GIFTS FOR COLUMBIA.

Two large gifts were announced by President Butler at the meeting of the Trustees of Columbia University yesterday afternoon. The first was a gift of $60,000. from Horace W. Carpentier of the Class of 1848, for the support of a chair in the Medical School of Columbia University. The gift is in memory of the donor's brother, the late Ruben S. Carpentier, a faithful and zealous physician. The Trustees voted to apply the income of this fund to the support of the chair of Pediatrics (diseases of children), and in recognition of the gift they named the chair, the incumbent of which is Dr. L. Emmett Holt, the Carpentier Professorship of Pediatrics.

The second gift was from an anonymous donor, of an amount sufficient to enable the Trustees to establish a new professorship of philosophy. The exact amount of the gift was not made known. The Trustees voted to appoint to the chair John Dewey, Ph.D., head Professor of the Department of Philosophy in the University of Chicago since its foundation. Professor Dewey is one of the most eminent of English-speaking philosophers, and through his teaching and his published writings has exerted a wide influence. He was born at Burlington, Vt., in 1859, and graduated from the University of Vermont with the degree of A.B. in the Class of 1879. He was a student in Europe and at the Johns Hopkins University, from which latter institution he received the degree of Ph.D. in 1884. Professor Dewey was for a number of years Professor of Philosophy in the University of Michigan, and was called to the University of Chicago when that institution was opened. He is the author of a large number of important and original contributions to philosophical and psychological literature, and is a past president of both the American Philosophical and American Psychological Associations.

The business of the meeting will include the election of the President of the Undergraduate Association for next year, the Treasurer, the Chairman of the Executive Committee, and the Sophomore Member of the Executive Committee. The cast wish to extend their individual and collective thanks to Mr. Conried and his son, to whose kind assistance as coaches the success of the evening was due. In the intermissions the Mandolin Club played several pretty selections and after the performance an impromptu dance took place.

MONDAY, MAY 9, 1904.

The yearly undergraduate play of Barnard stands in a class by itself. The minor dramatic attempts of the season are intended either to promote a feeling of good fellowship or to raise a small sum of money for some charity, but to the undergraduate play alone belongs the motto "Art for Art's Sake."

The acting represents the careful dramatic training of four years and the result is almost a professional finish in detail. "The School for Scandal" makes a worthy addition to our three other successful attempts and serves to increase if possible our already deep-rooted faith in Mr. Sanger's ability as stage director.

Even such a talented man as Mr. Sanger, however, could accomplish little without good material. Lizzette Metcalfe interpreted the character of Sir Peter Teazle with great skill, laying special stress upon his sudden changes of mood. His savage outbursts of temper, which quieted rapidly under the influence of his wife, proved Miss Metcalfe to be a very clever actress. A worthy partner of Sir Peter was his wife Blanche Marks. It is a strange fact that a fascinating heroine is rather rare in college shows. Perhaps because it is easier for a girl to catch the exaggerated phases of a man's character than to develop the subtler phases of her own. Miss Marks, however, did not seem to experience any difficulty in displaying the lights and shades of Lady Teazle's character. She tormented her husband with bewitching coquetry as long as he was in her power, but changed to an attitude of pitiful entreaty as soon as she lost control of the situation. The vivacity and grace of Miss Marks' portrayal was very attractive.

The other two principals were Romola Lyon and Agnes Ernst as Joseph and Charles Surface. Miss Lyon though she had attended only a few rehearsals, and though her rôle was not pleasing, managed to hold the interest of the audience by her clever shifts from moralist to villain. The personal appearance of Miss Ernst was fascinating. Her white satin costume, handsome profile, and jolly laugh brought down the house. Her rôle demanded a sustained and varying good humor which she knew and knew well how to assume.

Around the four principals was grouped a very interesting set of minor actors. Florence Nye's rôle of ward was trying because very empty. There really was no reason for the character except as an object for Charles and Joseph to admire.

Jeanette Wick as Lady Sneerwell, and Florence Beekman as Mrs. Candour were good representatives of the eighteenth century society women who knew how to carry on a graceful though malicious conversation.

One of the best arranged scenes was the reception at Lady Sneerwell's when the guests moved around and talked without allowing any unnecessary pauses. It was here that Alice Smith and Annie Fisher played the affectionate uncle and talented nephew with great spirit. Benjamin Backbite, the nephew, was undeniably good looking and dashing, while Crabtree showed off to very good advantage.

An interesting gesture study was Eileen Markley's rendering of Careless. She appeared only in the scene where, he at Charles' request, auctioned off the family portraits. Miss Markley when excited wrung her hands, clasped them together and at another time rested the rôle she carried upon her lips. It is a question whether such movements are not more characteristic of a girl than of a reckless young blade at a banquet. Lena Miller as Sir Oliver Surface may also come in for a share of this discussion. She was jolly and good tempered, but she could not conceal the fact that she was a young girl much better suited to a feminine part than to that of a crusty old uncle.

Of the stars in the third magnitude, Miss Talbot made Moses the most brilliant though Snake followed very closely. The servants too deserve praise for the promptness of their entrances and exits. It was observance of such minor details that gave the play its vigor.

Compared with the performances of most other colleges "The School for Scandal" was remarkable for its finish which raised it above the ranks of ordinary undergraduate performances.

ASSOCIATE ALUMNAE OF BARNARD COLLEGE.

Instead of the usual reception by the Associate Alumnae to welcome the Senior Class, the Committee have decided upon a buffet luncheon with entertainment following, as an innovation.

The luncheon will be given in the theatre, Brinckerhoff Hall, June 8th, at one o'clock, and will be immediately followed by the entertainment.

To successfully carry out the plans of the Committee the hearty co-operation of the entire Alumnae is absolutely necessary, and a large attendance is earnestly requested.

The subscription has been placed at $1.00, which must be in the hands of the Chairman, (Miss) C. H. Schwed, 63 East 74th Street, no later than May 15th, this giving just enough time to perfect the arrangements.
