Each day of the Conference one hour will be devoted to the consideration of the technical part of the Association work. Miss Ruth Paxson will have charge of this session and will be assisted by the Student Secretaries, both State and local, in the Eastern territory.

ADDRESS ON SUSAN B. ANTHONY.

On the afternoon of April 3, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt gave a most interesting and spirited address on the life of Susan B. Anthony, in the Chapel of Teachers College. Mrs. Catt first illustrated with striking anecdotes the forced inequality of women to men educationally, economically and publicly, before the nineteenth century. Susan B. Anthony, a Quakeress, born in Rochester, N. Y., near the beginning of the nineteenth century, was the first advocate for the equality of women with men in public. She formed a union of women to aid in the work of temperance, and, though the various conferences bitterly opposed her public speaking, this society was finally publicly recognized. Before the Civil War she strongly opposed slavery, and spoke publicly for that cause in various New York towns, until requested to give it up, as the mobs were so violently opposed to such "unwomanly" actions. After the war, an amendment to the Constitution was made, giving enfranchisement to all persons in the United States. When voting was attempted by the women, however, Miss Anthony was arrested, illegally tried and declared guilty, but not imprisoned. She continued her public career as a lecturer in various courses which came in vogue at that time; this gave her and her colleagues, who were now numerous, many opportunities to further the rights of women. Besides the direct opposition of the men, Miss Anthony had to overcome the indifference of women to the advantages of possessing such rights. She died a week or two ago at the age of 86, universally beloved and respected, both by her former enemies and also by all women, who now realize the extent of their indebtedness to her.

Mrs. Catt closed her excellent review of Miss Anthony's life with a direct appeal to the students to hand down, as a legacy to the coming generation, woman suffrage, and also the good results of the many privileges of our modern educated woman.

MR. STEIN NEW COLUMBIA CHAPLAIN.

The Rev. Alexis Stein, rector of Christ Church, Fitchburg, Mass., has been appointed chaplain of Columbia University in place of Dr. Van de Water, who resigned a year ago.

Mr. Stein was graduated from Columbia in 1891 and from the General Theological Seminary in 1893. He served for several years under the Rev. Dr. Rainsford at St. George's Church in this city, and has been successively rector of Christ Church, Cincinnati, and rector of Christ Church, Fitchburg, Mass. Mr. Stein will enter upon his duties on September 1.—N. Y. Tribune, April 3.

THE CURTIS PRIZE MEDALS.

On Thursday, April 6, at 4 o'clock in Earl Hall the public competition for the Curtis Prize Medals was held. The presiding officer was Professor J. H. Van Amringe, and the judges Professor Brander Matthews, Professor Franklin H. Giddings and Professor George W. Kirchwey. The speakers were Bernard A. Rosenblatt, '07, on "Class Rule in America"; Harold K. Bell, '07, on "The Public Services of Edward M. Stanton"; Pkà Isaka Seme, '06, on "The Regeneration of Africa," and Maurice G. Ellenbogen, '07, on "John Marshall's Influence on the Constitution."

The Curtis Medals two in number, are awarded for excellence in public speaking. They were established in 1902 by a friend and admirer of the late George William Curtis, and are competed for each year by Juniors and Seniors in Columbia College. The regulation requires that the judges should base their award on excellence in substance, literary form, and manner of delivery.

In 1905 the gold medal was awarded to H. L. R. Thomas, '05, and the silver medal to T. F. Clark, '05.

EDITORIAL.

In last week's issue the question of the restriction of a girl's membership in college organizations was broached by the Student Council. It seems to us that any such restriction would be an attempt to remove the mote, while the beam in the eye was left unconsidered. It is not the societies or clubs that make distressing inroads upon a girl's time and strength; at least her expenditure of both is usually optional, for few people consider membership in a society implies any personal responsibility. Therefore we feel that any rules along the lines suggested in the Council's letter would be unnecessary legislation. Where reform and restriction are needed—cryingly urgent, in fact—is in the matter of office-holding. How often do various election returns show the same names. What a familiar sound have the successive reports of committee appointments! And a glance at any Mortarboard will show that, on the whole, a select minority have held most of the offices. Now this is not a proper state of affairs, nor is it as meritable as many people believe. Because these few capable girls hold the offices and serve upon committees does not mean that they are the only ones in college that can fill the positions. It merely means that the other people have never been discovered. It has been our experience that there are many girls—very capable girls—who are not able to discover themselves. In other words they need the force of circumstances to bring out their ability. Now this is what Student Council regulations can do.

There comes a question here that must be answered if the problem is to be solved. How many offices can one girl hold at one time and do justice to them and to her work? We would not presume to decide offhand, but it is not an insoluble proposition. There might be—as there is in other colleges—a division of offices into major and minor. The major offices would be the Undergraduate presidency, class presidencies, chairman of Undergraduate play committee and any office which entailed a great amount of work and responsibility upon the holder thereof. The minor offices would be places upon committees, presidencies of small societies and those positions which demand comparatively little of the girls. Still, following the example of other colleges, there might be then a strict regulation as to the number to be held by any one girl: One major and three minor offices during the course of the year, or two major and one minor. The rules should not be cut and dried—there should be limitation and not prohibition.

There is another question, too, to be considered in this matter. The Student Council has wisely put scholarship requirements on those girls taking part in plays. The argument is that no girl with poor scholarship can give so much time to a play and not have sorry effects show upon her report. Very true. But, may we ask, is this any less true in the case of offices which demand even more time than rehearsals do? What girl whose scholarship does not come up to the standard could possibly fill an office to the satisfaction of those who elected her without detriment to her work? We know the objections that might be raised to such a plan. The college does not want grinds elected, it is stated. But as matters stand the requirements are not too high. A girl who has less than two D's and no F's upon her report is not a grind. She is merely—or ought to be—an average student.

With these restrictions upon elections the college would find, to its surprise, that there are many more possible candidates than had been supposed. The girls of capability but little push will be found out through force of circumstances, and the offices will be more evenly distributed and better filled than when a few girls with a talent for work bear the brunt and responsibility that should be divided among many.

To the Editor of the BULLETIN:

"All true humor contains pathos," said an instructor in my freshman year; and so it certainly seems here at college. For among all the joyous notes that ring, the one supposedly most joyous is the most pathetic of all. I allude to our University Chorus, which enrolls three Barnard girls who are not "getting a point."

Setting aside all ideas of the "aesthetic" and "culture value," is it possible that in a university which boasts of its five thousand members, there are so few who care enough about singing really good music to give that one hour a week to it? Can it be that the exceptional qualities of Prof. Rübner are so little appreciated that, when he devotes two hours a week, one meeting has to adjourn while the other is attended by five sopranos and three tenors? Isn't this a pathetic ending for that glorious chorus of two hundred voices which started so well and gave such excellent concerts last year? And are not they only responsible who have dropped out or never came? Further there are no qualifications to bar anyone who cares to from joining the chorus, and as we are to give a concert and dance this month, the honor and dignity of the University seem to demand that it be well supported.

Very sincerely,

C. H. SCHMIDT, '06.
