THE NEW YORK COLLEGE SETTLEMENT.

Students who were interested to hear of the new Barnard C. S. A. Fellowship will be glad to read the following account of the settlement:

The New York College Settlement is a large, old-fashioned brick dwelling-house in Rivington street. Its exterior is dignified, and the roomy parlors that are separated by a wide doorway flanked by Corinthian columns and the heavy mahogany doors with German silver mountings, give an air of comfort and repose, which is increased by the window conservatory filled with flowering plants. When the Settlement was first opened, in October 1889, there were many Germans in the neighborhood, and they continue to come to the house, although they have gradually moved to the north, yielding their place to the Russian and Polish Jews who now constitute almost the entire population of this section. The region is practically a foreign town and a very picturesque one it is too. The language of the people is "Yiddish" (or jargon), a corruption of German of the time when the Jews were driven from Germany into Poland and Russia. It has gathered to itself Polish and Russian words as well as Hebrew and is wholly written in Hebrew characters, but is still chiefly German, and when well enunciated is readily understood by anyone who knows something of this language. The type of people is distinctly Russian and Hebrew and one would almost think himself in Russia when meeting the long straight surtouts and high fur cap frequently worn by the elder men. The streets are always filled with push-carts and children, and in the evening or hot weather are almost impassable for the crowds that throng them for freedom and air. Indoors the crowding is just as great and far more harmful. It is not strange that there should be little desire to spend the short leisure hours in rooms where cooking and babies, with the scantiest of furnishings, already leave little space or quiet. The saloon club room is more attractive and wholesome; the streets are a far more desirable meeting-place for the young people. Intellectually these people are distinctly gifted now, as they have been throughout their history. The men and boys especially are usually widely read in history, philosophy, economics and socialism. They have a keen and true appreciation of the fine in literature, especially in poetry and drama, and it is impossible in the small library of the Settlement to meet the demand for Shakespeare.

The Settlement and its overflow, a small house across the street, might well be styled the Club House of the neighborhood. There are three or four clubs meeting each afternoon and evening and they represent wonderfully diversified interests. The systematic sewing classes in two or three years train the girls thoroughly in all forms of sewing. There are classes in grammar, Shakespeare, reading and civ history study, and a room fully equipped for cooking enables us to have several thoroughly organized classes in that art. For those that want less practical occupation there are debating and literary societies, drawing, music and gymnasium classes, relieved by occasional dances and entertainments, to which friends are invited. Each club has a business organization, is directed by one of the residents and pays a monthly fee to the House by way of rent. Three times in the week the Library is open for the taking out of books and the parlors are used for reading and games.

Perhaps the key to the standing of the house lies in its informal social gatherings rather than in the more formal work of clubs and classes. The social opportunities of an overcrowded and overworked population are few, and the freedom and ease of these quiet occasions, with talk, some performance by the children, or dancing and games, are most welcome to the friends and neighbors.

SENIOR TEA PARTY.

The Senior Class gave a tea in their study to the Dean and the women members of the Faculty last Wednesday afternoon. The study looked very festive with lighted candelabras and large bunches of jonquils and marguerites on the long table, which was well filled with a fine supply of sandwiches and cakes. The girls, themselves, who poured and served tea looked gay in pretty white dresses.

The party was well attended. Only about three of the guests failed to appear. All those who did come, however, agreed with the few lucky Sophomores, who were fortunate enough to obtain invitations, that the Senior tea was most successful.

BARNARD UNION.

LITERARY MEETING.

Miss Ida Tarbell will speak at the next literary meeting of the Union, on Wednesday, April 11, at 4 o'clock. Admission will be by ticket.

DEBATING SECTION.

Mary Reardon has been appointed to the chairmanship of the debating section, and will have charge of the section for the rest of the year.

The subject of the debate on March 31 was: Resolved; That physical training should be prescribed throughout the entire college year. The speakers for the affirmative were Helen Carter, '07, and Lillian Hellin, '07; those on the negative were May Ingalls, '09, and Olga Lee, '09. The affirmative side won.

The Senior-Junior debate on municipal ownership has been postponed to Monday, April 9. The college is invited to be present in the Theatre at 3 o'clock. At this debate the judges will announce the names of the girls chosen for the debate with Normal College.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

An important meeting of the Executive Committee will be held on Wednesday, April 4, at 3 o'clock, in the Mortarboard Room.

DORMITORY PLANS.

The Associate Alumnae of Barnard, with the co-operation of the Trustees has completed preliminary arrangements for the opening of a temporary dormitory. The two upper floors of a new apartment house, Marimpol Court, 515 West 122d street, have been leased. This section consists of thirty-three bedrooms, four connecting dining rooms, three living rooms for the use of all residents, mistress's apartments and servants' quarters, making forty-six rooms in all.

The cost of board for the college year, reckoned as thirty-eight weeks, will be $200. The cost of rooms varies, according to size and location, from $150 to $425 for suites.

It is hoped that within a few days the prospectus, giving plans and details, will be ready for distribution. Inasmuch as copies of the prospectus will be mailed to a large number of preparatory schools, without delay, the dormitory committee may expect applications for rooms to come in very soon, and it is hoped that students, in order to get first choice of rooms, will ask for application blanks as soon as possible. The prospectus, when ready, can be had in the office of the Secretary. A set of plans of the apartments will be posted as soon as possible.

The Committee will soon publish a list of subscribers to the dormitory fund.

SILVER BAY COMMITTEE.

The committee for Silver Bay has been appointed as follows: Agnes Miller, '08, chairman; Edna Stitt, '06; Grace Turnbull, '07, and Jennie Wylie, '09. The committee is planning to hold a meeting during the week after Easter in order to interest the college in the Student Conference which is to be held this year from June 22 to July 3. In the meantime, anyone desiring further information of any sort can receive it by applying to a member of the committee.

THE SOPHOMORE TRIUMPH.

At twelve o'clock on Monday, March 26, the Class of 1908 assembled in the gymnasium to witness the mock trial of the Class of 1909. The Freshmen were represented by a green effigy, clothed in a white baby dress and draped in the 1909 banner. The judge, Mary Marshall, called the court to order and proceeded to read the charges: (1) that the Class of 1909 had not assumed the proper spirit [of subordination] towards the Class of 1908; (2) that they had formed a treasonable alliance with the Class of 1907; and (3) that they had presumed to pit their puny powers against the Class of 1908. The prosecuting lawyer, Helen Loeb, next submitted her case, and called as witnesses Nana Moore, Florence Wolff and Ellen O'Gorman. The case for the plaintiff was conducted by Josephine Prah, who called Jessie Houston, Margaret Yates and Dorathea Eltzner as witnesses. The prisoner was asked to speak in her own defence, but remained doggedly silent. The foreman of the jury, Eleanor Hunsdon, brought a verdict of guilty. The prisoner was sentenced to be marched through the college and then hung to the basket ball goal; this was forthwith done. As the Sophomores returned from the hanging, the Freshmen captured three of them, who, it is reported, gave their captors some profitable advice.

DEUTSCHER KREIS MEETING.

On Thursday, March 29, a special meeting of the Deutscher Kreis was held at noon in Room 139. The question before the meeting was whether it was advisable to continue the club. Owing to the lack of interest on the part of members, not only in the business, but also in the social meetings, there was some feeling that it would be wise to discontinue the society. The general opinion, however, was against the dissolution of the club, and accordingly motions were passed intended to arouse greater interest in the doings of the society on the part of the members and the college at large. It was moved, seconded and carried that at the six weekly social meetings to be held in future, short German plays or stories be read by members of the society, in addition to the regular entertainment of the afternoon. It was also decided that two large open meetings per year be held, at which distinguished Germans should be asked to speak. The meeting was then adjourned.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION MEETING.

At a special meeting of the Athletic Association held last Wednesday it was decided to have no Spring tennis tournament hereafter but that the champion of each class should play and have the finals on Field Day. It was also voted to ask the Undergraduate Association to reconsider its plan in regard to the Field Day Committee. The report of the medal committee was read and accepted.

THE UNIVERSITY CHORUS.

The rehearsal of the University Chorus, on April 5, will be held in 608 Mines. After that, the rehearsals will be resumed in Earl Hall.

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 4, 1906.

To-day undergraduate elections are held, and that means that every girl in Barnard should be at the meeting. Once already this week many of the girls have foregone luncheon for the sake of an undergrad. meeting, but that is no reason for being absent to-day. Elections are very important for the welfare of the college, and each girl who has a vote should come to-day and use it advisedly.

Now that the air is beginning to get balmy and the snow is rapidly disappearing from the Quadrangle, our thoughts turn naturally to Field Day, the great event of the Springtime. Field Day is one of the most cherished institutions of the college, and, more than almost any other event of the year, the girls feel that it should be a success. It seems too bad that the poetry involved in the question of the maintenance of a time honored institution should be marred by questions of practical means, but, since blue skies and balmy breezes are not infallible aids to success, the question of a committee must also be considered. The sources from which the choice of committee is to be made is a much mooted question at present. Some maintain that Field Day should be put in the hands of girls chosen from the undergraduate body, while others uphold the right of the Athletic Association to control all athletics.

It is rather difficult to decide which of these claims should have first place, for there is much to be said on both sides. Those who advocate the choice of a committee from the Athletic Association adduce as arguments the fact that all members of the Association are undergraduates, anyway, that most of the girls who have athletic ability are in the Association and should control an athletic event by right of experience, and, finally, that it has always been the custom to put Field Day in the hands of the Association. The other side maintain that the day will have more of the dignity of an undergraduate event if put in the hands of members of the undergraduate body, as such, and that many of the committee will doubtless be drawn from the Athletic Association anyway.

It seems as though a middle course would be advisable. If an Undergraduate Committee were appointed to take charge of the songs and celebration in the theatre, and an Athletic Association Committee to manage the athletic part of the day, both parties would feel that their claims had been recognized, and the proceedings would, doubtless, be conducted to the satisfaction of the whole college.

Although it is only the first part of April, the time is not too early for us to begin considering how we are going to spend our Summer holidays. Some of us, perhaps, have already formed definite plans for the whole Summer, but these can scarcely be, in the majority; and, for those who have as yet no exact ideas on the subject, the Silver Bay committee presents an attractive and feasible scheme. The annual student conference at Silver Bay is to be held this year from June 22 to July 3. As everyone who is acquainted with the Lake George region knows, that point on the lake is one of those most worth seeing on account of its extremely beautiful situation. Last year Barnard sent twenty-six delegates—more than double the previous year's delegation—and it is to be sincerely hoped that our standing in the eyes of other colleges will not go down this year because of any lack of numbers or representative girls. It cannot be too strongly presented to the college that Barnard ought to have the best possible representation that can be had to compare with those from the other colleges that will be there. Moreover, the attractive reports brought back by last year's visitors of the splendid time they all experienced in being together ten days in their own cottage, visiting the wonderful points of interest in the surrounding country, and meeting so many fine people among the leaders of the conference and the students from the various colleges, will undoubtedly lead many girls to consider seriously whether they will not go up to Silver Bay this Summer.

MARCH 30, 1906.

To the Editors of the BULLETIN:

Through the columns of the BULLETIN the Student Council would like to ask the opinions of the general student body on the following question: "Whether or no it would be advisable to limit the number of organizations to which any one girl may belong, and, if so, whether the limitations should apply only to Freshmen?" This is one of the questions which have been brought up for discussion in the Council and which is of so general an interest that it is felt that every student should be given the opportunity to express her opinion in the matter.

It is requested that all communication on this subject be sent to the Student Council before April 11.

Sincerely,
EVANGELINE COLE,
Secretary of Student Council.
