COLLEGE SETTLEMENT ASSOCIATION

A very stimulating lecture was given last Thursday on "Probation Work in the Night Courts" by Miss Maude Miner, who is herself a probation officer in the Jefferson Street Night Court. Knowing this, the audience felt that everything Miss Miner said was first hand information, and for this reason her talk was particularly valuable.

Miss Miner first gave a rather brief exposition of the scope of this work. There are from thirty to fifty women brought into the court each night. Of these the greater proportion are not put on probation because their cases are beyond that treatment. Only about eight or nine can be helped in this way. Such girls are given over into the care of Miss Miner by the judge.

Most of these girls are not really criminals. They are girls who have not had a chance in life. The economic stress of New York life, especially in a bad year like this, has been too much for them. Miss Miner told of the case of an innocent girl who had been evicted from her room because she could not pay her rent and was thus forced to walk the streets. Social causes are also powerful in urging girls into the kind of practices which bring them into the night court. There are not sufficient social attractions of the higher sort to keep girls away from the more spectacular fascination of the dance hall and the "nickelodeon."

When the judge hands over the girls to the care of the probation officer, her work is a very difficult one, for each case is different in some respects from the others. The probation officer has a number of means of aiding the girls. One is to send them back to their parents or relatives if they have come from other cities. Of the 250 girls Miss Miner has helped since her work began in August last, 35 have been sent home. A second means of helping the girls is to find immediate work for them. This is often very difficult, for many of them have learnt no trade. While the attempt is being made to place the girls somewhere, they remain in a temporary home near the court.

Miss Miner's talk was, however, something more than a mere exposition of this kind of work. It touched of something bigger than this one individual movement. It was full of a noble optimism. There are many hardened women, she says, who do not appreciate the work being done for them, but there are some who are unfortunate and misguided but who can be and are being helped. Such an address, giving as it does real facts of sociological progress, cannot but be inspiring to all those hoping for the general social betterment.

THE UNDERGRADUATE PLAY

As there were over sixty candidates for parts in the "Taming of the Shrew" at the trials on Saturday afternoon, February 15th, he coach and the committee were unable to come to any conclusion in selecting the cast. Owing to the fact that the department President Council set apart last year for the performances of the Undergraduate Play in Lent, the committee wished to change the date to April 24 and 25, but the Society of Columbia having an option on the theatre for those days, the play will have to be given May 1 and 2.

BASKETBALL

The Barnard Freshmen were defeated by the Horace Mann team by a score of 10-6 in the Thompson Gymnasium on Saturday, February 15. The line-up was as follows:

Horace Mann	Barnard
Janet Brown... Forward..	Ethel Leveridge
Mary Wegener.....	Frances Randolph
Elsa Pickhardt.. Center..	Lillian
Cornelia Meder.....	Vera
Stephanie Mayer.. Guard..	Molly Conroy
Constance Hart.....	Ann Well

In the second half Aurill Bishop substituted for Vera Fueslein and Marian Oberndorfer for Molly Conroy. Mary Wegener made all the baskets for Horace Mann, two from the field and one from the goal line in each half. She played the best game of her side and kept her guard very busy. Frances Randolph played an unusually plucky game, making two field and one goal. Ethel Leveridge made another goal in the second half. Everyone who saw the game declared that Barnard had had much hard luck, because the ball had an impish way of promising to go into the basket but only circling around the hoop and falling down again. The guarding on the part of the Freshmen was not so good as usual, and there was no improvement in fouling and fumbling.

ALUMNAE COMMITTEE

A committee representing the various alumnae interests in the college life has been appointed to consider ways for furthering these individual lines of work while more closely co-ordinating all of them.

This committee, of which Mrs. F. G. Bryson, '04, is chairman, consists of Mabel Parsons, '05, as chairman of the Students' Aid Committee; Elsa G. Heigfeld, '03, alumnae elector of the College Settlements Association; Mrs. J. E. Frame, '04, representing the Y. W. C. A.; Edith B. Handy, '05, from the Undergraduate Athletics Committee; Helen W. Cooley, '05, as an alumna member of the College Athletic Association, and Alice Haskell, '06, representing the Barnard Union.

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 19, 1908.

It is a great pity that the experiment of allowing unlimited cuts to all upper classmen has failed, because the withdrawal of this privilege indicates an abuse of the liberty granted. Sadly enough such an abuse is quite in-line with much of the students' conduct here at Barnard. Coming from preparatory schools where they have been under strict supervision, the girls seem to revel in the new-found freedom from control and lose their equilibrium. Take, for example, the matter of conversing in class. The newcomers are delighted to find that they are not called to account for a whispered inquiry or request, and immediately show their gratitude by holding long conversations. They find that they are not called upon to "sit up straight" and therefore lounge and sprawl. They are not lectured or "kept in" for talking or laughing in the halls, so they forthwith about to emphasize their appreciation of freedom.

To say of college girls that they are too analytical, too hypercritical, is to use a stock phrase. Yet, of what are they so very critical? Not themselves, we feel confident in stating. However, why not use some of our analytical ability in figuring out what we ourselves are. We are very rude and very narrow-minded. We talk glibly about training, culture; we hear and say much about correlating our studies and applying the knowledge we gain in one field to other fields. What about correlating the different parts of our lives? With what theory would we conflict if we showed that we had learned to appreciate the best in all things? That is what we hope to get out of college, isn't it?—the ability to judge values somewhat. We urge the girls to estimate for themselves the value of conduct,—consider what it means, reflect how great a majority of people never know more about us than our conduct, weigh its value and compare with it the doubtful joys of rudeness. Show that you prize your freedom by guarding it.

Y. W. C. A.

On Monday, February 10, the regular Y. W. C. A. tea at Earl Hall was converted into a special occasion for welcoming the new Freshmen. Old students and new turned out in good numbers and a very pleasant and jolly reception was held.

There will be three Mission Study Classes this term. One on China for Freshmen will be held by Miss Merritt. Another class on India will be led by Mabel Browne, '06. The times for these two classes will be arranged later. The third course will be a lecture course on philanthropic work in the city, with the following meetings and speakers:

March 2, at 4 P. M.

Prof. Edward Thomas Devine.

"The Charity Organization Society and Other Philanthropic Agencies."

This is given in co-operation with the College Settlement Association.

March 9, at 3 P. M.

Rev. Robert B. Kimber.

"What is being done to help the unfortunate people of your city." (Work on Randall's Island, etc.)

March 16, at 3 P. M.

Rev. Antonio Mangano.

"The Italian Emigrant in Italy and America."

March 23, at 3 P. M.

Miss Edith Hamilton White,

"The Challenge of the City." (Day Nurseries, Fresh Air, Sewing Classes.)

March 30, at 3 P. M.

"Christian Association Work in Factories."

These lectures will all be held at Barnard, and the room will be announced later. After all but the first, tea will be served for the speaker and audience in Earl Hall.

PROFESSOR WILSON'S LECTURE

The New York Society of the Archaeological Institute of America announces that Professor Harry L. Wilson of the Johns Hopkins University will lecture before the society on Thursday, February 20, at 4:30 P. M., in room 301, Fayerweather Hall, Columbia University, the subject of the address being, "Recent Archaeological Progress in Rome." The lecture will be illustrated.

All Barnard students interested in the subject are invited to attend.

Sec. 5. After every election or appointment the secretary of class or society in which the election or appointment took place shall notify the secretary of the Undergraduate Association of the results. This system will go into effect with the spring elections.

The chairman of the Undergraduate Play Committee raised some discussion by announcing that there are to be four performances of "The Taming of the Shrew," instead of three as heretofore. The report was finally accepted as originally read.

At the end of the meeting the president urged the undergraduates to maintain better order in the halls during class hours, as there have been several complaints from the faculty.

SOCIETE FRANCAISE

On Wednesday afternoon, February 12, a joint social meeting of "La Société Française de Barnard" and "La Société Française de Columbia" was held in Brinckerhoff Theatre.

For a short half hour Professor Bargy addressed the members of the Sociétés. The talk consisted of a reading of Molière's comedy "L'Ecole des Femmes," with explanations and comments. Professor Bargy spoke so well and so distinctly that the interest of his audience never lagged,—Molière's witticisms were understood, well appreciated and well applauded. Refreshments were then served and a short cotillion followed. The favors for the girls were blue, white and red hats, and for the men the "beret" or French student cap. Then the "Marsch-laise" was sung and with a cheer for Columbia and Barnard the party broke up.

The attendance was unusually large and general good spirits prevailed.

THE STUDENTS' EXCHANGE

As there has lately been some misinterpretation of the policy of the Students' Exchange, it has been requested that its place in the College be explained once more.

The Exchange is run for the benefit of the College. The chairman and the committee in charge are entirely public-spirited in their work and receive no remuneration except the "reward of virtue." The running expenses are paid by the sale of a few staple articles like note-paper, pads, pencils, which are bought at wholesale price and sold at the same or a lesser price than that charged by the University Book Store. These articles the Exchange keeps on sale for the convenience of the girls here at Barnard, not for the sake of a commission.

The articles like candy, neckwear, fancy work, that are brought to the Exchange by Barnard students are sold entirely for the benefit of these students. The Exchange takes no per cent. off from the selling price for its own use. If a package of candy sells for ten cents, the student who made the candy gets the ten cents.

In case of loss the Exchange shares with the girl,—each taking half the loss.

SCHOLARSHIP NOTICE
