

Death Of McIntosh Delivers Last Convocation Address; CAO Head Park To Assume College Presidency Next Fall Mourned

Students, faculty and administration were saddened to learn of the death of Miss Katherine R. Goodwin, Director of College Activities at Barnard since 1955.

A native of Biddeford, Maine, Miss Goodwin passed away last Monday at the age of 61. Funeral services were held yesterday at the Congregational Church in Saco, Maine. A memorial service will be held at Barnard in the near future.

Miss Jean T. Palmer, General Secretary described Miss Goodwin as someone who "had high ideals and lived up to them herself, and did her very best to pass them on to the younger generation with whom she worked for the majority of her life." Miss Palmer explained, "Her courage was particularly evident in the last year when she kept going in spite of her illness and was able to keep her job running efficiently until ten days before her death."

Miss Goodwin received her B.S. degree from Russell Sage College and then did graduate work at the University of Connecticut, University of Chicago and the International People's College, Elsinore. (See GOODWIN, Page 4)

President-Elect Anticipates Post

After fifteen years as head of Barnard College, President Millicent Carey McIntosh will retire on June 30, 1962. Succeeding Mrs. McIntosh will be Dr. Rosemary Park who now serves as president of Connecticut College.

The announcement of the changeover, originally scheduled for October or November, had to be released in September when the news leaked to the Connecticut College campus. An administration spokesman stated that despite the early announcement, the situation remained mutually very satisfactory.

"Although I have found my post both interesting and rewarding, I regret that I haven't gotten to know more students personally," Mrs. McIntosh stated in a special Bulletin interview. The President added that working with student government leaders has been one of the most exciting features of her job as administrator. "We counted on them quite a bit when deciding policy," she said.

Mrs. McIntosh has held various administrative posts since 1928 with little time for "the luxuries of reading, writing, and being with friends." After her retirement, she and her husband, Dr. Rustin McIntosh, will be free to indulge in these luxuries as well as spend time with their children and grandchildren. Dr. and Mrs. McIntosh will live in Tyringham, Mass., a small farming valley town in the Berkshires "with a Post Office, a library and a town hall with a fire engine in it." With the relocation of her household, the President will have to give up much of her New York public life; however, she intends to be active in community affairs in the area of Tyringham. (See MCINTOSH, Page 4)

Dr. Rosemary Park

Barnard's president-elect has the double distinction of being the fifth president of Connecticut College and the second of three college presidents in her immediate family. In accepting her new post, Dr. Park said, "An association with Barnard College offers an opportunity to study the role of a women's college connected with a university in the big city."

Among her many interests is Miss Park's concern with the problem of the role of women in meeting the challenge of communism. She believes that the women's college must "demand that its students see their college careers as essential experiences in their lives, not as pleasant luxuries." Only in this way, Dr. Park feels, can women assume their place among the "race of responsible adventurers" needed to deal with the out-of-joint world of today.

In 1962 Dr. Park will confront a Barnard very different from the one that greeted Mrs. McIntosh in 1947. During President McIntosh's tenure, the Barnard student body has increased from 1,267 to 1,475, and campus facilities have been expanded and improved with the addition of Lehman Hall-Wollman Library (See MCINTOSH, Page 4)

$100,000 Grant Aids Construction

The last Convocation assembly addressed by President Millicent C. McIntosh was historic in more ways than one; Mrs. McIntosh announced the Trustees' decision to begin construction on the new Student Center. She traced the changes the College has undergone in both academic and physical terms, particularly emphasizing the physical development program begun in 1950.

A $100,000 grant to the College, given in honor of Mrs. Elizabeth Milbank Anderson by the Milbank Memorial Fund, will be used in the building of the Student Center. The groundbreaking is scheduled for May, 1962. The Center, according to Mrs. McIntosh, "represents the last unit in our program which was designed to make an adequate college for 1500 students."

The planned building, to be located immediately adjacent to the new Helen Reid dormitory, will house all the facilities and offices for student activities, including a large snack bar. Faculty dining facilities will be included. Mrs. McIntosh emphasized that a most important feature of the building will be "adequate locker space and dressing rooms for day students." The chief function of the building is to help house the expanded medical facilities, seminar classrooms and faculty offices which a larger body requires.

Student Handbook Replaces Blue Bk.

New at Barnard this year is the Barnard Student Handbook, combining Blue Book and the Handbook for Resident Students. The new publication was written to supplement the Barnard catalog in providing a basic introduction to the College.

Published by the Undergraduate Association, the manual includes information on student government, standing committees, publications, clubs and the various campus activities. Every student is held responsible for observing those regulations included in the book.

Headed by Editor-in-chief Roselle Kurland '63 and Associate Editor Judith Lefkowitz '64, the staff worked on the manual throughout last June under the direction of Mrs. Lila Rosenblum, Director of Public Relations.

Economic Adviser Saulnier Resumes Professorship

Dr. Raymond J. Saulnier, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers during the administration of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, will resume his position as a professor of economics this month.

He will inaugurate a course in "Financial Institutions," a Columbia University graduate course open to Barnard seniors, during the current academic year.

Dr. Saulnier was granted a leave of absence from Barnard in June, 1954 to become special consultant to the Council of Economic Advisers. He became a member of the council in March, 1955, and was appointed chairman in December, 1956 by President Eisenhower.

Before joining the Council of Economic Advisers, Dr. Saulnier had served in an advisory capacity to the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System from 1950-1952; the Housing and Home Finance Agency, and the Department of Agriculture Farm Credit Administration from 1951-1952. He is a member of the American Economic Association and the American Statistical Association.

Dr. Saulnier joined the Barnard faculty in 1938 as an assistant professor of economics. He was promoted to associate professor in 1946 and full professor in 1949. In 1950 he was named chairman of the economics department, a position he held until 1955.

Orientation Urges Individuality, Dynamism; Program Features Panel Discussion, Tours

The 354 Freshmen who entered Barnard officially Friday morning, September 22, experienced a series of events designed to acquaint them with the academic demands, the social opportunities, the political and extra-curricular advantages, the educational and administrative staffs, and the geographical layout of the college.

Intensive Orientation

An intensive orientation program, under the chairmanship of Frankie Stein '63 and Cynthia May '63, included placement exams, a President's Luncheon in Wollman Auditorium, a skit night, campus tours, Honor Board and Student Government discussions. A speech by classical scholar Dr. Moses Hadas on "The Aims of Education From a Humanistic Point of View," highlighted the orientation proceedings. Following Professor Hadas' talk, there were panel discussions led by upperclassmen under the direction of Lee Salmansohn '62, chairman of the academic program.

These events were climaxed by the closing assembly on Sunday afternoon, September 24, at which student leaders sought to correlate the experiences of the orientation period. Elinor Yudin '62 president of Dorm Exec, Roxanne Cohen '62, Athletic Association President, Bobbi Friedman '62, Honor Board Chairman, Cynthia May '62 and Frankiestein '63, Orientation Chairmen were among the speakers.

Ruth Klein '62, President of the Undergraduate Association officially welcomed the Freshmen in her address to the Assembly. Her talk was concerned with both individual identity and placement within a group at Barnard. Miss Klein asked the question "Who are you?" and then expanded the statement "I am a student" to include not only the knowledge obtained from "the scholars and books and lectures at Barnard," but also the process of benefiting educationally from "people and experiences: . . . the function of being citizen and leader."

Miss Klein cited the student as the one who "has stood for revolution and for change — the student who today is fighting for freedom in his homeland from communism, dictatorship, tyranny, poverty, and ignorance."

Individuality Stressed

Miss Klein then questioned the student's reasons for choosing Barnard, standards of scholarship, and place in the academic and political life of the college. She stressed the fact that "ultimately you and you alone must face the problems and determine your own role . . . select your own goals."

Mrs. McIntosh

The retirement of President Millicent Cary McIntosh is in many ways a sad, though expected event. She has served the College well, as an active, inspiring leader both on this campus and outside the confines of the immediate community. The influence she has had on the physical development of the College is legendary. Her particular view of what the role of the modern, college-educated woman should be, and her remarkable ability to live according to this belief has aroused great controversy — but has left an indelible mark on the philosophy and raison d'être of Barnard.

We look forward to the arrival of the new President. She is a talented and exceptionally gifted individual who should bring much to the Barnard Community. She will face challenges both similar and yet, quite different than those facing her predecessor. The College is now a larger, richer institution. Nevertheless, it is always a living, changing body — presenting a kaleidoscope of problems, personalities, and movement.

Students, faculty and administrators will affectionately remember the woman who preferred to be called "Mrs. McIntosh" to "President" or "Doctor"; we hope that she will remain a close friend of the College, despite her formal separation from it.

In Memoriam

The death of Miss Katherine R. Goodwin, Director of College Activities at Barnard for six years is deeply mourned by all those who knew her and worked with her. Her understanding of students and the delicate problems of personal relationships between them will long be remembered. It is only proper and fitting that her memory be honored by the students of the College she so ably served.

The Memorial Scholarship Fund is an endowment founded in 1954 to receive contributions in memory of deceased alumnae and friends of the College. The students of the College can honor the memory of Miss Goodwin by contributing to this fund, by thus indirectly continuing the help which she gave so selflessly. It is something she would have approved.

We suggest that an officer of the Undergraduate Association undertake the task of accepting student contributions toward this end. We know that the response will be gratifying.

Dorm Welcomes Three New Residence Halls Directors

The face of Barnard is constantly changing. Among the new faces on campus are the tired but happy members of the Residence Halls Staff.

Miss Harriet Van Sickle, Director of Residence, came to Barnard

Van Sickle brings to her new job her experience also as the director of a YM-YWCA in Boston.

The two Assistant Directors of Residence, Miss Cornelia Childs and Miss Barbara Page are both studying for their Masters deto complete her Masters. Miss Page received her BA from Pomona College in California.

Joining the three members of the Residence Hall Staff as Executive Assistant, is Miss Margaret O'Shea, formerly secretary at the Residence Halls. As house supervisor, Miss O'Shea will be in charge of maintaining the dorms and dorm equipment in proper condition.

All the members of the Residence Halls Staff agree that everyone has been very helpful. "There is a wonderful spirit here," Miss Van Sickle said. "The Dorm Exec has been most cooperative. We are looking forward to a wonderful year."

About Town

A great deal is going on in New York this fall and the cultural centers of the city are as anxious to welcome you back as we at Bulletin are. Many of the activities available are opening just in time for the beginning of school.

Tonight at 8:30 there is a performance of the New York Philharmonic Orchestra in the Main Hall of Carnegie Hall. The Philharmonic will also perform Saturday evening at the same time. Tomorrow evening at 8:30 there will be a Symphony Concert at Carnegie Hall with Ferruccio Busoni conducting. Tonight at 8:30 the Krainis Trio will perform at the Carnegie Hall Recital Hall and tomorrow evening at the same time Gary Sigurdson, flutist, will hold a recital presented by Norman Seaman.

At present, the Greek Tragedy Theatre, at the City Center is presenting Aeschylus' "The Choephoroi" and "The Eumenides." These are performed evenings at 8:30 and Saturday and Sunday matinees at 2:30 through October 1.

After the Greek Theatre leaves, the New York City Opera Company will open with a benefit for the New York City Opera, a performance of Puccini's "Il Trittico." This new production will be presented October 5 at 7:30 p.m. Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte" has been scheduled for Friday evening October 6 at 8:15. Saturday evening, October 7, also at 8:15. "La Boheme" will be performed. "The Mikado" will be presented on Sunday, October 8, at 2:30 p.m.

Town Hall

Town Hall is featuring a series of travel films this fall, including familiar and also exotic places. A film will be shown every Thursday afternoon at 5:30, from October 5 to December 14. The series of ten movies is priced at $10. Indicative of the variety that will be available are the subjects of the first three movies—France, Taiwan, and Cyprus.

"Photographs and Etchings: The World on Silver and Copper" is the title of a display, opening October 5, at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Miss Jenkins Assumes Activities Directorship

Miss Madeline Jenkins, newly appointed Director of College Activities, considers off-campus housing her "number one concern." She is sympathetic to stu-

Miss Jenkins comes to Barnard with a strong administrative background. She served, starting in 1947, as the Administrative Assistant to the International fi-

After their successful run of Junior Show, members of the class of '62, at Barnard and Columbia, still under the theatrical spell, decided to try their hand on another original production. The fruit of their efforts is The Mushroom Makers, this year's Senior Show, to be presented November 1-4.

According to Reva Mark, acting Senior Show Chairman, the play is about "atomic power and its traumatic effect upon humanity." Set in "the present time, amidst ruins," The Mushroom Makers is a serious comedy, with music ranging from the Baroque to Modern Jazz.

Casting for musicians and actors will be held on Monday October 2 through Wednesday, October 4 in the Green Room of Milbank Hall from 7-11 p.m.

nancier and founder and chairman of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation, Floyd B. Odum. In this capacity, Miss Jenkins traveled through Europe and South America, and also attended meetings for the formation of the Lovelace Clinic and Foundation for Medical Research. After eleven years of working for the foundation, she began work with the Fannie and John Hertz Scholarship Foundation.

On September 5, 1961, Miss Jenkins was hired as special assistant to Miss Jean T. Palmer, General Secretary of Barnard College. She became Acting Director of College Activities on September 21. After the passing of Miss Katherine R. Goodwin, Miss Jenkins was named Director of College Activities.

The new director has an R. N. from Johns Hopkins, a B. S. in nursing from the Richmond Division of the College of William and Mary, and an M. A. in guidance and student personnel administration from Teachers College, Columbia University. After being graduated from Johns Hopkins, Miss Jenkins worked as a supervisor on the surgical staff of the hospital. She served as a Navy nurse from 1943 to 1946. Her hobbies are skeet shooting, swimming, and antiques.

NSA Congress Reveals Liberal Outlook; But Cautious Mood Dominated Delegates

Junior Series To Examine UN Problems

Inquiry Uncovers Fraudulent Vote

New officers of the Metropolitan New York Region of the National Students Association met at Barnard Tuesday night to revise the regional dues system and to plan the 1961-1962 regional program.

Ruth Klein '62, Barnard's first Regional Executive Committee member, was elected to the R.E.C. at the August Conference of N.S.A. to the post of second alternate delegate to the National Executive Committee.

As head of an investigating committee at the August Conference, Miss Klein uncovered fraudulent practices which invalidated the May elections of the Met-N.Y. Region. The C.C.N.Y. Baruch Evening College delegate to the election assembly had falsified credentials of six non-eligible students to complete his school's quota of legal electors. New Regional elections followed this disclosure. At this time Miss Klein was also elected to the Regional Executive Committee on a landslide first-ballot vote.

Because of a redistribution of national representation and a consequent revision of national dues dictated by the August Conference, the Regional Committee Tuesday night prepared a motion to reapportion regional dues. Due to a constitutional conflict the motion will be effective immediately, but will be subject to adjustment by the general Regional Assembly.

The motion now requires schools with enrollment up to 3500 students to pay an amount equal to one-third of their national dues and schools with enrollment above 3500 students to pay an amount equal to one-half of their national dues.

Miss Klein believes that this revision will provide a rationale for the regional dues collection and will replace the former "arbitrary figures" set by the Assembly.

Regional Executive Meeting

The REC agenda included preparation for a membership drive to gain additional local schools for the NSA roster. The Regional program of conferences and seminars was announced, and Miss Klein reports, "we are working on a New York City discount service for students."

Local activities begin with the Regional Assembly October 30. The Student Body Presidents' Conference, the Deans and Advisers' Conference and the Student Editorial Affairs Conference will take place November 4.

Fifteen delegates to the Regional International Students Relations Seminar December 1-3 will be chosen from individual student applicants from local member colleges.

NSA Leadership Parries Criticism National Elections Termed Moderate

(First in a series.)

The 'liberal leadership' of the National Students Association, i.e., those who considered themselves on the left side of the political spectrum and those who had been active in the Association in previous years came to last August's Congress in a vaguely apprehensive state of mind. During the past year the NSA has been heavily criticized by various student, as well as non-student, organizations. The cries, mostly from conservative politically oriented groups, have rung from 'inadequate representation' to domination by 'professional students' and 'left-wing agitators.'

The organization has always endured heavy criticism; but last year's series of attacks were punctuated by a well publicized claim to a "conservative upsurge on the college campus" and by the crystallization of two groups—Young Americans for Freedom (YAF), an extreme right-wing political student movement, and Student Committee for Accurate National Representation (SCANR) headed by Miss Kay Wonderlic, a student at Northwestern University. SCANR was formed by Miss Wonderlic for the ostensible purpose of reforming the NSA.

Thus delegates to last summer's Fourteenth Annual Con-

According to many observers of the August Congress of the National Students Association, the results of the elections for national officers were primary indices of the political complexion of the organization. One ex-officer was quoted as saying that the results of the election gave a more accurate picture of the political mood of the delegates than did the voting on actual policy resolutions.

John Garvey, a 1961 graduate of the University of Wisconsin won the top post, president of the NSA. His strongest opponent was Paul Potter, Oberlin College, who represented the extreme liberal viewpoint. Mr Potter's supporters, in their speeches to the delegates, stressed greater social action and involvement in current movements for social change by the NSA. Although Mr Garvey was also associated with strongly liberal support, observers felt that he won on an image which stressed greater moderation and accommodation to the more conservative point of view.

Mr Potter was elected National Affairs Vice-President. It is customary that loser of an election be given the opportunity to 'drop down' and run for a lower office. Mr Potter took advantage of this procedure and entered the race for the National Affairs Vice-Presidency. Tension in the Assembly mounted when Mr Potter announced his intention to run for the second post.

Tom Hayden, a 1961 graduate of the University of Michigan and a close friend of Mr Potter's was considered to be a very popular candidate of the post. However, upon Mr Potter's announcement, Mr Hayden with-

Administrative Personnel Promoted to New Posts

In new administrative positions, Mrs. Lila Rosenblum, Mrs. Elsa Adelman Solender, and Miss Paula Zeleznik now head Barnard's Public Relations Office. In the continuing administrative capacity, Mrs. Dorothy Weinberger has recently received the new title of Director of the Barnard College Fund.

Mrs. Rosenblum, who has been Assistant Director since March, 1960, succeeds Miss Betty Pezzoni as Director of Public Relations. Mrs. Rosenblum stated that she finds her job "very exciting because there is an infinite amount of interesting material on this campus." She urges students to bring to her attention newsworthy items connected with the college.

Mrs. Solender and Miss Zeleznik, both Barnard graduates, are very pleased with their new positions. Mrs. Solender, as News Assistant to the Director of Public Relations, does the research and writing for press releases. Miss Zeleznik, as Special Events Assistant to the Director, gathers facts and ideas for Barnard's special event's publicity.

Mrs. Weinberger is continuing the work she has done for several years but with a new title. When the former Director of the Barnard Fund left in 1957, Mrs. Weinberger did not assume the regular title. She was called Assistant to the General Secretary. Mrs. Weinberger sees that money donated to the college is deposited and acknowledged. She also is in charge of fund solicitation from alumnae.

New Faces...

Dr. Broadbent Conducts Anthropological Research

This year there are several new faces in the Barnard College faculty. We wish to introduce these professors to the student body in a series of interviews that begin today.

Dr. Silvia Broadbent, Assistant Professor of Anthropology, is settling down to teach at Barnard after a summer of field work at Yosemite National Park. The work was done to prepare for the publication of her Ph.D. dissertation "Grammar of the Southern Sierra Miwok."

Professor Summers

Dr. Broadbent's summers have always been coordinated with her profession. The summer of 1960 was devoted to research on the cultural continuity of the Chibcha region in Colombia, South America. Two previous summers were spent in California, digging on Indian sites at the Carmel Mission.

In Colombia she determined the Indian's way of life prior to and after the arrival of the Spaniards, by researching in local archives and digging for archeological artifacts.

Artifacts Unearthed

Digging at the Carmel Mission unearthed Indian artifacts, e.g. arrowheads, shell beads, bone tools, and imported fragments of pottery, glass beads and non-objects from Mexico, England and China. All objects dated from the Spanish Period (1769-1846). Disappointingly, nothing earlier was found.

Dr. Broadbent received her B.A. and Ph.D. at the University of California, where she specialized in Andean culture history, linguistics and primitive medicine.

With the recent death of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld the United Nations faces problems in resolving the role of the secretariat and the office of the Secretary-General. Introducing a new discussion series, "60's Seminar," will be the timely discussion-meeting on "The U.N. — An International Problem" Tuesday, October 10, 12:15 p.m. in 409B.

Mr. Richard Roett III, a Columbia graduate student specializing in South American studies, will moderate the meetings. He will give a short lecture on the background of the topic and then lead the discussion session.

Each meeting will deal specifically with one facet of a more general unit. A unit will continue over a four- or five-week period. The United Nations unit will follow this pattern.

Connie Foshay, President of the Class of '63, has extended a "special invitation to freshmen and non-social science majors," since the discussions are envisioned as covering material over a broad range of interests and knowledge.

Each session will be held in the Brewster Room, 409 Barnard, every Tuesday from 12:15 to 1:00 p.m. Students will provide their own lunches.

Miss Foshay emphasized the need for a regular outlet for discussion of current events and expressed the hope that Barnard students would respond to this opportunity to share opinions and to increase their knowledge of world problems.

Dr. Herberg Heads List Of Lectures

Professor Will Herberg of Drew University heads the list of guest speakers in this fall's Danforth Lecture series. Professor Herberg, author of Protestant-Catholic-Jew, will speak about "Our Jewish Heritage," on October 4, 6 and 9. This is Professor Herberg's second appearance as a speaker at the Danforth Lectures.

The Danforth Lecture series is a part of Religion 25.26, a course in the role of religion in contemporary society. A grant of $20,000 from the Danforth Foundation in December 1959 made possible the creation of a program of visiting lecturers.

Returning Speakers

Two of last year's speakers, Professor Wilhelm Pauck of Union Theological Seminary and Professor Harry Wilmer Jones of Columbia Law School, are returning to lecture this year. Professor Pauck, who has been a guest professor at the Universities of Frankfurt and Geneva and editor of Church History from 1951 to 1953, will discuss "Our Protestant Heritage." "Constitutional Problems of Church-State Relations" will be the subject of Professor Jones' address. Professor Jones is a former editor of the American Bar Journal and author of Economic Security for Americans.

New Lecturers

This fall, Professor Bernard Barber of the Barnard Sociology Department and Monsignor Rea, Counselor to Catholic students at Columbia University, have been invited to speak at the Danforth series. Professor Barber is a Project Consultant to the National Science Foundation and author of Social Stratification. He will deal with the subject of "Sociology and Religious Concepts." Monsignor Rea, advisor to the Newman Club at Columbia, will speak on "Our Roman Catholic Heritage."

Bulletin Board

Television commentator Mike Wallace will speak on "The Role of the College in Contemporary Life" at a meeting of the Seixas-Menorah Society to be held today at noon in the Earl Hall Auditorium. A discussion will follow.

An illustrated lecture, "Italian Contemporary Sculpture" will be given by Dr. Palma Bucarelli, director of the National Gallery of Modern Art in Rome. Dr. Bucarelli will speak at Casa Italiana, tomorrow at 8:30 p.m.

A Notary Public will be at Barnard today to witness the appointment of Mrs. Frances Barry, Bursar of the College, as Attorney-in-Fact for any student who will receive scholarship, fellowship, or incentive awards. The student will authorize Mrs. Barry to endorse and negotiate any checks received as monetary awards from the State of New York.

gress expected far more than the usual conservative opposition to the generally liberal policy which the organization endorses. The leadership of the Association had developed a very sensitive ear to its many critics; and in many instances bent over backwards to allow as many points of view as possible to be heard.

The Congress itself, far more so than in previous years, was very sensitive to the various political shades of opinion represented. And most important of all, the liberal 'machine' which was indeed a 'machine' in previous years tried to divest itself of the secretive personality which it has gradually acquired. In effect, except for a small group of individuals who by floor strategy attempted to speed up proceedings, liberal aims and legislative programs were open for examination and participation by all interested and knowledgeable delegates. —E. drew from the race, in favor of the former. The move was greatly lamented in many liberal circles; but the support which would have gone to Mr. Hayden was, on the whole, thrown to Mr. Potter.

Contesting Mr. Potter's election were Mr. Tim Zagat, 1961 Harvard, and Mr. Neal Johnston, 1961 University of Chicago. Mr. Johnston withdrew early in the race in favor of Mr. Hayden. Later, when Mr. Hayden withdrew, the contest was narrowed to only two candidates. In the announced vote Mr. Hayden received several write-in votes, some of which were recast for Mr. Potter when the chances for his getting a majority were endangered.

Mr. Donald Emerson, a student at Princeton University, was elected by acclamation to the International Affairs Vice-Presidency. In his acceptance speech Mr. Emerson noted, "There is nothing sacred about youth," emphasizing the great potential as well as frailties of youth and the student movement.

Faculty Guests Enliven Thursday Noon Lunch

President Millicent C. McIntosh will be one of twelve speakers scheduled for this semester's series of Thursday Noon Meetings, according to Marcia Stecker '62, chairman of the Committee.

Although the list of speakers is not yet complete, Professor Otto Luening of the Music Department, the Reverend James Robinson, director of Operation-Crossroads Africa, Professor Barbara Novak of the Art History Department, Mr. James O'Connor of the Economics Department, and Professor of Religion Harold Stahmer have also agreed to speak. They will "talk on the aspect of their field which is related to contemporary problems, ideas, and values," Miss Stecker explained.

Mr. Marcus Klein of the English Department is the committee's new adviser, succeeding Professor Stahmer, who served for the past four years. Meetings are held in the College Parlor each Thursday at noon "to consider problems of philosophical, moral, or religious significance."

Members of the Thursday Noon Committee are Elinor Yudin '62, Judith Dorfman '62, Zakiya Jung '62, Connie Brown '63, Frankie Stein '63, and Nancy Neveloff '64. New members will be chosen at the beginning of the spring semester based on the interest shown in the meetings.

and Helen Reid Hall. The library was the first major addition to the campus since 1926. Under Mrs. McIntosh, the endowment of the college has doubled to the current $10,835,927. Professional salaries have been raised to between 54 and 79 per cent.

Expansion of the college curriculum has included a pre-professional program in Education begun in 1952, and one in the social sciences to be inaugurated this fall. A major in Russian has been created while the Barnard departments of religion, physics, music, Latin and Greek, and others have combined with their Columbia counterparts to make a greater selection of courses available.

Goodwin

The late College Activities Director began her career as a teacher at Ridgewood High School in Ridgewood, New Jersey, and taught later at Thornton Academy in Saco, Maine and Weaver High School in Hartford, Connecticut. Miss Goodwin was associated with Weaver High School from 1927 to 1955 with a four year interruption during World War II.

In 1942 she was one of the first women from Connecticut to enter the Women's Army Corps and attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in 1944. Miss Goodwin was the recipient of the Legion of Merit and the WAAC Medals. She served as personnel officer on the staff of Colonel Oveta Culp Hobby and as WAC officer for the Army Services Forces on the staff of General Breton Somervell.

Convocation

as a trustee of Barnard College from 1894 to her death in 1921. She was a donor of the Milbank Memorial Fund which was incorporated in 1905. Mr. Samuel R. Milbank, Chairman of the Board of Trustees also chairs the Board of Directors of the Fund.

The president cited the basic concern during her administration as that of appointment of a superior faculty. The main objective of the 1950 Development Fund was for endowment to be used for increasing the salary scale. The total endowment of the College since 1939 has doubled. The average increase in professorial salaries in 1960-61 is 74.3%; the gain in financial aid to students has been a jump of 82%.

Class of '65 Represents Many Areas

This year's freshman class, consisting of 354 young women, has the largest number of resident students from a single class in the College's history. The 189 out-of-towners represent 30 states and five foreign countries — Australia, China, El Salvador, Germany and Greece.

Barnard has recorded a rise in the number of incoming students from Southern, Central and Western United States: 7% are from the South; 8.5% are from the Central United States; 5% are from the West. The majority of the class, 60.2%, is from the Middle Atlantic States area. Of the remainder, 14.7% are from New England states, and 3.6% are citizens of or now reside in foreign countries. Seven of these students are American citizens educated abroad. 71.6% of the Class of 1965 were graduated from public schools, 38.4% from independent schools.
