Smith's Collection of Casts.

The Hillyer Art Gallery of Smith College, with its late addition of imported Florentine Renaissance sculpture, is now the best collection of statuary in the country after that in the Boston Art Museum, and that of the Metropolitan Museum. Mr. Hillyer's endowment has also made it possible to increase the already unusually fine collection of paintings representative of American art.

Law at Bryn Mawr.

Through the kindness of Prof. Clarence D. Ashley, dean of the faculty of law of New York University, the department of law at Bryn Mawr College has been enlarged and reorganized. Prof. Ashley, with the assistance of Dr. Frank H. Sommer, professor of law at New York University, will offer a five-hour undergraduate course in law, extending through two years. He will also offer two graduate courses in law.

The Chapel.

The statutes of the University require that each day's academic work begin with a divine service, conducted by the Chaplain. Attendance upon this service is voluntary. All are cordially invited, and those professing and calling themselves Christians are expected occasionally to attend the chapel exercises. These last but fifteen minutes, beginning promptly each morning at 9.10 o'clock, and are held in Room 305, Schermerhorn. The service consists of singing, reading scriptures, and prayers, to which is added a brief address on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. Enough of our professors have consented to make it possible to promise an address from the President, several of the deans, and members of the faculties, each fortnight during this academic year. These addresses will be given on Wednesdays, and due notice of the speaker will be published in the University Bulletin.

Woman's Graduate Club.

All women graduate students, whether members of the club or not, are requested to report at the office of the secretary of the Woman's Graduate Club (Room 203 and 205 West Hall) as soon as possible after registration, in order to file with her a record of the subjects and number of courses taken.

Office hours of the Secretary from Sept. 30 to Oct. 26: Monday to Friday inclusive, 2.30 to 4.30.

After October 26th: Tuesday, 2.30 to 4.30; Saturday, 10 to 12; all other times by appointment.

College Settlement Work.

The College Settlements Association stands for the expression of academic ideals realized in practical form. The university is the inspiration, the settlement the result. The association is composed of the body of college women both student and alumna of our Eastern colleges, and carries on work in three cities—at Denison House, in Boston; 95 Rivington street, in New York, and 433 Christian street, in Philadelphia.

Twelve years ago, in the heart of the most crowded part of our city, a household of college women started the settlement. Their aim was that of mere friendliness, to live with those who toil, and identifying themselves with them, to discover methods of bringing into their lives a knowledge of household economy, the privileges of literature and higher opportunities of life. The attainment of this ideal is still the vital force of every club through which intercourse with our neighbors is immediately possible. Through our kindergarten, sewing classes, cooking school, basket weaving, penny provident bank, library, music school and numerous social and literary clubs, we respond to a few of the manifold demands created by ceaseless labor and defiant conditions. From these surroundings our summer home in Mt. Ivy offers release, where a ten-days' rest gives vigor to sustain many of our overworked friends through months of monotonous labor.

It is often asked how the work is supported, where the workers are found, and why it is of so much importance to the members of our colleges? Being the only movement initiated by college women for philanthropic purposes, conscientiously or unconsciously every graduate and undergraduate shares its responsibility. The dollar and five dollar dues form the basis of our fund, which allows an annual income to each of our houses—New York $2,600, Boston $1,200, Philadelphia $1,200, each settlement depending on its own city for further support. The residents bare the brunt of the work, but opportunity for usefulness offers itself to every sincere friend who comes to help in the library, in our entertainments, clubs and summer work.

The fascination of life in the settlement is known only to those who have experienced it:—the ceaseless hum of the street, all day, all night—the patter, patter of feet upon the pavement, and the eternal inarticulate buzz of human voices. The door of the settlement opens to admit of friends from this din into an atmosphere of good fellowship and cheer. Our parties are those of the society around us, the parties, the betrothals, or perhaps a privileged guest at religious rites as at Passover. But it is in sharing their sorrows, in helping through the dark days of illness and of death when the family is at the mercy of the greedy undertaker who knows how to divert the life insurance that might sustain the mother and children into his own pocket, that deeper meaning reads itself into neighborhood work. And examples of heroic self-sacrifice in lives of those about us teach us to learn true unselfishness from the poor.

The daily routine begins with the kindergarten, the children bringing a penny each day to pay for their summer outing at Mt. Ivy. The afternoon is devoted to the music school, to library and clubs for the boys and girls who hurry to us from school. Dinner is accompanied by eager voices of the back children waiting on the stoop. As soon as they have been sent home our evening clubs for working girls and boys begin. Saturday nights we have our parties. It is not possible to convey the spirit of the house, to tell the influence that this center for social intercourse exerts not only on the fifteen-hundred weekly visitors, but on the friends who help in support. And we therefore urge all who can to visit the house and so to learn from the residents and the children the inspiration of the brotherhood of man.

The Barnard Chapter of the Church Students' Missionary Association was organized here in the early part of 1901 by some of the Episcopalian students of the college. The association has chapters in many other colleges and universities. The object is to further the missionary cause by promoting the study of missions and by trying to contribute to the support of missions. Meetings of the Barnard Chapter are held once a week, at which meetings topics of interest concerning missionary work and the mission field are discussed.

All women students of Columbia University who are interested in church missions are eligible to membership; and it is earnestly requested that all who wish to become members give their names to Miss Margaret E. Clark, president, or Miss Katharine S. Doty, secretary.

A business meeting of the association will be held at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, October 15th, the room to be announced later.

Latin 22.

The work of the course known as Latin 22 will be so far different in the academic year 1901-1902 as to admit of students who have, once satisfactorily pursued the course electing and counting it a second time.

BARNARD BULLETIN,
BARNARD COLLEGE,
COLUMBIA UNIV., N. Y.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1901.

Every student at some time, whether at her entrance into college or during her last year, is confronted with the question whether a liberal education does or does not help a person in his or her material affairs in "getting along" in life. Therefore, at the beginning of the year, it may not be amiss to quote from President Low in his commencement day address. He said in part: "It is the fine characteristic of a man that he is so near akin to the creative energy that to every power which he may acquire from without he can add that unique touch of personality which distinguishes him from every other creature. This, therefore, is the privilege of every one of you—to take the power which has been generated in you by contact with our university life; to irradiate it with the glow of your own spirit, and to let it go out among the world of men, evidently your power, for illumination and for service.

"I like to think that from Columbia College there is going forth a constantly increasing stream of men, and from Barnard College a steadily increasing number of women, who have thought it worth while to spend four years to secure a liberal education.

"One never has the question asked, because it admits of no manner of doubt, whether a liberal education is worth while from the point of view of the man himself, or from the point of view of society. I know of no greater service that the liberally educated people of America can render to our country to-day than to continue to illustrate those fine ideals of plain living and high thinking that have been characteristic of the scholar in all ages. And yet, I do not believe that your college training will injure any of you for a business career, if that be your choice, provided only you have a gift for business and are prepared to meet its exigent demands."

In other words, those of us who have been inclined to think that a college education is useless to us if we are to work for our living in the future, as well as those of us who will not really need four years of college training in the home or society life, we shall lead later on; in fact, all of us who have been at times influenced by the old-fashioned idea that a woman needs no education outside of her home, ought not to forget to ask ourselves whether college is worth while from the point of view of the woman and of society. If the high ideals which President Low speaks of are the possession of the educated person, it is surely a woman's duty to disseminate them, to the full extent of her power, throughout society.

Among the many changes in college this year, none is more keenly felt than the resignation of Miss Metcalf from the office of secretary to the dean. She was so wholly identified with the college in the minds and hearts of the students, that her leaving us this fall is deeply regretted. We feel sure that the best wishes of the student body go with Miss Metcalf.

Woman's Graduate Club.

The secretary of the Woman's Graduate Club, Mrs. Bryson, will be glad to be of any service in her power to the woman graduate students of the University, whether members of the club or not.
Seth Low, LL.D., Pres.

Notice to Seniors.

In view of the difficulties of making programs, the following action has been taken by the Faculty of Teachers' College: Resolved, That seniors of Columbia College and Barnard College who are candidates for the secondary diploma in Teachers' College may omit either the third hour in Education 1 or the whole of Education 8 for the academic year 1901-1902.

A physician's certificate of good health will be required of each student who desires to play.

Special attention is called to the following change in the time-table for 1901-1902: Latin 3, M. W, F. at 11.30, instead of 10.30.

Notice.

It is suggested that persons wishing information regarding competent tutors should call at the offices of the acting secretary of the Committee on Employment for students, Room 213, Library, for such information as the committee may be able to furnish.

Miss Elizabeth Metcalf has resigned her office of secretary to the Dean. Miss Anna E. H. Meyer, formerly assistant secretary, has taken her place. The office of registrar, a new office at Barnard, is being filled by Miss Knox, a graduate of Smith College.

Columbia University in the City of New York

Columbia University includes both a college and a university in the strict sense of the word. The college is Columbia College, founded in 1754 as King's College. The university consists of the Faculties of Law, Medicine, Philosophy, Political Science, Pure Science and Applied Science.

The point of contact between the college and university is the senior year of the college, during which year students in the college pursue their studies, with the consent of the college faculty under one or more of the faculties of the university.

Barnard College, a college for women, is financially, a separate corporation; but educationally, is a part of the system of Columbia University.

Teachers' College, a professional school for teachers, is also, financially, a separate corporation; and also educationally, a part of the system of Columbia University.

Each college and school is under the charge of its own faculty, except that the Schools of Mines, Chemistry, Engineering and Architecture are all under the charge of the Faculty of Applied Science.

For the care and advancement of the general interests of the university educational system, as a whole, a Council has been established, which is representative of all the corporations concerned.

I. THE COLLEGES.

Columbia College offers for men a course of four years, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Candidates for admission to the college must be at least fifteen years of age, and pass an examination on prescribed subjects, the particulars concerning which may be found in the annual Circular of Information.

Barnard College, founded in 1889, offers for women a course of four years, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Candidates for admission to the college must be at least fifteen years of age, and pass an examination on prescribed subjects, the particulars concerning which may be found in the annual Circular of Information.

II. THE UNIVERSITY.

In a technical sense, the Faculties of Law, Medicine, Philosophy, Political Science, Pure Science, and Applied Science, taken together constitute the university. These faculties offer advanced courses of study and investigation, respectively, in (a) private or municipal law, (b) medicine, (c) philosophy, philology, and letters, (d) history, economics, and public law, (e) mathematics and natural science, and (f) applied science. Courses of study under all of these faculties are open to members of the senior class in Columbia College. Certain courses under the non-professional faculties are open to women who have taken the first degree. These courses lead, through the Bachelor's degree, to the university degrees of Master of Arts and Doctor of Philosophy. The degree of Master of Laws is also conferred for advanced work in law done under the Faculties of Law and Political Science together.

III. THE PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS.

The Faculties of Law, Medicine, and Applied Science, conduct respectively the professional schools of Law, Medicine, Mines, Chemistry, Engineering, and Architecture, to which students are admitted as candidates for professional degrees on terms prescribed by the faculties concerned. The faculty of Teachers' College conducts professional courses for teachers, that lead to a diploma of the university.

1. The SCHOOL OF LAW, established in 1858, offers a course of three years, in the principles and practice of private and public law, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

2. The COLLEGE OF PHYSICIANS AND SURGEONS, founded in 1807, offers a course of four years, in the principles and practice of medicine and surgery, leading to the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

3. The SCHOOL OF MINES, established in 1864, offers courses of study, each of four years, leading to a professional degree, in mining engineering and in metallurgy.

4. The SCHOOLS OF CHEMISTRY, ENGINEERING, AND ARCHITECTURE, set off from the School of Mines in 1896, offer respectively, courses of study, each of four years, leading to an appropriate professional degree, in analytical and applied chemistry; in civil, sanitary, electrical, and mechanical engineering; and in architecture.

5. TEACHERS' COLLEGE, founded in 1888 and chartered in 1889, was included in the university system in 1898. It offers the following courses of study: (a) graduate courses leading to the higher diploma or to the secondary diploma; (b) professional courses, each of two years, leading to diplomas for teachers and supervisors in kindergartens or elementary schools, or for specialists in Domestic Art, Domestic Science, Fine Arts, and Manual Training; (c) a collegiate course of two years, which if followed by a two years' professional course, leads to the degree of Bachelor of Science. Certain of its courses may be taken without extra charge by students of the university in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the degrees of Bachelor of Arts, Master of Arts, and Doctor of Philosophy.

SETH LOW, LL.D., President.
