

12 Colleges Attend PC Conference

Discuss Germany's World Political Role

"Germany: Its Role in World Politics" will be the topic under discussion at Political Council's annual conference this Saturday. All sessions beginning with the plenary at 9:30 a.m. in the College Parlor are open to students.

Professor Franz Neumann, of the Columbia Department of Public Law and Government, will deliver the keynote address at the plenary session in the morning. At 11 a.m. three panels will be formed for student discussion: The panels and their chairmen will be: "Germany in United Europe" with Professor Hajo Holborn of Yale; "American Foreign Policy in Germany" with Mr. Shepard Stone of the Ford Foundation; and "German Unification and the Cold War" with Professor Herbert Marcus of Harvard.

Plenary Session

The afternoon plenary session, from 3:45 to 5:30, will be presided over by a board of experts, including the keynote and panel speakers. Dr. Helge Pross, Commonwealth Fellow at Columbia, Mr. Joachim Jaenicke, Second Secretary of the German Mission to the United States, and M. Henri Ruffin, Counselor to the French Embassy, will join in the session discussion.

Forty-five delegates from the following schools will attend the conference: Brooklyn, Fordham, Hunter, Mount Holyoke, New Jersey College for Women, Pembroke, University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Sarah Lawrence, Smith, West Point, and Vassar.

Barnard Delegates

Barnard delegates will be Natalie Roslav '55, Marcia MacNaughton '56, and Marion Bachrach '57. Judy Scherer '54, is President of Political Council, and Marion Toman '55, is Chairman of the Conference.

W & C Offers Chekov Drama

Wigs and Cues has chosen "Don Juan in the Russian Manner" by Anton Chekov as the first play to be presented in the new Minor Latham Drama Workshop. Performances are scheduled for the evenings of April 22, 23 and 24. Matinees may also be held.

Casting for "Don Juan in the Russian Manner," which began on Tuesday, will continue until Friday. The cast will consist of 13 men and 5 women, and the production will be directed by Adolphus J. Sweet, Instructor in English. Students interested in working on sets, costumes, lighting and other phases of the production, have been asked to contact Liane Reif '56 through Student Mail.

"Don Juan in the Russian Manner," which was Chekov's first play, and which is considered most comic of his full length plays, has never before been presented in England or America, and possibly was never done in Russia either. It may soon appear on the British stage, but this will be its debut in the United States.

Book Co-op Reopens, Features New Set-up

The Student Book Co-op which facilitates student buying and selling of used textbooks was re-opened in February on a trial basis. It is situated at the entrance of the James Room and is open daily, Monday through Friday, from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

The Co-op is managed by Charlotte Monastersky '55 and Margaret Prince '54. The present system under which it is run provides for a salaried staff. Since the spring semester usually necessitates the change of fewer books, the Co-op is not operating at its full capacity but it still offers an opportunity for great savings to Barnard students.

Last spring, a committee of administrative officers and faculty members was formed to revive the Co-op which had closed over a year before. The members were Mr. Forrest Abbot, Comptroller of the College, Mrs. Eileen Winkopp, Director of Public Relations, Miss Jean Palmer, General Secretary of the College, and Clara Eliot, assistant professor of economics. Student members are soon to be nominated to this committee by Representative Assembly since the Co-op most directly concerns the student body.

The Barnard Book Co-op was begun in 1943 when sophomore members of the Economics 1-2 class organized a club under the direction of Professor Clara Eliot in order to study the effects of cooperation. A book exchange was already in existence in Barnard at the time. These two organizations merged to form the Co-op, a voluntarily staffed organization which offered books to students on a non-profit basis. Students, however, were reluctant to work without receiving a salary. Another difficulty was that students had to wait for their books to be sold before receiving their money. The Co-op was closed in 1952 due to this lack of student patronage and voluntary help.

Several important issues are now on the agenda of the Co-op Committee. There is a possibility that the Co-op will become a College-operated store with a revolving fund set up to begin the policy of immediate payments for used books. The book exchange may also be run on a profit basis with the proceeds being contributed to the Scholarship Fund. Other goods, such as Barnard banners, sneakers, gym suits, and perhaps used books not needed as textbooks, might be added to the Co-op's inventory. The sale of zoology laboratory kits has already been instituted.

Barnard and NBC Workshop Offers Radio-TV Courses

Barnard College and the National Broadcasting Company are again sponsoring the Summer Institute of Radio and Television, which will present a program of study beginning June 28 and ending August 6.

The courses, taught by NBC staff members, are planned to provide professional training for men and women interested in commercial or educational radio and television.

Each student enrolls in four courses. "Your Television Career" and "Technical Operations Orientation" are required. Two electives may be chosen from the following: "Writing for Television," "Television Directing and Producing," "The Techniques of Announcing on Radio and Television," and "Film Production for Television."

Admission to the Institute is open to both men and women who are college graduates, or high school graduates with previous experience in either of the media. Enrollment is limited to forty students. No academic credit will be given for the courses, however, those who successfully complete the work will receive a certificate from Barnard and the National Broadcasting Company. The tuition fee is $150.

Dillenberger Speaks At Thursday Meeting

Professor John Dillenberger will address the Thursday Noon Meeting today on "The New Spirituality: Liability or Asset?" The meeting will take place in the College Parlor, and will be followed by a box lunch. Professor Dillenberger is an Associate Professor of Religion at Columbia University, offering courses open to Barnard students.

finding living accommodations. Women may inquire for rooms at Brooks and Hewitt Halls. Several rooms for men are available in the Columbia residence halls.

Application blanks for the Barnard-NBC Institute may be obtained from Miss Ruth Houghton in 112 Milbank. They are due before June 1. The application must be accompanied by a $15 registration fee which will be credited toward tuition and a 200 word letter explaining why the candidate wishes to enroll in the summer session.

Barnard Student Studies Museum Bicentennial Display

Marian Beckman '57 inspects a model of Barnard Camp, and pictures of various Barnard College athletic activities on display in an exhibition held at the Museum of the City of New York at 103 Street and Fifth Avenue, in honor of Columbia's Bicentennial. The model is on display until March 13 along with various relics of Barnard's past.

McIntosh Reports On College Status

Program Features More Scholarships, Improved Health Plan, Higher Salaries

President Millicent C. McIntosh, in the annual State of the College address, heralded the end of an era and the beginning of a new one during which Barnard will work on such projects as more scholarships and higher pay for the faculty. Mrs. McIntosh also told the student body assembled in the gymnasium Tuesday of a new

Rep Assembly Votes in Favor Of Amendment

Four amendments to the undergraduate constitution dealing with the election and function of the Barnard College Social Committee were passed by Representative Assembly at their meeting last week.

One addition to the constitution states that the chairman of the Barnard College Social Committee shall be elected by Representative Assembly from an open slate prepared by the outgoing Social Committee; this chairman shall be a member of the junior or senior class. Another amendment gives Student Council the power to approve the amount of subscriptions to all plays, club programs and publications sponsored by undergraduate organizations. Subscriptions to dances will be approved by the Social Committee.

Provision has been made for a regular standing committee on archives, assemblies, Barnard College social affairs and bulletin boards. Also provided for by the new amendments is an official calendar of afternoon and evening meetings which will be drawn up each spring for the following year by the Committee on the Social Calendar. No additions or changes will be made in that calendar without permission of Student Council or the Barnard College Social Committee and the Office of College Activities.

Health Service Plan to replace the present infirmary arrangement in Johnson Hall.

Under the Health Service Plan the infirmary will be moved to a ward in the new wing of St. Luke's Hospital where Barnard will have access to all of the resources of the hospital, immediate care in the case of emergencies, and a four-day convalescence period. Besides the many facilities provided for regular hospitalization, the students will also be able to seek the services of consultants in the different specialties.

Increased Health Fees

The plan will be extended automatically to the resident students and to students who do not live with relatives. The Health Service will entail an increase in the medical fee for the resident students from five to twenty dollars which will cover all of the above mentioned services. President McIntosh also urged the day students to sign up for the plan which would cost them an additional fifteen dollars.

In citing the many improvements on campus, culminating in the renovation of Milbank Hall and the construction of the James Room, Mrs. McIntosh urged the students to take care of the premises and to be careful of cigarette burns, saying that "we must make the Barnard community not only comfortable but also civilized."

Academic Opportunities

Speaking of academic opportunities open to the undergraduate body, the President stressed the effectiveness of the Thursday noon meetings as a center for deep thought on the ends of life. She also reminded the students of a series of conferences to be held on campus.

In concluding, Mrs. McIntosh referred to a recent article in "The American Scholar" on "Education for Privacy." She emphasized its theme, that the student must develop resources within himself, that knowledge is not merely to be used in relation to outside things. She added, however, that knowledge must not become introspective and must finally be related to the larger community. "We must find an expression for what we are and have learned," she said.

Barnard College Offers Celebration Scholarship

In special observance of the Bicentennial Celebration, Barnard will next year offer to incoming freshmen two $1200 scholarships. The special resident awards will be granted on the basis of intellectual ability, sound academic background, and evidence of financial need.

Circulars have been sent out to high school principals and guidance counselors along with information about scholarships ranging from $100 to $950 for resident students.

Barnard Bulletin

Published semi-weekly throughout the college year, except during vacation and examination periods by the students at Barnard College, in the interests of the Barnard Community. College Elections

Student government elections are upon us once more and the responsibility for nominating and electing good officers falls once again to the Barnard citizenry.

The roster of current officers had led us through an exciting and important year in Barnard and Columbia University history. 1954-55 promises to be as exciting with the continuance of the bicentennial celebrations and the implementation of constitutional reform offering stimulating challenges to the undergraduate officers. Aside from the particular aspects of the coming administration, participation in an executive capacity for one's school as a member of Student Council is immeasurably beneficial to the individual's personality and character development.

The officer is a respected member of the Barnard community who acts in the dual capacity as policymaker for the student body and as the liaison between faculty and administration and the students. As such, the student leader must have certain personality traits. She must be well-spoken, assertive, creative, able to get along with others and command respect. It is these qualities which must be considered when nominating potential officers for next year's Undergraduate Association.

Barnard does not lack individuals with these qualities. This was manifested last year when despite the fact that the class of 1954 could not produce candidates for the office of president and vice-president until several days after the nomination deadline, nominees, when finally selected, were of the highest caliber. We hope that this dearth of candidates will not repeat itself this year.

But with full confidence in the junior class which has always been most active, we are sure that the two top student government posts will not lack candidates. We are equally certain that the sophomore and freshman classes will produce worthy nominees for the office of treasurer and secretary.

We must not shirk our political duties, especially in these times when the democratic processes are being questioned. Barnard's student government occupies a strong and respected position not only within the orbit of this campus but throughout the country. To maintain this position, full student support is needed at the nominating Assembly next Tuesday and during elections.

Herminia Ruiz, Kimball Fellow, Studies Law at CU; Supports Extension of Women's Rights

By Marcia MacNaughton

Sometimes it would seem that about all of the real leaders and planners in the world have been consigned to the history books of past generations. But once in a while we encounter one of these people who have a vision of a more perfect society, and who possess the courage to do something about the wrongs they see about them.

Herminia Ruiz Olevar, 1953 winner of the Barnard Kimball Fellowship, awarded to a woman from a Spanish American country for a year of graduate work, would probably be horrified to find herself classed with these visionaries. But she definitely has the characteristics. This brown-eyed, dark-haired young woman, with her unassuming manner and a quick smile, is the holder of a bachelor's degree, a teacher's certificate, a professor's degree, a public notary degree, and a doctorate of law. The card on her door in Hewitt Hall carries the title "abogado," lawyer, beneath her name. If Herminia Ruiz ever decides to write her memoirs, she will certainly have a wealth of material to draw upon — hard work, sacrifices, honors, adventures, and the experience gained from meeting many famous people. Her autobiography would show how, despite obstacles, a girl can succeed in a career.

Herminia was born in Paraguay near Asuncion, which she proudly calls the "Switzerland of South America." Her unusually well modulated voice, besides helping her in teaching and law, served her well in her many dramatic activities. She had a great love of reading which survives to this day and shows in her familiarity with almost all types and periods of literature. Government, though, is her greatest love, and the decision to become a lawyer was made while she was still in high school. She taught school while taking law courses at night in Paraguay, and she was awarded a scholarship for study in Brazil. In 1947, under the auspices of the State Department, she visited the United States, examining our institutions and studying government at Indian University. Working as trial lawyer with Dr. Celso Velasquez, former ambassador to the United States, was another honor for her. Following that, she became a member of a law firm.

All of this study and work is only a means to an end, for Herminia's chief goal has been to get more rights for women, especially in her own country. As vice-president of the International Women Lawyers Association, she has worked for a changing of the civil code of Paraguay to allow women more political and civil rights. "Women in Paraguay cannot vote or serve as witnesses, or have property rights," she explained. They must even adopt their husband's politics.

Actually, she said as she described the situation, the members of the Association are working for women's rights in all countries. They think this can be done by working directly with the women, so they do social work, help women in jail, write newspaper articles and deliver radio speeches to make women think about their problems and work together to solve them.

"The thing that really impressed me in the United States is the way women get together and organize to get what they want," she declared. "The women have so much freedom and they make use of it."

It is this problem that makes her vitally interested in the United Nations. She is at present studying international law at Columbia University, dealing especially with the UN. She believes very strongly that the UN is the way to peace, and she wants to work for the ideas of peace and democracy. But the concern of the UN for the status of women interests her greatly.

We might wonder from all her ideas, what Herminia hopes to gain for herself. Her answer to this reflects the philosophy which has been a key to her success so far. "If you have an ideal, it doesn't matter who realizes it as long as your dream comes true. I don't care about being on top, only about helping it to come true."

Laundry Code Provides Hope For Finish of Washday Blues

Girls — are you having laundry problems? Do you get back a wishy washy, ragged, buttonless bundle of clothes every week? Don't despair, your problems are solved. The Hand Laundry Institute has organized a research institute and has adopted a code of good hand laundry practice. Each store complying with the rules of the code is qualified to display the Institute's Seal of Approval.

To qualify for the seal, laundries shall consistently offer customers "personalized hand care" and completely hygienic, competent and courteous services. No longer must you worry about germs in your wash. Laundries now have to be hygiene-conscious! The latest technical information on the proper care of laundering of all types of fabrics will be given freely by Certified Hand Laundries without charge. Unusual problems (no definition of "unusual" was provided) may be submitted to the Institute, and it will transmit the information to the inquiring customer. The code also provides that reasonable repairs, without charge, shall be part of the regular service offered by these laundries, and these services include the replacement of broken and missing buttons, mending of minor rips and tears and many other small courtesy services.

The Institute wishes to draw public attention to the many personal services offered exclusively by the thousands of hand laundries in New York, and to detail the hygienic, convenient, and economical advantages of certified hand laundry work. It also wishes to tell "the hitherto unpublished story of the fine art of hand laundering"

The machine age, the atomic age, the hydrogen age — all are out of style. We are entering the Laundry Age!

Letters to the Editor

Explanation

To the Editor:

The reaction to the publication of the poem "Convictions" in the last issue of "Focus" has been a matter of some concern both to me and to the members of the magazine's editorial board. For those who have complained that the meaning of the piece eluded them it may be advisable at the very outset to offer a few explanatory sentences.

The "Jewish-minded aunt" refers to the case of Ethel and Julius Rosenberg as a blot on her people. The author ridicules this woman's feeling that the Jewishness of the Rosenbergs makes their treason a reflection upon the entire group; this is no more so than would be a contention that Alger Hiss' conviction was a cause for condemning Protestants. The Jewishness of the defendants was in no way related to their crime. It is unfortunate that the "Jewish-minded" people who find such connections are usually "Jewish-minded" only in this respect. It is a reflection of a feeling of insecurity which though understandable, is unfortunate and under certain circumstances, tragic. It is those people who have an understanding of an appreciation for Judaism who are undisturbed by spies who happen to be Jewish, for they are able to see them in true perspective, as an infinitesimal and unimportant part of the whole.

Not An Attack on a Group

"Convictions," I think, can in no way be interpreted as an attack upon a group. The very fact that we have here a niece taking issue with her aunt reveals a lack of uniformity in the group's thinking. True anti-group feeling sets in when the aunt is thought of as representative. Focus printed this poem with the conviction that this was by no means so.

Finally, it is important to remember that no group, however persecuted, however discriminated against, is sacrosanct. Among every people there is wheat and chaff. It is just as dangerous to blindly call all members of the group good as it is to call all members bad.

Term Drive

ED. NOTE: This is a letter received by Catherine Lotos, chairman of Term Drive, which she would like to bring to the attention of the student body.

Dear Miss Lotos:

I should like to express the deep appreciation of the Manhattanville Neighborhood Center, Inc. for the contribution of $524.00 from Term Drive at Barnard College. Moreover I wish to acknowledge receipt of the six checks totaling $108.00 from the six individuals to whom we have sent separate letters of thanks.

It was a real pleasure to work with you and your committee in planning the Drive in the interest of the children we are serving from the Manhattanville community. The Drive was valuable in giving us financial support that we need so greatly and in bringing the students of Barnard College in a sponsor. I hope that this is only the first of many cooperative efforts between the Center and the students.

It was grand of you and the other girls to take the time from your busy schedules to put on this successful financial drive.

With many thanks, I am

Sincerely yours,

Clyde E. Murray

Doubleday, 'Time' Offer Positions; N.Y.U. Holds Retailing Conference

Seniors interested in publishing or retailing work this year have the opportunity of attending a conference, sponsored by the New York University School of Retailing, and of applying for training posts with "Time" or Doubleday Publishing House.

Interviews for the two "Time" training courses, editorial and business, will be held in the Conference Room, 101 Barnard Hall, Thursday, February 25. The trainees, to be selected on the basis of college curriculum, scholastic record, aptitude for and interest in journalism, summer work experience, extra-curricular activities, and ability to type, will start at a salary of $54 weekly.

For the Business Training Squad, "Time" is looking for seniors interested in the business departments of the magazine. Applicants must pass typing and shorthand tests. Beginning salary is $54 weekly. Seniors if interested, are advised to sign up immediately in the Placement Office for interviews for both squads and to read the material on the training program in the Placement Office, 112 Milbank.

Requirements for positions on the Doubleday training squad include good academic record, social adaptability, and training in typing and shorthand. The training program involves assignments in various major departments of Doubleday and squad members are eventually placed in specific departments. The salary is $45 during training. Since only three Barnard candidates may be referred to Doubleday, seniors who are interested are urged to apply as soon as possible to the Placement Office.

New York University School of Retailing is presenting its Sixth Annual Conference on Careers in Retailing on Friday, February 19, from 8:45 a.m. to 5:30 a.m. at the School, 100 Washington Square East. The conference is designed to show seniors the opportunities that await them in the field of retailing and to bring them the first-hand advice of retailing executives on how to apply for jobs.

Barnard Welcomes Transfer Students

Thirty-nine new students and transfers from twenty-eight colleges in this country and from six foreign countries entered Barnard for the spring semester, it has been announced.

Four of the students are returning to Barnard after being away: two of these have been studying in Israel. Three freshmen who dropped out during the winter term have re-enrolled.

The junior class claims the greatest number of new students, with eighteen entering its ranks. The sophomore class has gained nine new members. There is one non-matriculated student, and there are four girls who are working toward degrees in other colleges.

The foreign students come from Venezuela, Turkey, Japan, Germany, India, and China. The American students come from such widespread points as Stanford, Radcliffe, University of Arizona, University of Michigan, William and Mary, and Cornell.

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. says . . .

FOR more than thirty years we have used research day in and day out learning about tobaccos and cigarettes in the public's interest.

Continuously we and our consultants have analyzed, experimented with and smoked all kinds of tobaccos . . . especially Southern Bright, Burley, Maryland and Turkish cigarette tobaccos.

Our own cigarettes and competitive brands have been submitted to the most exacting scientific scrutiny including thousands of analyses of millions of pounds of tobaccos.

From all these thousands of analyses, and other findings reported in the leading technical journals, our Research Department has found no reason to believe that the isolation and elimination of any element native to cigarette tobaccos today would improve smoking.

For four years we have maintained in the smoker's interest an intensified larger scale diversified research program. A half-million dollar 30-ton machine, the world's most powerful source of high voltage electrons, designed solely for our use has tested tens of thousands of cigarettes. This program has already given to us direct and significant information of benefit to the smoking public.

Our consultants include Arthur D. Little, Inc. of Cambridge, Massachusetts, "one of the largest and most reputable industrial research organizations in the country" (From Business Week Magazine) and eminent scientists from leading universities.

Today the public can confidently choose from a variety of brands — by far the best cigarettes ever made by the tobacco industry.
