade with almost half the students continuing their education in graduate schools, and an equal number taking full-time jobs. Another trend continues: sixtyone members of the class were married at the time of graduation.

Mrs. Ethel Paley, director of the Placement Office, points out that it is becoming increasingly difficult for graduates to be placed in teaching positions with only a bachelor's degree. Students are being urged to continue school for a fifth year of specialized training. The Master of Arts in Teaching is a popular graduate program.

Five members of the class joined the Peace Corps, with assignments in Morocco, Tunisia, French West Africa, Thailand and Ethiopia, and others are teaching in Egypt and India under the International School Service Teaching Internship program.

Mrs. Paley said that the class showed a great deal of interest in both city and federal government civil service examinations and the junior administrative careers which the service offers.

Beginning salaries, Mrs. Paley noted, are often higher for those entering the scientific fields, with the highest salary recorded so far going to a chemistry major who is earning $6,500 a year. Salaries in non-scientific fields are between $80 and $100 a week.

"Concerted action against apathy, re-evaluation of curriculum, and activity on housing, are the issues in this year's elections of undergrad officers. . . ." These words, spoken during the campaign for student government positions, characterized the flurry of activity during the 1964 spring term at Barnard. Elections in the dormitory and student governments drew unusually large numbers of voters and the renewed enthusiasm for "getting something done" left in its wake many of the desired changes in the residence halls, in student government and in the curriculum.

A re-evaluation of the student government resulted in a school-wide election for a choice of one of three: the "old" system, temporarily abolished in 1963, the "new" streamlined system which has been given a year's trial period, and the "revised" system, which attempts to combine the good points of both the old and the new. The student body voted overwhelmingly for the revised

BARNARD FUND ANNUAL REPORT 1963 -- 1964

OVERALL BARNARD FUND TOTALS

A total of $987,678 was received by the College in gifts, grants, and pledges during 1963-64. Of this, alumnae gave $553,625 as follows:

- $ 24,627 in life income contracts
- 60,000 in special gifts
- 143,701 in bequests in excess of $10,000
- 325,297 in annual gifts, including up to $10,000 in bequests.

ANNUAL GIVING COMPARED TO LAST YEAR

Annual alumnae giving in 1963-64 greatly surpassed that of the previous year, due to a substantial increase in gifts of $500 and over as well as in the total number of gifts. Alumnae in the 1910-1919 classes gave the largest percentage of the 1963-64 class giving total -- 26% or $74,780. Of all the non-reunion classes, the Class of 1930 had the greatest increase in the amount given exclusive of bequests.

Participation of those solicited dropped from 46% to 44% because the figure for 1963-64 was computed on the basis of the number of donors, whereas in the past it had been computed on the basis of the number of gifts. If each donation from the same person were counted separately, the percentage of participation would have been the same as last year. Of all the non-reunion classes, the Class of 1932 had the greatest increase in participation.

REUNION CLASSES

A total of $79,494 was given by alumnae celebrating reunions; 50% of the alumnae in 12 classes answered the appeal. The Class of 1914 showed the greatest increase in the amount raised as well as in participation.

constitution which provides for a legislative body of forty-two members, autonomous committees and organizations, including SOC (Student Opinion Committee), and a standing committee on housing. Sue Silverman '65 was elected President.

The Faculty Committee on Student Activities tentatively accepted the broad outlines of a plan which would put the disciplining of non-resident students for non-academic offenses into the hands of a student-faculty board composed of five students and four faculty members. All cases involving infractions for which suspension is the penalty would automatically come up before this new body.

The Curriculum Committee, after careful study and an SOC poll, eliminated the controversial Hygiene requirement. A course comparable to the "mental" aspect of the present course is being offered as an elective.

The largest class in Barnard's history, the freshman class numbers 411, an increase of fifty-six students over last year's freshman class. They were chosen from an applicant group of 21 per cent larger than those seeking admission in 1963, according to Miss Helen M. McCann, director of admissions.

The Class of 1968 comes to New York from thirty-seven states and six foreign countries. Seventy-one per cent were graduated from public secondary schools and 29 per cent from independent schools. Seventy-three per cent of the freshmen ranked in the top tenth of their high school classes. Their college board scores surpass those of any previous Barnard class. Sixty-one per cent of the class are resident students.

Alumnae

An alumnae bibliography, published by Barnard College on the occasion of its Anniversary, has been compiled by checking the names of more than 13,000 graduates against the Library of Congress index. The works by Barnard women cover the years since the founding of the college, in 1889, and indicate that during the last three-quarters of a century a substantial number of alumnae have been busy writing books, the "feminine mystique" notwithstanding.

The subjects of almost 2,000 books written by 640 Barnard authors vary from atomic power to Zuni tribal practices, and include treatises on industrial problems, guidebooks to almost everywhere, and "how to" publications in myriad fields, as well as the inevitable novels, and juveniles. The list reveals college women as interested, authoritative, and verbal on almost any topic.

A Wife is Many Women, written by a 1913 graduate, and A Corpse in Diplomacy, by an alumna of 1936, indicate some of the range of titles. A treatise dealing with Ancient Portraits from the Athenian Agora by a 1947 graduate and a doctoral dissertation on Some Aspects of the Development of Political Parties in French West Africa by a 1952 alumna, further display the various themes chosen.

Based only on books entered in the Library of Congress Catalogue through the year 1962, the list omits numerous magazine articles, papers, and essays published by trade and professional journals.

Many prominent authors are numbered among the alumnae. Included in the bibliography are Leonie Adams, Babette Deutsch, Hortense Calisher, Dorothy Van Doren, Patricia Highsmith, Elizabeth Janeway, Sigrid de Lima, Marjorie Housepian Dobkin, and Margaret Mead. Almost every academic discipline as well as books on opera, teaching, travel, and medicine, novels, juveniles, and mysteries are represented. Of the more prolific writers, Alice Duer Miller heads the list with thirty-five books to her credit; Margaret Mead is a close second with thirty-two, and Elsie J. Parsons wrote twenty-seven books.

Some of the more scholarly works on the list include: Male and Female: A Study of the Sexes in a Changing World; Urban Flight and Slums: Economic and Legal Factors in Their Origin, Reclamation and Prevention; and The Checkered Beetles of North Central Mexico. The more unusual titles listed include: Introduction to Zuni Ceremonialism; Sports Illustrated Book of Dog Training; and Which Was Witch? Tales of Ghosts and Magic from Korea.

have found themselves recurrently frustrated in their desire to apply that ideal in wider spheres.

In rejoicing "at the vivid reminders of (Miss Gildersleeve's) era in Barnard's history suggested by our new president," Mrs. Rice seems to be espousing a pendulum theory of Barnard history. (Or do I detect the noise of a private axe being ground? I would find it highly distasteful to have to conclude that Mrs. Rice has impugned my ability as an historian only because my article failed to promote some personal bias of her own.) My own brief delvings into Barnard's past, as well as my experience in administration and teaching at the College, suggest instead that each of our leaders has added and is adding quite consciously to the gains of the immediate past. Fortunately for the stature of our college, none of its leaders has found it necessary to repudiate the works of any of her predecessors. Fortunately, too, there have been differences in emphasis, and it is in these that we ought to rejoice, for Barnard's preeminence in women's higher education specifically depends on the ability of its leaders continually to re-define the College's relevance to the world around her, and so to mediate between the inner woman and the outer society.

The Torch Bearer

To the Editor:

The picture of the statue of the Greek Games torch bearer which appears on the cover of the Alumnae Magazine, summer number, is identified on the title page only as "long a fixture in Barnard Hall."

Perhaps you were not aware, but College records should show that this statue was the gift of the Class of 1905 and symbolizes their identification with the games, which they were the first to originate as a Barnard custom. Without taking too much space some mention of this might perhaps have been included in your descriptive paragraph.

The Class of 1905, those who are left, have been around a long time too and next year when we have our 60th anniversary we are sure to appear vestiges of another day and age to the Class of 1965, but we still feel we have a place in its archives and contributed the Greek Games, if nothing else, to its history.

CLASS NEWS

'04 Florence L. Beeckman
Pugsley Hill Rd., Amenia, N.Y.

Florence Beeckman is still well and busy. Her house and acre are in Dutchess County, 25 miles from Poughkeepsie and seven miles from Amenia. It is open country, but there are houses near, including several cousins. She is still interested in the Tuesday Club of Poughkeepsie, a 63-year-old literary club, and writes a paper every year on a sub-topic of the subject for the year. She is also still interested in church work, is chairman of a working committee at Christ Episcopal Church and is a member of the very old Dutchess Women's Bible Society. She is a member of the recently organized Barnard alumnae club in the area and is and has been for many years, an annual member of the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York. Elsie Bushong Boyd has a son and two grandchildren to keep her busy. May Parker Eggleston is busy in the YWCA, the New York Hospital School of Nursing and the Youth Consultation Service. She plays bridge when she is at leisure. Her daughter is married and her son is a medical missionary in India. She has four grandchildren.

Jean Loomis Frame is moving to a development for older people, where she has a suite. Like others of us, Jessie Hoyt lives alone and likes it. Charlotte Fountain Lewis is leading a peaceful life and is comparatively well and healthful. Her unmarried daughter lives with her. Rose McCormick has not been too well for the last two years, but has no serious illness. She and her sister live together and have many nephews and nieces who are wonderfully attentive to them. Bessie Swan Nelson helps out in the Theosophy Building in New York. Jeannette Stobo Pensel has had a cataract removed from one eye and is coming along beautifully. Ruth Stern Schloss has been ill for the past few years. A widow for the last 20 years, she has one daughter who lives with her. She also has a granddaughter and a great-granddaughter, who is the light of her life. Helena Fischer Shafroth is interested in various Naval activities and also in her grandchildren.

Mary Frothingham Tolstoy is more or less retired but has been doing a great deal of writing. Two manuscripts are in the hands of her agent in New York. Also, she has resumed sketching and is interested in many Paris organizations such as the Rochambeau Chapter, DAR, of which she has been Regent and State Regent. She belongs to the American Women's Group and takes part in American Cathedral activities.

For the past year there has been a dearth of news from 1905 because practically no replies came from the many letters sent out by your class correspondent. This time, however, almost all have answered so here is some news of your classmates.

Georgina Bennett writes: "I have no special news. I still live in the town where I was born and in the house where we moved in 1921. I have managed to keep going pretty well and keep an average of four spoiled, companionable and overfed cats. I taught with great pleasure in a small private school in Hackensack for about 18 years, off and on. When they had a high school department, I taught. If that faded out, so did I, until it resumed again. I did a great deal of tutoring from 1902 until 1962. Now I work in the garden and in winter spend quite a bit of time removing cat hair from our soft comfortable chairs. I still go to the opera every Saturday afternoon as I have for years." Fannibelle Leland Brown writes happily from Bayview Manor, a very attractive retirement home (judging by the photos) where she lives and keeps busy with various activities. Fannibelle writes: "Transportation is excellent—in 15 minutes I can go by bus to the center of town as well as to the Women's University Club, in which I am quite active. I am also active in the Seattle Art Museum, PEO, DAR, Children's Orthopedic Hospital, etc., so life is never dull."

Elizabeth Buckingham Gentleman lives in Louisville, Ky., where her son is Rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. Her oldest granddaughter graduated from Swarthmore last year, received her M.A. this year and has been at the Marine Laboratory of the University of Washington doing research. She has just started work on her Ph.D. at Duke University, where she has a fellowship. Another granddaughter is a senior at the University of Kentucky and another is in high school. There is one great-grandson. Beth herself is a long standing member of the League of Women Voters, both in Cambridge, Mass., and in Louisville. She is still on the board of the AAUW and is busy on a "reading and clipping" job.

Alice Draper Carter writes from Paris: "I am spending two months visiting my son and his family in Paris. I shall go over to friends in England for a week. My son is director of the section of UNESCO which deals with scholarships and fellowships and the exchange of persons all over the world. Nothing of interest has happened to me during the year—no new grandchildren or great-grandchildren." Pamela Lyall spent most of the month of July in Maine and on Labor Day flew to Spain on one of those quick three-week trips. She hopes she will stand up under it! However, she is going in a party so will have no responsibilities. And here is a particularly happy note from Alice Rheinstein Bernheim. Alice and her husband celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary this summer. She writes: "We had no special party on our 60th, just our various offspring, children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren had dinner together, also some nieces and nephews and a few cousins, 38 in all. Not worth a note in the Alumnae Magazine, do you think?" But I think it is well worth a note so that we can send to her and to her husband 1905's good wishes and affectionate regard. Lulu Carpenter Bayles has been on the Board of Managers of a large Home for the Aged for many years and enjoys this worthwhile project. Her many grandchildren, too, keep her up to date.

'06 Dorothy Brewster
310 Riverside Dr., N.Y., N.Y. 10025

Our 58th Reunion was not the same this year. Elizabeth Toms, "Tommy" to us, who hardly ever missed a reunion, was not there. She had died of a stroke a few days earlier. Tommy was an excellent student (elected to Phi Beta Kappa). A leader in extracurricular activities, she was one of the outstanding members of our class. She had worked at the Herald Tribune for nearly 40 years as secretary, first to Ogden Reid, the publisher, and then to Geoffrey Parsons, the chief editorial writer. She was invaluable there in many ways, as editorial assistant and as assistant poetry editor. Highly gifted musically, she played the viola for years with a group at the MacDowell Club and with several chamber music quartets in Westchester County. She was active to the last, driving for miles, hither and yon, to visit friends, to New York for Barnard's 75th Anniversary dinner, and later for a party given in her honor for her 80th birthday. We shall miss her.

'07 Josephine Brand
1040 Park Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10028

Elizabeth Tredwell Stebbins writes that she is busy doing nothing except making afghans for the two grandchildren, one done and delivered, the other to be done before she gets into college. She also feeds the parakeet, the pug, the fish and African violets and the two young Stebbinses who commute daily but come home to eat. Her latest hobby is color photography with an accent on flowers. In her spare time she listens to records, concerts on TV or watches her favorite soap operas. Walter and Beth Lord Dumm celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on May 30. Those attending from 1907 were Jo Brand, Lucile Grant Hovey and Louise Oden-crantz. Beth's daughter, Mary Elizabeth, is doing excellent work as a biochemist at Christian Medical Hospital at Vellore, India. Helen Perry Reynolds is living in her home of 40 years in Bronxville, N.Y. She has six grandchildren; the youngest son of her oldest son is in Thailand with the Peace Corps. She writes: "I have slowed down from a very busy life, as I grow older, to a few local interests and devotion to my two wonderful sons and their lovely families."

'09 Adelaide Richardson
210 Sixth Ave., N.Y., N.Y. 10014

Last winter, despite difficulties with arthritis, Herlinda Smithers Seris taught Spanish, French and English to private pupils in her home. Most of them were candidates for higher degrees at Brooklyn College, where Herlinda formerly was a faculty member. Following her very successful term as corresponding secretary for 1909, Myra McLean enjoyed a month's visit at Indian Lake in the Adirondacks. Last June, after living on Morningside Drive for 50 years, our president, Mathilde Abraham Wolff, moved to 965 Fifth Avenue. Following the accomplishment of this major project, she devoted most of the summer to family activities in anticipation of her granddaughter's wedding in September. Anne Ver Planck Humphreys has a special interest in the Thrift Shop which is such an important source of income to the Barnard Fund. At the close of each season she gathers up and sends there extras of all kinds—jewelry, clothes, household goods and any castoffs that still hold together. She says that theatrical producers sometimes buy odd things for settings.

Among our inveterate travelers is Margaret Frink. Occasionally the bank account sags but her zest never. Last summer's trip included England, Scotland, Wales and Paris. Even teaching, usually so stable a profession, Margaret used for galloping around the country. After training in home economics at Teachers College, she taught at various colleges from Colorado to Maine, moving without hesitation whenever she saw an advantage, professional or financial. She looks back now on this bold course with great satisfaction. The braver souls among you will be glad to hear that Dean Smith Schloss reports, after her ten weeks in Ireland and the United Kingdom, that even a septuagenarian can travel alone there safely and happily. In the Hebrides she found the scenery romantic though bleak, but the human condition depressing. Everything was flourishing in the Shetland Isles, however, including the famous ponies. Dublin, Edinburgh, Glasgow and the rest—"She liked whatever she looked on and her looks went everywhere." This is the first time Helen McPherson has consented to serve as a class officer. The rest of the "new" officers are "old hands." After receiving her master's degree from Teachers College, Helen devoted herself to an interest she had kept under cover in undergraduate days—her music. She completed the course at Juilliard and was awarded the diploma in public school music. For six years she sang in the Desoff Choir, and in her profession, teaching, music was her field exclusively. Incidentally, not many Barnard graduates can claim two forebears in the early hierarchy of Columbia. Helen's "multiple great" grandfather, Rufus King, was a trustee of Columbia from 1806 to 1824, and his son, Charles, was president of the University from 1849 to 1864.

'11 Stella Bloch Hanau
432 West 22 St., N.Y., N.Y. 10011

Beth Thomson has given to Barnard her father's unique collection of theatrical material consisting of 50 books, for the most part out of print, on the stage and noted actors of yesteryear—Henry Irving, John Drew, Ellen Terry, Joseph Jefferson and others—and 21 volumes of programs, with reviews and autographs of the leading actors and actresses. Librarian Esther Greene is enthusiastic about the collection which will be of great interest to theatre-minded faculty and students.

Another gift to Barnard, from Lillian Schoedler's sister, Mrs. Kimball, is Lil's collection of New Guinea artifacts for the art department and Lil's college mementos and other possessions to the Thrift Shop.

Historically oriented alumnae should find much to interest them here.

May Rivkin Mayers, M.D., and her husband, Dr. Lewis Mayers, spent two months on a trip which took them to Israel, Yugoslavia and Italy among other places and ended with a month's stay in England with their son and his family. Hetta Stapff Halloran is just back from a summer in the mountains of Germany; Florrie Holz-wasser toured the countryside of Ireland and England, with a quick look at East and West Berlin, Florence, Rome, and Paris.

For the stay-at-homes, the big summer excitement was identifying the 1911'ers on the cover of the summer issue of Barnard Alumnae. At the extreme left and right are Myrtle Shwitzer and Marie Maschmedt Fuhrmann, respectively. The light-top back is believed to be Georgiana Sandford Gilman. Who the black coat is—that is still a mystery.

Former students and friends of Helen R. Downes, chairman of the department of chemistry at Barnard from 1945 to 1960, have established a prize fund in her honor, the prize to be awarded at the end of her senior year to the student who, in the opinion of the Pre-Medical Committee, shows greatest promise of distinction in medicine or medical sciences.

Dear Classmates: June 1965 will be our 50th Reunion. Our Reunion means yours and mine and I do want it to be that to the fullest extent possible. In the early fall a reunion committee will be assembled to discuss plans. You will be kept informed as to what its thinking is. What we want from you are suggestions. What kind of a Reunion would you prefer? Would you like it to take place in the middle of the day or in the evening? Would you like a questionnaire sent out to each member of the class? Please send any suggestions or questions to me and I will submit them to the committee and keep you advised. Let us make every effort to have our Reunion a most successful one. In order to achieve this, we must have the support and cooperation of every member of 1915. Remember this is your Reunion—your 50th. Help make it a memorable one. I look forward to hearing from you. Best greetings, Eleanore Louria Blum. 180 East 79 Street, New York, N.Y. 10021.

'16 Gertrude Ross Davis (Mrs. A.)
365 West St., Harrison, N.Y. 10528

Marie Chancellor Miller, the proud grandmother of five, is politically active in Seattle and serves on the election board. Evelyn van Duyn has retired from teaching biology in the Elmira, N.Y., secondary schools and now is looking forward to volunteer and public service activities in the community. Edith Carothers Mac-Lauchlan has retired from a long career as a testing psychologist in the Domestic Relations Court Clinic in Brooklyn.

Attending Reunion on June 4 and 5 were Mary Foster Barber, Ethel Dawbarn, Mimosa Pfaltz Fejos, Marie Bernholz Flynn, Wendela Liander Friend, Bertha Sherline Jovis, Margaret Rothschild Katzenstein (a two-time great-grandmother), Kathryn Cutler Lincoln, Dora Randall, Florence Barber Swikart and her husband George, Esther Schiff Wittfogel and Edith Baumann Benedict. *Millie Griffiths Clark*son and Helena Shine Dohrenwend were sorry not to be able to attend. Mary Wel-leck Garretson wrote that she was in Washington in June, and missing Reunion, she got in touch with a classmate there whom she had not seen in 46 years. They had a fine Reunion of their own.

Since Reunion, the class has been saddened by news of the death of two members.

Margaret Herod Titche died suddenly on July 4th in New Orleans, her home for many years. Margaret graduated in 1915 from St. Agatha School in New York and entered Barnard with her twin sister, Elizabeth, (now Mrs. Corydon Chisholm) that September. Another sister, Dorothy Herod Atwood, is a Barnard alumna, Class of 1915. The class extends deepest sympathy to her husband and sisters.

Leah Konowitz Hurwich died in May after a long illness. She was the wife of Louis Hurwich, former dean of the Hebrew Teachers College of Boston. Leah was a member of the first graduating class in 1912 of the Teachers Institute of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, after which she entered Barnard. Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, Dr. Baruch Hurwich, a daughter, Mrs. Rhoda Kane, two brothers, two sisters and seven grandchildren. To them all the class extends its sympathy.

We apologize for the lateness in publication of the following news, which could not appear earlier because of the special 75th Anniversary issue and the Reunion issue.

Marion Benedict Rollins has written to say: "In June 1963 I retired as professor of religion at Sweet Briar after 35 years of teaching here . . . But retirement hasn't proved to mean a time of leisure. For one thing, the president and dean of Sweet Briar asked me to visit colleges similar to Sweet Briar, to study their methods of academic counselling of freshmen and sophomores. So far, I've interviewed the deans of 16 women's colleges in New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland, and after I visit about five colleges in Virginia and North Carolina I hope to report my findings." Last year she was elected companion-in-charge of the Society of the Companions of the Holy Cross for a three-year term. Sweet Briar remains her permanent address.

Gretchen Torek Gorman, our former class president, spent last winter in Scottsdale, Ariz., where she and her husband bought a "holiday house" and hope to spend many winters. An account of a recent trip by Edith Willman Emerson said in part: "In the middle of January (1963) I set off alone for an extensive trip around the Pacific. Tahiti, first stop, was made most enjoyable by the hospitality and reunion with old friends, some of whose babies I had seen baptized here 15 years ago." She also visited Fiji, New Zealand, Australia, Indonesia, Singapore and Burma. We hope that she has long since recovered from the broken bones incurred in a fall in Singapore.

1921 was well represented at Reunion in June. Marjorie Marks Bitker, who was on the dais, is Barnard's newest alumnae trustee. Alice Cossow was at the buffet supper. She works at a lab job for a doctor in Manhattan. She planned to spend her vacation enjoying the World's Fair and Lake Minnewaska. Helen Ball Dean came from her home in Maplewood, N.J., bearing pictures of her son and daughter and the four children of each. Dorothy Rhoades Duerschner reported on her interesting activities at the Riverside Business and Professional Women's Club. She spent some time this summer in the Land of the Midnight Sun and in England. Eleanor Tiesman Fraser came from Mt. Vernon to give good service to the Reunion Committee. Clara Weiss also had volunteered her services and so 21 was well represented in helping the proceedings to move smoothly. Kathryn Small Garber and Helen Mauch came from Teaneck, N.J. Kathryn's daughter teaches in Michigan. Helen has retired from her teaching job. Coming to Reunion was unusual for her. We hope she liked it and will do it again. Ethel Ramage, all the way from Virginia, was with us for the first time in many a day. She had just retired from her post as head of the English department at Sweet Briar College. Her sister is taking on the appointment. Helen Jones Griffin was also on the agenda for the day, presenting the report of the Barnard Fund Alumnae Committee at the annual meeting as well as joining the rest of '21 at the supper. We were delighted that we shared our table with three old friends from '22, Lila North McLaren, Marion Vincent, and Natalie Gorton Humphrey.

Anne Schmidt Brown lives in LaPlata, Md., "in an ancient house that we struggled to restore. We've been at it for 24 years and are never without a crisis." They raise tobacco and corn, but, her husband still works for Publicker Industries in Philadelphia. Their daughter is a graduate of Radcliffe and son, a graduate of MIT. Ruth Glendenin Graves regretted her absence at Reunion but had already travelled North, South and East in the spring, visiting her family in Bronxville in May, after that enjoying a trip to Myrtle Beach, Va. Before those trips she had a big vacation in Grenada. From their home in Tryon, N.C., it took them three days of air travel to reach Grenada. They would love to go back, but wish there was some other way of getting there.

23 Estella Raphael Steiner
(Mrs. G. G.)
110 Ash Drive,
Great Neck, N.Y. 11021

Elizabeth R. Wood spent a good part of her vacation at the Mt. Robson Camp in British Columbia, owned by a member of the Class of 1927. She hiked and rode horseback, including a ten-day pack trip to Maligne Lake. Alice Burbank Rhoads, bubbling over with her impressions and experiences garnered round-the-world, complains only that the trip was much too hurried for her really to savor living in the countries visited. On her return she attended, as a delegate, the annual meeting of the Garden Clubs of America in Portland, Ore. In June Nagla Laf Loofy toured California and attended a medical convention in San Francisco. Anita Smith Appel and husband Henry are conducting an interesting and significant experiment in the raising of seedless grapes on Long Island, where the usual crops are potatoes and cauliflower. Several professors at Cornell have felt that the soil and climate of Long Island are suitable for the commercial growing of seedless grapes similar to California varieties. The Appels have planted six varieties including types developed by the New York State Experimental Station at Geneva, N.Y. Estella Raphael Steiner will be registrar at the fall conference of the Federated Garden Clubs of New York State to be held at Whiteface Inn, Lake Placid, at the end of September. If you have not already seen it, don't miss the motion picture The World of Henry Orient, written by Nora Johnson, daughter of Marion Byrnes Flynn. Margaret Trusler Fisher left in August for a three-year stay in South India as head of the post-graduate department of English at Lady Doak College in Madurai.

The class is saddened by the death of Helen Pless Steiner on June 25 after a long illness.

30 W. 60 St., N.Y., N.Y. 10023

Helen Burnside Reinhart went to England in June to visit her daughter, two grandchildren and her son-in-law, who teaches at Dartmouth, the English Naval Academy. Madeleine Hooke Rice left in July for a two-month trip abroad, including a visit in Nigeria with her daughter, Megan, who is a teaching nun there. Rosemary Baltz Seronde went on a European trip which was to include some painting and also mountain climbing. From August to November she planned on being in Maine at Salisbury Cove. Ruth Metzger Rode is teaching mathematics in high school. Her son is an engineer at Westinghouse in Pittsburgh. She has four grandchildren. Esther Davison Reichner's son is working for his Ph.D. at Stanford University. Dorothy Lang Nathans' daughter, Joan, was married in August to Alan Haas. Gertrude Gottschall is a biochemist at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York, where she has a grant for research in purifying the enzyme. She attended the biochemists' convention in New York in August.

'28 Florence Atkins Dunham (Mrs. D.)
270 Riverside Dr., N.Y., N.Y. 10025

Elizabeth Cattell is a psychotherapist in private practice and at the Metropolitan Center for Mental Health. Constance Friess Cooper spent ten days in July canoeing down the Allagash River in Northern Maine. She is deeply involved in the Medical Committee for Human Rights. This group of health personnel sent teams of volunteer physicians, nurses, etc., to Mississippi this past summer to ensure medical coverage for members of the summer voter registration project. Plans for other projects reflecting the concern of the group for the health needs of the socially deprived are being worked out. Dee Church (Pearl Friedman) had an exhibition of stone compositions at the Bridge Gallery in New York in April and May. Known for paintings and collages, she has been working for three years on a new technique involving the use of stones. The technique consists of uncovering the natural beauty within the rocks and then showing them in an integrated whole. Hundreds of different stones are used to form a picture.

Florence Beaujean teaches kindergarten at the Greenacres School in Scarsdale, N.Y. She occasionally puts on an exhibit of her collection of children's books, together with reviews and book talks. She lives with her mother in their family home and enjoyed a trip to Nova Scotia and New Brunswick this summer. Sylvia Cook Bergel enjoyed a brief trip to Europe this summer, when her husband spoke before a conference of the International Comparative Literature Association in Switzerland. They were accompanied by their youngest son, who has taken first prize for three years in succession at the North Nassau County Science Fair. Sylvia, who teaches photography at the Queens College School of General Studies, won first prize in the photo competition of the Japan pavilion at the World's Fair. Frances McGee Beckwith is the new director of volunteers at the Walker Laboratory in Rye, N.Y., of the Sloan-Kettering Institute for Cancer Research. She has served on the board of the Handicapped Children's Home Service and recently completed a two-year term as president of Barnard-in-Westchester. From her we learn that Helen Hayes Riches is now Lady Riches. Her husband is the ambassador to Lebanon from Great Britain. Thelma Barasch Rudey went abroad this summer especially to visit her son, a Harvard student, who had a summer job in Paris. Thelma lives in Scarsdale and is active in Barnard-in-Westchester. Eleanor Rich Van Staagen is working for Readers' Digest.

Belatedly, the class extends its sympathy to Madeline Lake Elder in Berkeley, Cal., whose daughter, Clair, was killed in an automobile accident last December.

'29 Dorothy Neuer Sweedler (Mrs. J.)
87 Kingsbury Rd.
New Rochelle, N.Y. 10804

Mary Thomason Stewart is living in West Vancouver, British Columbia, and Jean Alton Ogletree is living in Hendersonville, N.C., in the Blue Ridge Mountains.

'30 Mildred Sheppard
22 Grove St., N.Y., N.Y. 10014

Six-Class Reunion Supper, November 19. Marvel Gallacher has been practicing law in Tampa, Fla., since 1946, specializing in property and estate matters. She is a member of the County Democratic Executive Committee and this past summer spearheaded a movement to rid her area of a city garbage dump. Viola Robinson Isaacs has just returned from a year and a half abroad. Her husband, a research associate at the Center for International Studies at MIT, was collecting material relevant to his ongoing study of group identity and political change, a follow-up to his most recent book The New World of Negro Americans. The first product of the trip is a book called India's Ex-Untouchables to be published this year. Their first grandchild arrived when a daughter was born to their son and his wife. He is a reporter on the Baltimore Sun. The Isaacs' daughter is in her senior year at Carleton College. Viola completed her M.S.W. at the Boston University School of Social Work in June 1962. The Everglades School for Girls, of which Gertrude Peirce is headmistress, was accredited by the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools last fall. They offer "new math," one BSCS (new biology) course and have two language labs as well as a science lab.

Bertile Queneau has taught for 19 years at the Bryn Mawr School in Baltimore. She was chairman this year of the Buck Hill Conference I of the Council for Religion in Independent Schools. Her hobbies are sewing, reading and bird watching. Fashion Is Their Business, a book by Jeannette Abelow Jarnow was published in September by the Fashion Institute of Technology, where she is professor of marketing. She spent four weeks in Europe this summer on a grant from Bergdorf Goodman to do research and to report on European fashion marketing. On October 1 she was the guest speaker at an Apparel Forum held under the auspices of the National Industrial Conference Board. Her son is a sophomore at Dartmouth and her daughter is a senior at the University of Wisconsin. Edith Kirkpatrick Peters works at Beaver College in the dietitian's department. She says she had a rewarding grandmotherly summer with her two grandsons and one granddaughter. In addition to painting (and selling them!) Cecile Meister Gilmore has volunteered to work for the Public Education Association this fall teaching conversational English to Puerto Rican students. Her older son was graduated from Yale magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa and has finished a six-month stint with the National Guard. Her second son is a senior at Columbia. One daughter is a sophomore at Goucher and one a senior at the Walden School.

Marion Rhodes Brown writes that her daughter Valerie is a freshman at Barnard this fall. She was graduated from the Brearley with prizes in mathematics and in science. She received a New York State Regents Scholarship, a pin from the Mathematics Association of America for being highest in her school in their national examination, and a letter of commendation for an outstanding performance on the National Merit Qualifying Test. This summer she went on a pack trip in British Columbia with Bonnie Bennett, daughter of Mosetta White Bennett '27 and with Elizabeth Wood '23. Marion is vice-president of Pi Lambda Theta, an honor and professional association for women in education. She is assistant professor of education at City College and editor of Teacher Education News and Notes of CUNY. Natalie Sperling Prudden has completed a two-year term as president of the Barnard College Club of Westchester. Her daughter, Penney, and her husband, both Cornell graduates, are living in Gainesville, Fla., where he has a research assistantship and is doing graduate work in nuclear engineering at the University of Florida. Marian Irish is the editor of two recent Spectrum Books, Continuing Crisis in American Politics and World Pressures and American Foreign Policy. She is editor of the Journal of Politics and vice-president of the American Political Science Association. Eileen Heffernan Klein spent her vacation in California. Mildred Sheppard went to England, Scotland, Wales, Switzerland and the French Chateau country in June. This year's high spots were Edinburgh, the English cathedrals, Stonehenge, Mont St. Michel and the Bayeux Tapestry.

Edith Guldi Platt and her husband cruised the Caribbean last fall and then flew to the Middle East and returned by way of Europe, driving through Italy and Switzerland. The Platts have seven children, three of whom are married, and five grandchildren. Husband Bill taught a course in business law last winter at Southampton Community College, which Edith and number three son attended. We asked Louise Ulsteen Syversen for a "progress report" on her daughter, Karin, as a follow-up to the April newsletter. It is as follows: "She is still paralyzed from the waist down and operates in and out of a wheel chair. She completed the spring semester as a Wellesley Scholar (honors) and was delighted to be a part of the Commencement activities of her class, but will return now in September to complete her final semester for her diploma in January." Frances Barry toured Europe this past spring. She met many Barnardites at a tea given by Denise Abbey in Paris. Later, Fran joined Emily Lambert '15 in Venice and they went on together to Florence and Rome. Irene Sweedris Hellekson's older daughter, Brenda, is in her senior year at Ohio State University and expects to go into physiotherapy. Part of this summer she spent as a student at the University of Hawaii with a campus tour group. Younger daughter, Carla, is a sophomore in high school.

Ivy Williams Parks, who spent her junior year at Barnard with us, writes: "It is just wonderful to recapture my 'Barnard period' after having lost it for so many years" . . . through reunions with visting Barnardites she knew. Ivy graduated from the University of Hawaii and later studied at the School of Journalism of the University of Chicago. For a number of years she has been a court reporter and is now with the Circuit Court, First Circuit, of the State of Hawaii, in Honolulu. We are looking forward eagerly to her proposed visit East in 1965. Virginia Galvin Covell received an M.A. in English from the University of Rhode Island in June. Dorothy Sheridan Tiller traveled in Europe this summer. Rosalind Deutchman Posner's older son, S. Paul, was graduated from Harvard Law School in June, and received the Fay Diploma, which is given to the graduate ranking first in the class. He is now in Washington, where he is clerking for Justice William Brennan, Jr., of the Supreme Court. Younger son, Robert, is in his final year at Columbia Law School.

Ohio State and is putting himself through college selling Christmas cards. Husband Ben is semi-retired and they enjoy traveling, bowling, and adult education courses. Since 1960 Marguerite Dressner Brown has been in Cambridge, Mass., while her husband is at Harvard. Before that they spent two years in Beirut. Peg worked for a while as secretary to Arthur Schlesinger, Jr., before he went to Washington and then for two years helped arrange seminars for new college presidents. For the past year she has audited courses at Harvard and does volunteer work for a civil rights group. Her daughter, Elspeth, is a free lance fabric designer in Cambridge, having spent four years at the Chelsea Art School in London. Older son, Mark, is at Harvard and spent the summer in Tunis studying Arabic languages. They have a younger son, Timothy. Lucile Canfield has for the past 15 years been secretary in the Office of Financial Aid to Students at Mount Holyoke College. She and her parents live in Holyoke, Mass., and spend most summers in Maine. Eugenie K. Bigelow lives in Hazelton, Pa., where she is a research associate in the law offices of John N. Bigelow. She has been a teacher of political science on the college level and editor-in-chief of the Digest of Ordinances in Hazelton. She is currently making a study of Canadian-American relationships and is preparing for publication a series of essays on modern French composers. Jeanne Meehan Bucciarelli is kept busy with the Hampton Inn in New Canann, Conn., but enjoyed a two-week vacation in Miami, Fla. The Bucciarellis' son is working towards his Ph.D. in aeronautical engineering at MIT. Another son is a priest in Boston and another is a history teacher in the Greenwich, Conn., High School. Their older daughter has been working in a law office and the younger is in high school. Alice Canoune Coates missed Reunion because her daughter, Nancy, was being married to the Rev. Russell M. Chenoweth, Jr. Daughter Marian spent six weeks studying art with Syracuse University at Lake Chautauqua, having won a scholarship given by the State Branch of the International Order of the King's Daughters and Sons. She is back at Connecticut College this fall.

We thought you would be interested to know that at Reunion time we heard from Dean Gildersleeve, who is in a nursing home on Cape Cod, thanking us for the note we sent to her and also from Jane Clark Carey. The Careys have been out of the country for the past few years. Last year they went to Greece as guests of the Greek government and are finishing a book on the Greek economy. She has received a decoration from the Italian government. She hopes to see us at our next Reunion.

Six-Class Reunion Supper, November 19.

Your class officers take this opportunity to remind you of our 30th Reunion on Thursday and Friday, June 3 and 4, 1965. There are many committees at work arranging for a memorable occasion; if you can assist in any way, please get in touch with Ruth Saberski Goldenheim and lend your hand to help make this our best Reunion. Speaking of Ruth, her older daughter, Anne Betty, was married on September 6 to Timothy Creem; her younger daughter, Sara, is a junior at the State University College at New Paltz, N.Y.; and son, Paul, is in his first year at Exeter. Dorothy L. Cromien of Oak Park, Ill., was in town for Reunion 1964 in June. Classmates and friends were pleased to see her and hear about her interesting career as a librarian. Sally Bright Skilling, her husband, and two sons were in New York last spring and enjoyed a pleasant visit with Ruth Goldenheim and her family. He is a professor at the University of Toronto. Blanche Goldman Etra has the distinction of being the first president of the National Women's Division of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University in New York. Theresa Haimes Drucker, after many years of editorial research work on both Time and Life magazines, has in recent years been occupied with editorial research work in the Time, Inc., Book Division, which has published the many volume series on science, nature, American history, and most recently, "The Great Ages of Man" series on world cultures. On the latter, one of Theresa's latest assignments has been on ancient Greece. Her daughter, Jan, is a sophomore at Radcliffe and considering a history major in line with family interests and talents. Carol Allen Finger is recording secretary of the Women's National Republican Club at the New York headquarters; this is an elective position and the latest in a long line of political activities dating from college days. She is president of the Washington's Headquarters Association which acts as custodian of the Roger Morris-Jumel Mansion.

We regret the error in the last issue of the Alumnae Magazine, wherein Frances Henderson emerged with a new first name. We still wish "Frankie" the best of everything in her new venture. Ruth Walter was in New York in late June, attending meetings of the Educational Foundation of the American Women in Radio and Television. Ruth is a member of their board of directors. Edith Wearing Furman visited Montreal in mid-July, from which port her older daughter departed for Europe. This trip was a graduation present from Edith to her daughter, who recently graduated from Richmond College. Anne Muste Baker is now living with her family in Thornwood, N.Y., after spending some years in England while her husband was in the London office of the engineering firm of M. W. Kellogg. Anne's older son studied at Swarthmore College and now is working for IBM, while the younger son has finished his sophomore year at Muehlenberg College. Margaret Becker Smith has left her position as assistant dean of women at Oberlin College to become director of student personnel at Bennington. Her daughter is attending the Northfield School for Girls. Vera Michael Higgins is working at Aerospace Industries Association of America as assistant to the legislative counsel covering Capitol Hill. She continues to write "Dialogue" for syndicated newspapers around the country. Her son is entering his sophomore year at Georgetown University. Cecilia Rosen Strauss has been on special assignment with the Bureau for Speech Improvement, developing speech programs for retarded children. Up on Third Avenue there's a wonderful toy store. Great-grandmother bought your grandmother's toys here—drove up behind her spanking bays. That was the carriage trade! The trolley hooted by. It was Old New York. We are still a family affair—third generation. Pop comes in every day. He knows, so we know, what kids want. Come look around. We have wonderful toys, for every age—for every purse. New York's pace has quickened, but our spirit is the same. Come in today. We'll help you select the perfect gift. We gift-wrap and ship everywhere.

342 Mt. Hope Blvd.
Hastings-on-Hudson, N.Y.

Josephine Castagna writes: "I was married in New York in March of this year to Andrew Kerekes. We met at an office picnic a little over three years ago. My husband works for the Associated Press in the Newsfeatures Art Department. He came to the United States from Budapest, Hungary, in 1957. (Was a photographer in Hungary. Carries a camera with him everywhere.) I am still with the AP, secretary to the New York Chief of Bureau and plan to continue working. We're living in Bay Ridge at the moment, but are apartment hunting in New York." Virginia Allan Detloff is living in El Cerrito, Cal., with her husband, who is a psychiatrist at the Napa State Hospital, and their two sons. She does medical research on a part-time basis for doctors in the San Francisco area and is active in the Barnard Club of San Francisco. Rona Finizie is a senior scientist with the biotechnology laboratory of the Advanced Technology Center of the Philco Corporation in Blue Bell, Pa.

Peggie Madden McCabe lives in McLean, Va., and her Army husband is in the "Intelligence Industry." She reports that the really big news for them was that their oldest daughter was married last winter. Shirley Ellenbogen Rothkrug writes: "It was so nice to receive your card, especially because I'm bursting with newsy items that I'd love to see about all my friends as we all plan—I hope—to see each other again at our 25th! . . . I have been back at work in New York since last summer, though we still live in Danbury, Conn. The three children are away at various schools . . . My job is as a writer in the Public Information Department of the national office here at American Heart Association. I love it, it's great. . . . My oldest daughter by the way, is now entering Barnard in the class of '68." Helen Geer Downs is in New Haven after a stay in the tropics. Her husband is a virologist with the Rockefeller Foundation. They have five children. Helen is married and working on her Ph.D. in chemical engineering at Cornell; Anne teaches mathematics at the Garrison Forest School in Maryland; Mont is a junior at Yale; and Isabel and Martha are in high school, the former in Switzerland. Florence Kotzian Strateman lives in Armonk, N.Y. Her husband is a salesman of printed packaging material and they have two daughters and a son. Florence says she is happy to be living in the Metropolitan area, particularly because of the art museums.

Muriel Byer Petruzzelli has been serving as co-chairman of the Mayor's UN Committee for Greater Kansas City and was on the State Board of the League of Women Voters last year. She is chairman of international relations and citizenship for the 49 schools of the Swanee Mission PTA. The Petruzzellis have four children, three boys and a girl. Ingrith Deyrup Olsen and her husband both are doing biological research at the University of Washington, he in the radiation biology department and she in the zoology department. Caryl Reeve Granttham received her Ph.D. in history from NYU in 1963 and that fall was appointed to the faculty of Southampton College of Long Island University as an assistant professor in the department of social science. She also was made director of the College News Bureau and moderates two weekly radio shows for the college. She is the only woman on the 15-member Suffolk County Human Relations Commission. Her husband is a stock broker and financial advisor with the Wall Street firm of Wood, Walker and Company. He, too, does radio work. Ann Landau Kwitman is president of the Barnard College Club of Westchester. Her daughter, Lois, is a freshman at Barnard, having spent the summer in Israel working on a Kibbutz.

Among those present at the June Reunion were the following members of '41: class president Naomi Sells Berlin, Helen Sessinghaus Williams, Joan Roth Saltzman, Vera Arndt Bush, Elaine Briggs Johnson, Elizabeth Harris Mersey, Marion Moscato, and your correspondent. Irene Lyons Murphy deserves an honorable mention here, as she gave up the project of attending only after being stalled in Long Island traffic for two hours. Nancy Wagner Landolt was busy with the graduation at St. Mary's School of her daughter but took time to write a letter to Reunion-goers. The seven Landolt children range in age from one year to eighteen; the oldest boy is now at Exeter and the oldest daughter enters Northwestern School of Speech this fall. Nancy herself, who writes of "living this stage of my life to the full," is doing volunteer work in the area of housing problems in Rye, N.Y., checking and reporting on local violations.

In May of this year the New York papers reported that the advertising agency, Dancer-Fitzgerald-Sample, Inc., had appointed Babette Jacobson Sommer, associate research director, as one of its vice-presidents. In June Adeline Bostelmann Higgins wrote the following to our class president: "While you are happily reminiscing about Barnard next Friday night, I shall be giving the commencement address at the Campus School of the local State Teacher's College. This assignment is especially difficult as our oldest son is in the class (ninth grade) to be graduated . . . We are in the throes of moving, after 16 years in the family 'homestead'! We have found a hundred-year-old home, nestled behind 150 blue spruce trees that were planted 40 years ago on an acre of land in Homer, N.Y., right in the center of this little village, but completely isolated . . . We'd love to welcome any ski-enthusiasts or any sight-seers." Addie also sent some suggestions concerning plans for the 25th Reunion. The class officers will welcome ideas from any members of '41 concerning this event, and have scheduled a third meeting in September, at which they will set up a regional organization.

weeks with six children, the maid, the governess and the husband! . . . My eldest son now seven-and-a-half is practicing hard to be able to keep up with his father down the slopes but has a long way to go. I hope in early October to be able to go away with husband for two weeks alone, leaving behind three children in school, and three at home." Marilyn Ward De Leuw says that summertime is usually devoted to the kids—bowling, baseball and swim meets! Her main interest is bowling, which she occasionally teaches. She also tutors a boy in algebra. Husband Jack is a vice-president with Paul DeVries. His hobby is raising Field Trial English Setters. One of the setters, Commander's Flying Dutchman, has already won nine trophies. Beverly Cooper Hamilton is moving to the Buffalo area, where her husband has taken a job with the Linde Corporation as a staff physiologist. She writes "Surely we must hold some kind of record in the annals of the class of '49 for being the couple longest in graduate school. But frankly, it's been an awful lot of fun, and I can't imagine that life in the big outside world of salaries and houses can be that much different." Isabelle Lincoln Elmer's husband is now working at Loomis Sayles, an investment counseling firm. They have three girls and one boy. With her youngest in kindergarten, Bel has been able to give some time in the mornings at Sloan-Kettering, a cancer research center with laboratories in Rye, N.Y. Before she was married she had been a research technician at Sloan-Kettering in New York. The lab has a great need for college graduate volunteers with technical training. Katherine Hill is presently teaching in the Ramsey, N.J., school system and attending graduate school. She is completing the requirements for her master's degree and intends to specialize in the field of reading education.

Born: to Mark and Catherine Pfeffer Lynch, their first child, a daughter, Susan Marie, in March. He is engaged in the private practice of internal medicine and cardiology in Avon, Conn., and she is with the Veteran's Administration Hospital in Newington, where she also practices internal medicine and cardiology. Prior to her marriage she was assistant chief of cardiology at the VA Hospital in West Roxbury, Mass.

In honor of Barnard's 75th Anniversary, Helen Kyrou Zaoussis gave a speech in Athens on women's higher education in the United States, under the sponsorship of the Greek Alumni of American Universities, an association of which she is an active member. The main purposes of the Association are to promote the cultural ties between the United States and Greece, to supply information on the United States and on American universities to those who intend to study in the States and to obtain just recognition of American academic degrees in Greece and of Greek degrees in the United States. They have organized a lending library and have founded a film center. At present Helen is involved in a community improvement project, the purpose of which is to provide technical assistance to two depressed rural communities. Also living in Athens is Poppy Arcoulis Velonis. Her husband is an electrical and mechanical engineer and they have two daughters.

weddings a year. She hopes to return to work when her two children are grown up. Hildegard's mother is women's affairs secretary at the German Embassy in Washington. Rhoda Sussman Weidenbaum is in Haifa, Israel, where her husband is with UN Technical Assistance. Elisabeth Hanna Braitenberg has been working for a degree in philosophy and history at the University of Naples. Her husband is professor of cybernetics at the Institute of Nuclear Physics of the University and they have two girls who speak three languages each. Bertie Frankenhuis Argyris and her husband are both in the zoology department at Syracuse University. Tom is a developmental biologist and Bertie is an immunologist. In the winter they enjoy the skiing and in summer the hiking and camping in the Adirondacks. Anita Kearney D'Angelo lives in Ho-Ho-Kus, N.J., and has a son and a daughter. She reports having been through the Scout and Class Mother routine with her daughter and now will repeat the process with son Perry. She continues her interest in the drama and literature department of the Woman's Club of Waldwick. She and Lois Woodward '49 belong to the local branch of the AAUW and she continues to see Patricia Colley, Sue Rowley Bart and Louella Beers Neal, all of whom live within a short traveling distance. Lynne Fischer Bernstein's husband has opened a new office for the practice of internal medicine in Summit, N.J. Lynne has a teacher's certificate for elementary education but plans to work toward certification in guidance as soon as her children are both in school.

'52 Nancy Isaacs Klein (Mrs. S.)
 93 Belvedere Drive
 Yonkers, N.Y. 10705

Born: to Henry and Ruth Schachter Morgenthau, their first child, a son, Henry.

Carol Leberman Baldwin is living in Lake Forest, Ill. She has four children and two step-children. Formerly she was assistant to the home furnishings editor of Family Circle Magazine. Eileen Jones MacRae is living in Agincourt, Ontario, on a 150-acre farm about 30 minutes from downtown Toronto. Her husband is an insurance underwriter with Sun Life of Canada. They have three boys and two girls. Eileen is currently interested in old fieldstone houses, restoring Ontario pine furniture and learning more about the history of Canadian-made glass. She also takes an interest in Canadian Mental Health and is associated with their speakers bureau. Anne Hammes Baren worked for almost nine years following graduation for the Metropolitan Museum of Art, Grace Rainey Rogers Auditorium. After her marriage to Paul Hall Baren, an architect with Skidmore, Owings and Merrill, they moved to Ossining, N.Y. They spent some time in Roanoke Va., while he worked on the new community hospital there. They have a son. Marietta Dunston Moskin's book The Best Birthday Party has been published by The John Day Company.

Abby Gurfein Helwarth wrote from California this past summer that she and Don now have three children, two boys and a girl. After living in Los Angeles for over five years, they will be getting a change in scenery this year. Bob is going to be a visiting associate professor in the physics department at the University of Illinois in Urbana. Barbara Lewittes Meister is making her Town Hall debut on Saturday, December 12, at 5:30. Her piano concert will include Copland's Piano Sonata, and works by Haydn, Brahms, Bartok and Chopin. One of the most exciting aspects of the program is that Aaron Copland has promised to hear her play his Sonata before the concert. While traveling in Japan with her husband, Nancy Slater Kupchan gave a talk to TV authorities. She discussed the Look-Listen project, a national opinion poll on radio and television sponsored annually by the American Council of Better Broadcasts, an organization in which she is very active. Her audience consisted of representatives of the Japanese Council for Better Radio and Television and the television and broadcasting industries. Nancy's husband, who is a professor of pharmaceutical chemistry at the University of Wisconsin, was in Japan to participate in the International Symposium on the Chemistry of Natural Products.

'54 Lois Bingham Butler (Mrs. E. A.)
 2637 North Marcey Road
 Arlington 7, Va.

With 40 per cent of the class dutifully reporting on themselves, 1954's "Tenth Reunion Yearbook" evidenced a very busy and very diverse alumnae. Academically speaking the class counted nine "Ph.D.'s" and 19 "Masters." Professional citation listed three lawyers and three medical doctors. Careers included: architect, buyer, cartoonist—indeed, the whole gamut of the alphabet. Almost one-third of the respondees noted some aspect of teaching, making it the most popular occupation.

Now, with 89 per cent of the class married, 65 per cent of that group specifically mentioned homemaking as the occupation and then went on to add an impressive activity in domestic hobbies and civic endeavors. Meanwhile it became obvious that the all around diversion was travel.

The progeny of these grads on record totaled 244; 111 boys and 133 girls. This neatly averaged two children per family, but in fact the families ranged from five youngsters down to "almosts."

As for the husbands, very generally speaking, a group of the median occupations (doctors, lawyers, engineers, teachers, and public relations men) outnumbered those in commerce two to one (although there are twice as many businessmen as any one of those individual occupations).

That's what we know about us now. Surely the next five years will provide some interesting addenda and hopefully some news from those not included in this resume.

She formerly taught elementary school. Dorothy Buckton received her M.A. in public law and government at Columbia. She's "finished everything on her Ph.D. but the dissertation which I'm writing now—have been, will be!" She has been teaching American government at Hunter College. Carolyn Gluck Landis is busy caring for her two sons. She found time, however, to get her master's degree in the teaching of science from Teachers College. Rosalind Snyder Paaswell is finishing her M.A. in history at Columbia. Her husband received his Ph.D. this year from Rutgers and will be an assistant professor at the State University of New York at Buffalo. They have a daughter. Electa Arenal de Rodriguez has been an instructor of Spanish at Barnard. This year she expects to be at Hunter College. Her husband is still painting and they have a son. Maria Sherry Mamos is completing her graduate studies in philosophy and "am also greatly enjoying being a housewife." She is now settled in Huntington, N.Y., where her husband is practicing surgery. Since graduation Dorothy Kawachi has worked for the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory and IBM. She has just taken a four months trip around the world.

Emilia Borsi returned to school last summer for her master's degree in Spanish. For the past four years she has been working for Pirelli in New York. Myriam Jarblum graduated from NYU Law School last year and has been practicing law for the past five months. "I'm extraordinarily happy with my work since I'm doing a great deal of litigation. Some of my best clients have a claim to fame as notorious criminals." Carol Marks Wispart formerly taught English and history in Queens and now is at home with her daughter. Husband Ivor is working in the field of aviation as an engineer. Janet Feldman Steig has a daughter and lives in Millburn, N.J. Husband Donald is a corporate systems analyst with Celanese, Inc. Joan Bramnick Gruen is the mother of one girl, secretary to a Harvard professor and wife of a Harvard instructor in history, who received his Ph.D. in June. They love Cambridge and expect to spend at least the next three years there. Susan Schwartz is finishing off her study of neurophysiology at Albert Einstein Medical College as a pre-doctoral candidate. Betty Ackerman Clarick recently moved to Highland Park, N.J., and is busy caring for two sons. Husband Donald is practicing law in New Brunswick. Roberta Feldman Ehrlich, now living in Washington, D.C., recently retired to the role of a full-time housewife. Evelyn Landau Lilienfeld is quite busy taking care of two little sons. Husband Pedro does research on a contract for the Atomic Energy Commission. His instruments fly balloons from Texas to Minnesota. Sandra Gelfand Schanzer studied Japanese and Japanese history at Columbia but stopped to become a programmer. She has a little daughter and works two days a week. Husband Andre is a buyer with Gimbels. After working for almost five years as a computer programmer, Deborah Schoen Becker retired to become the mother of a little girl. Husband Jack is an attorney with the SEC. Ruth Sulzbach Lewittes has two sons and formerly worked for a brokerage firm as a research analyst. Her husband is an assistant attorney general with the State of New York. Bernice Ide August is working for her Ph.D. at Columbia. She and her husband, Gilbert, a resident in pediatrics at Bellevue, have one daughter.

Judy Weber Taylor received her M.S. in library science from Columbia. She has been doing library work ever since except for "time out" for the birth of her daughter. Husband Arnie is teaching. Kathryn Kusch Vetter is living in San Francisco, where her husband is a medical intern. Ruth Nestle Schechter taught English for over two years after graduation and now is at home taking care of her daughter. Marjorie Rose Gleit, now at home with two sons, taught in Boston for two years. Susan Tarshis Baumgarten was an elementary school teacher and worked with the Red Cross school program before retiring to care for her son. Husband Paul is house counsel to a music publishing company. Sally Beyer Webster and her husband have bought two brownstones in Manhattan on West 94th Street and plan to move in next spring. Madeleine Pelner Cosman writes that all productions of the past five years have been paired: two graduate degrees (M.A. and Ph.D. in comparative medieval literature); two published papers (on Yeats and Ossian, and on Spenser and animal imagery); and two large children (a son and a daughter). She has been an instructor in English at Hunter. Husband Bard is a plastic surgeon in private and academic practice at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center. For the past five years Iris Nelson has been working for Professors Lucena and Lester Barth as their research assistant in the department of zoology at Columbia. In June she completed an M.A. in developmental psychology. Now she is working as a research assistant in medical sociology. Bonnie Goodman Orlin is living in Newton, Mass. Husband Jay is associated with a law firm and she plans to take a degree in library science. They have two sons. Danielle Haase-du Bosc Cogan has an AAUW Fellowship to finish her Ph.D. thesis and she is teaching one French course at Barnard. Her husband is also writing his Ph.D. thesis and is teaching Freshman English at Columbia College.

Our Fifth Reunion is in its planning stages! You say you didn't realize that such a long time had passed since you last saw Barnard's green gates? On Thursday and Friday, June 3 and 4, 1965 we will all have the opportunity to see them and many of our classmates again. The activities on Thursday and Friday will consist of lectures and workshops at Barnard and on Friday evening there will be a cocktail party and dinner for our class. We also hope to sponsor an off-campus activity for the families and friends of our classmates. If you can't wait until June to be in touch with old friends and you would like to help plan the details of the Reunion and contact classmates, please call or write to Barbara Berkman Goodstein, 610 West 174th Street, New York, New York 10033.

Married: Zili Kraus to Jonathan Amsel; Marcia Stecker to Arnold Schaab, and living in Cambridge, Mass; Carol Murton to Arthur Lavis; Judith Feit to Lawrence Orange, and living in Brooklyn; Gale Zimmerman to Henry J. Fieldman, and living in Brooklyn; Claire Teitelbaum to Steven Falk, and living in Peoria, Ill. Claire has a master's degree in psychology from the University of Minnesota's Institute of Child Development. Angela Carracino to Mauro Di Domenico, Jr., and living in Madison, N.J.; Karen Sue Charal to Meyer A. Gross. He graduated from the Cornell School of Engineering and from Columbia Law School. He is a patent attorney in New York. Karen has completed her second year of law school at NYU, where she is an editor of the Law Review. She spent the summer working with a law firm on Wall Street. Bobbie Friedman to Reid Chambers. Reid has just finished his master's degree at Oxford, and they were married in England. He is studying at Harvard Law School and Bobbie is teaching at the Buckingham School. Libby Guth to Alan Fishman, an architect, and living in Philadelphia. Libby has been working as a reference librarian at Temple University and attending Temple Law School in the evenings. She was co-author of a bibliography on constitutional revision which was put out by the National Municipal League last year.

Leila Kern to Perrin S. Cohen. Both are doctoral candidates in experimental psychology at Columbia and are teaching assistants at Columbia College. Iris Lilienfeld to Howard Gordon. After a cruise to Europe they are living in Bologna, Italy, where Howard is in his last year of medical school. Iris received her M.S. in clinical psychology in June from Penn State, where she has done research in creativity under a National Institute of Mental Health Research Fellowship. Maya Rosenfeld to Samuel Freed. Sam graduated from the University of South Carolina Law School and is now working in New York as a law clerk. Maya is teaching sixth grade in Forest Hills, near her home. Keitha Sapsin to Ralph I. Fine, and living in New York after a trip to Europe. Keitha has been working on her M.A. in political science at George Washington University and is continuing in New York. Ralph is a lawyer in Manhattan.

Born: to Robert and Joy Felsher Perla, their first child, a son, Daniel Rory, in June. Joy says that they all enjoy each other tremendously and even with all the bottles and diapers, she still finds time to get a little writing done. Joy had been working for a local newspaper in Forest Hills before the baby was born.

Joan Lewis Thompson received her M.A. in music from Columbia in June. Her husband, Malcolm, graduated from Jewish Theological Seminary and was ordained as a Rabbi. They spent the summer in the Bahamas, living on the estate of a woman who was receiving Hebrew lessons from Malcolm. He is now working in Laurelton, where he has a pulpit. Karen Kissen wrote to say that she has been free-lancing, doing esoteric book covers for the paperback departments of the University of Michigan and Cornell University presses. She was represented in the James Room exhibition, "Four Young Women Painters," which was a success. Karen is spending this year in Rome on a Fulbright in painting. Rusty Miller is home from two years in Ethiopia as a Peace Corps volunteer. Her mother flew to meet her in Athens in July, and they spent the summer in Europe, getting back on Labor Day. Hopefully, we will have an article in the Magazine, or a class newsletter, detailing Rusty's adventures which were many and varied. Nancy Fisher is currently production supervisor for the CBS television program "Search for Tomorrow" seen daily throughout the country. Abbe Fessenden received her M.A. from Johns Hopkins School for International Studies in June and qualified for the AID program. She is one of President Johnson's "first for females" as she was the first girl accepted for the AID Africa Junior Officer Training Program.

I guess I'd better say something about myself at this point, something which I have not done in the past, if only to explain the change of address at the top of the column. For the past two years I'd been living in Brooklyn and doing analysis work at a large insurance company in Manhattan. Stan commuted between Brooklyn and Aberdeen Proving Grounds (Maryland), where he has been with the U.S. Army, working as a research chemist. We are now in Newark, Del., where Stan, having gratefully received his discharge, is working as a teaching assistant and working on his Ph.D. in organic chemistry at the University of Delaware. I have become a lady of leisure, staying at home awaiting further developments (which cannot, according to the Magazine editorial policy, be mentioned until a future column).

The process of rereading and then re-writing for autumn publication news received during the summer months reminds me of those pop records lamenting the end of summer; in both there is a desire to retain by remembrance the people, places, and experiences one has become fond of although the realization that each is fading and changing into something new is ever present. Of course, this is not at all as melancholic as it may sound, but news has come from some of the many outstanding members of our class and it's rather hard to maintain a completely detached attitude when overwhelmed by missives from the people who helped to make the "Barnard Years" so memorable. At any rate, and in the words of that literary great, ". . . I digress"—and so on to the tidbits . . .

If there is one thing about our class which is singular, it is the amazing diversity of experiences and places which the members of '63 have encountered. Ann Knight Randall is now in Bamberg, Germany, serving a military tour of duty with her husband. Before she left for Europe last January, Ann worked for the Social Security Administration and attended the Graduate School of Public Administration at NYU. Loretta Tremblay also sends along some international news: She has worked as a teacher and then as an airline stewardess this past year and plans to return to teaching this fall. Loretta also writes that Bette Steinberg Landman and Sue Kaufman spent three months this summer in Colombia, South America, on study grants; and that Gail Hochman Effros and her husband traveled to Europe for a vacation.

Back in the homeland, Carol Mayer Atkiss is living in Boston, while Judy Morganroth is working towards her Ph.D., in the Romance languages at Duke University under a National Defense Fellowship. Both Sheila Gordon and Frankie Stein have been in, out, and back to New York City this past year. After graduation from Barnard, Sheila went to Boston to enter the Harvard M.A.T. program. Upon completion of the program she decided to return to New York and has been working as an assistant to the dean of the Graduate Division of the Baruch School of Business as well as taking part in the activities of the Riverside Democrats. Frankie has been working for the African-American Institute and is currently administrative assistant in the education division of the Institute. For other news of Frankie we refer you to the front part of the Magazine. Kathie Agayoff, who has finished her first year at Downstate Medical Center, is working on a project of her own dealing with the effects of irradiation on vasculature. She has been awarded a research fellowship in order to pursue this study and is finding medical school exciting and rewarding.

Married: Ethel Doudine to Bernard Patten, and living in New York; Karen Gold to Lyle Halperin, and living in Flushing; Rachel Price to Peter J. Ripple, and living in Aberdeen, Wash., where he is employed at the Weyerhaeuser Company as a forester.

Born: to William and Vicki Granet Semel, a daughter, Debra Lee, in July; to Robert and Susan Buchalter Segal, a daughter, Shirah Gabrielle, in October 1963. The Segals are living in Brookline, Mass., and he is completing his doctoral thesis in mathematics at MIT.

This is our first appearance as an alumnae class of Barnard. By now, most of us are busy settling down to new routines and new situations. Since we can't sit down and talk over a cup of coffee in the Annex, we hope that the following column will serve somewhat as a substitute and help keep you up to date on news of our classmates.

Donna is working for the Texas Employment Commission as an interviewer. Stephane Wetmore to Rabbi Ephraim Goldbaum, and living in Brooklyn. She is employed as a field director for the Girl Scouts at their Brooklyn office. Carolyn Harris to Godfrey Wetterlow and living in Camden, Me.

Carol Berkin is working on the Hamilton Papers at Columbia as an editorial assistant and studying for a master's degree in history. Sandra Lee Heimer is working for an M.A.T. degree in mathematics teaching in secondary school at Johns Hopkins University. Karen Grebel is at NYU Medical School under a special program which will give her a combined M.D.-Ph.D. degree after about six years and which is quite liberally supported by the government. Her tuition is paid for in addition to a $2400 fellowship. All this is to prepare her to teach in the medical schools and conduct research in the field of her Ph.D., which will probably be biochemistry. Jane Perman Gross is continuing her studies in a one-year master's degree program at the Bank Street College of Education in New York. Lynn Wallerstein is a case aid with the Edwin Gould Foundation, a social work agency, in the foster care section. She spent the summer as a court clerical worker for the United Lawyer's Service. Suzanne Selby is in Mussoorie, India, teaching English and French at the Woodstock School, a co-educational boarding school in the foothills of the Himalayas. Linda Meyers began studies at Woman's College of Pennsylvania in September after a two-month tour of Europe.

SILENCER

His business is quiet. He's a General Motors development engineer and his job is to help see to it that every GM car operates as smoothly and quietly as advanced technology and human skill can reasonably achieve. His work takes him into an anechoic chamber at the Milford Proving Ground where walls made of glass-fiber-wedges up to a yard deep absorb 99 percent of the sound made by a car in operation. In this room GM cars are "road proved" on a chassis dynamometer under many driving conditions and at varying speeds. Every significant noise, no matter how slight, is studied, charted, evaluated. Object: quiet. This man and others like him never stop striving to reach that goal.

Highly refined laboratory setups like the Milford anechoic rooms contribute vitally to the constant improvement of General Motors cars. But they would be valueless without the knowledge and experience of the men who use them. People, after all, are the key to the continuing excellence of GM products. General Motors owes its position in industry to the dedication and ability of a great many exceptional people.

A Matter of Personal Attention

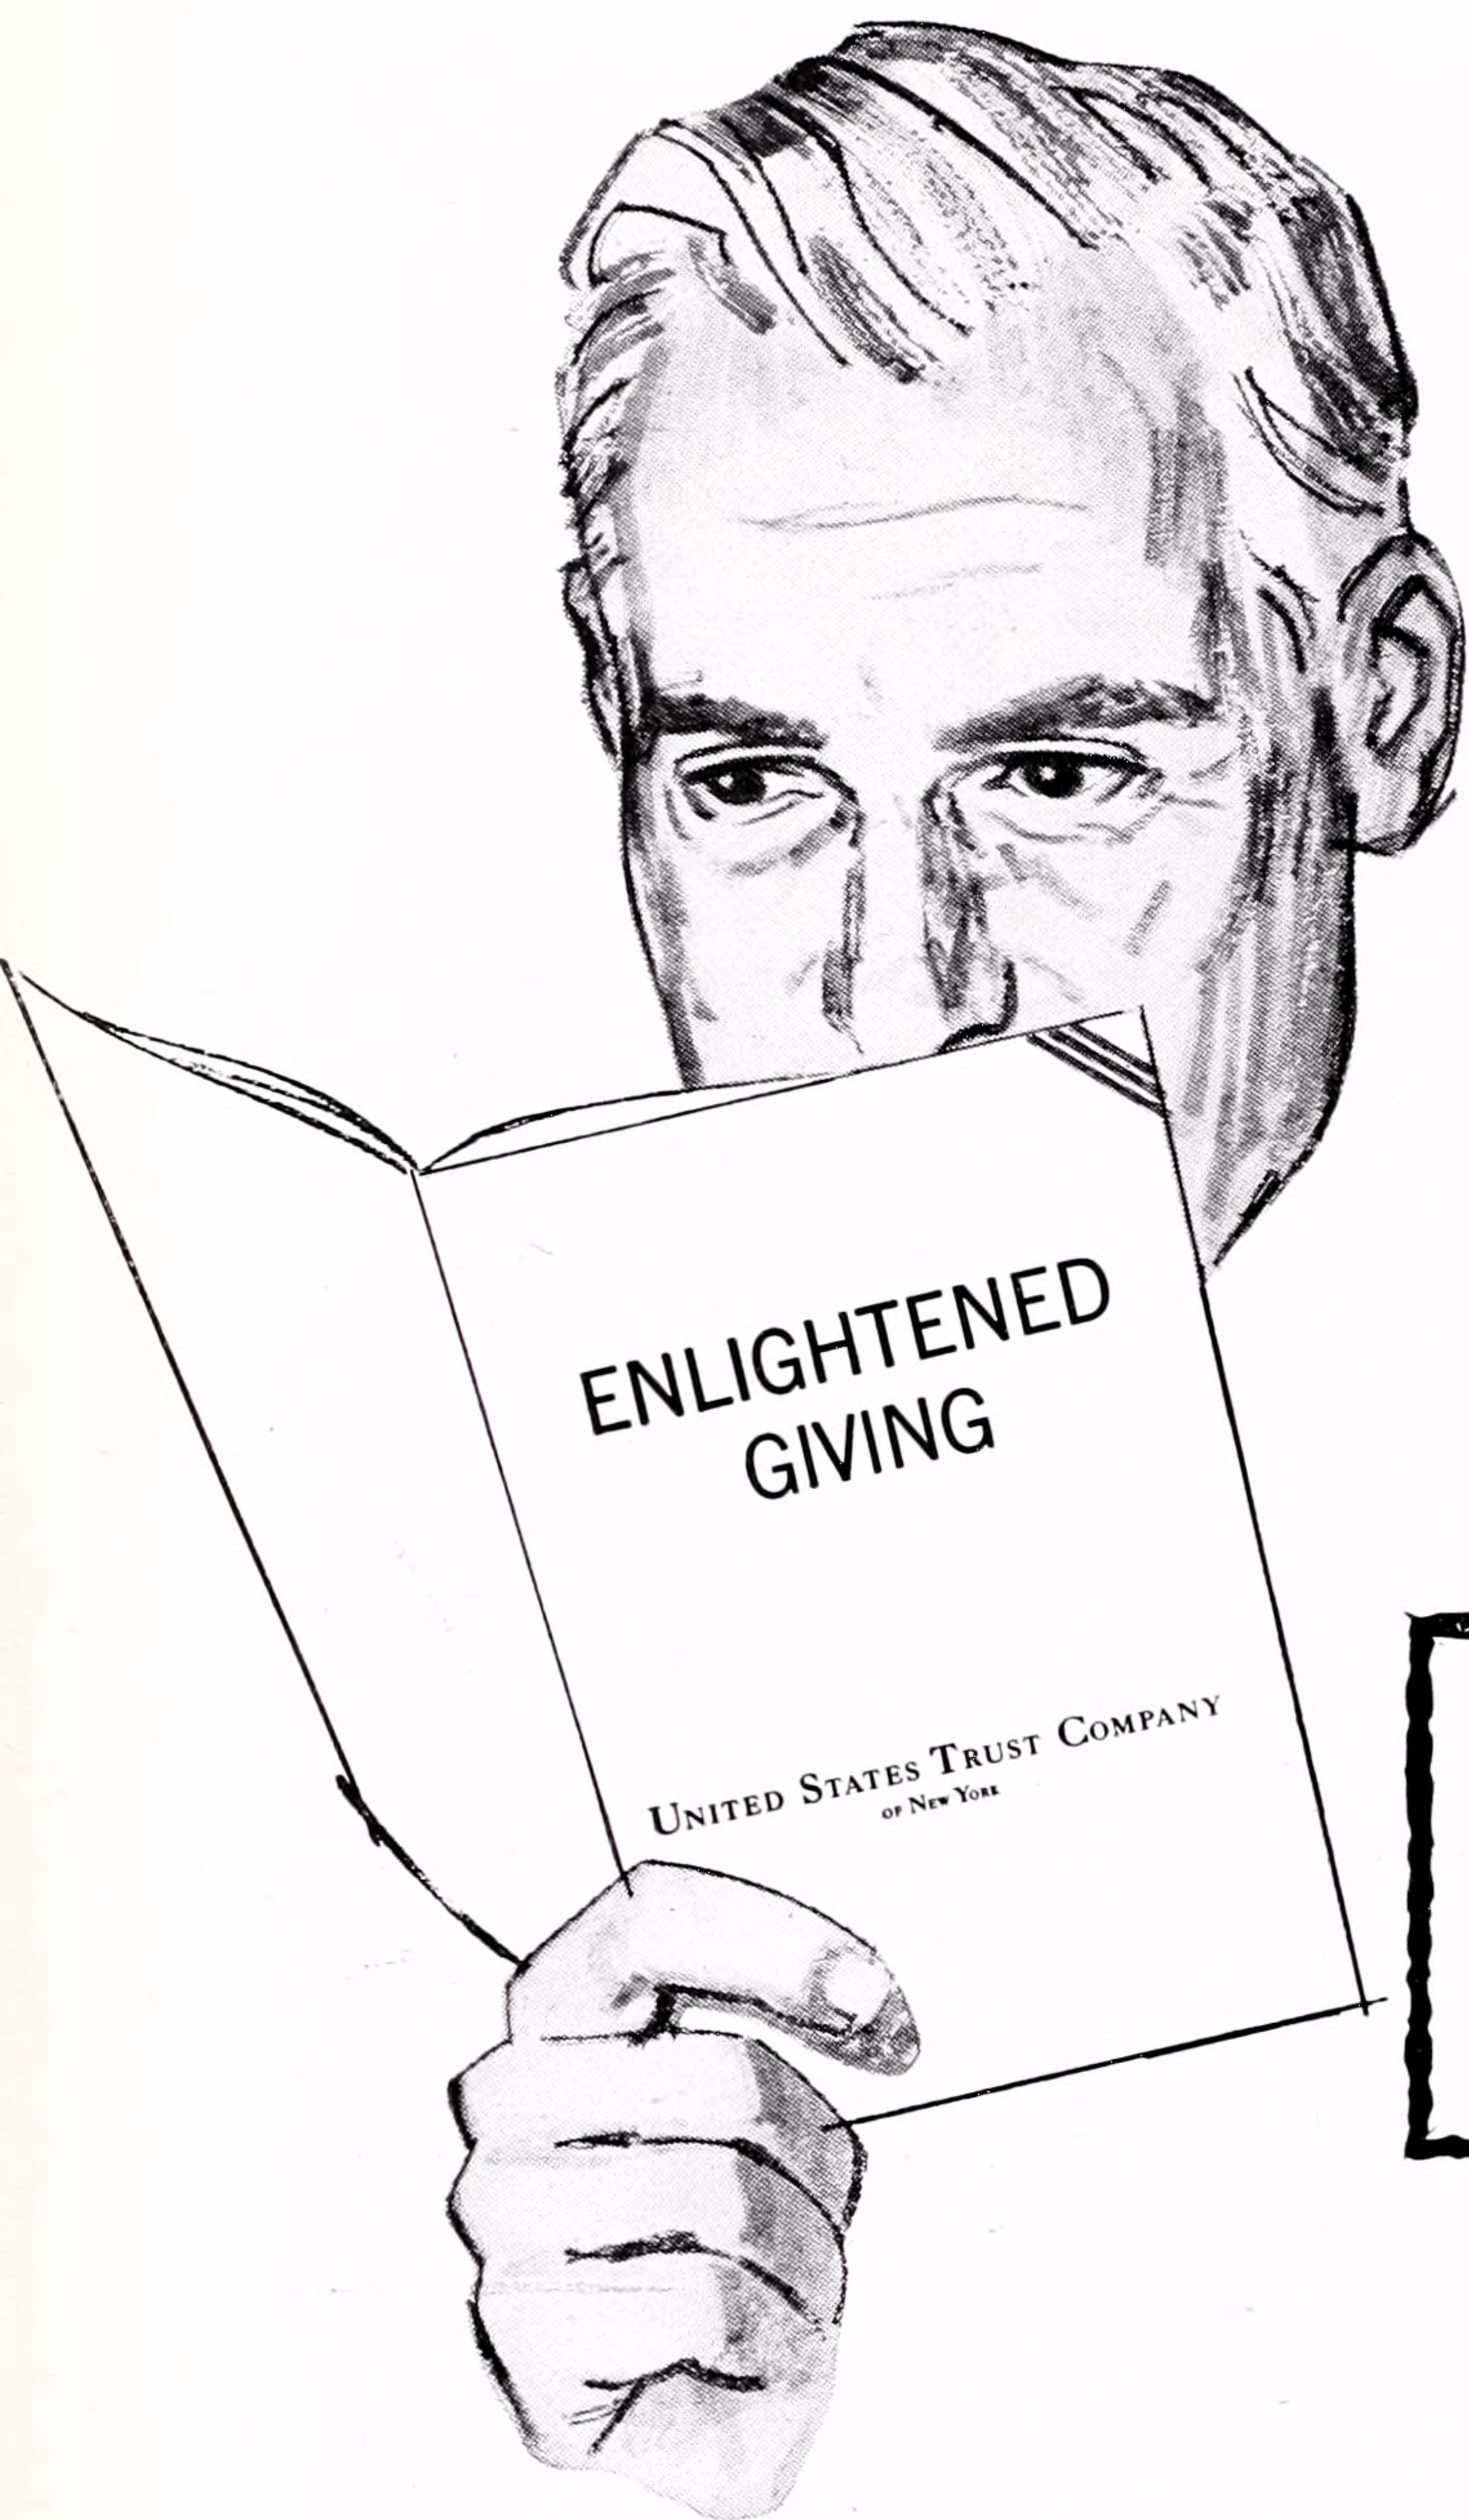

After an individual accumulates considerable property, financial planning for the future becomes a necessity. He must look ahead to make proper provisions for the eventual distribution of his property and for his family's protection. When this time comes, a discussion between you, your attorney and a trust officer at New York's first bank can be most helpful. The personal trust services of The Bank of New York are well-known. Many people now being served by the Bank are descendents of customers who chose this Bank for trust work generations ago. The Bank offers the services of a full-time organization—large enough to offer complete facilities, yet small enough to give the personal attention these matters require. You will find it worth your while to visit The Bank of New York, a pioneer in the trust field for more than 130 years.

More Effective Giving at Lower Net Cost

It isn't easy to give away money well.

Our national future depends largely on the quality of our educational and charitable institutions. Their future depends largely on gifts.

So it is essential that gifts be planned for maximum benefit to the recipient at minimum cost to the giver. Legal aspects, naturally, should be discussed with an attorney.

We have a brochure which reviews methods of making charitable gifts and their consequences. If you would like to have it, please write or telephone for a copy of "Enlightened Giving."
