TUESDAY'S CHAPEL SERVICE.

The Dean spoke at both chapel services last week on subjects that are of vital interest to the whole College. It is to be regretted that Friday's speech cannot also be given below for the benefit of those who were unable to be present.

COLLEGE LOYALTY.

I have been anxious to speak to you on the subject I have chosen to-day, and have taken this opportunity as the only one I shall have before I go away for a few weeks. It is a subject of great importance to our College welfare, and one on which, I am afraid, there is a good deal of confusion. In some quarters there seems to be a tendency to confuse College loyalty with athletics and noise; but the difference is wide. This conception is as incomplete as for an emotional woman, lying on her comfortable couch and crying over the sorrows of imaginary heroes and heroines, to confuse her emotion with the wholesome sympathy of a woman who goes out to meet her obligations unselfishly, tenderly, conscientiously.

We all know the contrast between "Fourth of July patriotism" and that love of country which causes a man to sacrifice everything willingly for the common good. It is possible that the woman who weeps over her book fulfils her duties to the world also; it is possible that the man who excels in inflammatory orations will be among the first to put his country's need before his own; it is possible that the girl who thinks athletics and noise a large part of College loyalty will realize the deeper side, too.

College loyalty may be all this, but it must be much more. It implies a steadfast confidence that the College stands and strives for something worthy and noble; and this confidence must be expressed by an honest endeavor on the part of all to live up to the standards of our belief. This confidence of which I speak may be difficult of attainment, situated as we are. There is, of necessity, a lack of intimacy between the faculty and the Student body. For this reason you do not always fully understand things. You should feel a confidence, however, that all is working for your good, and should try to cover the uncomprehended with a robe of charity and patience. True loyalty implies a love which culminates in imitation. The ideals of the College should gradually grow to be your ideals, and living in an atmosphere of truth and honest work, you will come to feel that the one is attained through the other. It is thus that the College gives most to you.

But College loyalty means more than this. It means that you should give to the College. You must give of your very best, and so doing the College is bettered. It is the College but a composite of every individualities? It is a composite of every

MRS. SANDERS.

The death of Mrs. Sanders was a great loss to Barnard, despite the fact that her official connection with the College was severed last spring. The following words from one who knew her well will make those who were less fortunate realize how much she meant to Barnard:

Mrs. Sanders became a trustee of Barnard College in 1896, and remained on the board for eight years. Until illness compelled her to give up work, she was an interested and generous friend of the College. These words, which have a prefatory ring because they are so often used without much meaning, are of her literally true. Her interest in Barnard was not an accidental thing, not that shouldering of the burden most persistently, which is the origin of much social work. On the contrary, the aims of Barnard fitted closely with the ideas which governed Mrs. Sanders' life. The training of women to be good citizens was something that appealed to her powerfully, both for the sake of the individuals whose lives are broadened in the process, and for the sake of the State. This serious basis of interest made her a most satisfactory fellow-worker. Her opinions could be counted on because they had roots; once formed, they were stable until new evidence compelled a change. And second only to her seriousness, in making agreeable any labor shared with her, was her unflinching sense of humor. Being fundamentally in earnest, she could afford to touch things lightly. The trouble with many people who are fundamentally earnest is that they are easily irritated by opposition, or are inaccessible to the views of others, or are tedious in setting forth their own. None of these failings of the earnest could be so much as thought of in connection with Mrs. Sanders, because her constant vision of the drollery of things made them impossible. Patient, courteous, readily interested by other people's ideas, shrewd in analyzing and kindly in judging, she was a strong woman yet gentle within, the kind of woman we should all like to see develop in abundance from the girls in whose future her faith was so great.

UNDERGRADUATE ASSOCIATION MEETING.

At a special meeting of the Undergraduate Association, Clairette Armstrong, 1908, was elected to the secretaryship in the Association, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Eva Johnson. Jean Disbrow, 1907, was elected as delegate to accompany Elizabeth Evans to the conference at Bryn Mawr. Resolutions of sympathy on the death of Professor Earl were voted to be sent to his family and to be published in the BULLETIN.

MISSION STUDY.

Dr. Lloyd, Secretary of the Board of Missions of the Episcopal Church, will speak on "Mission Study" on Monday, October 16th, in Room 139.

The Mission Study Classes will begin on Thursday, October 19th. There are to be two of these classes this year; one on "Comparative Religions," led by Alice Draper, '05, in Room 213, the other on "Japan," led by May Parker, '04, in Room 215. The outline of Miss Draper's course is as follows:

Lecture I. Discussion of the Definition of Religion.

Lecture II. The Christian Religion.

Lectures III and IV. Mohammedanism. a. History. b. Teachings concerning God, Sin, Salvation, Future, compared to Christian Religion. c. Moral conditions of Mohammedan countries. d. Condition of Women.

Lectures V and VI. Confucianism. Taken up in same way.

Lectures VII and VIII. Hindooism. Taken up in same way.

Lectures IX and X. Buddhism. Taken up in same way.

Lectures XI and XII. General comparison of the five.

The outline of Miss Parker's course will be posted later in the hall and in the studies.

JUNIORS ENTERTAIN FRESHMEN.

On Friday last, the high morality of Barnard College received a severe shock. Early in the afternoon a crowd of typical race-track people gathered in the theatre and gymnasium to watch the last races of the season. The animals, colts, 2-year-olds and 3-year-olds, were displayed in their stalls in the gymnasium, carefully guarded by their grooms and jockeys. The spectators, having received money wherewith to bet, placed their wagers with the book-makers on the grounds. The races were very exciting and betting was high. The events were a tape-race, a sack-race and a three-legged-race, the winners of which were awarded the blue ribbon. There were side shows and an auction to entertain the Freshmen during the intervals between races.

The committee in charge were Jessie Cooke, Chairman; Katherine Smith, Beatrice Herzfeld, Lottie Oesterlein, Eva Auerbach and Irene Adams.

THE BARNARD BEAR.

The editors of the Bear have not as yet felt the need of hiring secretaries to read manuscripts. There are no manuscripts to read. With all solemnity, the undergraduates are warned that unless the authors at Barnard do not soon produce their masterpieces, the editors will have, either to write all the articles themselves, or to call upon the lecturing Faculty to do it.

MONDAY, OCTOBER 16, 1905.

The Juniors were absent in a body from Chapel last Tuesday. Everyone knows that they were having their pictures taken, which is, of course, a very important event. It seems a pity, though, that a Tuesday should have been chosen. It is seldom enough the College really comes together, and comes together to hear the Dean speak. Aside from that view of it, however, we seem to have a faint remembrance that there was some Undergraduate regulation against it. Has there not been at least a tacit understanding that no meeting which required the attendance of many girls was to be set for the same time as Chapel service? It is not an unreasonable observance of courtesy, it seems, nor does it demand too great a sacrifice from the classes.

College girls as a rule are never accused of a lack of frankness. They generally, in the common opinion, express their thoughts quite definitely and fearlessly. This is perhaps a little general, for we are not always "fearless and frank." In the class studies, however, the above public opinion is probably very near-right. Almost everything of outside of College interest is discussed, and, of course, as one goes from study to study, the conversations differ widely. Now, however, there is usually one subject which is heard mentioned in every study. This subject is the absence of the couches, and it is one over which considerable interest is aroused. They were very dear to the student heart, those couches, and it is only the Seniors who are in any way able to forget their bereavement. Yet there is no particular credit due to the Seniors on this account, for they have a sofa to hold their cushions.

Those last few words probably explain the excitement. College and sofa cushions—one hardly thinks of one without the other. All of us have made sofa cushions for our College friends, and received also tokens of their regard.

All that is popularly considered necessary to make a room look like a College are pictures, banners, a couch, and, par excellence, sofa cushions. Are the studies anything then but locker-rooms without sofa cushions?

The Juniors and Underclass girls can go, as will the Seniors, to the Infirmary, when they are very tired. We are sure they do not want the couches to rest upon. But the question confronts them, what are they to do with their sofa cushions? At present they are piled and crammed into a closet in the Senior Study. It seems such a pity, when the other studies stand bare and cushionless.

It is probable that undergraduates are the only ones in College who can understand this feeling about sofa cushions. But nevertheless it is an honest feeling, and a deep one. The classes want their couches back again—and want them for their sofa cushions.

CORRESPONDENCE.

While we are glad to publish letters signed by their writers, unsigned letters will receive no attention.

We write to the Barnard students to-day to draw their attention to the fact that the College Settlement Chapter of Barnard stands in urgent need of their help and cooperation.

The Settlement movement took its rise in England, under the inspiration of the great social teachings of Ruskin, Kingsley, Thomas Hill, Green and Frederick Demson (1867). To raise the standard of living of the poor among whom they lived; to accentuate the likenesses and to ignore the differences between the social classes; to arouse a sense of civic responsibility, in short, to aid in the solution of the great social and industrial problems which inevitably arise in a great city—to do all this and much more, these men worked.

The idea of a College Settlement, maintained exclusively by college women, was first discussed by Smith College students in 1887. In 1889, at 95 Rivington Street, New York City, a household of College women began their life of service to the poor. It is here that we maintain a kindergarten, a library, a gymnasium, a trained nurse, classes in cooking, sewing, carpentry, clay modeling and drawing, and clubs for boys and girls of all ages. Whether our house at 95 Rivington Street is to grow, depends upon your interest and individual loyalty. For those of you who are going out of College, inspired by the democratic ideals acquired during your four years at Barnard, there can be no greater opportunity than that of social service.

We want to welcome you all to our Settlement. We want you to come down to see the conditions which surround us. But above all we need your help. Come down and tell us what you would like to do. Those of you who cannot do active work can give us at least your share of money support and loyalty.

Full membership, $5.00 annually; partial membership, $1.00 annually.

Let us hope that this year may see new efforts exerted by the Barnard students, and a strengthening of the bond between our house at "95" and the Barnard College Chapter. With very good wishes for a successful year, I am,

Cordially,
ELSA G. HERZFELD.

Pamphlets and reports stating the aims and work of the College Settlement will be distributed very shortly to every student at College.

PROFESSOR COLE, ACTING DEAN.

Beginning with Monday, October 16th, Miss Gill will be absent from College for a few weeks, during which time Professor Cole will be Acting Dean in her place. His office hours will be Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, from 12 to 1.

DEUTSCHER KREIS.

On Monday, October 16th, at 12 o'clock, there is going to be a very important business meeting of the Deutscher Kreis in Room 215, to adopt a new constitution, discuss the German play and vote on new members. A full meeting is of utmost importance.

In the past two years the business meetings of the Deutscher Kreis have been but sparsely attended, and enthusiastic members have had great difficulty in gathering a quorum to decide upon new measures. We urge that this year all members take a lively interest in the club and show this interest by attending the business, as well as the social meetings.

The committee for the Entertainment to the Freshman class is as follows: Edith Somborn, Chairman; Marie Louise Fontaine, Senta Herrmann, Hazel Plate, Alice Haskell, Florence Schlageter, Faith Chipperfield and Mabel Browne, ex-officio.

1908 NOTICE.

There will be an important meeting of the class of 1908 on Monday, October 16, at 12 o'clock in room 339. The report of the play committee is to be read and discussed, and a large attendance is desired. The committee is as follows: Helen Loeb, chairman; Florence Ernst, Marjorie Eastman, Laura Armstrong, Florence Wolff, Dorothea Eltzner, Agnes Miller, and Mary Marshall, ex-officio. Stage manager, Jessie Houston.
