o Miss Virginia C. Gildersleeve, whose fine achievements and high ideals will always be an inspiration to us, we dedicate this,

our Class Book,

not trusting in its merits, but hoping that,
as part of the college, - hers and ours, -
for which her love has never failed, it may gain some value in her eyes.

Alice Through the Entrance Examinations.

Through the Entrance Examinations

Being the Curious Adventures of Alice in her Quest through Barnardland for an Aim in Life.

Chapter I.

"After this experience, I am sure I shall not mind anything," thought Alice, as she passed through the last paper, which seemed rather tougher than the others. Looking about her, she found herself in a long hall with doors all around it; but all were locked fast or marked "Private" except one, which led to the outer world.

"After all the trouble I had getting in here," said poor Alice to herself, "I certainly don't want to walk right out again." So she sat down rather disconsolately to feel her bruises.

"Not much injured, I hope?" said a cheerful voice. Alice looked up, sure that the girl smiling down at her was the "Junior" with a capital "J" about whom she had read in story books and college songs. And so it was—only much more ordinary than she had expected.

"Oh, no," she answered. "Nothing but a few Latin bruises and a condition on the hypothenuse."

"They're not so easy to get rid of as they look," the Junior returned.

Alice opened her wise young eyes. "Are yours there yet?" she asked.

"Is there anything I can show you?" inquired the Junior rather hurriedly.

"You might tell me first what is behind all those doors."

"Take all this down in your Blue Book. It may prove useful," the Junior began. "The door marked, 'Private Office of the Dean' is really not closed to anybody but the cat. That is where you lay down your troubles. Behind the one across the hall is where the Red Queen lives and that is where you get your troubles unless you are very business-like and refuse to be scared. This next place is the reception room—and sure enough there is somebody in it."

Alice peeped in. "She looks very unhappy. May I take her with me on my journey? It may raise her spirits."

She was very much disconcerted when the subject of her remarks raised her head and said plaintively, "Thank you; but I am a Parent and was to be left till called for."

The Junior was evidently hardened to such sights. She called Alice over to inspect a curious object under a glass case. "I think somebody must have given it to us," she said, but it is not the kind of building we asked for. Don't stop to look at it now or the Faculty Procession will have gone by."

"Are the Faculty nice?" asked Alice anxiously.

"Nice, but nubbly, as the whale said when he swallowed the sailor."

"What is nubbly, please?"

"You'll find out soon enough," said the Junior, with a sigh; "but you must be quiet now until they have passed."

"Oh, it's the Dorm Mouse again!"

Chapter II.

Brooks Hall

"You can't think how glad I am to see you," Jane was saying to the latest arrival. "Won't you take the arm of this chair?"

"This is the maddest tea party I ever saw," thought Alice, as she balanced a piece of hot fudge in one hand and a pin tray full of tea in the other. One of the guests had gone to sleep with her kimono tucked under her feet and her head on a German dictionary, but she sat up very suddenly when somebody flung the door open behind her.

"There's no room, Mary, except on the radiator," said the hostess graciously, "but you're welcome to that."

Mary was edging her way toward this tempting seat when Alice gave a little shriek and upset the pin tray.

"Oh," wailed Jane, "it's the Dorm Mouse again! Now I'll have to sleep in somebody's arm chair. That creature always breaks up my parties."

"How cheerfully he seems to grin,
How neatly spreads his claws,
And welcomes my best crackers in
With gently smiling jaws."

As Alice fled down the hall, she heard floating after her in a voice she thought she recognized:

"If you kept your crackers in a tin,
To smile he'd have no cause."

Alice saw the country all marked off in little squares.

Chapter III.

Organizations

The Junior led Alice to the top of a hill from which they looked out over Barnard-land and saw the country all marked off in little squares

“These,” said the Junior with a sweep of her hand, “are the organizations. I have brought you here to decide which ones you will belong to.”

“Is it necessary to belong to any?” asked Alice; for how could the poor child see the membership slips she was holding behind her back?

“Absolutely,” said the Junior sternly.

“What are those queer looking cavities in the squares?” asked Alice.

“That is where the dues are supposed to be deposited. You see, however, that some are heaped to the brim, while others are nearly empty.”

“I don’t understand why there is such a difference?”

“It all depends upon the treasurers. They only succeed when getting and grasping they lay waste their powers.”

Alice could never make out in thinking it over afterward how they began; all she remembers is that they were running hand in hand so fast that she grew dizzy and out of breath. At last when it seemed she could run no longer, the Junior propped her up against a pillar and said pleasantly, “There now! You belong to all my societies. Dues are payable next January.”

Poor Alice sighed miserably and felt the thickness of her pocket-book. “Don’t you think it would be better for me to wait and look them over more carefully?” she ventured.

“Too late now but you can drop out next year if you like. You may as well look at them more closely if you want to do so.”

So Alice started off to wander among the squares at her leisure.

Politics at Barnard—The Campaign

Seldom has Barnard been honored with a more distinguished gathering than filled the halls on Thursday afternoon from four to six. In the dressing rooms Teddy and Taft shared a pot of rouge, while Debs assisted Chafin into his wig. Up stairs the party campaign managers were marshaling their followers in the different studies. Every party was supplied with musical instruments and appropriate placards and were eager for the fray. At last the procession started. In the lead came the band with bright blue three-cornered hats and successfully noisy with instruments of a highly original character. Next came the Progressives, almost drowning the band in their usual loud enthusiasm. They all wore Bull Moose bandanas and bore proudly in their front ranks a suffrage banner. The Bull Mooses were the largest party in number and perhaps the best organized. Following the Progressives came a large delegation of Socialists their leader carrying a flaming torch at the head of the line while working men in overalls with tin pails and women with red shawls over their heads and leading little children by the hand came behind, shouting and singing for Debs. The Prohibitionists came next with a water cooler borne ahead of them as a mascot. Other insignia of their campaign were milk bottles carried by members of the party. Carrie Nation brand hatchet (geology) in the her marched a lady very her appearance. Be it grace of the party th had joined their with quest rotalle ch

Inauguration

The inauguration of the elected candidate, Mr. Chafin, took place on Friday afternoon, at 4 P. M., in the theatre. A large proportion of the college had been converted by Mr. Chafin's eloquence and became Prohibitionists. The Party marched in behind the band headed again by the water cooler and bearing the garden hose. Again the cheering was almost deafening, but perhaps not as spontaneous as the day before. Mr. Chafin (Naomi Harris) and Chief Justice White (Jean Möhle) then took their places upon the platform. Justice White made a few appropriate introductory remarks, regretting the small attendance (not more than 300), when food had been provided for 500), regretting also the weather (which was rainy). We then called upon Chafin to take the oath of office. A physics book was placed on top of a pitcher with ice water in it. Upon this the candidate placed his hand. "I, Eugene V. Chafin, swear," said the Justice. "I," repeated the candidate. "Eugene U. Chafin never swear." Loud applause followed while the bewildered magistrate thought. Finally the word "guarantee" was substituted at the approval of both parties. The oath of office proceeded with only one more hitch when the President became confused at the end and promised to "certify all young children" leaving out the important words "milk for."

The newly made President then made a general address. He pointed out that

Alumnae Meeting

At the meeting of the Associate Alumnae of Barnard College, held October 26th, officers for 1912-13 were elected from the board of directors already chosen by letter ballot. Mrs. George V. Mullan, '98, was elected president; Miss Elizabeth Allen, '02, first vice-president; Miss Marguerite C. Newland, '08, second vice-president; Miss Eleanor Gay, '09, secretary, and Miss Jean Disbrow, '07, treasurer.

The Students' Aid Committee, of which Miss Mabel Parsons is chairman, reported that $934 had been loaned to students during the college year 1911-12. The students so assisted included one senior, four juniors, and three sophomores. The regulations of the committee forbid the loaning of money to freshmen in the first term and allow aid to freshmen in the second term only under extraordinary circumstances.

A hidjus hush fell upon the courtroom.

Chapter IV.

The Trial of Fraternities

"What's that?" asked Alice pointing to a little gold emblem on the left side of a shirtwaist. A hidjus hush fell upon the court room. The wearer of the shirtwaist sank to the floor gasping. Somebody called out, "Suppress her!" but everybody was too paralyzed to move.

"What are the prisoners on trial for?" asked Alice, unwarned by the previous disaster.

"For existing," was the tart reply.

"But why are you all so much embarrassed?"

Then everybody said, "Hush!" in loud and dreadful tones. The court rapped for order, but this was of very little use. The Anti's and the Pro's all insisted on giving evidence in chorus and every few minutes somebody left the ranks of one party and became the most enthusiastic fighter on the other side.

"First witness for the prosecution!"

A tall, stern-looking girl stepped forward. They did not think it necessary to swear her in on account of the honor system. She didn't wait to be asked questions.

"Yesterday I saw three girls from the same fraternity eating lunch together. This shows that these girls are cut off from outside friendships. To-day two girls from different fraternities were studying from the same book at the end of the hall. Isn't this conclusive proof that there have been ruptures in both these societies and the girls must go outside to seek congenial company?"

The Bulletin reporter took a note. Somebody was fanning the judge when the counsel for the defense arose.

"You all know how fountain pens sputter," she began. "Fraternity pins cover even the most irregular blots quite neatly. 'Vantage number one! You couldn't do that with an ordinary pin."

The editor of the Bear had an inspiration for an editorial and began writing in a Blue Book. The Bulletin reporter took two more notes.

"Then," said the counsel, "think of my clients' ideals?"

"Yes," said the little Pro's rolling up their eyes, "think of them!"

At this pandemonium broke loose again. "That's precisely what we do think of," shrieked the Anti's. "Why do you keep them secret? If they are lofty ideals you certainly conceal them cleverly."

Such a babble of voices arose that the Bulletin reporter gave up taking notes and tried to write original arguments, holding her pen in her teeth while she used both hands to stop her ears. All the officers of the court were hoarse from calling for order. The judge, despairing of making a decision, withdrew, supported by the clerk.

"I should think you would get very tired of seeing so many things come one right after the other," said Alice.

Chapter V.
College Events

“And thick and fast they came at last,
And more, and more, and more.”

“I should think you would get tired of seeing so many things come one right after the other,” said Alice.

“So we should,” answered the Junior, “if we did not scorn to look at the same show twice or go to a party whose like was ever seen before. We are tired of swimming only in water and are trying to think of some way of making basketball more novel.”

“How do you manage to have something new all the time?”

“Oh! That is quite simple.

Speak roughly to your chairmen, dear,
And work them night and day;
They ought to understand that we Are thoroughly blasé.”

“I should think that at that rate,” said Alice, “nobody would accept offices.”

The Junior looked appalled by this ignorance of human nature. “Don’t you know yourself,” she asked, “how willing anybody is to be killed by his own importance?”

“There is something in that,” said Alice; and she began to lay plans for a campaign. Upon her asking for advice, the Junior said:

“In order to be very much sought after, you must be different from all the other animals. You must rise in class meetings and suggest new ways of doing everything. Even make propositions to student council if you have the courage. When they repulse your suggestions, treat them with kindness. Always speak to everybody you meet whether you know her or not; but don’t mention names; the wrong ones always irritate people so.”

The next day when the Junior met Alice in the hall she had shrunk to half her natural size. “What is the matter?” asked the Junior in some alarm.

Poor Alice answered meekly. “In class meeting I ran for president and they made me Chairman of the Flower Committee. Perhaps I didn’t go about it scientifically enough, but now I’ll take your advice and study the events of the past two or three years so as not to do anything like them. But I really don’t see how a flower committee could be very original unless Mr. Burbank were on it.”

“Never mind,” said the Junior, “I don’t mind reviewing the parade of events for your benefit. Sit here with me and watch them go by.”

Ivy Day Pageant Presented by the Undergraduates to 1912

A band of country girls dancing on the green wantonly tearing an ivy garland, are suddenly cast under a spell by the Guardian Spirit of the Ivy (Elizabeth Gray, 1912), who commands the revellers to review the elements that have made the ivy. She summons the life-giving Earth, mother of growing things; and the quickening Rain, and the dazzling Sun, under whose influence the raindrops form the Rainbow. But Earth, Sun and Rain at first bring forth only the antagonistic Class Flowers—red carnations for the Freshmen, chrysanthemums for the Sophomores, white carnations for the Juniors, and Senior roses. At last the Ivy itself appears and binds all together in unity and harmony.

Tune—Memorial Day Song.

When long ago we entered here,
All Barnard seemed so strange and new Until we found our sisters dear,
Our glorious old 1—9—1—2.

So through the years we'll loyal be,
We'll always love the buff and blue;
And when these colors e'er we see,
We'll always think, dear '12, of you.

Oh 1912, can you forget
What oft you've heard your sisters tell?
Oh, let our love go with you yet
'Adown the valley of farewell.

Chapter VI.

Where Genius Burns

Worn out with so many strange sights, Alice had fled to the Publication Room and sat down on a pile of 1913 Mortarboards to rest. Nobody paid much attention to her. Four sophomores occupied the couch, swinging their feet in time to their chatter. "They don't seem to be publishing anything," thought Alice, as she looked at the History A books in their hands.

All four looked up suddenly, as if they had heard her thoughts. "We have just as much business in here as you have," they said, and went on looking at their books and talking about Soph. Dance.

The Barnard Bear was sitting on the edge of the scrap basket and grunting most disconsolately. "I might have been so clever this month," he said, "if it hadn't been for that old Bulletin. No matter what I do, I am sure to be roasted for it."

"If you don't stop complaining," said the editor, "I'll sprinkle my fountain pen on you."

"But everything is true that I say ——"

"You go to print!" shouted the editor and shook her fist after him as he retreated.

Alice was so much disturbed by the discordant atmosphere about her that, when the Mortarboard editors trooped in, they noticed her pained expression. "You are sad," they all sang in chorus. "Let us recite some poetry to comfort you. We thought they would allow us to have a private meeting under our desk, but there is a sophomore in there, too." (Sure enough, a pair of tan shoes protruded from the opening.) "But nothing can spoil our dispositions."

"Oh, if you please!" said poor Alice, "I have heard so many things to-day!"

"But these were written expressly for your amusement. It is very ill-bred of you to be so unenthusiastic. Besides, as there is no meaning in any of it, you need not trouble yourself to look for any."

Alice sighed a little unhappily and composed herself to listen.

Inspired in Zoology Lab.

O jolly young Bacteria,
That dwell in my interior,
How horribly I'd miss you, dears,
If you should go away!

My sorrows all are quieted
(Though not because I've dieted)
For Dr. Crampton tells me now
That you are here to stay.

On the microscope slide
In gyrations wide,
I watch your wriggles, your classic grace;
A little later
Upon mere paper
I strive to picture Zoöglian paste.

Your aspiration
To eat creation
Seems ambitious to say the least;
Though many another
With lunchless ardor
Would join you gladly in that feast.

A Ballad

DEDICATED TO 1915

The editor sat in her office chair
All with her comrades bold.
"Oh where shall I get me standing room
A meeting for to hold?"

"This place is full of sophomores
That chatter, chatter fit to kill.
I know not whither we can go,
But leave this room we will."

They had not gone a league, a league,
But to their Study door,
And there they find a dozen folk
Who con their lessons o'er.

"Oh what a studious place is this!"
They cried in wild despair,
"But here is the Alumnae Room
And we can meet in there."

Straight in they burst with aspect bold,
These steadfast maids and true;
But when they meet alumnae glares,
They burst right out, they do.

"Make haste, make haste, my merry board all,
Nor ever courage lack;
We can descend the cellar stairs
And meet down there with Jack."

Beware the Kasner Robin, son,
The Doty Fox with Lape so fair;
Beware the Liggetbird and shun
The Mussey Barnard Bear.

He took his Beegle blade in hand;
For Weeks on Porterfield he fought;
So Reimered he by the Ogilvie
And Knapped awhile in thought.

And as all Mortarboard he stood,
The Sturtevant with eye that shines
Came Hazen through fraternities
And Shotwell as it Dines.

One two, one two; and Montague
Was Hollingsworth a Gregory;
He Howard first, then with a Hirst
Said, "Goodale might Maltby."

And hast thou slain the Ander, son?
Come to my Ayres, my Curtis Boyd,
Oh Ph. D.! O LL. D.!"
He Hallered, overjoyed.

'Twas Billy. The Deangildersleeve
Did Lord and Butler in the Meyer;
All Crampton was the Dederer,
And the Hubbard did inspire.

Once there was a bonnet
Fully three feet wide,
“Dernier cri” from Paris—
Barnard maiden’s pride.

But the only place giv’n
For the bonnet fair
Was a tiny locker
Barely one foot square.

Room on top, but dusty,
Books stuffed down below,
Where within the locker
Could the bonnet go?

To Samuel Johnson

The Last Ode

Oh, Sam, no more for thee the lyre
Doth tune its wheezy string!
Thy presence doth no more inspire
The student that did sing
A Greek Games lyric in thy praise
Or Class Day whack.
But Sammy, though we’ve loved thee dear,
We can not now repine
Because thou art no longer here
To weary us with rhyme.
O prove the saying is not true—
“The cat came back.”

To the Faculty

I

Hear me, ye Ph. D.'s and things
Who on Commencement Day
Demand the right of way
A down the middle aisle—
Endure a little while
To list the simple lay a student sings.

II

We love to boast about your fame,
As if you all were Platoes,
To friends of ours who chance to go
To colleges that we all know
Have trees and fields and streams to show,
But where the faculties they grow
Are very small potatoes.

III

We like the calm, brave way you stand
And do not even stutter,
Nor halt, nor hesitate, in spite
Of girls and girls, who notes in hand,
Put down in damning black and white
The slightest word you utter.

VII

So just remember, gentle souls,
For all your erudition,
You might take pattern after our Forgiving disposition.

IV

We own 'tis true enough we'd love
To give what is your due,
A gentle slam or two,
But 'tis a fact of common observation
In temper you're not like the dove
And so we really must use moderation.

V

We scorn to write initials down
When full names fill our mind,
No coward tricks like these will ere
Our lordly spirits bind.
So, tho' we do not flaunt your faults
Before the public gaze
Remember that in some respects
You might amend your ways.

VI

You must admit that we
Have never shown aversion
To furnish cheerfully
Some innocent diversion.
Oh think not it bereaves
Life of all compensations
To know that in your sleeves,
You laughed at our translations.

A Chemical Enigma

Pray solve my riddle, reader fair,
The answer I desire—
Was it the Sodium Ethylate
That was her deathblow dire?

Oh, no, in sooth it was not so,
That I can soon decide.
'Twas of the soap that Ester gave That Ethyl Io dide.

Limerick

Fair Barnard once had a rash scion
Who smiled as she rode on a lion;
They came back from the ride
With the lady inside
And the smile on the face of the lion!

Examinations at Barnard

The proctor tolls the bell of parting joy;
The nervous girl winds slowly to her place—
That girl who now must all her wits employ
Doth scan her paper with an anxious face.

Still fade the brilliant answers from her mind
And all her brains an awful blankness hold;
Sane answers to the questions she can't find
Nothing of import will her wits unfold.

Full many a girl with purest smile serene
The dark and slippery halls of Barnard bear—
Full many a one is born to flunk unseen
And waste her time in scribbling nonsense there.

Insult to Injury

It was a business manager
And she stoppeth one of three.
"I'm tearing to a nine o'clock;
Now wherefore stop'st thou me?"

"The prof is coming down the hall,
The door will soon be shut;
And if you stop to talk to me
I'll have another cut."

She holds her with her brawny hand
"Where is that ad?" quoth she.
"You've promised once, you've promised twice,
But nary an ad I see."

Just then a deaf'ning clanging fol-
Lowed by spasmodic burrs
Announced the fatal hour had come;
The victim shrieked a currese.

And tearing off three lovely puffs
Of costly yellow hair,
In deepest mental anguish
She sank upon the chair.

Just then a Student Councillor,
Calm, unsuspecting soul,
With staid and solemn step appeared
Munching a Tootsie Roll.

The Tootsie Roll fell to the floor.
(A doorboy cleared it up.)
She prods the victim with her boot
And sternly orders, "Up!"

"Barnard's most sacred rule in sit-
Ting thusly, you have broke.
Hand over fifty cents," she says,
Poking another poke.

The Soliloquies of a Mortarboard Editor the Week that the Mortarboard comes out

(A Tragedy, illustrated with Moving Pictures.)

“To-morrow there will be such fun!
I do wish that to-day weren't Sun.”
“But goodness me! What have I done?
No book for me—I have no Mon.”
“When pictures, dues, and fines are through,
Of cents I'll have but one or Tue.”
“A worse discovery I've made—
I've lost twelve pounds since I was Wed.*”
“The atmosphere is cold and blue,
I wish that last night it had Thu.†”
“O dear, I would that I could die!
They certainly can roast and Fri.”
“I really don't know where I'm at,
So hard upon us have they Sat.”
“I've changed my mind—that was no fun,
I'm very glad that this is Sun.”

*To be pronounced “Weighed” (poetic license).

†Newly invented past participle of the verb to thaw.

Advantages of a Higher Education

I

When on a street car strap I swing
And lose my footing at each fling,
No need to fume and fret, I wis,
Because I sway so floppily—
The cause I know is simply this:
Municipal monopoly.

CHORUS

O come and drink at wisdom's fount,
For we who go to college
Do all alleviate our woes
And quite forget our aches and throes
Through scientific knowledge.

II

When down a slippery bank I slide,
And manage neatly as I glide
To fill my shoes with grating sand,
And pierce my hands with slivers,
I know the valley where I land
Eroded was by rivers.

CHORUS

III

And if some sudden jolt should come
That really seems past bearing,
No need to be profanely dumb—
You'll find in scientific terms
A genteel mode of swearing.

CHORUS

Psychology

I dreamt I saw a speckled cow that wandered down a lane.
I really hope that I may never have a dream again.
Of many problems such as these my mind won't stand the strain:
If beef for lunch suggests a cow, what can suggest a lane?
Since all my nightly visions I must in the class explain,
I really hope that I may never have a dream again.

A Blue and White Monday

When chapel chimes were ringing sweet,
A few meek souls, with lagging feet,
And countenances glum and sad,
Followed, poor things, with reverence meet
The joy and pride of Undergrad,
Who stalked along, on duty bent,
Her grown sleeves flapping as she went.
Nor did one single glance she deign
To give these half a dozen lambs
That went to make this Mary's train.
But heedless past the theatre door
And past committee members sour,
There flocked a troop of those who would
With lunch improve the shining chapel hour,
And waiting 'neath the clock was one
Who spied a friend amid the throng
And at the bottom of the stairs
She hailed her with a cheerful song:

"Come into the lunch room, Maud,
For it's very nearly noon;

Come into the lunch room, Maud,
The chairs will be taken soon.
And the merry dishes are rattling now
What the Dean would call a 'toon?'"

Poor Maud, beneath her arm a ponderous tome
Doth port with heavy care;
And as she goes, a melancholy song
Ascends and floats upon the air:

"Billy! thou shouldst be with us at this hour!
Barnard hath need of thee! For though no shirk
How can she keep herself from looking sour,
With Dr. Baldwin piling on the work!
We miss thy pensive moonlight face
And hoary jokes that once we thought a bore.
Not that we love our Dr. Baldwin less,
But that we love our hours of leisure more!
Return again to these fair halls
That ne'er of thee can tire,
Where thy successor spouts away."
Beside a Barnard fire."

Oh, Maud, the mob is rushing on
And if you stop to wail and moan
You'll never get your lunch at all,
And have real cause to groan.
We'll stack up chairs for all our friends
Who may perhaps be coming late,
Then turn our backs on 'Buy a Brick'
And patient sit to watch and wait."

So speaks the friend; but all too soon
Her patience too gives way.
O'er bang of dish and clang of spoon
There sounds a mournful lay:

"Swiftly walk over the lunch room floor,
Waitress, long sought!
Out of the swinging pantry door
Haste thee nymph, with the chop I bought.
Hard-hearted art thou to delay
While we with hunger pass away,
Come! long sought."

A long lean lass with majestic stride
As if to answer her prayer appears;
In double clove hitch is her apron tied,
And over her head she bears a tray
Where every dish in this vale of tears
In dizzy pyramid doth sway.
To clutch at her arm as she goes by.
One luckless damsel madly tries;
And the very glasses upon her nose
Quiver with rage as she replies:

“Le’go my apron string!
How many hands do you think I own!
No, you can’t have a chop!
I tell you, they’re all gone!
You’ll make me lose my temper soon!
Why don’t you hustle ’round a bit,
And get yourself a spoon?”

She ceased; the friend is in a cheerful mood,
Perhaps her lunch has done her good.
No matter what the weight of woe an anxious spirit feels,
No matter though in pain we go
Through this dark valley here below;
Who can deny what we all know?
Life’s brighter after meals
And so she tries to cheer her friend
With words of optimistic trend:

“Well, if those profs grow much too mean,
We’ll tell our troubles to the Dean;
Just go to her and say:
‘We’re wearing away, Dean,
Our hair is turning grey, Dean,
We’re wearing away
’Neath the weight of our cares.
The Logic and the Math, Dean,
Are instruments of wrath, Dean,
That thorny make the path
Along which Barnard fares.
Oh, was not English B, Dean,
Enough to check our glee, Dean?
What made them think that we Might stand it harder still?
And Economics A, Dean,
Is now enough, they say, Dean,
To finish mortal clay—
And who knows but it will?’ ”

And so the interview goes on,
And just before it closes,
She says, “We’ll make that right!”
And smiles, just smiles, and then
Our thorns are changed to roses!

Recipe for Writing a College Song

Do you want a receipt for a song that inspires?
Sit down to listen and tune up your lyres;
For this is the way, the authorities say,
To fashion a song that will meet your desires.
Throw a few Alma Mater's at first in the pot,
And a Latin quotation from Harrow or Eton,
A dash of the Hudson will reach the right spot,
And a touch of the Palisades cannot be beaten.
Stir them up briskly and take off the scum
And a good college song is the residu-um.

If your muse in a humorous way is inclined,
Drop in an allusion to "shark" or to "grind,"
And Colum-bi-ay just over the way
For nothing but humor was ever designed;
Broadway for the Hudson you substitute now,
And subway and trolley-car with it you mix,
And any one surely can tell you just how
To season it highly with plenty of bricks.
Stir them up briskly and take off the scum
And a good college song is the residu-um.

A Heartfelt Tribute

O "Alma Martyr" truly so we name you when we sing
The many wailing dirges that we as your off'ring bring.
It's hard indeed to understand the students' attitude,
Since they expect you to endure with patient gratitude
The ornaments of rhyme which do increase your pulchritude.
We own our praise of no avail—you're better off without it;
And yet, for some strange reason, we cannot keep still about it.

The Snob

She is as haughty as can be
When walking down the hall;
And common folk like you and me
She never sees at all.

She always plays around with friends
Most carefully selected.
You must not so behave, my dear,
Or you'll not be elected.
(I hope my meaning is quite clear,
My words not disconnected.)

During an Examination

After all my kindness, too,
It really seems a shame
Just the time I need you so
To go and spoil the game!

Have I not carried you with care,
Point up, a week at least?
Is this the gratitude I get,
You blotty, scratchy beast?

But all my scolding is in vain, my bitter words are lost
On one who says in inky glee, "I have my fingers crossed!"

La Belle Dame Sans Souci (?)

O what can ail thee, lady fair,
Alone and palely loitering?
With what wild eyes you seem to scan
The page you bring!

For properties for Junior Show
I wander always woe-begone;
But hard as ever I have tried,
I have found none.

A candle-stick, a cloth of green,
A fender, and a hat or two—
These surely are not very much
To ask of you.

A teapot, and a gilded crown,
A Persian scarf, a morris chair—
Just make a bundle neat and take
The subway here.

Lament

“I am old,” said the Pink Scene,” “you cannot deny
That I’ve been here for years without number.
You cannot advance a sane reason why I
Should longer this college encumber.
I am patched, I am torn,
I am scratched, I am worn,
And I long for well-merited slumber.”

“Oh, no,” cried the students, “you cannot go yet!
We need you too badly by far;
For what would a play be without our old pet?
We will patch you and heal every scar.”
So with paint and with glue,
And with gold and with blue,
They left nothing its beauty to mar.

O brave old canvas, and braver old wood,
Your endurance is quite unsurpassed.
I suppose, when your gold and your blue are no good,
They will paint you in something to last,
In green or in gray
In a wonderful way
That will leave all beholders aghast.

To This Mortarboard

Thoughts that we dared not hint—
Much less than put in print—
Fancies that language never could express,
All thou could’st never be,
All men ignored in thee,
This hast thou meant to us who shaped thee for the press.

Song

Oh when first I came to college I was eager after knowledge
And myself I seemed to see
Most nonchalantly stalking thro' crowds who all were talking
Of my Φ B K key.

CHORUS

I was anxious for to shine in an academic line
As a prof of high degree
But as circumstances show, I shall never, never grow
To be a Ph. D.

CHORUS

All the letters I confess afford me keen distress
That after my name I see,
I pray you but reflect with what feeling I inspect
With no Ph.—a D.

A Midyear Canticle

I

Beautiful A, so quaint and rare
Lurking in a professor's lair,
Who three whole nights long
Would not grind,
If at the end, dear, thee she'd find?

CHORUS

Beautiful A, beautiful A!
Phi Beta Kappa looms far away.
(Repeat)

II

Beautiful A, whoever dares
Think such a mark will e'er be hers,
Finds to her grief her
Hopes were vain
When at the board she looks again.

CHORUS

Good Advice

Come let us think a while,
Pray let us ruminatē!
The profs all say we seek for facts
But never meditate.
Then let us do our history,
And just a theme or two,
A little Greek, a piece to speak,
Astronomy, economy,
Correct those frogs we drew,
Then take some hours off to view
The universe's mystery.
Come let us think awhile,
Pray let us ruminatē!
The profs all say we cram in facts
But never meditate.

The Mongerel of Isidor

I

Three weeks—and more—bold Isidor
Has nightly stalked within my dream.
He fairly makes me dizzy, for
I cannot pass a gate, a door,
By daylight, but he lurks, meseems.
A gaunt, grim shape, whose visage teems
With whiskers, and the love he swore
And I—I never can adore
This armour-plated Isidor.

II

Pale Ethelryne, demure and thin,
Dressed in the finest point d'esprit,
Has likewise flitted out and in My dreams. For she should seek to win

A knight, I said, a prodigy
In arms; and so she's followed me
In hopes I may a match begin
Betwixt her, and some hustlin'
Young knight in B. V. D.s of tin.

III

The curse is o'er—I dream no more
Of bold Sir I. and Ethelryne.
Last night they met—and he foreswore
His love for me; and fell before
The glances of the Heroine.
And now they wander out and in Each other's dreams, and never bore
Me with the sight of tin armour,
Whiskers, and laces that they wore.

NOTE—This form of verse will not be described in any manual of poetics. It is doggerel of no particular kind and may well be called "yellow doggerel" or "mongerel."

Society Notes

New York and Washington papers please copy.

Mr. W. D. T. Br—ster, the noted operatic star, has returned from a tour in Europe and by a recent performance has revived the popularity of “Little Brown Jug”—especially of the “Ha ha” part. His own popularity needs no revival.

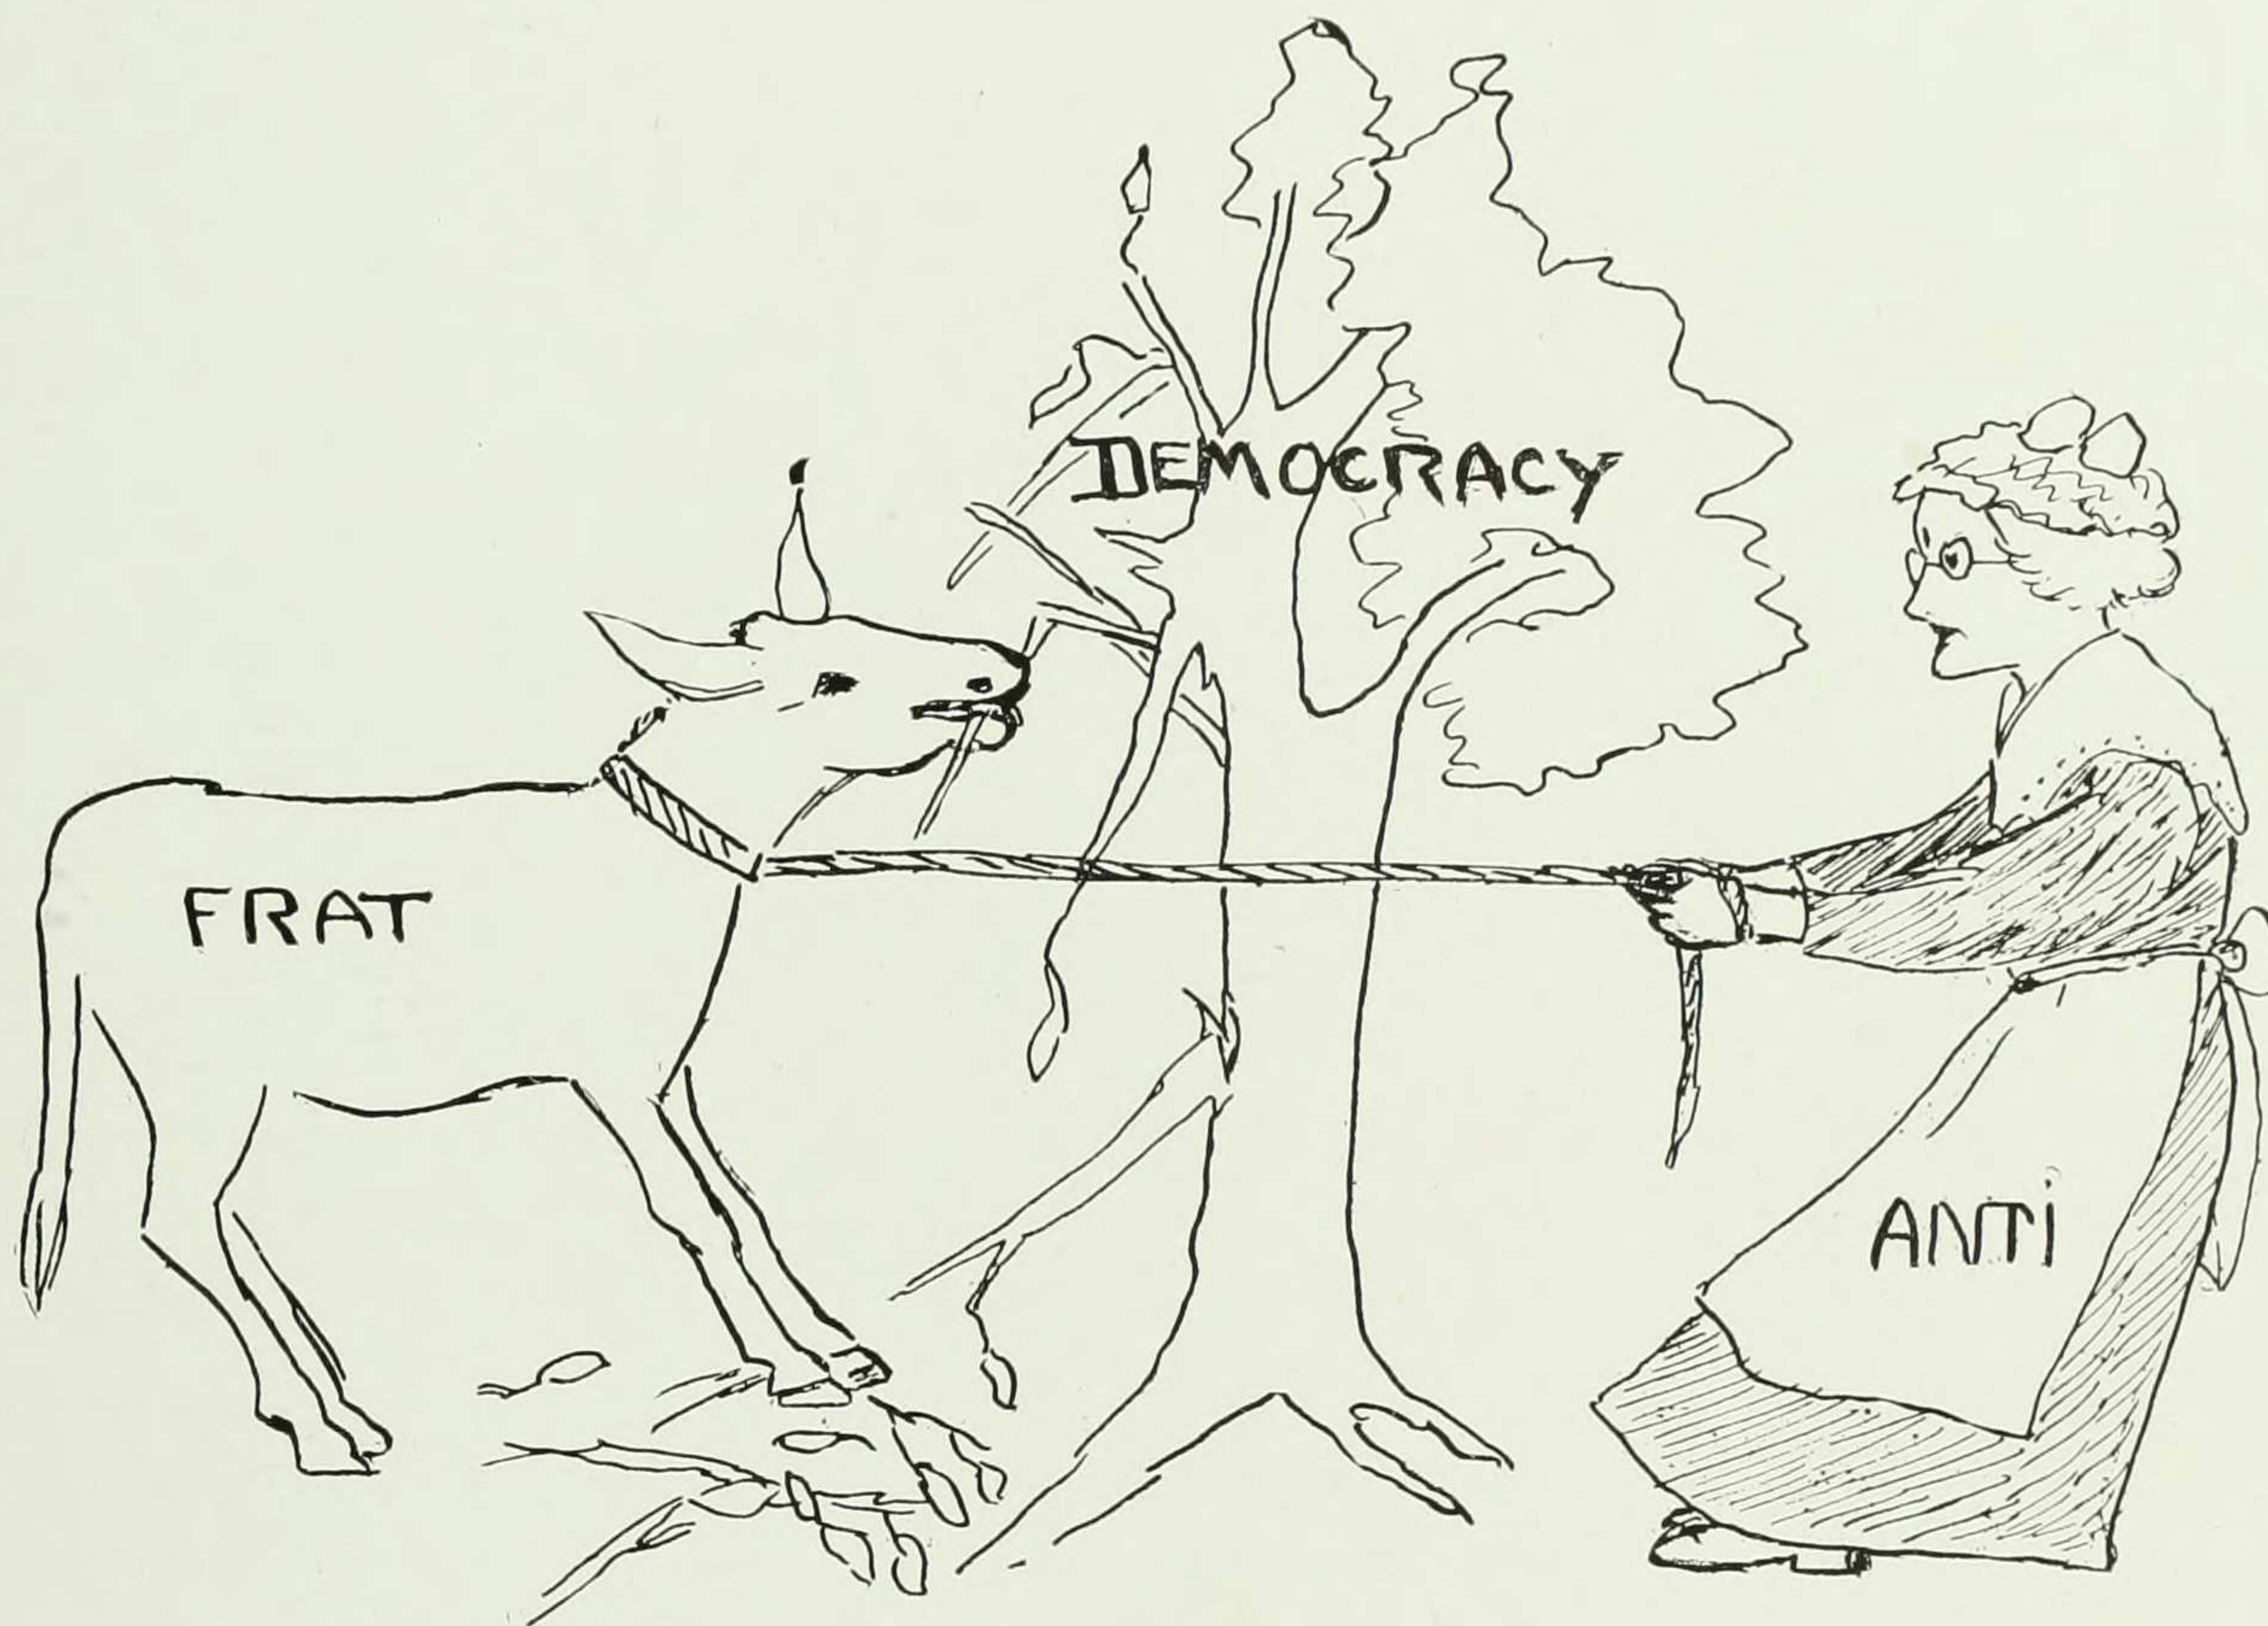

Another well known friend has come back to our circle from her sabbatical bat. Note the thermometer in the lower hall.

Dr. H. M. R—ds was observed the other night to be carrying only seven bundles and an umbrella. We are still worrying for fear he had lost something.

Dr. P—ter—d is thinking of leaving us to set up a school of landscape gardening and exterior decoration. Being a firm believer in the old theory that “charity begins at home” he has offered before going a few suggestions for the improvement of Barnard’s appearance. See Barnard Bulletin.

Evolution of The Mortarboard

The Balkin' Question

When as in gown our provost goes,
Methinks how fascinating are
The jagged endings of his clothes
That trail and flap in wondrous wise;
But ah! more fascinating far
The hum'rous twinkling of his eyes.

Freshman Year

September 28. Up early and to college, where I do spend a miserable day, albeit there are so many upper classmen who do show me a bewildering lot about Barnard. I do spend most of the morning signing papers, and it does occur to me that there are a vast deal of people interested in the color of my mother's eyes and the date of my last vaccination. In the afternoon to Columbia where the Opening Exercises are held. I do notice a great many queer-countenanced high brows in black caps and gowns, but a variety of colors and gold tassels withal. My insignificance is impressed upon me, but I do like a song which the whole assemblage did join in the chorus of, and which does end with the refrain "Through the storms of time abide." I do also feel much consoled for all my ignorance that I do know the words of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee" as well as anyone, and a deal better than some.

October 7. Up very early, and I do take my hair down, for it is Mysteries Day and I do fear that the sophomores will remove my hair ribbon if I do not anticipate them. I am very haughty all morning and am much pleased because I do not give one sophomore a chance to "cut" me. In the afternoon I am treated to a playlet by 1913, and do enjoy myself exceeding much more than do the sophomores. Home late and so to bed.

October 21. Up and to the nuptials of 1912 and 1914. It is a grand and solemn occasion, of which I do enjoy most the melodious chanting of the choir boys. We do love our sisters more and more, as our love-songs to them do testify.

November 2. Up and to a class meeting where we do elect our class president. It is close fighting between D. Fitch and L. Fox, and the latter is elected at a close margin. Everybody is much thrilled and greatly pleased thereat, and we do name Margaret Brittain who was our chairman, pro tem, as our vice-president. Isabel Randolph, does lead the "Roar, Lion, Roar."

November 11. To Barnard's foremost playhouse where I do view 1913's Sophomore Show, "Quality Street." It is a great pity for it is a very good production, and I must admit, whether I will or no, that I do like it; and Dorothy Cheesman is as charming a little actress as ever I do wish to see at Barnard, and she does remind me of Maude Adams withal, whom I have seen in the same piece.

November 25. Up and to college where we do show our appreciation by inviting our sisters to a kid party, the like of which I have never seen before. We do all wear our brothers' waistcoats and breeches, whereas the juniors do look most comikal in the frocks of little girls. We do dine upon peppermint sticks and animal crackers and do enjoy the feast most immensely.

December 2. Up very betimes, for I am to dress the heroine in the Junior Show, which is "Trelawney of the Wells," and the most excellent, wonderful, perfect production ever I do hope to see; withal "Connie" does give me one of her many posies and I do press it tenderly in a booke and I do dream sweet dreams that night, to an accompaniment as of a harpischord playing "Ever of thee I'm fondly dreaming," but I do seem also to hear a refrain which does many times repeat, "Have we no cheers?" I do live with my head in the clouds for a week.

December 20. Up very betimes and at my scrivening for I have five essays due before the Yuletide holidays, and one on the Roman Life. Working all day and not at all to bed.

January 25. To college, where I do sit through my last examination. I do breathe a sigh of relief that they are over, and I do intend a visit to the country to recuperate, albeit I do fear me that I have not passed any. Very haggard, to bed.

February 15. To college, where I do make preparations for the Mid-Year Finale, which is a jolly skit and merrie, and one wherein all the classes do participate and give vent to their pent-up spirits. I do laugh more than ever I have done before, but most at Pauline Cohn, who does give a side-splitting imitation of Miss Gildersleeve wearing her amulet inscribed thus: Φ . B. K.

February 16. To the Columbia Gymnasium for the installation of Miss Virginia C. Gildersleeve as Dean of Barnard College. I am in cap and gown for the first time and do feel important almost to bursting. There are many toasts and speeches, but I do not hear them nor do I see the assembled faculty of the Universitie, for that I do develop a most tremendous crush upon the new Dean and do adore her so that I have eyes for none other. Home, and to dream of a tall lady in a gold-tasseled cap and a velvet-striped gown and a Φ B K key on a gold chain.

February 23. To college, where I do hear of the resignation of Louise Fox from the presidency, and we are grieved so that we do present her with a bronze lion as a token of our regard, albeit we do elect to office Margaret Peck, and we are much pleased thereat.

March 3. Once more to the college playhouse to witness our Freshman Show, which is passing fair methinks, but wherein my elder college-mates do not agree, albeit we do entreat them most vociferously to "Sing Praise."

March 24. In a quiver of excitement to the Greek Games, which we do win as nearly as any other freshman class.

April 21. To witness "Jeanne d'Arc," in which "Connie" is the most saint-like being that ever I did behold. When I do hear she is made undergraduate president, I do regard her with awe and reverence, the which I do continue to do. Home very late and so, in a joyous flutter, to bed.

April 26. To the swimming match, the which, what with "Dodge," we do easily win.

May 6. Up and to the field where is held an inter-class contest in the athletics, but we do follow the noble example of our elder sisters whereby we do allow the odds, they being seniors, to win the banner.

May 3. Again to the polls, where we do elect Dorothy Fitch to the presidency, and she is verily the most popular in nineteen-fourteen, albeit Edith Mulhall does succeed her in her office.

June 5. To the Class Day Exercises of nineteen-eleven, and we do feel a little sorry at the losing of our seniors, which thought we do express to them in song. But they are not so clever as might be. On the campus, and so to part for the summer.

Sophomore Year

September 27. Up and to college, where I do greet my long-lost classmates and view with disdain the freshmen who do look uncommon scared though lively withal. In the afternoon I do go to the Opening Exercises at Columbia and grow weary almost to slumber, wherefore I resolve never to be thus bored again.

October 6. To the Mysteries, and I do greatly enjoy myself gloating over Fifteen. Freda Kirchwey does act as ringleader for her class and steals our esteemed mascot. There is a great hue and cry, and Freda is properly punished. We do treat them harshly, but like their spirit withal.

November 10. Up very early and to the Brinckerhoff playhouse, where I do view "The Road to Yesterday," which I like exceeding much, and the whole college does say it is the best Sophomore Show ever it has seen.

December 15. Again to the playhouse, but I do greatly dislike "The Card house," which does remind me of a variety show. There is good musick and "Cheese" is as charming a dancer as ever I did see. Be that as it may, I do disapprove of Nineteen-Thirteen's good taste.

December 18. Up betimes and to the periodical room of Columbia library, where I do spend the day at my scrivening. I do become so wise on the subject of "Immigration" that I have over one hundred cards on which are heated arguments pro and con. Home for supper which I have no appetite to eat. Then at my desk to write my Brief for the morrow, and so, very late, to bed.

December 19. To the Thompson Gymnasium in the evening, and I do enjoy myself more than ever I did before, at the Sophomore Dance, where it does seem so curious to see my classmates in evening dress and with escorts. I am in the best of spirits and do make merrie to excess, for I look forward to the Christmas holidays which beginne on the morrow.

January 17. All the college plunged in the most immoderate gloom at the thought of approaching examinations, and I do study some, too, especially the History A, which I do scarcely hope to pass.

February 16. To the dance at Earl Hall which is given to serve as a Mid-Year Finale, and I do enjoy the merriment after my arduous labours.

March 1. Up and to the college playhouse where is performed Nineteen-Fifteen's Freshman Show, which I must allow is better than was the "Who's Who" which was last year presented by my own esteemed, though slightly unoriginal, class. There is a song and dance anent the "flesh-reducing cyanide," which does give food for many days' discussion and Bulletin buzzing, albeit I did consider the play as good a skit as ever I did see on the Barnard stage.

March 7. To college betimes, bright in the hope that my dear sisters will win the Sing Song, for they do have a song leader who is poetic and witty withal. But I am doomed to disappointment, for though we do not win ourselves, that does reckon me not a little. But it does grieve me sore that nineteen-thirteen is awarded the trophy. We do therefore refuse to sing their silly "Buy a Brick" and join with our sisters instead in the chorus of their clever "Baffin's Bay." I am peeved for many days at the worthy, in some ways, judges.

March 22. Up all night as I do make my costume for the famous Greek Games and rehearse many times the words of the Entrance March. Very early to college where I do cut all my classes, albeit Miss Reimer does conduct a chemistry quiz. To the Columbia Gymnasium, which our efficient though at times officious chairman does procure for the occasion. I am most unduly excitable, for the freshmen are a comely lot and I do tremble somewhat for ourselves. Albeit, the outcome is a grand victory for nineteen-fourteen. Everything is perfect, and we do carry our chairman about on our shoulders amid plaudits and acclaim. Home very late, and so with a triumphant smile on my lips, to bed.

April 17. Undergraduate elections, which do cause much turmoil among the fraternities, the non-fraternities and the ballot-boxes. Helen Dana is made undergraduate president and is reverently yelled at when she does appear at the Teacher's College swimming pool, where, by the way, nineteen-fifteen does win the swimming contest.

April 19. To the Brinckerhoff playhouse once again to view "A Winter's Tale," which is produced by the élite of Barnard's undergraduate body. It is the last publick appearance but one of our admirable star actor, undergraduate president and general paragon of perfection, the world-famous Constance von Wahl, and the freshmen do weep with emotion at the spectacle of their beloved, albeit at a distance, idol sharing with her college-mates the triumph of her final appearance in any undergraduate play behind Brinckerhoff's footlights.

May 4. Up, and despite the Suffrage Parade in which I do long to march, to college for Field Day. In the playhouse we do sing a song from which I do gather we are grateful to one Mrs. Anderson for "the field on which we play." Great excitement does ensue, and as is her custom, nineteen-fourteen does emerge victorious from the fray to bear away in triumph the Field Day banner.

May 1. Up betimes, for elections do become numerous these days. Dorothy Fitch is at last elected president of the class to the joy and "rip, give a roar" of everyone. There are so many Junior officers to be chosen that not one fraternity is neglected and everyone does feel satisfied.

May 18. Up very early and to the sandwich-making, for it is our farewell party to our beloved sisters, and we do celebrate it in a picknick on the Palisades. Drink, provender, tears and songs mingle with our farewells. We do frolick the whole day through, and were it not that we are depressed at the thought of parting from our sisters, it would be the jolliest party ever I was at, and it was the most memorable withal. Home, and so, very tired, to bed.

June 6. To Nineteen-twelve's Class Day, which is the cleverest and withal the wittiest that ever I could conceive. In the evening I do act as waitress at the Senior Banquet, where I do weep bitter tears, albeit there is much merry-making and many farewell speeches. Later to the cold, cold campus, where we do serenade them and they us until midnight revels do commence. Not at all to bed.

Junior Year

September 25. Up very late, for Opening Exercises do take place, and I am now at an age where I do know better than to attend. But I do enjoy myself exceeding much and am asked by each of my fellow-classmates how I do like being an upper-classman, the which I do like immensely. After the exercises I do meet my freshman who is still thrilling with the inspiring melody of "Stand, Columbia," and I do treat her to some tea and proceed to introduce her to her Alma Mater's fair daughters. She is much impressed but does keep close to my side withal.

September 27. Up and ostensibly to the Y. W. C. A. entertainment to the freshmen, but I do really betake myself to the Columbia campus, where the freshmen and the sophomores do indulge in a tug-of-war, the which I do greatly enjoy, and I do hear there are but three upperclassmen to dance with the freshman at the entertainment withal.

October 4. Up and to the wedding of our class with the freshmen. We are united in the holy bonds of matrimony, as Mr. and Mrs. Leo Dragon, and we are a jocund companie and merrie. Louise Fox does act as the priest, and is as funny a one as ever I did see, and Carol Lorenz is as pretty a bride withal. I am minded of nineteen-twelve, and several of their members do witness the ceremony, and do enjoy it, methinks, as they were not already old and graduated.

October 18. To the Mysteries, and I do feel my gray hairs most keenly, for I do not take any part therein, but do cheer my little sisters on and tell them not to fear the silly sophomores who do bark a deal more than they do bite, and they are enraged thereat withal. I do restore to Pscyhe Cattell the ribband with which she does bind up her tresses, and I do admire her for her pluck, for that she does nobly resist her tormentors and does run a deal faster than do they. Freshmen do lose their hearts to May Kenny, who does follow in the footsteps of Wyeth and von Wahl, methinks, and her smile does bring even the august faculty to her feet. Home late, and, in triumph to bed.

December 19. To the Sing Song, and very lucky in that we do inherit Chrystene Straiton as our leader, for that, under her surveillance we do win the trophy and that we are, this year, the Junior Class does have naught to do with the decision of the fair-minded judges. Dr. Knapp is so vastly amused at the singing withal, that his chuckles alone would repay the price of admission, and we do resolve to ask Dr. Crampton for judge next year.

January 20. To the Ella Weed Librarie, where I do spend my days, and for that it does close too soon.

November 7. To the Hallowe'en entertainment which the freshmen do prepare for us. It is a ghostly affair and albeit I am slightly afflicted with ennui, it is a noble attempt for such little younkens, and be it said for them that I am provided with provender in ample sufficiency.

November 8. Up and with misgivings to "His Excellency the Governor," which is the Sophomore Play, and I must admit that it is as good an one as ever I did see, and nineteen-fifteen is a likely class, withal, and comely.

December 6 and 7. Again to the playhouse and everyone remarking that our play-actors are the best that ever Barnard did present, except those of nineteen-twelve, and all liking the "Adventures of Lady Ursula," so that there is talk of little else for many days. All the mid-year examinations are soon to be held, and I do tremble for that I did not study all the term.

February 5. I do receive my marks, and they do shake my faith in the labour of the studying and much scrivening, for that I do pass all my examinations without much ado, for all the proof-reading of the "Mortarboard."

She could argue still.

SOPHIE ANDREWS

In quietness and confidence shall be thy strength.

BERTHA BADANES

Never do to-day what you can put off until to-morrow.

MABEL BALDWIN

I have fumed like champagne that is fizzy.

MARION BARBER

The cold wind burns my face and blows its frosty pepper up my nose.

JEAN BARRICK

And panting time toiled in vain not to get there first.

GLADYS BATEMAN

In mathematics she was greater Than Tycho Brahe or Erra Pater.

MINNIE BAUM

Some think the world is made for fun and frolic, And so do I.

ELSA BECKER

It is a frisky Junior now.

ESTHER BEERS

Arma virumque cano.

JUDITH BERNSTEIN

She proved her proposition true
With firstly, secondly, and thirdly.

MARGUERITE BEVIER

So timorously shy and small.

WINIFRED BOEGEHOLD

You are above
The little forms that circumscribe you.

JULIA BOLGER

With a smile that was childlike and bland.

MARGARET BRITTAIN

Divinely tall.

VIRGINIA BRITTAIN

And most divinely fair.

KATE BROWN

When I like, I dearly like;
When not—don't ask me why.

LUCILLE BUNZL

Better late than never.

CAROLINE BURGEVIN

And I never larf and I never smile.

MARGARET CARMAN

Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle and low—an excellent thing in woman.

JULIA CARROLL

But still she was a sober soul.

ETHEL CHERRY

Buxom, blithe and debonair.

MILDRED CLARK

There is a garden in her face
Where roses and white lilies grow.

MARIE CLINCH

A laugh is worth a hundred groans in any market.

ALICE CLINGEN

Neat but not gaudy.

CAROLINE COHN

With mirth and with laughter
Let old wrinkles come.

NANCY CORYELL

All things are full of labor.

EUNICE CURTICE

Her sympathetic kindness
No sort of limit knew.

JANE DALE

Sober, steadfast, and demure.

EDITH DAVIS

And must I work? Oh, what a waste of time!

ESTELLE DE YOUNG

That never still small voice.

HELEN DOWNES

CHRISTINE DUNNET

MARGUERITE ENGLER

I say just what I think, and nothing more nor less.

Everybody has won and all must have prizes.

A merry heart maketh a cheerful countenance.

JEANETTE FERGUSON

DOROTHY FITCH

MAY FLINT

Whose wit, in the combat, gentle as bright,
Ne'er carried a heart-stain away on its blade.

High in all the people's hearts.

A little prattler among men.

LOUISE FOX

I have been taught to love the good, the pure, the unalloyed
And wicked boys I've understood I always should avoid.

HORTENSE FRIEDMAN

Who first invented work and bound the free
And holiday-rejoicing spirit down?

ETTA FRIEND

Throw Physic(s) to the dogs.

FRANCES GATES

There is little of the melancholy element in her.

ISABEL GREENBERG

The hardest thing for me to do is to keep quiet.

GERTRUDE GREENWALD

Come here and be spanked for your 'satiabile curiosity.

CHRISTINA GROF

RUTH GUERNSEY

ELEANOR HADSELL

How hard she studied it were vain to tell.

To almost all things could she turn her hand.

I have a little shadow that goes in and out with me.

HARRIET HARRER

FLORENCE HARRIS

ESTHER HAWES

Thou art full of love and honesty.

For I've always been distinguished
For a strong poetic feeling.

Discretion shall preserve thee.

BEATRICE HEINEMANN

DOROTHY HEROD

EDNA HESS

Laughter holding both his sides.

For she is sweet and wise and charming.

Eyes like the lakes of Killarney.

RITA HILBORN

GERTRUDE HOCHSCHILD

MARION HOEY

Whate'er that gal were sot to do, she done her level best.

Why should I wear green?

If she had any faults, she has left us in doubt.

FANNY JACOBSON

MARJORIE JACOBSON

LAURA JEFFREY

Thou say'st an undisputed thing
In such a solemn way.

Never such an arm as mine to smite the tennis ball.

But from her early youth she had a waggish turn of mind.

ANNIE KELLY

MAY KENNY

MARY LAWLER

Clever and snappy,
Perfectly happy.

The smile that thrills from any distance.

Be not the first by whom the new is tried.

EDITH LEVY

CHARLOTTE LEWINE

LOUISE LINCOLN

From childhood's hour I have not been as others were.

Candor is the brightest gem of criticism.

A pearl of minstrelsy.

EMILY LOWNDES

ELLA McCRODDEN

GRACE McLAUGHLIN

A maid was there of quiet ways,
A student of old books and says.

The fear of being silent makes me mute.

Time and tide must wait for me.

HELEN McVICKAR

A smooth and steadfast mind,
Gentle thoughts and calm desires.

ELIZABETH MACAULAY

Everything arising from or convertible into work—energy.

DAISY MACLEAN

Tie up the ringlets round your cheek.

RUTH MANSER

Silent and chaste she steals along
Far from the world's gay, busy throng.

RUTH MARLEY

You write with ease to show your breeding,
But easy writing's cursed hard reading.

ELIZABETH MATHISON

One good head is better than a thousand hands.

ELEANOR MAYER

She can run, she can jump;
She's really a trump.

FRANCES MILLS

A scorn for flattery and a zeal for truth.

SIDNEY MINER

In every gesture, silent dignity.

JEAN MÖHLE

The early bird catches the worm.

MARGARET MORGAN

Her stature tall—I hate a dumpy woman.

HELEN MOUNT

Yet a little sleep—a little slumber,

EDITH MULHALL

LULU NICOLA

IPHIGENE OCHS

Born to smile serenely
Like those that rule the land.

One of three.

Who, too deep for her hearers, still went on refining,
And thought of convincing while they thought of dining.

FRANCES O'DONNELL

ALTA ORD

ADELAIDE OWENS

Hail to thee blithe Spirit!

She will not swagger nor boast.

Careful in scrutiny is she and conscientious in judgment.

FLORENCE PALMER

It is easier to be critical than to be correct.

MABEL PATTERSON

We only knew she came and went.

MARGARET PECK

A plump and pleasing person.

LUCIE PETRI

What size do you want to be?

JULIA PIERPONT

A creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food.

GERTRUDE RAFF

There are those also, sombre of mien and wise with the wisdom of books, who frequent museums and burrow in crypts.

ISABEL RANDOLPH

MARGARET REID

CORINNE REINHEIMER

Will o' the wisp, with a flicker of Puck in you.

She will sing the song that pleaseth you.

And if aught true in poets' visions be,
My name and fame have immortality.

EDITH REINHEIMER

FLORENCE RHOADES

FRANCES ROEVER

O strange indifference!

An incidental greatness character'd her unconsidered ways.

There was a naughty little twinkle in her eye.

LUISA ROS

Dulce ridentem, amabo, dulce loquen-tem Lalagen.

JULIETTE ROSENTHAL

And I was young—too young by far.

MARY ROSS

I feign not friendship when I hate;
I fawn not on the great in show.

ELIZABETH SCHMIDT

There is more owing her than is paid.

MARGUERITE SCHORR

We would applaud thee to the very echo.

JEANETTE SCHULMAN

So be merry and be jolly.

FANNY SCHWARTZMAN

FLORENCE SCHWARZWAELDER

FLORENCE SEIGLER.

A girl with dimples always smiles.

For she was a tidy Pachyderm.

And she talked on.

GLADYS SELDNER

CLARA SHACKLETON

BESSIE SHAW

Her hair drooped round her pallid cheeks.

Hence, vain deluding joys!

Man is of man's life a part
'Tis woman's whole existence.

ANNA SHERLINE

HELEN SHIPMAN

HATTIE SONDHEIM

Don't attempt to be a set of greasy grinds.

I am not one who much or oft delight
To season my fireside with personal talk.

Of all her parts, the eyes express
The sweetest kind of bashfulness.

GERTRUDE STEPHENS

EDITH STIRN

SARAH STURGES

Sighed and looked and sighed again.

Up, up! my friend, and quit your books,
Or surely you'll grow double.

I know the croaking chorus from the Frogs of Aristophanes.

HELEN SUMNER

RUTH TALMAGE

EDITH THOMAS

Hir nose tretys; here eyen greye as glass.

Come, let us go to a land where gods of the old world wandered.

Dee-lighted.

IRENE TRACK

JEANETTE UNGER

AMY VORHAUS

A fig for care, and a fig for woe!

The mold of fashion and the glass of form.

A sweet behavior and a solid mind.

ALICE WALLER

Nods and becks and wreathed smiles.

LILLIAN WALTON

It is always a silly thing to give advice, but to give good advice is absolutely fatal.

CHARLOTTE WELLS

A woman of an invincible spirit.

EDITH WILLIAMS

Work, work, work,
Till the brain begins to swim.

ROSE MARIE WISE

It is good to be merry and wise.

MARTHA WYCKOFF

I concede her nose. It is very pious; it points the straight way to heaven.

Chapter VII.

Alice wondered how she had dared to do it, but she certainly had knocked at the office door. For a minute she thought of flight, hesitated, and was lost. There he stood before her, that dreadful professor, author of the well-known text-book "F's and How to Get Them." He wore a bland and confident smile that irritated her out of her first fright.

"I've come," she began boldly, "to see about my mark."

"Oh!" said the professor.

"I think perhaps it is a little lower than I deserve."

"Oh!" said the professor.

Alice was torn between a desire to weep and a longing to throw the nearest movable object at his head.

"Is there anything that can be done about it?" she asked.

"I never change a mark," he replied, and stared solemnly at her.

She shifted her weight to the other foot and asked in an uncertain voice, "Couldn't you go over the paper with me?"

"I have thrown the papers away," he said in the same tone, and continued to stare at her.

"Will you show me my term marks?"

"Certainly," he answered amiably, as he reached for his book. In silence he opened it and showed her the page. Alice thought there was nothing there to warrant a complete failure and asked about her final paper.

"I don't remember your paper, and I never change a mark."

"You mean you make it a rule never to admit you have made a mistake?" snapped Alice.

A rich crimson color started slowly from the back of his collar and rose to what was left of his hair.

"It will do no good to discuss the subject," he said. "I never change marks. Good morning!"

As the door closed behind her, Alice stamped her foot at the Bulletin Board. She shook her fist at the rows of marks confronting her.

"What do I care for you!" she cried. "You are only a set of marks!"

At this they all rose in the air with a sound like that of Miss Boyd's typewriter. She tried to beat them off with her hands, but they fell with their full weight upon her—and then she woke up!

My Arrow Collar Man

Is he twenty, is he forty,
 Arrow Collar Man, so haughty—
 I have loved him long and truly,
 In his pictures, old and newly.
 Arrow Collar Man, above me
 In the subway, do you love me?

Though my eyes behave sedately,
 I begin to fear that lately
 He divines my warm affection,
 As I glance in his direction.
 Arrow Collar Man, above me
 In the subway, do you love me?

Watch him swing his cane—how stunning!
 There's his bulldog—see it running.
 Oh, such style, such grace, such bearing
 In the cravenet he's wearing.
 Arrow Collar Man, above me
 In the subway, do you love me?

Polished boots that glisten brightly—
 Checkered cap raised so politely—
 Socks with just a little color—
 Other men look so much duller!
 Arrow Collar Man, above me
 In the subway, do you love me?

Striped tie of red and yellow—
 Isn't he a stunning fellow!
 And his collar—full four inches,
 Dearest man, I fear it pinches.
 Arrow Collar Man, above me
 In the subway, do you love me?

What a wealth of chest and shoulder!
 I'm afraid he's growing bolder—
 Shall I then outrage convention
 If I smile at his attention?
 Arrow Collar Man, above me
 In the subway, do you love me?

AT TEACHERS COLLEGE

There is a man in our class
Who is so wondrous wise
That, when he makes suggestions,
We open wide our eyes;

But when the teacher asks him "Why?"
This wisest of all men
Just picks up his suggestions
And takes them back again.

TO A WINDOW-SHADE

Thou restless, ill-bred thing of cloth and wood
That flappeth through the silent hours of sleep,
What ails thee, that in pain or fretful mood
Thou knockest at my casement, till I weep
For rest long due?

I fain would rise and smite thee, troubled shade,
And tear thee from thy moorings, lay thee low,
But bed is warm—my vengeful hand is stayed,
And so I wildly pray for rest, but O
Heaven rest thee, too!

JUST AS GOOD AS EVER

An old physician, noted for his brusque manner as well as his success in treating children, was called by a young mother to attend her baby while teething. The doctor ordered the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. "But, doctor," protested the young mother, "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP is such an old fashioned remedy." "Madam," replied the doctor, "babies are old fashioned things."

Nights of Painful Watching with poor, sick crying children can be avoided by the use of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It relieves the little sufferer from pain, Cures Wind Colic, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, Corrects Acidity and during the process of teething it is invaluable.

“See How Easy it is, Tilly?”

Show the new girl just once what can be done with Jell-O and then you will always be sure of one fine dish for dinner. She may spoil everything else, but she will make a fine dessert of for she cannot go wrong there.

And Jell-O isn't a dinner dish alone. It is served at lunch and supper, and is never out of place.

Jell-O and hot water, without anything else, make these delicious dishes in a minute.

There are seven delightful flavors and seven beautiful colors: Strawberry, Raspberry, Lemon, Orange, Peach, Cherry and Chocolate.

At all grocers', 10c. each.

The splendid recipe book, “DESSERTS OF THE WORLD,” in ten colors and gold, will be sent free to all who write and ask for it.

THE GENESEE PURE FOOD CO., Le Roy, N. Y., and Bridgeburg, Can.

The name JELL-O is on every package in big red letters. If it isn't there, it isn't JELL-O.
