Reception for Women Students at Earl Hall

It has been decided to open Earl Hall to the women students of the University for the first time on Monday evening, March 10th. A reception will be held from 8 to 10 p. m., in the rooms on the lower floor of the building, which are allotted to women students. The presidents of the different organizations which are to use the rooms, and several ladies who have been connected with Earl Hall, are to be asked to receive. An opportunity for inspecting other parts of the building will be given to the guests. All women students of the University are invited to be present. It is earnestly requested that there be as large an attendance as possible, so that there may be shown to the donors of Earl Hall proper appreciation of their gift. As the reception will be in the evening, women students may bring escorts.

Freshman Entertainment

There was a social meeting of the class of 1905 in the theater on February 25th, at 3.30 p. m. The entertainment began with dancing, then followed games in which all took part, and for which a number of prizes had been provided by the entertainment committee. Miss Nye and Miss Scott furnished music.

Miss Goodyear did good work as chairman of the entertainment committee, and was enthusiastically cheered.

Basket Ball Game

A game has been arranged between the Bryn Mawr Alumni and the Barnard 'Varsity team, to take place in the gymnasium on Monday, March 3d, at 4.30. The 'Varsity team will include Miss Talbot, '05, center; Miss Kroeber, '03, and Miss Dorrian, '05, forwards; Miss Alsberg, '02, and Miss Hoffman, '05, guards.

Fiske Hall to Close.

Fiske Hall will not be opened for a summer school session this year. Many women students have made application, and the Hall might have been filled several times over. With the closing of college, in June, work will begin in altering the interior construction of Fiske Hall, which will revert to its original purpose of a science building. It is not yet decided whether the whole building, or merely the top floor, will be used for laboratories and lecture-rooms. At any rate, unless some provisional fund is raised, Barnard seems in danger of not having any dormitory accommodation next year. This, of course, would be a serious drawback to that college life and to the city which is just growing up.

Anandale Convention

Full account of proceedings at the Anandale Convention will be published in the BULLETIN next week.

The Prince's Visit

Because of a change in plan of the Committee on Arrangements for the entertainment of Prince Henry of Prussia, the Prince was unable to visit the University last Wednesday, and classes were held as usual. Negotiations are being carried on for the Prince's visit to Columbia. March 8th, it has been found, will be the only available date, and this is the day of the formal opening of Earl Hall. President Nicholas Murray Butler is at present in Chicago. If, however, on consultation, he considers that the combination of two such important events on the same day should be made, definite plans for the Prince's reception will be pushed forward. In this case, announcements will be bulletined throughout the University.

Southern Club Entertainment

At the entertainment to be given by the Southern Club, on Tuesday afternoon, March 4th, at 4 o'clock, Polk Miller will give selections in negro dialect. All undergraduates are cordially invited to be present.

Chapel Exercises

The Rev. W. M. Grosvenor, D.D., rector of the Church of the Incarnation, at Fifth avenue and Thirty-fifth street, and also trustee of Barnard College, was unable, on account of illness, to conduct chapel last Tuesday. His place was taken by Dean Van Amringe, of Columbia, who spoke of the spiritual opportunities of college life. On Friday, Dr. Maltby led chapel. For the present Dean Gill is taking complete charge of the chapel arrangements. According to the schedule she had made out, the following clergymen will address the college:

- March 4—The Rev. Thomas Hall.
- March 11—The Rev. Dr. Stimson.
- March 18—The Rev. Dr. Judson.
- March 25—Bishop Andrews.
- April 1.—The Rev. Paul van Dyke.
- April 15—The Rev. Dr. Sanders.
- April 22.—The Rev. David H. Greer.

Freshman-Sophomore Debating Society

A regular meeting of the Sophomore-Freshman Debating Society was held on Tuesday afternoon, February 25th. The subject of the debate was, "Resolved, That England's attitude toward the Boers at the beginning of the war was justifiable." Miss Pollak and Miss Seibert, the judges, decided in favor of the negative side.

President Butler at Cornell

On March 1st, President Butler will read a paper at Cornell University on "The Work and Aim of the College Entrance Examination Board."

Victor Hugo Celebration

Commemorative exercises of the one hundredth anniversary of the birth of Victor Hugo took place on Wednesday, February 26th, in the auditorium of the Horace Mann School, under the chairmanship of Henry Van Dyke, D.D., LL.D., Professor in Princeton University. The Columbia seal, bordered on one side by the French, on the other by the American flag, hung over the platform. The platform was occupied by members of the French Department of the University and the guests of honor.

Professor Cohn, before introducing the chairman, read two letters, one from Nicholas Murray Butler, who deeply regretted that engagements of long standing prevented him from attending the celebration. It is of the greatest importance, the president wrote, that the University should thus commemorate great men of letters and leaders of science. The letter closed with an expression of best wishes. The second was in French, from M. Jean Cambon, French Ambassador, who, in expressing his regret at not being present, paid a tribute to the memory of Victor Hugo.

Professor Van Dyke said, in part: "It is fitting that the city representative of liberty all around the world should do honor to the apostle of liberty, Victor Hugo. Here we rejoice to do honor to him. French literature is great in creating ideals and giving inspiration." Professor Van Dyke then read a very beautiful poem of tribute to Victor Hugo, which he had written for the occasion.

Professor Adolph Cohn then read, with much dramatic force, "Ce Siècle Avait Deux Ans," from "Les Feuilles d'Automne," by Victor Hugo.

An address in English by Hamilton W. Mabie, LL.D., followed. Mr. Mabie was introduced as "the editor, the critic, the author of 'The Life of the Spirit,' and the appreciator of Shakespeare." Mr. Mabie first gave the facts of Victor Hugo's life, to show its extraordinary scope. He then went on to show that Victor Hugo's personality was striking and disturbing, and that it was impossible to separate the man from his work, or to estimate each dispassionately. He is one of a class of men such as Voltaire, Carlyle, Ruskin, and Tolstoi, who make sport of critics. He interpreted the spirit of the time with so much emotion that the world follows, and judgment goes to the wind. Victor Hugo is a literary force of the first order in poetry, fiction and drama. He was the most representative man of his time in France, who used literature as a vehicle of expression. He was in the forefront of a man of action. A characteristic vitality, like that of Dickens and Voltaire, and a modicum of energy, drove him through life. He was dominated by an imagination that was opulent, vivid and unrestrained. He dramatized his own

BARNARD BULLETIN,
BARNARD COLLEGE,
COLUMBIA UNIV., N. Y.

MONDAY, MARCH 3, 1902

We published in the last issue of the BULLETIN a letter questioning the justice of excluding Freshmen from the new literary society. The point raised by the writer, that membership in this association should be based solely on individual qualification, is the exact reason that such action has been taken. The founders of the society have no desire to exclude Freshmen, as such; but they find it impossible to judge of a girl's literary ability before she has passed at least one year in college.

This arrangement, manifestly, will not prevent any student from being elected to membership; it will merely put off the time when such an opportunity is accorded to her. Moreover, since the organizers are desirous that the society should be conducted on the highest possible plane, making membership in it an honor, the risk involved in choosing members from an untried Freshman class would not be justifiable.

The name of the society has not yet been decided on. We shall be glad to receive suggestions in regard to this matter from any student.

The following books are missing from the Reading Room. Students who have any of them in their possession are requested to return them:

Notice

Juniors and Seniors who have not received the report of their examinations yet will probably receive them this week.

Dean Russel's Address

A short account of Dean Russel's address in chapel was given in the BULLETIN of last week, yet it seems sufficiently important, not only to those students taking courses in Teachers' College, but to all those who expect to teach, to repeat it in detail. Dean Russel urged that teaching be put on a higher moral and professional basis than merely a convenient occupation for a couple of years. The standard of the teaching profession in this country, he said, was lower and the teacher worse paid because of woman's influence. To the woman who comes into the field, teaching is the first door that opens to her. From every little hamlet there is a college graduate with no particular prospects, who thinking to marry, in a few years, can afford to work for a small salary. Competition is no longer between man and woman—man has been eliminated long ago—it is between woman and woman. Too many college women think of teaching as high-school work. If they were to enter any other field—elementary, kindergarten, music etc.—they would easily find themselves first. There is no reason why all should cluster around an already overcrowded field. The two prominent factors in college work at present are the habit of specialization in some subject, and the idea that secondary school work is higher than elementary work. In teaching, next to the idea of earning money, that of service is the most important. Domestic science, too little appreciated at colleges like Barnard, gives an opportunity to be of the greatest service to mankind. English history, Latin, and perhaps Mathematics, are the subjects that must first be considered in making up the curriculum of a woman's college. The opportunities for genuine service are far greater in other fields. The teacher who has as a motive merely the earning of money without the truly professional spirit had better keep away. It is better to complete the entire undergraduate course, if possible, before taking up the specific work of training. It is absolutely necessary that an earnest student should throw herself wholly into the work.

To the Seniors of this year Dean Russel said that while the secondary field is overcrowded, and applications for such positions should be made as soon as possible, the demands for teachers in the elementary, kindergarten and technical fields are pouring in, and cannot be filled. Confidential letters of recommendation from a friend or teacher of each applicant will be required, to be shown to principals of schools. Professor Trent has been appointed Barnard representative on the committee which is to arrange for these letters.

Next year seven and one-half hours of education will be required. One course, at least, should be taken in the Junior year. Education 10, naturally following Psychology A, must be taken. A special section will be arranged for Barnard students. Education 50 is another required course. The new Teachers' College announcements are now ready.

French Society

A social meeting of La Société Française took place on Monday afternoon, February 23d, at half-past four. The meeting was a small one. Three charades were given, "Silence," "Chaleur," and "Courage." Refreshments were then served.

experiences. His manners and art were foreign to French natures—lacking in the order, proportion, balance and restraint which make French literature so admirably representative of reason in the guise of beauty. There is extravagance, exuberance and lack of order, in Victor Hugo's work. He was an individualist of the most pronounced type. Hernani was a new assertion of the rights of individualism, and showed primary interest in a few simple emotions. He showed a sublime disregard for law; he was a law unto himself. Every French novelist has created his own Paris—we know the Paris of Balzac, Dumas and Daudet. Victor Hugo has given us the Paris of Les Misérables—with high-lights and dense shadows. His characters are alive with human interest and emotion. His passion for life is harmonized in his lyric poetry. He was a creator and initiator. Corneille and Voltaire did not approach him in this. Victor Hugo was an optimist, who lived, loved and thought largely, lovingly and sometimes incoherently.

Professor Cohn then read "Les Pauvres Gens," from "La Légende des Siècles," and "Waterloo," from "L'Expealeon."

Then followed an address in French by Leopold Mabileau, Member Correspondant de l'Institut de France.

The exercises closed with the reading of "Extase," from "Les Orientales," by Professor Cohn.

Changes in Course

Next year both elementary economics and elementary psychology will be made Junior requirements for the first half-term, instead of being given one in each term, as at present. More Sophomores will be encouraged to take these courses. This arrangement will offer a better opportunity to pursue advanced work in these departments. It is expected that this change will greatly broaden the work in both economics and philosophy.

Dr. Tombo's Lecture

Dr. Rudolph Tombo delivered a lecture on "Deutsche Eigennamen" last Wednesday in Havemeyer Hall, in place of the lecture announced to be given by Mr. Heinrich Conried, Director of the Irving Place Theater.

Dr. Tombo said that German proper names were interesting both from the point of view of philosophy and of the history of culture. There were no family names in early German. After a brief survey of the history of names among the Jews, Greeks, and Romans, he stated that the distinctive feature of early proper names in Germany was that they expressed personal character. It often occurred that different suffixes were grafted on a common stem, thus modifying the original meaning. German family names arose in two ways: First, from old personal names, and, second, from the country whence the family came or the trade in which it was engaged.

"Some Chinese Manners and Customs."

These lectures are open to the public; no tickets of admission are required.

Basket Ball Spread

The Freshman Team and members of the Athletic Association who play basket-ball held a spread in the lunch-room, before the game on Saturday. Part of the luncheon was prepared on chafing-dishes borrowed from Fiske Hall. The affair was an unusually enjoyable one.
