Editorial

It is in a humble spirit that the new board takes over the editing of BULLETIN. The last few years have seen this journal grow, under skillful guidance, from a thin collection of bound reports to a healthy publication that we dare to call a magazine. If we, in carrying on the work of development, can match the record of our predecessors, we shall feel that we have made a considerable contribution to BULLETIN and the Associate Alumnae.

We have the pleasure, in our first issue, of reporting two significant achievements by alumnae groups. The growth of the New York Barnard College Club and the successful organization of the Shopping Week, indicate an increasing self consciousness among us, which, if wisely used, will be a valuable force. If BULLETIN, by mirroring such activities and giving voice to alumnae opinion, can help us still further to know ourselves, it will serve a useful purpose.

In recent issues of BULLETIN the problems of the Married Alumna have loomed large. We hope that our readers will welcome a few figures on this so-much-talked-of lady, in the form of a study by Miss Clara Eliot of the Department of Economics and Sociology. Miss Eliot completed the article on the eve of a sabbatical leave for study in Berlin. She takes with her our sincere wishes for a successful year of work.

Of special interest to Barnard at this time is the recent alliance of the seven larger women's colleges of the East to work for publicity and adequate endowment. We reprint from Dean Gildersleeve's Report the account of this co-operative action, and word of the recent increase in salary schedules at Columbia and Barnard,—in itself an illustration of the difficulties that beset the woman's college. Alumnae will be grateful for the action of the Trustees, which removed a threat to Barnard's scholastic standing.

The New York Barnard College Club

OTHER VIEWS OF THE CLUB APPEAR ON PAGE 12 AND 13

Safely lodged in its new quarters at the Barbizon, the Barnard College Club of New York takes this occasion to announce its formal opening and to extend a cordial invitation to all alumnae and their friends to visit the new Lounge.

Established just three years ago by a group of alumnae who believed that there was a real need in New York for an organization around which the social activities of Barnard graduates might center, the Club has surprised even its founders by its growth.

In January, 1926, the Club took quarters in the Allerton House on Lexington Avenue and 57th Street. It soon became apparent that the increasing membership and the growing activities of the Club demanded a larger home, and the recent move to the Barbizon, where the Wellesley, Mt. Holyoke, Radcliffe and Cornell Clubs were already located, was in answer to this very definite demand.

The advantages of the new headquarters are many and the club is anxious that all alumnae know about them. The Barbizon is conveniently located at the corner of Lexington Avenue and 63rd Street, and is the center of college women's activities in New York. A gymnasium, a pool, a large number of bed rooms available for the use of members, and a dining room with really good music are some of the attractions offered by the club in its new home. Special lectures and concerts will be a feature of the social life of the club house which Barnard Club members will be able to share. And the new Lounge, high up on the twentieth floor, with a sweeping view of the city, extends its own invitation for frequent visits.

The Lounge is open from 9 A.M. until 11 P.M. Afternoon tea will be served daily from four until six o'clock at a nominal charge, in the tea alcove of the Lounge, and members are urged to stop in with their friends. For amusement at all times, bridge tables are in readiness, plenty of reading matter lies close at hand and a radio will help to while away the moments. For comfort, there is an attractive mezzanine where one may rest and where out of town guests may dress for evening engagements in town. And for convenience, downstairs, the Barbizon dining room which has extended to club members the privilege of signing dinner checks, is open for luncheon and dinner.

The Lounge is available for private use if special arrangement is made. In the past, several Barnard classes have held reunions, bridge parties and teas at the Club. As the Club now has larger quarters and serving facilities of its own, it is hoped that use of the Lounge for such purposes will be encouraged.

This year the Club offers bedrooms for the permanent and transient use of its members and guests. This privilege has also been extended to the alumnae as a whole. Any alumna who comes to New York for a visit, or who is staying in town for the night, is urged to live at the Club. Information regarding rates and reservations may be obtained from the Club secretary.

For those interested in athletics, a special program has been arranged. There is a delightful swimming pool where one may swim during the day or in the evening and there is also a squash court and gymnasium at the disposal of members. Club members receive a special discount on all rates including those for instruction.

Beginning Friday, November 23rd, and every other Friday morning thereafter, a series of lectures on International Relations and Current Events will be presented by Mrs. Marion Gaylord Atwell, Chairman of the International Relations Committee of the New York Federation of Women's Clubs. Tickets may be obtained at the Club office. Tickets for the series of eight lectures are five dollars and single tickets are one dollar. The Barnard Club in conjunction with the Wellesley and other college women's clubs, will also sponsor a series of recitals to be presented at the Barbizon throughout the season. Recitals will be given by Efrem Zimbalist, Joseph Lhevinne and other interesting artists. Subscription and single tickets and information regarding these recitals may be obtained from the Club.

A tea on Thursday, October 18th, formally opened the Club season. The program for the coming year will include the dinner-dance in December, the annual luncheon in February, a fall and a spring bridge party and many other activities. The Barnard College Club was organized for alumnae and is anxious to meet their needs as fully as possible. Call up and find out about it—stop in to see it!

Married Barnard Alumnae

Their Families and Their Careers

By CLARA ELIOT

The coming year, 1929-30, brings due another of the customary five-year censuses of Barnard alumnae. This makes timely a presentation of some of the results of a study recently made of the statistics gathered in the midwinter of 1924-25. The data were analyzed with the special purpose of discovering the status of the married alumnae. Can we throw any new light on the old question of the gainfully occupied wife and mother?

There were 1,132 living married alumnae, of whom 674, or 60 percent, reported no gainful occupation since marriage. A smaller group, 273 or 24 percent, were gainfully employed as of the date of our statistics.* These two groups, designated for brevity unemployed and employed wives, may be compared on several scores.

*The remainder had been occasionally employed since marriage, but were not employed in 1924-25.

As was to be expected, a larger proportion of the employed wives had already been in gainful occupation previous to marriage, the figures being 84 percent for the employed as compared with 59 percent for the unemployed wives. Also quite according to expectation is the fact that 56 percent of the unemployed wives were married before five years after graduation and only 14 percent after ten years, while the corresponding figures for the employed group are 42 percent and 31 percent.†

As to the children born to these college wives, the facts are clear, the interpretation difficult. Of the employed wives, 62 percent were childless, 21 percent had only one child, and less than four percent had as many as three children. For unemployed wives the figures are: 25 percent childless, 31 percent one child, and 20 percent three or more children. From another angle, these same facts can be covered by the statement that the employed wives "averaged" 0.62 child and the unemployed, 1.47 children. Excluding the more recent classes (those from 1911 on), the "per capita" figures are 0.97 child for the employed wives, and 1.82 children for the unemployed. Can our alumnae statistics, now or in the future, furnish any clue to the interpretation of these facts? Are the majority of childless employed wives childless because of the absorbing nature of their occupations or employed because of the emptiness of their homes?

With the hope of throwing some light on this question, the information at hand concerning the employed wives was subjected to a more detailed analysis. The accompanying table shows the occupational distribution of these wives. Teaching claimed 36 percent, secretarial work 14 percent, other occupations had their scattering, and the miscellaneous category included 18 percent. Corresponding figures for the employed living alumnae as a whole are 47 percent teachers, 16 percent secretarial, and 7 percent miscellaneous.

It is interesting to note that there is no significant difference between the proportion of teachers who were mothers (35 out of 85) and the proportion of those in the miscellaneous category who were mothers (18 out of 43). It was thus apparently not motherhood which necessitated the disproportionate number of miscellaneous or unusual employments. Such employments seemed rather to be in some way associated with the husbands' occupations.

For 215 of the employed wives, information is at hand regarding the occupation of the husband. One-third, or 73, were in the business world, 30 in teaching, 28 in engineering, 21 physicians and dentists, 17 lawyers, 13 in journalism or in publishing houses, 4 in religious work and the remainder scattering. As to the part played by the husband's occupation in determining whether the marriage results in children, the apparent smaller fertility of business men (along with the miscellaneous group) is at least partly to be explained by the fact that the more recent graduates marry business men to a larger extent than did the earlier graduates.

A small portion of the data was studied even more intensively, to extract any possible information as to the relation of motherhood and type of occupation, whether part- or full-time. Of the 44 employed wives in the four classes from 1911 to 1914 inclusive, 33 were judged to be holding full-time regular positions. Only 12 of these had children, with 16 the total number of children. Among these mothers were three whose marriages had been terminated by death or separation. Eleven of the 44 wives had occupations which were judged to be part-time or flexible in nature. All of these eleven had children, with 16 again the total number. In only three cases did the part-time occupation seem to deserve the term "career," in the sense of continuity of purpose and interest, whereas in the full-time group there appeared to be much more continuity. Marriage in itself interrupted the gainful occupation of the wife in a larger proportion of cases among the part-time occupied than among the full-time occupied. These generalizations are, of course, highly tentative. They are mentioned here merely as suggesting ways in which the next Barnard alumnae census may yield some highly important information.

In her article "College Wives Who Work" (Journal of the American Association of University Women, June, 1927), Anne Byrd Kenyon reports on nearly four thousand college wives, graduates of New England colleges. Only 12 percent of these were gainfully occupied in comparison with Barnard's 24 percent.

The birth-rate for these New England employed wives was slightly higher than the rate given above for Barnard employed wives though still less than one child per wife.

As to the explanation of the low birth-rate, the present study suggests a number of variables beside the "economic independence" of the wives which would influence the size of the families. Such influences are, the occupation of the husband and probably his earnings, the woman's age at marriage, whether her occupation is of a type which can be carried on as a part-time or flexible employment, the strength of her "vocation," the continuity of her vocation with her training, and so on. The relative importance to be attached to all of these different factors, and the interconnections among them, are matters which invite further exploration.*

*For her hours of labor in editing the record-cards in preparation for this study and for her advice throughout, I am deeply indebted to Miss Doty. Without her assistance, the study could not have been made. C. E.

Barnard's Political Activity

The interest felt by women throughout the nation in the recent presidential election was reflected at Barnard among alumnae and undergraduates.

Among the Barnard graduates active in support of the Republican national ticket, the outstanding figure is Sarah Butler, '15, Vice Chairman of the Republican Party in New York and for a time the acting chairman. Edith Mulhall Achilles, '14, spoke for Hoover in Westchester County and Emily Delafield Peaslee, '22, was an active worker. Emily Marx, '23, ran for Assemblyman in the Ninth Assembly District, New York City, on the Republican ticket. The Columbia Division of the Hoover-Curtis University Committee had eight Barnard members: Mary S. Pullman, '93; Mabel Parsons, '95; Florence Colgate Speranza, '95; Helen St. Clair Mullan, '98; Sara Straus Hess, '00; Helen Rogers Reid, '03; Eleanor Gay Van de Water, '09, and Florence Lowther, '12.

On the Democratic side, Dean Gildersleeve, '99, is the outstanding figure. She spoke for Governor Smith at the meeting in Madison Square Garden, November 3rd. Mildred Blout Goetz, '18, was an active worker at Democratic National Headquarters; Dorothy Kirchner Brown, '10, worked among Democratic women and Dorothy Woolf and Evelyn Smith, both of the class of 1928, campaigned for Smith in New Hampshire.

The minority parties also engaged the attention of Barnard graduates. Among those active in support of the Socialist ticket was Jessie Wallace Hughan, '98, who ran for Congress on that ticket. Juliet Poyntz, '07, ran for Comptroller of New York City on the Communist ticket.

The undergraduates took an unusual interest in the campaign. The Barnard Smith Club under the presidency of Mary Winn and the Hoover Club led by Ruth Von Roeschlaub, conducted a series of stump speeches on the campus and posted cartoons and newspaper clippings in a prominent spot in Students Hall.

Not content with working for the party of their choice on their own campus, Barnard undergraduates appealed to the larger group of college students. Elizabeth Hughes spoke over the radio for Hoover in a program addressed to college students, under the auspices of the National League of Women Voters, and Marion Churchill, Undergraduate President, addressed a group of college students at the Biltmore in favor of the Democratic ticket.

Note: This information is necessarily incomplete. It was hastily collected for this issue of the Bulletin and naturally stresses the work of alumnae in and near New York. The editors will be glad to hear of other alumnae who have been active in the political campaign.

Lord and Taylor Shopping Week

Through the good efforts of the Class of 1903, Barnard College Alumnae received an invitation to hold a Shopping Week at Lord and Taylor to be held early in the Fall for the benefit of the Endowment Fund.

There were obvious advantages in accepting this offer. Smith, Vassar and Wellesley Alumnae Associations had already held such weeks and we were to reap the benefit of their experience. A Shopping Week offered an unequalled opportunity to Barnard graduates, undergraduates and their friends, to show their loyalty by concentrating their fall and winter shopping by "Buying for Barnard." It meant that a liberal percentage, namely 7% of every purchase made, would go to our Endowment Fund. It signified that we had the advantage of purchasing in one of the finest dry good shops in New York City, where quality and variety abound and goods at a wide range of prices are available.

Working under the expert direction of one of the big dry goods executives, Mr. V. Sims, Treasurer of Lord and Taylor, our Committee was organized along the same plan as the Lord and Taylor Executives, with a Board of seven Directors, a Chairman and two assistants and four Division Managers. Each Division Manager in turn directed five sections, each of which was under the supervision of a Section Manager. The latter was in charge of five teams. At the head of each team was a Team Captain responsible to the Section Manager and having under her nine members. Each team member was to get as many shoppers as possible. In September a general letter announcing our plans and methods of procedure was sent out to every alumna of Barnard. Section Managers, Team Captains and Team Members received specific instructions. Attractive booklets explained the purpose and plan of our Shopping Week, specified the merchandise and instructed shoppers how to use their shopping numbers.

Headquarters for the Committee were opened on the tenth floor. Besides the constant and untiring assistance and advice of Mr. Sims, Mr. Van Brocklin in charge of the men's department, and Miss Norris, graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, devoted their entire time to our project and helped us considerably to visualize the whole plan. Daily graphs, itemized daily returns and other complete analyses enabled us to work more efficiently. The final analysis will be of great help for the future. During the Barnard Week the Directors served constantly and unremittingly. Section Managers, Captains and Team Members came into the office daily. A tea was held the first day of the drive for Section Managers and Team Captains.

From the point of view of publicity, Barnard was "sold" as never before by newspaper report, letter, telephone and by word of mouth. On Sunday, October 14th, the New York Times and the Herald Tribune featured our Shopping Week plans. The Sun and World gave the drive good publicity. Many instances came to our attention in which the shoppers who were approached expressed surprise that Barnard needs endowment. It is surprising to note how many people knew little or nothing about our College.

The enthusiasm and interest shown by women graduates of other colleges was most encouraging. The members of the Publicity Committee of the Seven Women's Colleges were most enthusiastic in their cooperation. Vassar women asked to be allowed to buy for Barnard. A Smith woman at Vassar asked one of the Committee to be a shopper for Barnard. Another Smith graduate was a team member. A Bryn Mawr alumna was an effective section manager. Two hundred and twelve dollars were given to the Committee by people interested in Barnard who could not shop.

The Committee has already set to work to incorporate its suggestions for future reference. We feel that our efforts to "Buy for Barnard" and sell Barnard to the New York public have been materially advanced by the Shopping Week and that we have aroused considerable interest in the community.

To the Associate Alumnae we offer a well organized business organization which will be able to function in the future. If we repeat this Shopping Week Barnard Alumnae will know that they are expected to concentrate their shopping annually for the benefit of Barnard. We do not know whether Lord and Taylor will offer us the privilege again but we hope that we may have the opportunity as it was such a valuable experience and every consideration was shown us. The Committee recommends a Shopping Week because it enables every alumna to help Barnard. We hope for a much larger organization, an improved method and even greater interest and better results.

Respectfully submitted,
 ELSA HERZFELD NAUMBURG,
 Chairman, Shopping Week Committee.

NOTE: As we go to press, reports indicate that the Shopping Week will net the Alumnae Endowment Fund almost $6,000. A report of the final amount will be made at Alumnae Luncheon.

The Problem of the Women's Colleges

REPRINTED FROM DEAN GILDERSLEEVE'S
REPORT FOR 1928.

One of the most interesting developments of recent years has been the alliance of seven women's colleges of the East,—Barnard, Bryn Mawr, Mt. Holyoke, Radcliffe, Smith, Vassar, and Wellesley,—for discussion of the financial crisis confronting them and for a joint effort to make their services and their needs better known to the world. Nearly every one tells us that we women's colleges have been in the past singularly incompetent in bringing our work to the notice of the public. The present joint effort for publicity was formally started by the article which appeared in the Atlantic Monthly of November, 1927, entitled "The Question of the Women's Colleges." To follow this up an Alumnae Committee has been appointed, with one representative from each of the seven.

The mere fact that we can cooperate, instead of engaging in "cut throat" competition, has already surprised and favorably impressed the community, and has attracted considerable attention to the whole problem of higher education of women.

The most pressing difficulty that the seven colleges face is how to pay adequate salaries to their professors, so that women students may be taught by scholars of as high quality as those that instruct their brothers. Additional endowment for increasing salaries is what we are appealing for definitely and vigorously. We have worked out a scheme for distributing among the seven any gifts which may be bestowed on us jointly. Possibly no striking results will follow immediately, but we hope, in the long run, for some large donations and especially bequests in wills.

The crisis which has been threatening all seven colleges was suddenly thrust upon Barnard in an acute form this spring, when Columbia University adopted a new salary scale, making material increases in the salaries in all grades of full time teachers. If Barnard was to continue to maintain its scholarly standing on an equality with the rest of the University, and if the morale of our teaching staff was to be preserved, it was obviously essential for us to follow Columbia's example at once. The Trustees met in May, courageously adopted the new schedule, and put it largely into effect for next year. Professors will henceforth receive salaries ranging from $7,500 to $12,000, instead of from $6,000 to $10,000. Associate Professors will receive from $5,000 to $6,000, Assistant Professors $3,600 to $4,500, and Instructors $2,400 to $3,000. The total increases made in May over the budget already adopted for next year amounted to $33,300 and affected forty-eight teaching officers and nine administrative officers.

This great step forward, placing our salaries on a scale which, so far as the writer knows, is higher than any ever before paid at a women's college, will apparently cause a serious deficit for next year. The Barnard Trustees were willing to take this risk because they felt that they must maintain the salaries of the women's college at the same level as the rest of the University, and avoid any danger of deterioration in the quality of the Barnard Faculty, which now contains such distinguished men and women scholars; and also because they were confident that support for the college will ultimately be forthcoming from persons interested in keeping the education of women at as high a standard as the education of men.

After Ten Years

Armistice Day, 1928, with its special observances, calls to mind a day of different character ten years ago. No undergraduate of 1918 will forget the impulsive campus march, Dean Gildersleeve leading, that followed the arrival of the welcome news from across the water, or the months of Canteen, Farm, and bandage rolling that preceded it. We wish it were possible to review here the work of the alumnae units in France and the splendid work of every sort done by Faculty, undergraduates and alumnae overseas and at home. The Columbia publication, "Barnard's War Service," and the December, 1918, Alumnae Bulletin "War Service Number," make absorbing reading. Both are on file in Alumnae Office.

“On the Heights of Morningside”

By GERTRUDE D. TONKONOGY,

Managing Editor, The Barnard Bulletin

We returned to Barnard happily enough this fall until we spied in Barnard Hall, revolving doors in the gymnasium.

After years of revolving doors, trotting in and out of department stores, we have developed an uncontrollable phobia on the subject. Being naturally lacking in courage we find difficulty in making the break for freedom. Once we rode about in a revolving door for three days—forgotten by our friends and family. We were eventually discovered making feeble cries for food and water.

We were finally reconciled when we realized the ludicrousness of revolving doors in a gymnasium. “The New York Times may have its Will Rogers,” we said, “but Barnard has a Comptroller with a sense of humor.” Timidly we began to approach the revolving doors. A senior, observing our wistful stare, showed us how easy it was to “go around” (as it is called). With our first successful trip, we were beside ourself with glee, or would have been if there had been room for more than one in the compartment.

But happiness never endures. “The revolving doors,” announced the Comptroller, “have a purpose.” It seems that they were conceived and executed in order to keep the gym cold and the rest of Barnard Hall warm. We shuddered as we listened to horrible tales of drafts of every degree of malevolence. We hear that one day a careless Greek Games horse left a gymnasium door open and promptly two large-sized professors were wafted away by the tornado created.

“Ultimately,” says the Comptroller, “we intend to have revolving doors at each end of the corridor.” By the very determined look on the Comptroller’s face as he said this, we strongly suspect that he is plotting to keep all New York at the same temperature as Barnard Hall.

As October days grew colder, the political campaign at Barnard waxed hotter. A Smith-for-President Club and a Hoover-for-President Club boomed. Meetings were held. An assembly was held in which an elephant and a donkey, somewhat weak on their legs, led their respective parties to a spirited debate between Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt and Miss Ruth Morgan.

And, finally, Barnard’s budding politicians took to the stump, and, like the presidential candidates, drew unto themselves large crowds, wild cheering, hooting, hissing and stamping. The uninhabited and hitherto uncivilized jungle was turned into a political battleground by the partisan clubs. No longer was it a quiet, open space, where bird and beast flew and scampered, where trees might reach God’s heaven and green grass grow untrammelled. Loud raucous voices, calm and quiet and suave voices, all kinds of voices, harangued on the quality and ability of the country’s two outstanding men today.

On the way to class the unwary Barnard student one day was startled by noises from the jungle. The stump speaking had begun in earnest. First Republican, then Democrat took the stump, said what she wished, handed out literature to the crowds and then hurried to class. Even the birds stopped singing to hear the respective merits of Mr. Hoover and Mr. Smith. Just what effect the campaign will have on the birds has not been determined. The president of the volatile association for Mr. Hoover said that all were deeply impressed by the demonstration.

Among the crowds of listeners which were addressed by the speakers, there was one who was carried away by real emotional fervor. Raphael’s interest, however, it was reported, was not in the presidential elections, but in the grass.

The Greek Games bronze from the foyer of Barnard Hall set forth from Barnard this year and reached as far as Holland, where it settled down fittingly enough for a summer’s stay at the 1928 Olympiads.

Last February Mr. Alexander B. Trowbridge, Director of the American Federation of Arts, asked to have “The Spirit of Greek Games,” the bronze by Chester Beach, which the Class of 1905 presented to the college to commemorate the 25th anniversary of Greek Games, for exhibition at Amsterdam along with other works of art on athletic subjects. The request was granted, and accordingly the bronze was sent abroad, where it was given a prominent position near the entrance to the Municipal Museum.

We are glad to report its safe return.

Notes from Dean Gildersleeve's Office

Since the last issue of the Alumnae Bulletin several important appointments have been announced by the Administration. To succeed Dr. Herbert M. Richards, whose death last January was such a loss to the College, the Trustees have appointed Edmund W. Sinnott, A.B. Harvard 1908, Ph.D. Harvard 1913, as Professor of Botany. Dr. Sinnott comes from the Connecticut Agricultural College where he has been Dean and Professor of Botany and Genetics. He is a scientist of distinction and is also particularly interested in teaching elementary Botany.

During the continued absence of Professor Earle, the College has been fortunate in securing Mr. Allan Nevins as Associate in History to conduct the course in American History. Mr. Nevins has been at Cornell but has come to New York to do editorial work on the World. He is the author of several books on American History.

During the absence on leave of Miss Clara Eliot, her place in the Department of Economics and Social Science is being filled by Arthur R. Burns, Ph.D. London, who has been on the Staff of the London School of Economics.

The new Comptroller of the College is Mr. John J. Swan, a graduate of Cornell University, from which he has the degree of Mechanical Engineer. He has had a long experience in engineering and industrial work. During the war he was in the Engineer Corps of the Army, having held the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel at the time of demobilization.

At a meeting in May the Trustees elected as a new member of the Board Mr. Frederic W. Allen, who is the New York representative of Lee Higginson and Company.

The Summer School for Women Workers in Industry was again conducted at Barnard in the summer of 1928 and was highly successful.

The registration figures for the Winter Session of the current academic year show an increase of 68 in the number of students primarily registered, as compared with last year, and an increase of 32 in the total registration. Approximately the same number of freshmen were admitted as usual, but there was some increase in the number of transfers, of whom an exceptionally large list of excellent candidates applied.

Notices

Alumnae Luncheon

Alumnae Luncheon will be held on Saturday, January 19th, in the Hotel Pennsylvania. The committee promises an interesting speaker.

Alumnae Day

Alumnae Day falls on Tuesday, February 12th.

Greek Games

Greek Games will be held in the Gymnasium, Barnard Hall, on Saturday afternoon, April 13th, at three o'clock.

Only 75 tickets will be available for alumnae. Owing to the increasing number of the alumnae, it has been found necessary to limit the privilege of purchasing tickets to members of the Associate Alumnae only. The subscription price for tickets is $1.50 each, and only one ticket may be purchased by a member. This must be applied for over her own signature, and should be used by the member herself.

Written application, accompanied by remittance (checks payable to Greek Games Committee) and a self-addressed stamped envelope, may be sent to the Alumnae Office, Barnard College, 3009 Broadway, New York, between March 11th and 15th. Applications will be filled in order of receipt. Any received before March 11th will be returned.

Note: There is a possibility that the price of tickets will be increased to $2.00. If the committee so decides, applicants will be notified after March 15th.

A Permanent Barnard Camp

The Board of Directors of the Associate Alumnae has undertaken to raise money for the establishment of a permanent Barnard College Camp, to replace the temporary camps that have been so successful in providing quarters for student and graduate week-end parties in the country. The fund needed to establish the camp is $20,000. To date, about $4,000 has been secured, largely through the generous donations of a few friends interested in the project. To aid in completing the fund there will be an Alumnae Benefit Bridge at College on the evening of Alumnae Day, February 12th, and a Benefit Dance, under the chairmanship of Miss Yvonne Moen, will be held at some date in the Spring.

The following regulations have been made for alumnae use of the present camp:

Charge—$1.00 per person.

Open Week-Ends—As many as five alumnae may go. On February 2 and March 2, open week-ends will be held at Bear Mountain.

Private Week-Ends—If ten undergraduates have made reservations, five alumnae may be invited to join the group.

Further information may be obtained from Miss Holland, Room 207, Barnard Hall.

If larger groups of alumnae wish to arrange for a week-end, they may apply to Miss Nye, 65 West 55th Street.

International Student Fellowship

For several years Barnard undergraduates have been successful in raising funds for an International Student Fellowship. The money is used to send a Barnard student, chosen by the College at large, to a foreign university, and to bring a student from some foreign school to Barnard—each for one year. This year a fund of $2,000 is needed. It would be hard to find an undergraduate undertaking more deserving of alumnae support. Contributions from $1.00 up, may be sent to Alumnae Office.

A Legal Adviser

Frances K. Marlatt '21 has been appointed legal adviser of the Associate Alumnae.

Alumnae Dramatic Group

Last April during the sale of tickets for the Benefit Performance of the Alumnae Dramatic Group, a most generous donation was sent to the Committee from one of the alumnae who was especially interested. She sent a note to say that she thought it would be an excellent idea if the group would produce some original manuscripts by members of the association. The Committee has been anxious to do this all along, so in order to foster the interest we sent out circulars to about 200 people. These included alumnae, and also students who were members of the various playwriting courses at Barnard and Columbia. The response to our circular was most gratifying. We received over twenty manuscripts. Of these, two were very pretentious three act plays, to produce which was far beyond our limited facilities. Two were three act tragedies in which wronged women, illegitimate children, and corpses were too numerous to count. The rest were one act plays. All but three of these were tragedies. Two farces were extremely clever, but would have taxed the ingenuity of David Belasco. There were several tragedies which were excellent. We are going to attempt to produce one on Alumnae Day in February. The other plays had modern men of such serious and masculine character that the committee felt that to cast women in these parts would spoil the manuscript.

For this reason we were compelled to return all the scripts but one, and we have had to postpone our idea of a Benefit contest. We are not discouraged. We simply ask for scripts that will fit the cast which we have at our disposal. We cannot do serious modern male characters except in comedies or farces. Our audience does not care for deep, dark tragedy. The Committee will be more than happy to read and consider any scripts sent at any time by anyone interested in playwriting. When we have three suitable plays in hand we will hold the Benefit and award substantial and suitable prizes to the winners.

Please send all manuscripts to Mrs. Sydney Lewinson, 1 West 70th Street, New York, N. Y.

All plays that we cannot use will be returned to the authors.

We would also be delighted to receive suggestions, advice, or assistance from anyone interested in the Group.

JOAN S. LEWINSON,
Chairman.

STAY YOUNG

Is your youth passing? Does your mentality run in grooves? Has the body become a burden?

To stay young one must return to the physical activity of youthful years. Rid the body of its accumulated poisons. Stretch and make limber the muscles and joints. Give the lungs a little fresh air. Rest the stomach occasionally. Then will the joy, the optimism, and the ambition of youth return. Let the Reilly Service show you the way.
