OPENING EXERCISES AT COLUMBIA.

The opening exercises of the 150th academic year were held in Earl Hall on Wednesday afternoon, September 20. The exercises opened with a brief religious service, the program of which consisted of a hymn, the Apostles' Creed, a prayer by Dr. Vandewater, reading of the Scriptures, hymn, and prayer by Bishop Potter.

President Butler then delivered a short address. After a few words of welcome to all connected with the University, President Butler spoke of the good fortune that has recently come to Columbia in the following various ways:

South Field has been added to the college, and the last legal formalities attached to its acquisition will be completed on Thursday next.

A dormitory, Hartley Hall, will be erected as soon as a site for the building is decided upon.

A school of Journalism has been established through the generosity of Mr. Pulitzer. A building for this new department, to be erected on Amsterdam avenue, south of Fayerweather Hall, will be ready for use one year from this fall.

The most recent piece of good fortune is that the Trustees of the University have received a gift of $150,000 from donors who desire to remain unknown, this sum to be used for the erection of a University Chapel. A chapel building will be put up on the eastern side of the campus, which will correspond to Earl Hall, in both architecture and location.

After the address by President Butler, Professor Peck delivered an address on "The Impress of the University." Then the President, Deans, and Trustees of the University, followed by a number of students, went to the Library steps, and Daniel C. French's statue, "Alma Mater," presented to the University by Mrs. Robert Golet, was unveiled.

CHAPEL.

The first chapel service of the term was held in the theatre on Friday, September 25, at half past twelve. Dr. William M. Grosvenor a trustee of the college, Dean Gill, and President Butler made short addresses.

President Butler spoke of the development of the University, the circumstances attending its founding, and the particular function of Barnard. "Barnard College," he said, "has its own peculiar work. It is not intended to make experts but to give opportunity for the development of intelligent, refined, and well-equipped womanhood in a modern university atmosphere." Dr. Butler then spoke of the relationship of a student to her Alma Mater as one which can never be broken and of the necessity for a personal as well as an intellectual life in college. In conclusion he said "I welcome you cordially and enthusiastically to the new year's work."

STUDENTS' EXCHANGE.

All students who wish to sell books must take them to the Exchange as soon as possible, for now is the time when the demand is greatest. Students who wish to buy books will find a large number in the Exchange room now. Students of Barnard's "Economics" and one of Johnson's "Theoretical Mechanics" are wanted to sell. Orders for typewriting, especially for the typewriting of theses, will be taken, and girls who wish to do typewriting may leave their names at the Exchange. Any articles which a student may wish to sell will be put on sale, if a sample is left in the Exchange Room. College flags are for sale there now. The hours when the Exchange will be open will be posted from day to day on the bulletin boards.

ATHLETIC NEWS.

Owing to the illness of Professor Wood, the officers of the Athletic Association have been unable to consult him with regard to athletics at Barnard. It is hoped that such a meeting may be held shortly after the first of October. Until regulations can be made, the new tennis courts on West Field may be used indiscriminately by all Barnard students, provided they wear tennis shoes.

Unfortunately, basketball practice must necessarily be delayed a week or two, as new rules are to be arranged.

NEW BOOKS IN THE READING ROOM.

- "History of Philosophy," Weindelband.
- "Introduction to Philosophy," Paulsen.
- "Diogenes Laertius," translation by C. D. Yonge.

SUMMER AT THE COLLEGE SETTLEMENT.

During the summer, work at the settlement has two distinct aspects—the activities in the city and those at Mt. Ivy. At Mt. Ivy, camp life in cabins and tents during this, its second summer, has proved its worth alike to the boys and young men. The smaller boys—twelve at a time—last spent an ideal week of healthy out-door sports under the supervision of an experienced guardian.

The tents, on the other hand, have been the peculiar property of two clubs of young men where they have spent their vacations and Sundays, some of them having taken a course in cooking at the settlement for this purpose during the winter. Of course, the tents have been self-supporting, and the desire on the part of other clubs to own a camp grows, not alone among the boys, but among the girls. One club of girls has volunteered to wait and work two years for the possession of a tent where the members, working girls, may spend their vacations and Sundays.

The house at Mt. Ivy has been as heretofore filled to its utmost. Girls of all ages, from the kindergarteners to mothers, have spent their week or ten days with us. One and all have come again to share with us the yearly inspiration of country life, feeling how all too short it was, yet returning to the city with minds filled with memories of mountain, brook, and meadow, and starlight skies to refresh working hours.

In town, the new aspects of our work were to be found in our gymnasium, opened twice daily—in the morning as the playground for about a hundred children on Orchard Street, in the evening for the boys to play Rugby. After the closing of the public schools our streets are crowded with children for whom the yard at 95 Rivington Street has also been a playground each morning, while at 188 Ludlow Street a kindergarten was made possible by one of our sub-chapters.

To the student of sociology an unusual opportunity is presented during the summer. Then are the settlements less crowded so that one may more easily enter the household, coming at once into that close touch with human needs, the response to which grows ever broader and deeper. And the new resident, with her senior, sighs at the end of the season that the days and weeks have sped too soon.

LOUISE B. LOCKWOOD,
Graduate-Elector.

Y. W. C. A. ENTERTAINMENT.

The Barnard Young Women's Christian Association will entertain the Class of 1907, and all other students who have entered Barnard this fall, on Wednesday, September 30, at 3:30, in Earl Hall. A cordial invitation is extended to all new students.

BARNARD BULLETIN,

BARNARD COLLEGE,

Broadway & 119th Street,

COLUMBIA UNIV., N. Y.

MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 28, 1903.

To many it seems unfortunate that the arrangements of the Athletic Association regarding West Field must be deferred. It is desirable that students know as soon as possible whether the field is to be free ultimately to all undergraduates, to graduates as well, or only to members of the Athletic Association. We urge the adoption of a vigorous policy. The season is short for both basketball and tennis and tennis matches which have hung over during the winter months fail to awaken the interest of the college. Then, too, delay in making basketball regulations prevents the arrangement of outside games in case it is decided that the team shall play with other colleges.

The possibilities for a tennis tournament are greater this year than ever before. With two, perhaps three, courts at our disposal, conflicts in dates should be easily avoided. Furthermore the privacy and the convenient location of the enclosure opposite the college suggest a tournament with both double and single entries and scheduled matches which could be watched from the terrace by a large number of students. Such an event would appeal to a large number of girls who play tennis yet who have not entered the tournaments of other years.

BULLETIN MEETING.

There will be an important meeting of the Board of Editors of the BULLETIN on Wednesday, September 30, at 1 o'clock. Prompt attendance is requested.

CLUBS AND ORGANIZATIONS AT BARNARD.

ADDRESS OF WELCOME TO 1907.

Clara M. Applegate, '04, President of the Undergraduate Association was unable to be at college last Wednesday to deliver the address of welcome to the Freshman class. The address was therefore given by the Vice-President, Charlotte Fountain. Miss Fountain called attention to the regulations of the Self-governing Committee: Students must not go outside the college buildings without hats except to and from West Field; sitting on the stairs is forbidden; there must be no loud talking in the halls during lectures; lunch must be eaten in the lunch rooms.

REGISTRATION.

The registration of undergraduates shows an increase of 35 over the maximum registration of last year. In this number, neither teachers, college students, nor special students are counted. The Freshman Class, 100 in number, is larger by 8 than last year's Freshman Class.

THIS SPACE RESERVED FOR OFFICE HOURS.
