Rep Assembly Votes Down Proposed PC Amendment

A proposed amendment to the Undergraduate constitution, namely: That there shall be thirteen members instead of twelve on Student Council, adding the name of the Chairman of Political Council to those already represented, was defeated by a vote of twenty-four to eleven at Rep Assembly last Monday. Two members abstained from voting.

P. C. View

Beverly Beck Fuchs, Chairman of P.C. for the past year, in making the proposal that P.C. be given a seat on Student Council, stated that the organization represents a very important aspect of school life and thus merited a seat on Student Council. She supported her view mentioning the functions of P.C., which through its town meeting activity, deals with all important internal affairs of the college, and which through its coordination of five major clubs on campus, the organization reaches approximately 250 different students.

Functions

These functions, continued Mrs. Fuchs, serve to give P.C. an important rôle in campus life. She felt, therefore, that a seat on Student Council would give P.C. its rightful place in school life and would add a great deal to the Council, as the P.C. Chairman could aid in coordinating speeches and assemblies.

Marilyn Schulhof, a member of A.A. and P.C., supported Mrs. Fuchs' views, declaring that P.C. fills a definite need in student life and is certainly more important than A.A. which is also represented on Student Council.

Opposition

Carol Leni led the opposition to the amendment. Quoting from the P.C. constitution, she stressed the fact that P.C. is to act in a political and educational capacity, but that it is not a part of student government. Political Council, claimed Miss Leni, is not as representative as the groups now on Student Council, of which class presidents represent 250-300 students each, Bulletin and the Undergraduate Association, the whole student body, and the Residence Halls president represents 300 girls. "Why, then," asked Miss Leni, "should P.C., which coordinates the activity of so few students through its forums and club programs, be given a seat on the Council?"

Carolyn Kimmelfield, Chairman of Political Council, favored Mrs. Fuchs' proposal in stating that since politics has become a very important element in campus life, P.C. is now worthy of representation. A seat on Student Council, Miss Kimmelfield felt, would enable P.C. to perform its functions of town meetings and campus election publicity more adequately.

CU Lengthens Academic Year

Next year's Academic Calendar will include five additional school days. According to Mr. Thomas Hayden, Secretary of the University, the reason for this change is that the New York State Regents Board has increased the number of school days required of candidates for certain professional degrees.

The additional five days have not lengthened the school year, but exam periods have been shortened at midyear and at final time from an eleven day allowance to a nine day period. In this way four extra days have been included in the school year. The fifth school day has been added by eliminating George Washington's Birthday from the roster of official University holidays.

French Award Winner Named

Maude Hopkinson '49 was selected as winner of the French Club scholarship, for which funds were raised through the French Club play and the forthcoming Spring Dance. Alternate for the award is Sylvia Caides '49, and the runners up are Maria Fazia and Lucille Frackman, both '49.

Miss Hopkinson, present vice-president of the Club, will spend this summer in France. She leaves July 30 on the Ile de France. Members of La Societé Française drew up the original scholarship slate. They presented it to a committee consisting of four faculty members and Simone Dreyfus, president of the Club, who made the final decision in regard to the scholarship winner.

Spring Dance

The French Clubs of Barnard College, Columbia College and the School of General Studies are sponsoring the college Spring Dance this Saturday, April 30, from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the gymnasium, in Barnard Hall. "Betina," who specializes in imitations of well known singers, will entertain. Jean Sablon, currently appearing at the "Versailles" night club will be the guest of the evening.

The dance is semi-formal, stag, or drag. Admission is $1.20 per person. Decorations will represent a sidewalk cafe in the Quartier Latin. Proceeds will go to the scholarship fund.

Step Singers Rehearse Now

Weekly rehearsals are being held in preparation for the traditional Step Singing, which is a part of the Class Night ceremony to be held on May 31, in the gym at 8 p.m.

Class Members

Fifty outstanding members of each class were chosen to take part, together with all the senior class Honor Guards, chosen from the sophomore class will hand out roses to the seniors as they pass down the aisle.

Ceremony

The ceremony will begin by the singing of the Processional, then each class will sing their respective verse of "You Can Tell." Original songs composed for the occasion, will follow. The seniors will sing the traditional Sunset Song. The classes will then rotate, each class taking the position held by the previous class, while the senior class leaves after which each class will sing their respective new verse of "You Can Tell," followed by the Cheer of '49. The ceremony will end with the singing of "Sans Souci."

New CUSC Ruling Permits Free Choice of Speakers

The Columbia University Student Council, at a meeting held last Friday, April 22, adopted a new ruling which permits a recognized student campus organization to invite any speaker it wishes. This, in effect, reverses the stand taken by the Council in its refusal to permit Gus Hall, one of the eleven Communists on trial for conspiracy to advocate the overthrow of the United States government, to address the Marxist Society on March 28.

Bill of Rights

CUSC supported the N.S.A. student bill of rights in the adoption of this new policy. The formal resolution states that any recognized student organization has the right to invite and hear any speaker of its choice on any subject of its choice. An invitation by a recognized group is the only qualification for speaking. The resolution also stipulates that the fact that an individual speaks at the College does not necessarily mean that Columbia University "in any way indorses his views" or even that the organization involved does. In view of this resolution the Marxist Society has reapplied for permission to hear an address by Gus Hall.

PC Seeks Students to Aid In Special District Election

There will be a sign up poster on Jake this Thursday for all students interested in doing volunteer work for the various parties in the coming special election which will take place on May 17. The election is being held to fill the seat in the 20th District vacated by Sol Bloom's death. Thus far the candidates for the position are Franklin Delano Roosevelt Jr., running with the endorsement of the Liberal Party; Dr. Annette Rubenstein who has the support of the American Labor Party, and Judge Benjamin Shalleck who has the Democratic nomination. The Republican party has not yet endorsed any candidate. Political Council will make arrangements for interested students to work at the various election headquarters, and to canvass for the different candidates.

Campaign

In addition to these plans Political Council is launching a campaign to arouse general student interest in the election. Each political club will set up a booth on Jake for their candidate, and the P.C. booth will post a map indicating the exact area of the 20th District as an aid to eligible student voters. Any resident of the district who registered for the Presidential election may vote.

A forum on health insurance will be sponsored by P.C. on May 5 from 4-6 p.m. at which time speakers from the various political parties will be present. Tea will be served.

Organize New Poetry Group

A new university wide organization to be called the Poetry Society of Columbia University has been approved by the Columbia University Student Council. It will begin functioning this fall.

The organization will include twelve active members who will be chosen on the basis of the quality of the work which they submit. Mark Van Doren, Leonora Speyer, and Babette Deutch are some of the noted poets who will judge the merit of the contributions. Anyone who is interested may become an associate member.

Aims

The aim of the organization is threefold in that it wishes to help those interested in writing poetry improve their work, as well as help those who are ready to have their work published, and finally to give interested students an opportunity to meet leading artists in the field of poetry.

All Barnard students wishing to join the organization should contact J. A. Fusca, poetry editor of Quarto, at 801 Business.

Plan Revision Of Dorm Rules

Revision of the Residence Halls rule book was discussed at an open meeting of resident students last Monday. Any changes will have to receive approval of the halls' Executive Committee, the house staff and the College administration. Revision of rules is considered each Spring.

An Executive Committee proposal concerned tightening of sign-out procedures at night, so that the whereabouts of students would be known whenever possible. Another suggestion would end the present requirement that a staff member be on desk duty throughout the evening.

Permissions

Elimination of 12:30 evening permissions was proposed to simplify sign-out procedure. Freshman and probationary students, it was suggested, might be allowed to substitute two overnight permissions for the one weekend per month allowed them. A floor proposal for 2:30 a.m. permissions was not accepted.

If the suggested revisions are approved, they will become effective next fall, when Mrs. Harold E. Dean becomes Director of the Residence Halls.

Scholarships

The Dean has announced that students who failed to file applications for scholarships and grants-in-aids at the proper time, will be given an opportunity to make late application this month. The blanks may be secured at the Dean's Office as of this date, and they should be returned there on or before May 20.

Colleges Meet At Mt. Holyoke

Mary Jean Huntington '50, president of the Undergraduate Association, and Eleanor Holland '50, Honor Board Chairman will represent Barnard at the Seven College Conference to be held this week-end, April 29 to May 1, at Mt. Holyoke College in South Hadley, Massachusetts.

Colleges Attending

The seven women's colleges who will send delegates are Bryn Mawr, Vassar, Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Barnard, Radcliffe, and Wellesley. The purpose of the conference is to discuss common problems of student government.

Agenda

This year the agenda includes discussion on the rôle of student government, how it can best serve the college, methods of bringing student and faculty closer together and the relation of student government to college administration. The effectiveness of the curriculum committee, and the electoral system are also scheduled to be discussed.

Campus organizations and their work are the second main topic on the agenda. Financing and budgets, the sale of magazines and tickets, control by student government of extra-curricular activities and the chartering and rechartering of organizations are other issues.

Student Problems

The other problems that face student government officers such as polling, the place of a psychiatrist and chaplains on the campus, cuts and scholarships are among the other items that the students will discuss.

Barnard Delegates

Barnard's delegates were elected by Representative Assembly to represent the undergraduate student body. In the past suggestions made at the conferences have been applied to the problems of Barnard's student government by the delegates who attended.

Plan Senior Week Events

A time schedule of senior dates has been drawn up by the Senior Week committee. Two required meetings will be held on Friday, May 27, the first at 9 a.m., a commencement rehearsal and another at 3 p.m., Class Night rehearsal which will include step singing and class play. The rehearsals will be in the gym. Other required meetings will be held Monday, May 30 at 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. for the same purposes.

Seniors are reminded to invite guests to attend the Baccalaureate Service, Ivy Ceremony and Baccalaureate Tea on May 29. The Senior Week Committee also requests seniors to bring flowers to decorate Hewitt Hall for the Senior Banquet and Brooks Lawn for the Baccalaureate Tea. Seniors should contact either Margaret Ward or June Billings for donations.

Weekend Watchword

This is a new service. Buletin thought it might be useful if we reported what was going on about town each weekend. We plan to report what tickets are available for the theatre; what concerts, art exhibits and college productions are being presented during the weekend following our Thursday issue. Please contact us and tell us what you think of this new service.

Theatre

Columbia Book Store Ticket Service now has tickets for Madwoman of Chaillot (1948-49 Critics Award for best foreign play), Anne of the Thousand Days, for Saturday matinee. For Friday night there's a varied assortment including Hamlet, Edward, My Son, and Life With Mother. Saturday night has a much wider choice with Madwoman again, Ballet Theatre, Private Lives, Two Blind Mice and Traitor as highlights. Book store also has tickets for the Sigmund Romberg concert Sunday evening at Carnegie Hall.

Book store tickets range from $1.80 to $3.00 with a twenty-five cent service fee. When we asked about South Pacific and Death of a Salesman they announced July and August tickets in the same price range and for 1949!

In addition to all these, Medea is coming back this weekend for a two week run at City Center. Take your binoculars and ear-phones but go if you have not seen it.

Video

You won't need binoculars for the TV production of Macbeth this Sunday night, channel 4 at 9 p.m. Joyce Redman (now doing a superb job in Anne of the Thousand Days and Walter Hampden (himself) head the cast. Don't miss it.

Music and Dance

Columbia campus is offering both music and dance programs this weekend. The Columbia University Choir is presenting a concert at 5:15 tomorrow afternoon in St. Paul's Chapel. For those who are interested in the dance, a folkdance festival is being held tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Barnard Gym. At 8:30 the same evening, the Juilliard Orchestra, Dean Dixon conducting, will perform

Myra Koh, New Editor Explains Focus' Policy

Focus will act more as an outlet for creative talents next year although, as a monthly supplement to Bulletin, it will still carry news stories, according to newly elected editor, Myra Koh. Short stories, poetry, term papers, and expository and critical analysis on current subjects of interest to a cross section of the college students will again be solicited from the college. News stories will be written by members of the staff, however.

Despite the editorial cooperation of Bulletin and Focus staffs, Focus will continue to be a completely self-sufficient publication financially, Miss Koh stated. To cut out engraving costs. Focus editorial staff will switch to offset lithography, a process by which all advertisements and pictures are photographed. This will mean more photographs and more ads in the future.

Students interested in obtaining positions on the literary and business staffs, and the junior editorial board are asked by the Focus staff to sign up on the poster on Jake.

Cornelia (Victoria Ann Boothby) emotes while Emily (Alis Wrench) discusses the situation with the Steward (Irving Dobbs).

Gay Wigs and Cues Production Features Youth, Men, Confusion

The boards at Brinckerhoff Theater vibrated last Friday and Saturday nights at the performances of Our Hearts Were Young and Gay, given by Wigs and Cues and seven Columbia students. Fortunately the stage version did not lose a bit of the gaiety of the book. Rather, it highlighted the most humorous incidents on board ship and in a French hotel. Even the audience caught the enthusiasm of the players as they romped through the acts of confusion and faux pas encountered and created by two—"jeune filles" on their first trip to Paris.

Authenticity

Authenticity was added to the production by the direction of co-author Emily Kimbrough, assisted by student director Virginia Schleussner. The book, written by Miss Kimbrough and Cornelia Otis Skinner was adapted for the stage by Jean Kerr.

Alis Wrench, as Emily, and Victoria Ann Boothby, as Cornelia, deserve special credit for their sustained and sympathetic portrayal of the two highly confused young ladies. Theater-goers may have to attend innumerable stage productions before again witnessing anything as ludicrous as Cornelia, marked by measles and attempting to pass a ship's health inspector, or as hilarious as the fumigation of an infested hotel room.

Supporting Rôles

In supporting rôles, Harold Smith was a convincing, bellowing Otis Skinner and Lynn Bellamy, as Mrs. Skinner, was as doting and worrying as a mother usually is. Scenes on shipboard were considerably embellished by two hearty English girls, played by Sally Lewis and Nancy Price, who were funny if not authentic. As the love interests of Emily and Cornelia, respectively, Dayton Ball was a convincingly sarcastic Dick Winters and Robert Spence was more than equal to the part of easy-going Leo McEvoy.

Laurels go to Irving Dobbs of Columbia who was a window cleaner in the Paris scenes and the Steward on the ship. Others deserving mention were Elizabeth Hanna, the French landlady, and Ellen Klopfer as the maid. Chris Jaffe was quite French in his portrayal of Monsieur de la Croix, the great French actor and "opportunist." Completing the cast were Henry Kovic, Frank Lee, and Juliana Davidow, who appeared on ship-board.

The set was a simple one, well executed to serve for both the ship cabin and room in a Paris boarding house. (The walls were painted pea-green).

Innovation

Our Hearts Were Young and Gay is notable as the first attempt of Wigs and Cues in recent years to do an entirely different kind of play from the traditional Restoration or Shakespearian drama. Also noteworthy is the fact that men were used to play the male parts, another experimental innovation.

Spring Theory Propounded

By Leah Krechevsky

At this time of year almost everybody believes in free cuts. So universal is the belief that it has come to the attention of the sociology department, and a leading Barnard sociology major (name withheld to insure safety to her family) has made a thorough study of its causes and results. From her research she has derived the Sunny Day Theory.

According to the Sunny Day Theory the number of cuts varies directly with the amount of sunshine during the day, as the sunshine increases the cuts increase and as the sunshine decreases the cuts decrease.

Other Conditions

Other conditions, such as the temperature, velocity of the wind and the rainfall also influence the amount of cuts. Since there is very rarely any sunshine when it rains, we may, for all general purposes, dispense with the last factor. Assuming that the more sunshine there is, the higher the temperature will be and that the Spring season has mild winds, the Sunny Day Theory more fully states: the number of cuts varies directly with the amount of sunshine and temperature and varies indirectly with the velocity of the wind.

Statistics show that for every degree of temperature on a sunny day of mild wind velocity, one per cent of the students stay out of class (consult your Blue Book). This means that on a sunny day of seventy degrees, with mild winds, only thirty per cent of the students attend class! The situation grows more serious as summer approaches, warns the author of the theory.

Solution

She thinks the only solution to the problem of Sunny Day cuts is to hold classes out of doors. This, of course, would require a great deal of outdoor space that is not available. She feels, therefore, that the object of the Development Plan should not be to build new buildings for classroom study, but to buy fields of grass and clover.

Letter Storage Issue

To the Editor:

In reply to the letter in the Bulletin of April 25, regarding the summer storage problem in the Residence Halls, we wish to advise that arrangements for storage in a warehouse have been investigated. We were informed that a student committee was selected over a week ago who would represent the students in working out arrangements with Miss Condit but to date no one has contacted either of us. The information obtained on cost contracts, etc., therefore has not been circulated.

Although students will have to be individually responsible for their own property, we will give all assistance possible if there are any serious personal difficulties. I should be glad to have those individuals come to me.

FRANCES MAISCH,
Superintendent of Buildings and Grounds.

Pledge Question

To the Editor:

The financial situation of the college and its undergraduate organizations has seemed to cause much concern among the student body throughout the past year. It may be unjust to assume that this is superficial interest, but these same students have in many instances failed to fulfill the pledges and subscriptions incurred. Dance committees, publication staff members and class officers have become sceptical of the dependability of Barnard students as a result of the number of defaults on signature pledges.

It should be remembered that the repeated notices, often ignored, sent to remind students of their obligations are written by fellow students, carrying full time academic schedules. If such notices are disregarded, imposition is made on these students who provide the extra-curricular activities of the college.

The 1950 Mortarboard based its budget within the signed pledges it holds. If unredeemed, these pledges will form the deficit which has become characteristic of all Barnard College student activities.

Fuchs to Speak On Broadcast

Beverly Beck Fuchs will appear on the Nancy Craig radio program WJZ on May 6 at 12:35 to 1:30 p.m. in answer to a recent Ladies' Home Journal article written by Dorothy Swenson. Mrs. Fuchs will oppose the writer's adamant view that college graduates, if unable to obtain employment, should accept resident domestic service.

Miss Swenson in her article included several substantial arguments for domestic occupation, and to strengthen her stand, will appear on the program with her maid, a college graduate. Mrs. Fuchs has been selected to speak by the Public Relations Office in the belief that she, as a housewife, is best fitted to represent the college girl's point of view.

Prof. Holland Announces Leadership Course at Camp

Annual Course Offers Education, Recreation and Relaxation to All

Blue jeans and plaid shirts predominate at barbecue at Barnard Camp where June leadership course will be given June 2 to 10.

The sixteenth annual June course in camp leadership training will be held at Barnard College Camp from June 2 to 9 under the direction of Miss Corinne Bize. The purpose of the course is to provide an opportunity to study and plan the general management of the camp.

Recreation

Besides this experience in training for leadership, the camp provides a laboratory for camp craft, nature study, hiking and other recreational activities. All these are designed to contribute towards a richer and more abundant living and service to the community.

In view of the fact that many students seek employment during the summer months and are anxious to begin early in June the course may be given for five days only. The fee for one week is $15 and $11 for five days. Those students that are interested are urged to submit their application in writing to Miss Corinne Bize, 204 Barnard Hall, on or before May 15.

The Barnard Camp Committee urges everyone to attend the traditional Co-Ed Barbecue to be held this Sunday. This is the final event at Barnard Camp before the camp leadership course begins.

A wide variety of photographs and snapshots taken by Barnard students are being displayed at the Photography Show in 206 Brooks. The show, arranged according to subject matter, depicts various ways different photographers treat identical subject matter. The panel showing "Barnard in the Snow" contains many photographs of the recent storm, with different focal points, foregrounds and background.

Among the more unusual photographs displayed are Anneke Baan's and Martha Howe's pictures of Europe, Emily Klein's photos of different parts of the United States, and two large sailboat studies by Gloria Wyeth.

in the Juilliard Concert Hall. If it's opera you're after, you can hear Gian Carlo Menotti's two American operas, The Old Maid and the Thief and The Medium, at the City Center on Saturday evening. Both of them come across the footlights with all the dramatic impact that the composer puts into his scores. The lesser-known Salmaggi Opera at the Brooklyn Academy of Music is presenting Aida on the same night.

If national music is your interest, both Welsh and Jewish song groups are appearing this weekend. Friday night, the Welsh Singers will be at Carl Fisher Hall. Saturday night, the Jewish People's Philharmonic Choral Society can be heard at Town Hall.

Publishers, Teachers Defeat Proposal To Attend French Conference Here

A conference to discuss methods and objectives of language teaching will be held here this weekend when Barnard plays host to textbook publishers and over 100 teachers of French. The conference will open at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday with speeches by René de Messieres, cultural counsellor to the French Embassy, and Professor Frederic G. Hoffherr, executive officer of the Barnard French Department.

Panel Discussions

At panel discussions which will begin at 1:30 p.m., the educators will discuss methods of teaching students to understand French more readily and to speak and write it more accurately. The problem of acquainting students with France and her culture will also be considered. In connection with these discussions of more effective ways to teach a language, audio-visual aids and text-books will be analyzed. The student view will be represented in round-table discussions by a group of selected students of French. At the concluding session the educators will outline methods for carrying out their plans.
