"MONSIEUR BEAUCAIRE."

1910 has added two new leaves to Barnard's dramatic laurels—an excellent hero and a charming heroine capable of some good emotional acting. No matter what one may say about the play, or the amateurish qualities of some of the scenes, one must admit that the leading characters left little to be desired.

The criticism is legitimate that the play "Monsieur Beaucaire," was a poor choice for a Junior Show, the object of which is as is the common understanding, to make money. It is a long elaborate play, exacting many beautiful costumes and various changes of scenery, which the committee provided without stint. As the New York dailies have expended so much of their precious printer's ink on the glories of these scenes and satins no further time need be spent on the subject. But apart from its scenic demands, the play requires much talent to cover its defects; it is lacking in depth of plot and quickness of action and it presents scenes that need careful handling, rarely to be found in amateurs. It is full of situations that only skillful actors can keep from becoming melodramatic.

However, the committee chose the play—so let us see what the actors made of it. Decidedly a success. The ease with which the principals handled the difficulties presented by three long somewhat emotional love scenes, a cheat at cards and a duel is not to be denied. From his first entrance to his last triumph, through scene upon scene of trying changes in his identity and earnest pleading of his love in broken accent Beaucaire held his own. The finesse of Lilian Egleston's interpretation brought out clearly the gentleness of his humor, the subtleness of his sarcasm, and the depth of his manliness. In spite of the difficulties of a cold with which she had to struggle she persistently and consistently kept her voice in a low pitch and quite a good hold on her accent. That she was able to command the respect of a somewhat flip-pant and occasionally discourteous audience through various long, "speechy" love scenes is only another proof of her ability.

But a great part of the success of these scenes must be credited to Mary Nammack, who was able to make a very human sympathetic woman out of a character that could easily be presented as a wooden image. She was as consistent and thorough in her interpretation as Lilian Egleston in hers; not for a moment did she lose sight of the dignity and pride of a woman who had been courted all her life and whose better, womanly traits have been smothered by a coldness and a haughtiness she has acquired in self-defense against her persistent admirers, and the eyes and

REPORT OF MT. HOLYOKE CONVENTION.

The two delegates, the president of the Undergraduate Association and Junior president, who were sent to the Intercollegiate Student Government Association Convention, bring back very interesting reports from Mt. Holyoke. They seem to have been particularly impressed by the cordial and hearty welcome which the students of that college gave to the twenty odd delegates. Each delegate was assigned to the special care of a Senior, and the hostesses did their very best to make their visitors feel at home. They met them at the station and escorted them to the college dormitories, where they gave up their rooms to them, in some mysterious fashion arranging it so that each girl had a room to herself. Although the occasion of the meeting was not for social purposes, there were several gatherings which were of a decidedly festive nature. On Friday evening the members of the music department entertained them with a concert, and on Saturday evening the President and members of the Faculty gave the delegates a reception. Sunday morning many of the delegates attended the regular academic chapel services.

There were two business meetings. One, which was an open meeting, at which all the students could be present, was held on Saturday morning. Here the Senior delegate from each college gave a report in which she described the progress that self-government had made in her alma mater. It was very interesting to compare the different methods and results, and to see how the same principles, differently applied, worked out in colleges so variously situated. The other meeting was a closed one, held on Saturday afternoon. Here the various representatives brought up for discussion the problems which seemed of especially vital importance at their respective colleges. Our delegates specially mentioned the newly introduced point system, and also tried to get information about results where the honor system had been introduced. In several places the method has been adopted, with very excellent results. At both the meetings, Miss Osborn, president of the association at Mt. Holyoke, and by virtue thereof of the entire league, presided.

As had been decided in our last Undergraduate Association meeting an invitation was extended to the association to hold the convention here next year. Unfortunately, however, the invitation was declined, as Cornell University had put in its application several weeks ago and had it accepted.

Y. W. C. A. RECEPTION.

On Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 18th, the Graduate Advisory Committee of the Y. W. C. A. gave a tea in Brinkerhoff Theatre, to the Trustees and Faculty, and to the alumnae and undergraduate members of the Y. W. C. A. Lily Murray, Mrs. Merrett, Miss Maltby, Winifred Barrows and Mrs. Whitman, in the receiving line met the guests at the door. During the first part of the afternoon Julia Goldberg played selections on the piano, and Mrs. Osborne sang a solo. This was followed by informal addresses from Laura Parker, Mrs. Merrett and Mrs. Whitman.

Miss Parker, in the name of the committee, thanked those present for their interest, and introduced—though, as she said, it was hardly necessary—Mrs. Merrett. Mrs. Merrett laid emphasis on her desire to have the Freshmen more interested in the work of the association than heretofore. She wished that they would come more regularly to the Bible classes and she asked them to remember that not only do they need the association but the association needs them, as from the Freshman class must come the real life and strength of the association. Mrs. Merrett finished by introducing Mrs. Malcolm Whitman, an alumna and trustee of Barnard.

At first Mrs. Whitman spoke particularly to the undergraduates concerning the association and the marked increase in its influence and work since she graduated. Then she made a strong appeal to the alumnae and trustees for added help and interest. The association, she said, needs their help in two particular lines. First, Barnard needs experienced teachers for the Bible classes, teachers who can present a scientific study of the Bible. The time at which a girl through the study of philosophy and science, is forced to think out for herself, her religious beliefs is a critical one and teachers are needed who can carry her safely through. Training is needed for such a task and money is needed to secure such teachers. The undergraduates alone cannot afford such an expense, and must turn to the trustees and alumnae for help. Secondly, money and advice is needed in sending girls to Silver Bay and other intercollegiate conferences.

Among the Faculty present were: Prof. Brewster, Dr. Braun, Mr. Porterfield, Mr.

BASKETBALL

The basketball schedule for the 'Varsity team has been arranged for the year as follows:

Barnard vs. Teachers' College December 8, January 12, and February 25; from five to six o'clock. Barnard vs. Horace Mann December 12, January 9, and February 13; from eleven to twelve o'clock.

The team has not yet been definitely chosen, but the squad is greater than ever before and the material very promising. For this reason it is hoped that the Varsity team will be unusually good this year. The committee, consisting of Herlinda Smithers, '00, chairman; Adelaide Smithers '09; Ethel Leveridge, '11; Marie Wegener, '12, and Hazel Woodhull, '10, ex-officio has submitted to Student Council the schedule for the class games and it will be published in the BULLETIN as soon as the council passes judgment on it. All the games will be played off before the middle of March. Since the dates are being published so far ahead of time, there should be a large number at every game, to cheer the teams by their presence and support.

SPECIAL CLASS MEETING 1911

The Sophomore class held a special meeting on Friday, November 30, to discuss the point system that had been suggested at the last meeting. Two different systems were spoken of. Then Miss Heiden suggested that instead of a regular point system being established a clause should be added to the constitution that no girl should be chairman of more than one committee, or member of more than two. After considerable discussion it was moved and seconded that this suggestion be considered by the class until the next regular meeting. On motion the meeting adjourned.

Surtevant, Mr. Gardner, Miss Hubbard and Miss Dederer. Mrs. Talcott and Mrs. Whitman represented the trustees. Many of the alumnae too, were present.

Special credit for the success of the entertainment should be given to Ruth Hardy and Lee Alexander, who took charge of all arrangements for refreshments, and also to Laura Parker and Mrs. Merrett.

THE DEUTSCHER KREIS.

The Deutscher Kreis gave their opening entertainment to the Freshmen Monday afternoon, in Briuckerhoff Theatre, and the majority of the class were present. The chief pastime was a cotillon and after the figures were finished, German songs were sung. Afterward, refreshments were served and dancing followed. Mrs. Haskell and Dr. Braun of the German Department were present to represent the Faculty.

LAYING OF CORNERSTONE OF UNION.

On Tuesday November 17, the cornerstone of the new building of Union Theological Seminary, on 120th Street, was laid. The procession of students, Faculty and Directors of the seminary started from Horace Mann and marched across the street to the platform erected under a tent. After a prayer by the Rev. William R. Richards, an address was given by Rev. Dr. George William Knox, professor of the History of Philosophy and Religion. The cornerstone was then formally laid by Dr. John Crosby Brown, president of the Board of Directors. After the singing of the hymn, "God the Lord a King Remaineth," the Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Hastings pronounced the benediction.
