The College Song.

The Committee on College Songs has accepted the following as one of the songs of Barnard, and is still waiting for more contributions:

"Morningside."
(Tune of Mandalay.)

1.

By the tomb of Grant, the hero, looking southward to the sea,
There's a Barnard girl a-sitting, and I
know she thinks of me,
For the mists lift from the river and the breeze sings far and wide,
"Come ye back to Barnard College, come ye back to Morningside."

Come ye back to Morningside,
Where the Undergrads abide.
Can't you see the trees a-waving
On the shore at Riverside?
On the Heights of Morningside,
Gladly would I conquer pride,
And become again a Freshman
On the Heights of Morningside.

2.

I was then a haughty Senior, in an academic gown;
But her hair was smoothly braided and
her timid eyes cast down,
When I saw her first, a Freshman, on that peaceful old green car,
With a stack of books beside her and her thoughts a-ranging far.

Dictionaries full of Greek,
German verbs both strong and weak,
Such a mass of information
Makes me half afraid to speak,
On the road to Morningside, etc.

3.

When my lectures all were over, and her lesson hours past
She would meet me in the cloister, and we'd wander home at last,
Yes, we sauntered home together through the quiet of the park
And we watched the lights of Jersey gleaming softly through the dark.

Jersey lights a-gleaming bright,
Cross the river at our right,
As we sauntered slowly homeward
Through the early winter night,
On the road to Morningside, etc.

4.

But now that's all past and over, we are scattered far and wide,
And they've got a trolley running up the Heights of Morningside.
And we're learning far from Barnard,
what the old alumna says,
That the years we spend in college bring
the happiest of our days.

Happy days on Morningside,
Where the Undergrads abide, etc.

Will each member of the Barnard chorus
please bring this number of the BULLETIN
with her to rehearsal on Tuesday, March 5th.

Pres. Barnard Chorus.

The Young Woman's Christian Association.

The Christian Association is striving this year to become, more than ever, a vital part of the college life. In order to do this under changed conditions of the college, it was found necessary to broaden its lines of work by a complete revision of the constitution. The committee appointed for this purpose deemed it wise to learn a little of Christian Association work in other colleges, and for the past few weeks has been in correspondence with similar organizations in fifteen other colleges of the United States. Acting upon suggestions thus received, and recognizing the individual problems of Barnard, the committee hopes to submit at the February business meeting of the society a suitable constitution.

Pending the adoption of the new constitution the society has not been idle. Its membership has increased to fifty, and the outlook for more members is promising.

The early part of the term its efforts were mainly devoted to a revival of chapel service at Barnard. Through the active aid of Dean Robinson and the Faculty, and the cordial sympathy and co-operation of the whole student body, chapel service is now, it is hoped, firmly established. The arrangements for its continuance are in the hands of a committee of five, appointed by the president of the Undergraduate Association, on which committee the Christian Association has three representatives.

The Fiske Hall Bible Class, which meets every Tuesday evening for a half hour of earnest study, is proving helpful in many ways, and is open to any student of the college.

Besides the regular monthly meetings, which are devoted to business, two social meetings have already been held. In October, the society had the pleasure of giving the freshmen, as a class, the welcome which, from the beginning of the term, its members of the association had endeavored to extend individually. In December, members of the society met in Fiske Hall for the purpose of making tarlatan stockings. In addition to these stockings, which, filled with candy, were the association's Christmas gift to the settlement on Forty-seventh street, the usual Thanksgiving box was sent to the same place.

At Christmas, members of the association who were especially interested in the work at St. Luke's Hospital, solicited gifts for the children there.

This work at the hospital has been one of the most interesting branches of the work of the association, and any one who did not regard an hour with the children as pure pleasure, would have felt amply repaid had she seen the glance which accompanied one small boy's explanation of one reason why he liked the chaplain, "I like him because he brings such nice ladies to read to us."

Two missionary addresses have been given at Barnard under the auspices of the Christian Association. December 18th, Mrs. Taylor, of the Presbyterian Board of Missions, gave a most interesting review of the problems and possibilities of mission work in China, and added some thrilling and touching details of her own personal experiences. Wednesday, January 9th, the Rev. Edmund J. Lee, Secretary of the Students' Missionary Association, gave an inspiring address on missionary work in general, and the duty of the individual student.

It is purposed to have similar addresses given at the college once a month, to which any and every student will be heartily welcomed.

The Undergraduates as Guests of the Alumnae.

The Barnard Alumnae have planned to hold several informal meetings with the Undergraduates this winter, to discuss the various professions open to women college graduates. The first of these pleasant little affairs was held on Thursday afternoon, the 21st, in the Alumnae Room, and architecture was the subject taken up. Miss Woodruff and Miss Catharine Budd, both women who have succeeded in this profession, spoke. Miss Woodruff explained the courses of study best adapted to fit a woman to fill the requirements demanded of her when she tries to enter some architectural office as draftsman, and also gave some idea of the amount a woman can earn at this, in order to compare it with the returns teaching and like work brings in.

All that Miss Budd said in encouragement of woman architects carried special weight, since she herself is so exceptional an example of success in this line. According to Miss Budd, there are three things essential to the good architect, either man or woman: Common sense, love of the work, and accuracy. The lack of accuracy is the one thing above all others which hampers a woman in architecture, and makes men hesitate to give absolute responsibility to her. In the nature of things, a woman often knows more of the practical working details of a house than a man, and her good taste is not likely to err. With a crayon and a large sheet of paper tacked up on the wall, Miss Budd gave a rough illustration of the way an architect works

BARNARD BULLETIN,
BARNARD COLLEGE,
COLUMBIA UNIV., N. Y.

MONDAY, MARCH 4, 1901.

In the last issue of THE BULLETIN there was a notice that a friend of the college had contributed half of the money necessary to purchase permanent scenery for college plays.

The other half has now been promised by another friend of the college, Mr. Louis Stern.

It is with pleasure that THE BULLETIN expresses for the Undergraduate Association the hearty appreciation and thanks of the student body for the gifts of these two benefactors.

The fact that the Song Committee has already been able to accept a song for the college is joyful news. It shows how our college spirit has grown away from the habit of mere discussion, to that of action.

But let not the publication of the accepted verses deter any one else from sending in her contribution. It will hardly harm us to have two or three college songs, especially as it is possible that not every one will be pleased with the same song.

All further verses and music may still be handed to Miss Hudson, '01; Miss Allen, '02, or Miss Howard, '03.

Now that a match game of basket-ball has been arranged between the girls' team of the University of Syracuse, and the Barnard team, it is found necessary to charge 25 cents' admission for each girl not a member of the club, who comes to a game. The student body does not seem to recognize that such a match game does more to make Barnard popular than almost anything else. Every girls' high school and preparatory school of any prominence has a team, and it is considered a great honor to be one of its members. If Barnard amounts to anything in the games it plays, many girls now in preparatory schools will be attracted to the college. Besides, the team that plays is the representative of Barnard, and as such deserves both the financial and moral support of the student body.

If we play only college teams, as we ought, there will always be large expenses for fares, etc. These expenses would not be so heavily felt if more students would support the Basket-ball Club by becoming members. In other colleges nearly everybody, and surely every one who can afford it, support the athletic association financially.

It may be urged that our team has not done anything this year. This is not true: it has worked as hard as it could, and has accomplished as much as possible when there was no coach to help it.

We are about to receive the Syracuse team at Barnard. The club is only just able to pay its share of the necessary expenses. Yet it is exceedingly anxious to give the visiting team a fairly good time. This ought to be done for the good of Barnard more than for any other reason.

It is therefore necessary that students who are not members of the team should volunteer to do their part, either in services or in money, toward giving our visitors a reception that will make them carry back to Syracuse the pleasantest possible recollections of their visit to Barnard.

Correspondence.

The editors wish to announce that they will gladly publish all signed letters, but that they are in no way responsible for the sentiments expressed.

To the Editors of the BARNARD BULLETIN:

In your issue of February 25th an editorial discusses the question of posting the marks of the examinations, and speaks of two possible systems, one as it is now done here, the other the posting simply of Passed and Failed. Will you allow me to suggest a third possible way? The second plan, that of posting the marks Passed and Failed, seems to me to be little better than the present one, since it does not avoid the chief difficulty, viz., the needless humiliation of those who fail and the discussion of other people's marks. Why should the marks be posted at all, since they concern only the individual student and the college authorities? The plan of sending to each student after the examinations an official card containing in a sealed envelope the marks of the student in all subjects, has been tried, both in Teachers' College and in Wellesley, and meets with the approval of the students.

Those who wish to do so can thus compare their marks; others need not. There is no undesired publicity, yet each student knows just where she stands in each subject. In this way the tendency to work for marks instead of for the benefit to be derived from study is discouraged. The student will be free to put her work upon the subject which pays best, instead of trying to keep her marks a little better than the other girls. Other colleges have dropped this system. Why should Barnard keep it?

ELIZABETH M. CARHART.

To the Editors of the BARNARD BULLETIN.

There seems to be a great deal of hard feeling rife in Columbia about the girls using the swimming tank and gymnasium. The Morningside has published a very terse put article on the subject, which seems to express the general opinion. The Columbia men seem to think it an imposition on the part of the girls to use the gymnasium on two evenings a week, although they do not use it themselves except during the day. I wonder if this is not rather like "the dog in the manger." Barnard is a part of Columbia University, and the girls pay the same tuition as the men, therefore why should they not enjoy the same advantages, especially as in doing so they interfere in no way with the men?

Basket-Ball Games.

The Syracuse Team will come to Barnard on the 15th of March, and the match will be played on the morning of the 16th, in the gymnasium. On account of the heavy expenses of the game it has been decided to charge all girls who are not members of the Basket-Ball Club, 25 cents admission.

Notice.

The Barnard College branch of the College Settlement Association will hold its reception and tea at the Settlement-house, 95 Rivington street, on Saturday afternoon, March 2d. Mr. David Willard will address the guests.

The Department of English wishes to obtain a complete list of Barnard students who are competent and willing to do tutoring in English. Students who wish to do such work are kindly requested to write to Mr. Brewster, stating the amount and the kind of work they desire, the charge per hour for their services, and their address.

We have received the following notice from Columbia:

BARNARD BULLETIN:

I have been requested by the debating Union of Columbia University to state that all students of Barnard College may receive tickets for the Cornell-Columbia debate, to be held at Lenox Lyceum, on March 7th, by direct application to me. All those desiring tickets should write for them immediately.

out his plans, from the time of his client's application—who, as Miss Budd remarked, is sure to tell you that he has been in the habit of making house-plans himself, from childhood up—through to the time when the specifications are drawn up and the contracts with the contractors signed. Miss Budd also gave much pleasure by bringing with her several charming sketches she had made while in Europe.

Tea was served later. Among those present, exclusive of undergraduates, were Mrs. Alfred Meyer, Miss de Burg, Miss Adeline Wheelock, and Miss Perkins.

Columbia University in the City of New York.

Columbia University includes both a college and a university in the strict sense of the word. The college is Columbia College, founded in 1754 as King's College. The university consists of the Faculties of Law, Medicine, Philosophy, Political Science, Pure Science and Applied Science.

The point of contact between the college and university is the senior year of the college, during which year students in the college pursue their studies, with the consent of the college faculty, under one or more of the faculties of the university.

Barnard College, a college for women, is financially, a separate corporation; but educationally, is a part of the system of Columbia University.

Teachers College, a professional school for teachers, is also, financially, a separate corporation; and also educationally, a part of the system of Columbia University.

Each college and school is under the charge of its own faculty, except that the Schools of Mines, Chemistry, Engineering and Architecture are all under the charge of the Faculty of Applied Science.

For the care and advancement of the general interests of the university educational system, as a whole, a Council has been established, which is representative of all the corporations concerned.

I. THE COLLEGES.

Columbia College offers for men a course of four years, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Candidates for admission to the college must be at least fifteen years of age, and pass an examination on prescribed subjects, the particulars concerning which may be found in the annual Circular of Information.

Barnard College, founded in 1889, offers for women a course of four years, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Candidates for admission to the college must be at least fifteen years of age, and pass an examination on prescribed subjects, the particulars concerning which may be found in the annual Circular of Information.

II. THE UNIVERSITY.

In a technical sense, the Faculties of Law, Medicine, Philosophy, Political Science, Pure Science, and Applied Science, taken together constitute the university. These faculties offer advanced courses of study and investigation, respectively, in (a) private or municipal law, (b) medicine, (c) philosophy, philology, and letters, (d) history, economics, and public law (e) mathematics and natural science, and (f) applied science. Courses of study under all of these faculties are open to members of the senior class in Columbia College. Certain courses under the non-professional faculties are open to women who have taken the first degree. These courses lead, through the Bachelor's degree, to the university degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy. The degree of Master of Laws is also conferred for advanced work in law done under the Faculties of Law and Political Science together.

III. THE PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS.

The Faculties of Law, Medicine, and Applied Science, conduct respectively the professional schools of Law, Medicine, Mines, Chemistry, Engineering, and Architecture, to which students are

1. The SCHOOL OF LAW, established in 1858, offers a course of three years, in the principles and practice of private and public law, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

2. The COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, founded in 1807, offers a course of four years, in the principles and practice of medicine and surgery, leading to the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

3. The SCHOOL OF MINES, established in 1864, offers courses of study, each of four years, leading to a professional degree, in mining engineering and in metallurgy.

4. The SCHOOLS OF CHEMISTRY, ENGINEERING, AND ARCHITECTURE, set off from the School of Mines in 1896, offer respectively, courses of study, each of four years, leading to an appropriate professional degree, in analytical and applied chemistry; in civil, sanitary, electrical, and mechanical engineering; and in architecture.

5. TEACHERS' COLLEGE, founded in 1888 and chartered in 1889, was included in the university system in 1898. It offers the following courses of study: (a) graduate courses leading to the higher diploma or to the secondary diploma; (b) professional courses, each of two years, leading to diplomas for teachers and supervisors in kindergartens or elementary schools, or for specialists in Domestic Art, Domestic Science, Fine Arts, and Manual Training; (c) a collegiate course of two years, which, if followed by a two years' professional course, leads to the degree of Bachelor of Science.
