FACULTY

To The Faculty

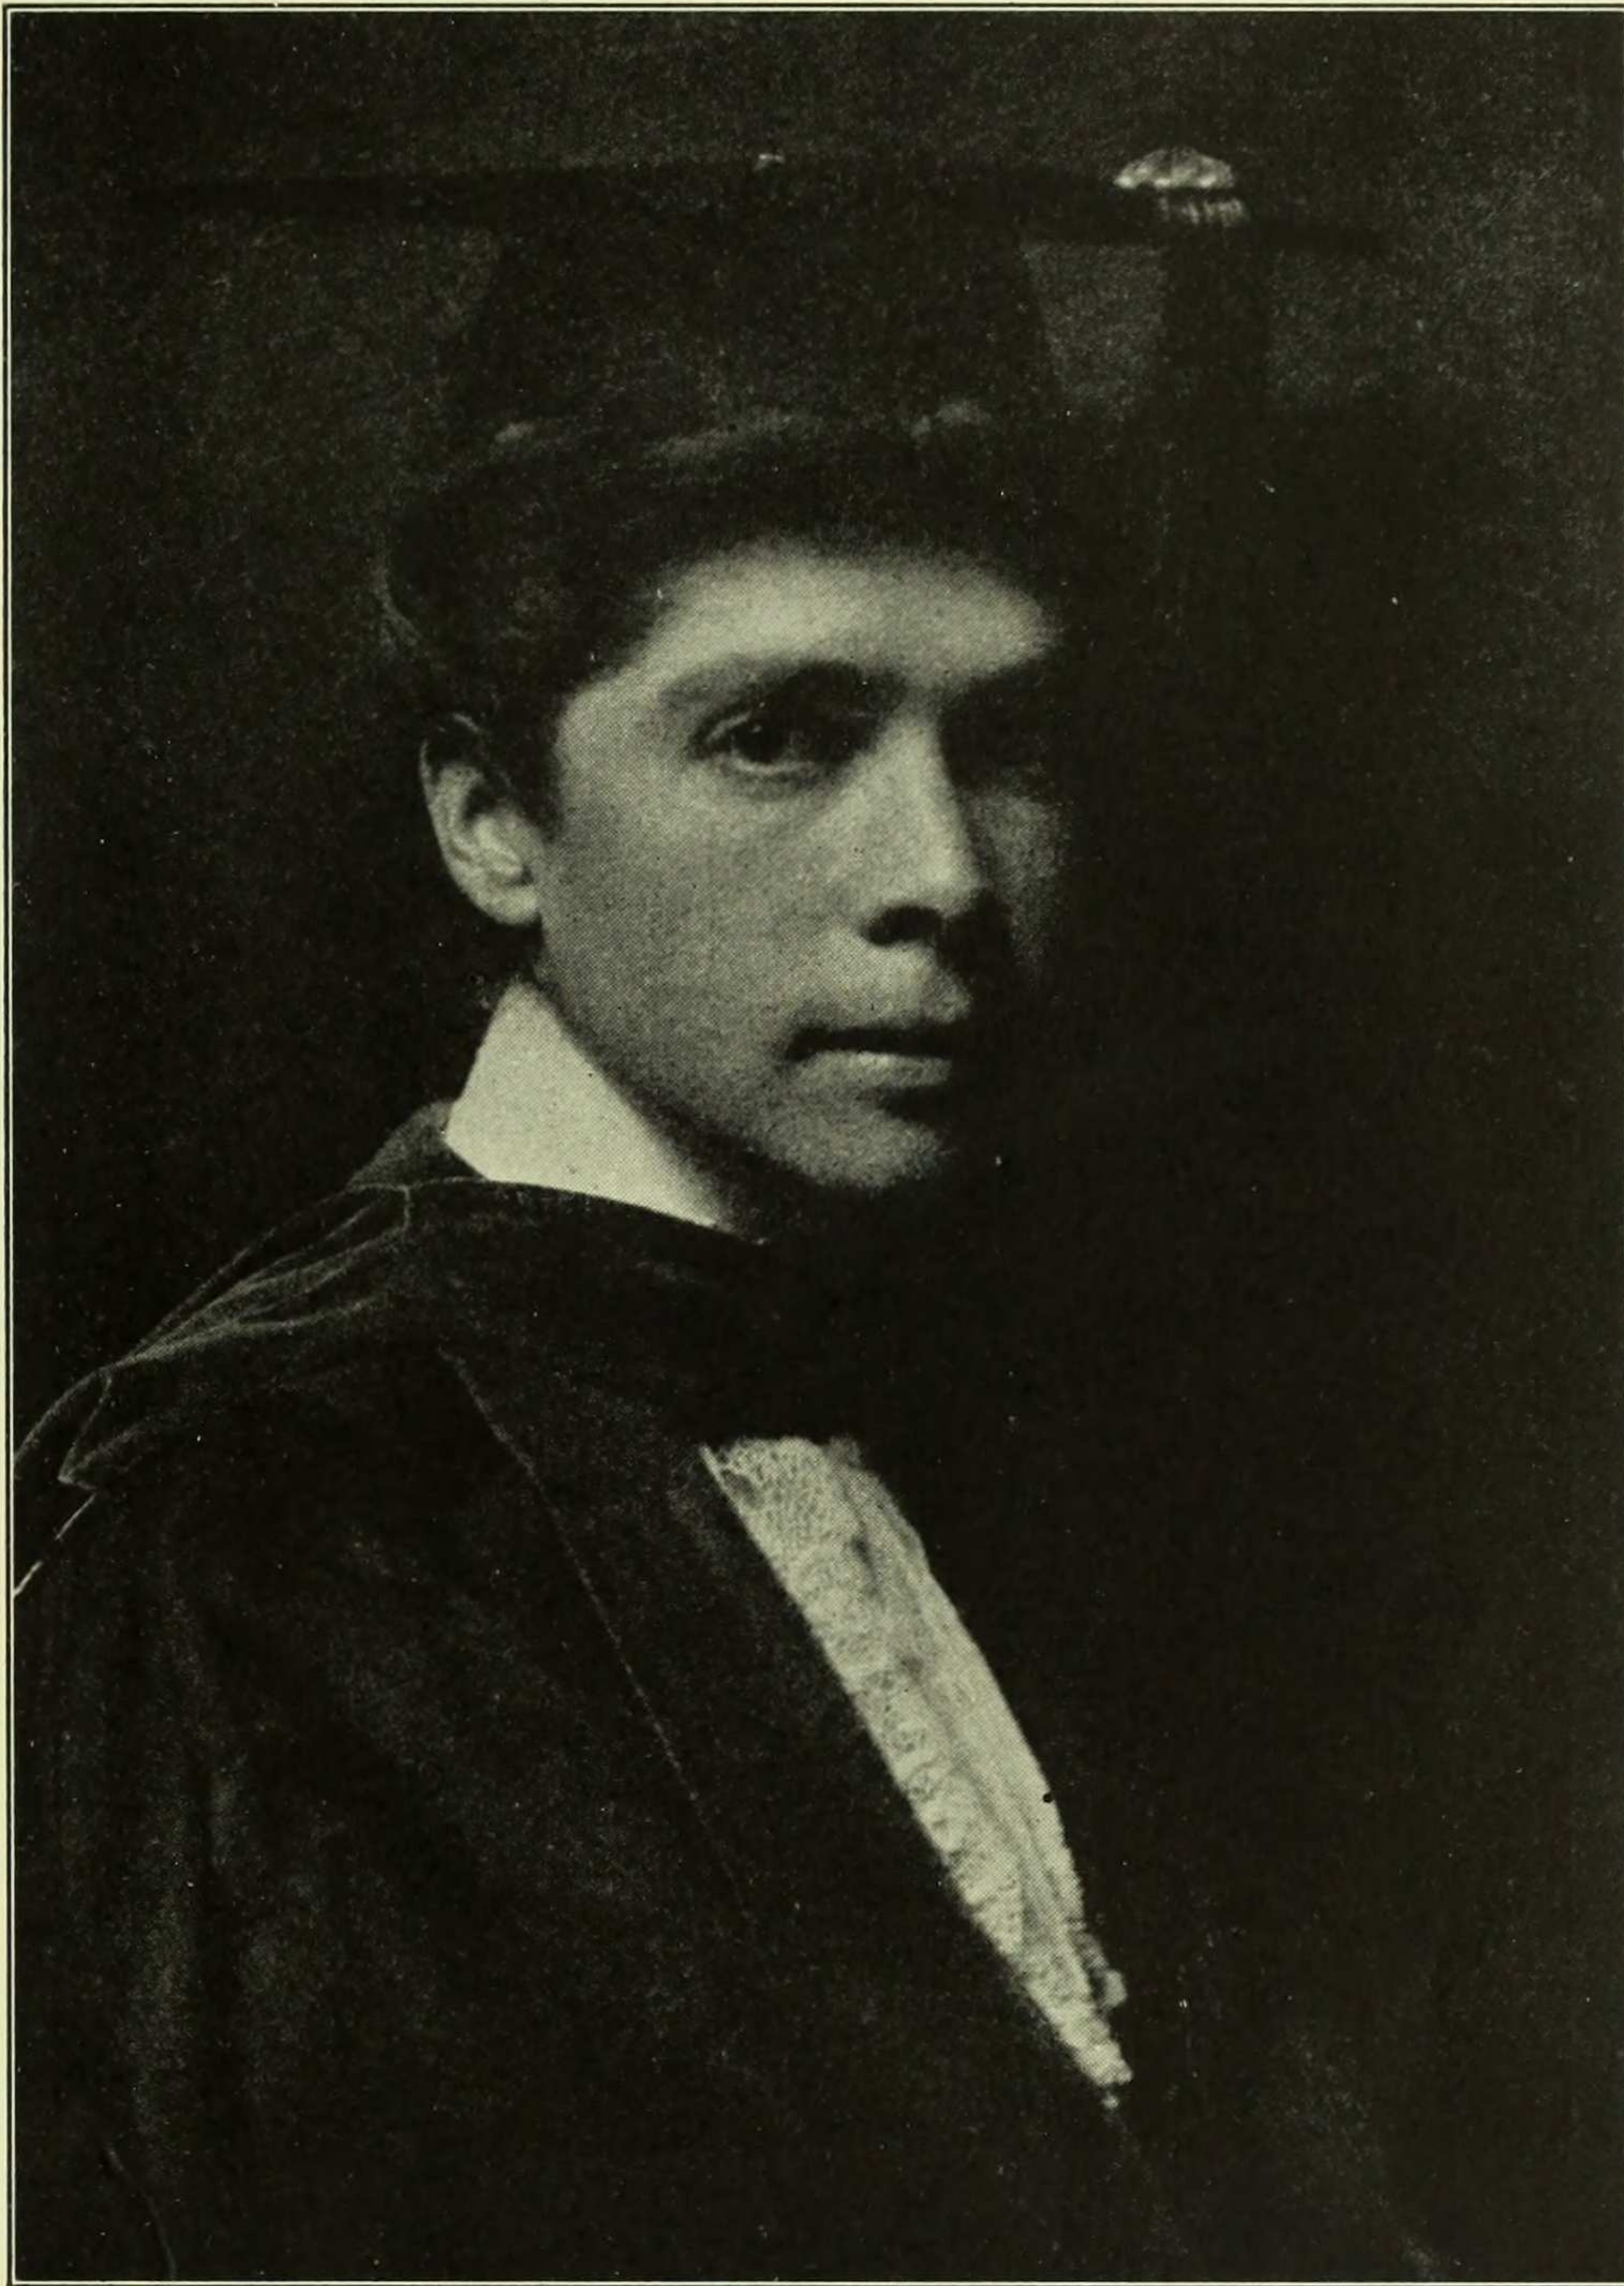

*Earnest we came to you, eager, expectant,
Children in love with life, though without knowing
Aught of its beauty, its wonder, its horror,
Asking to learn to live, fully and truly.
Straightway you answered us, steadily led us
Forward to knowledge, and wisdom, and tolerance;
Taught us the laws of the earth and its dwellers;
Taught us of men and their dreads and desires;
Taught us of life and its wide opportunities;
Taught us to seek for truth all the world over;
Gave us your youth that our search might be bolder;
Gave us your strength that our hearts might be braver;
Gave us your faith that our aim might be truer;
Gave us your wisdom that we might be gentler.
May we live thoroughly all you have taught us,
Live to be women, true-hearted and faithful,
Giving the world of the wisdom you've given us,
With hearts full of gratitude for your glad service.*

WE, the members of the 1921 Mortarboard, in order to add a bit of humor, pronounce judgment, injure academic tranquillity, give no chance for defense, provoke the general welfare, and record the weaknesses of the Faculty for ourselves and our posterity, do hereby inscribe and illustrate these knocks, for the delight of the students of Barnard.

If I Were Ever a Ph.D.—

For public functions occasionally
I'd don my gown
With a delicate frown,
For a mortarboard isn't particularly Becoming to me.

On a golden chain would I wear my key—
Of course—my key—
And in talking to strangers of lesser degree
I could not resist it—I'd turn it and twist it Nonchalantly.

And if ever a Senior should try to be Familiar with me Particularly
Before underclassmen, I'd fill her with fear
By a terrible sneer,
For the students must learn the proper degree
Of respect to be shown to the Faculty.

IF I were ever a Ph.D. !
But first, ah me !
'Tis necessaree
To acquire that fleeting A.B., A.B.

Oh, can the Undergraduate Learn clearly to enunciate
With dignity officiate?
Oh, can that ever be?
Though negatively you opine,
Your sad conclusion's out of line.
For Barnard's class of '99
Produced our V. C. G.

"I weep for you," the Provost said
"I deeply sympathize."
And with a yawn, he sorted out
Those themes of largest size,
Holding the shell-rimmed spectacles
Before his twinkling eyes.

Prof. C. S. B.,
Authoritee,
On matters Chaucerian,
Wears a goatee,
Neat as can be,
In manner Shakespearian.

Special Clipping from the N. Y. Philosophers' Daily:
Professor Montague, of Barnard College, upon arising late for breakfast and being obliged to boil his own egg, was discovered, egg in hand, waiting for his watch to boil.

There's a Bustle
And a Hustle—
Goodness, gracious, me!
So efficient
And omniscient—
That is Kate Dotee.

Oh may we make so bold
As to bid him have a care
In tipping back so awfully far
On the back legs of his chair?

Elle est fine,
De bonne mine
Elle est intelligente.
With qualities
Such as these,
Is there more you could want?

Doctor Mullins we've pursued
For to take his photograph.
He seemed eager to elude.
Now we have him—see him laugh!

Everyone says
That Miss Prenez
Must hail from Washington Square.
For of Po-et-ree
She's a devotee—
And furthermore there's her hair.

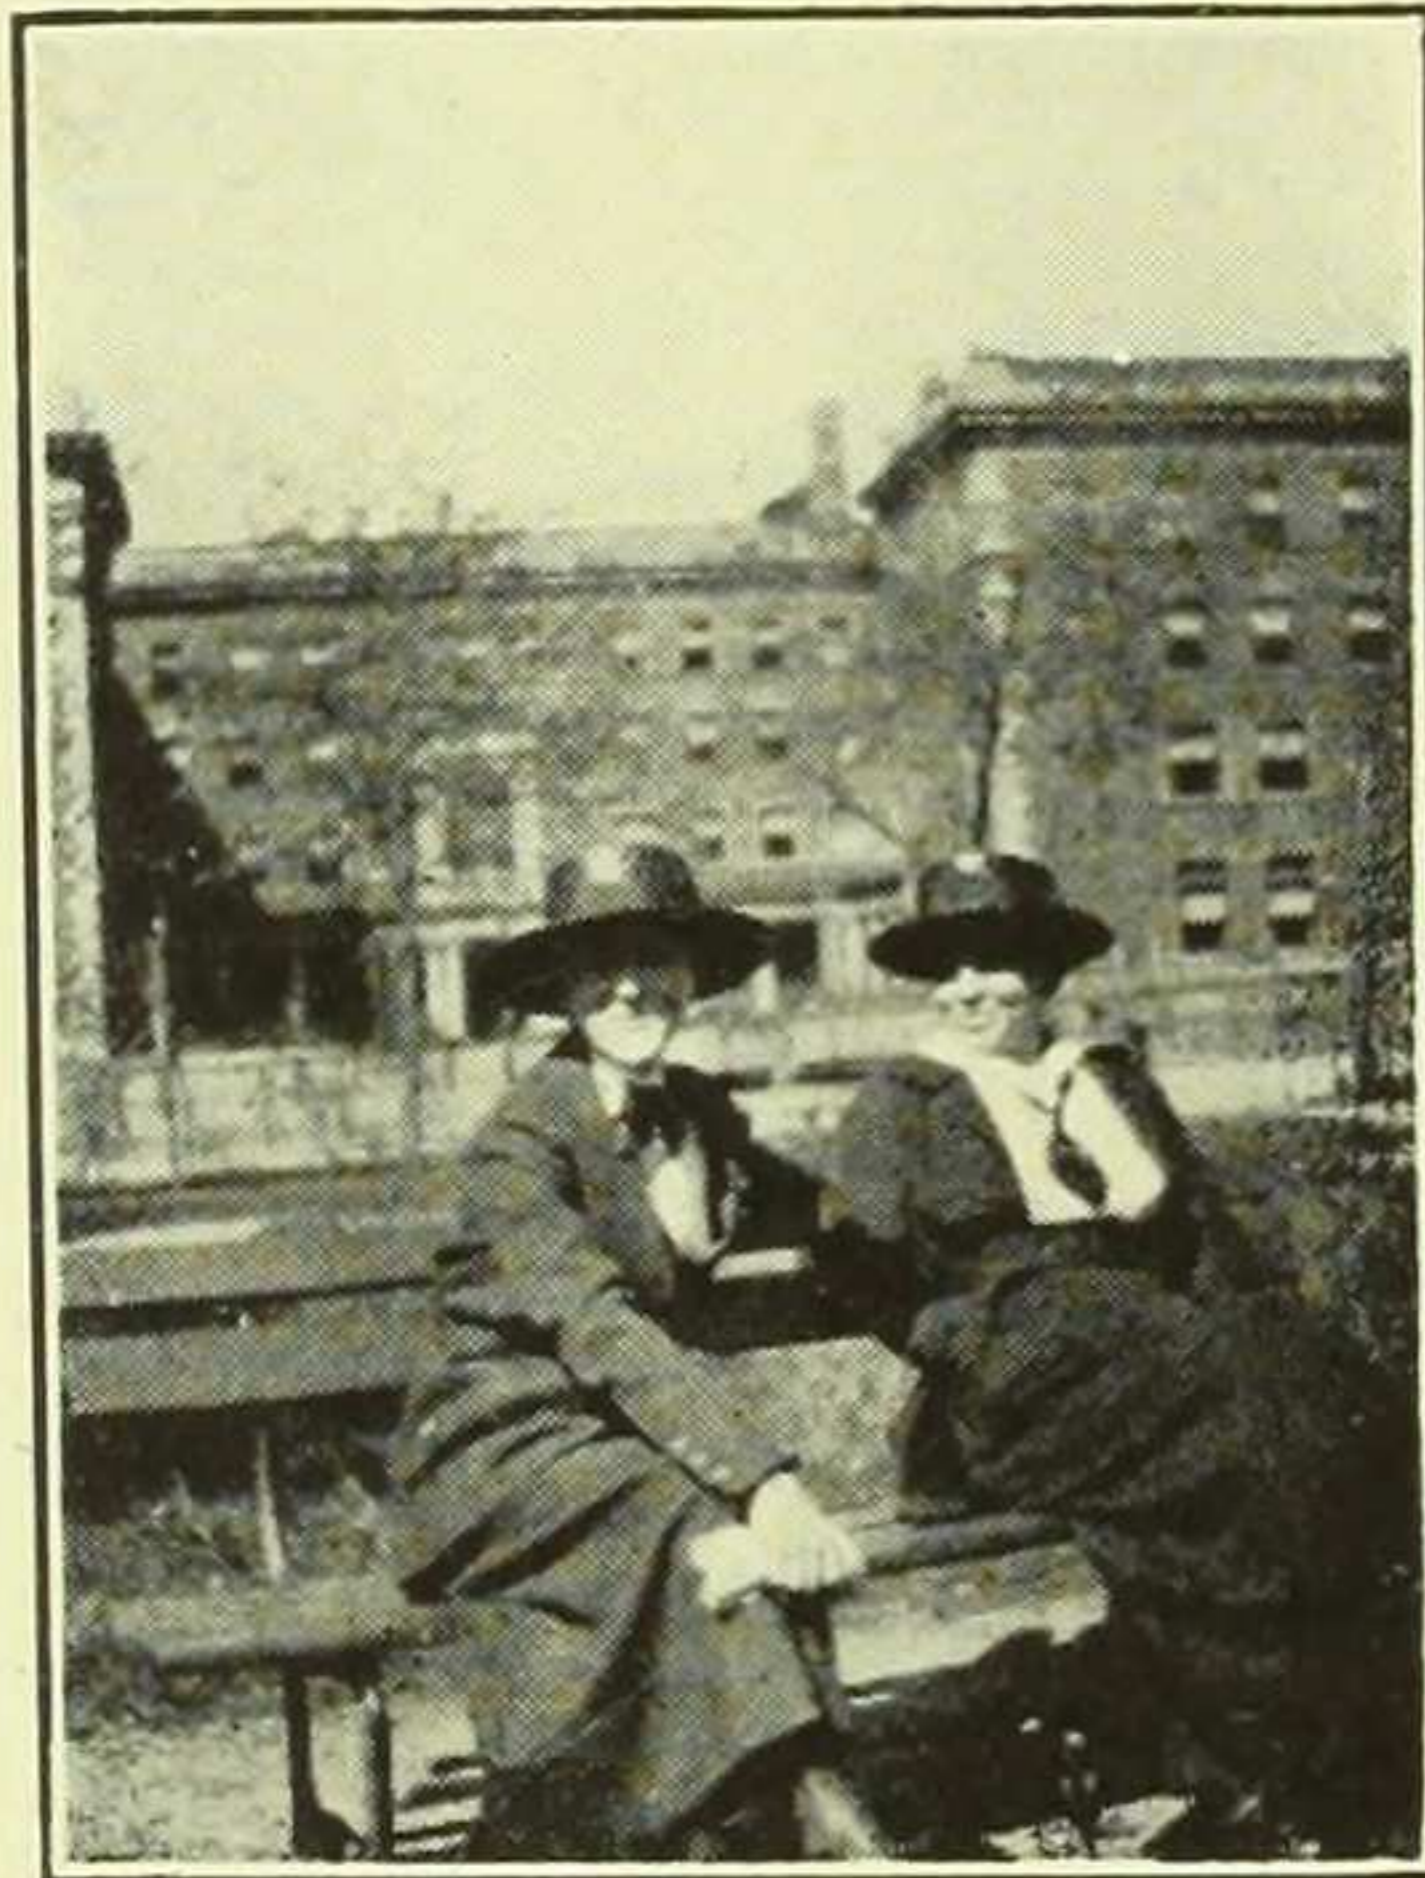

Look up and down
Through all the town,
You'll find none like Professor Braun.
With neckties rare
So debonnair,
He shows us what the men will wear.

Gertrude M. Hirstque cano, England's quae prima ab oris
Americam, profuga Cambridgeo Collegio, venit.

Each living creature that we see
He scrutinizes carefully
Examines its ontogeny,
And likewise its phylogeny—
I wonder where this one's can be...

Drammer.

Act I.

SCENE—Students' Hall

(Enter Protagonist, M.A. greatly preoccupied)

Pro. Have you seen her?

Act II.

SCENE—Fisk Hall

(Enter Deutragonist, M.D., much flurried.)

Deut. Have you seen her?

Act III.

SCENE—Tennis Court

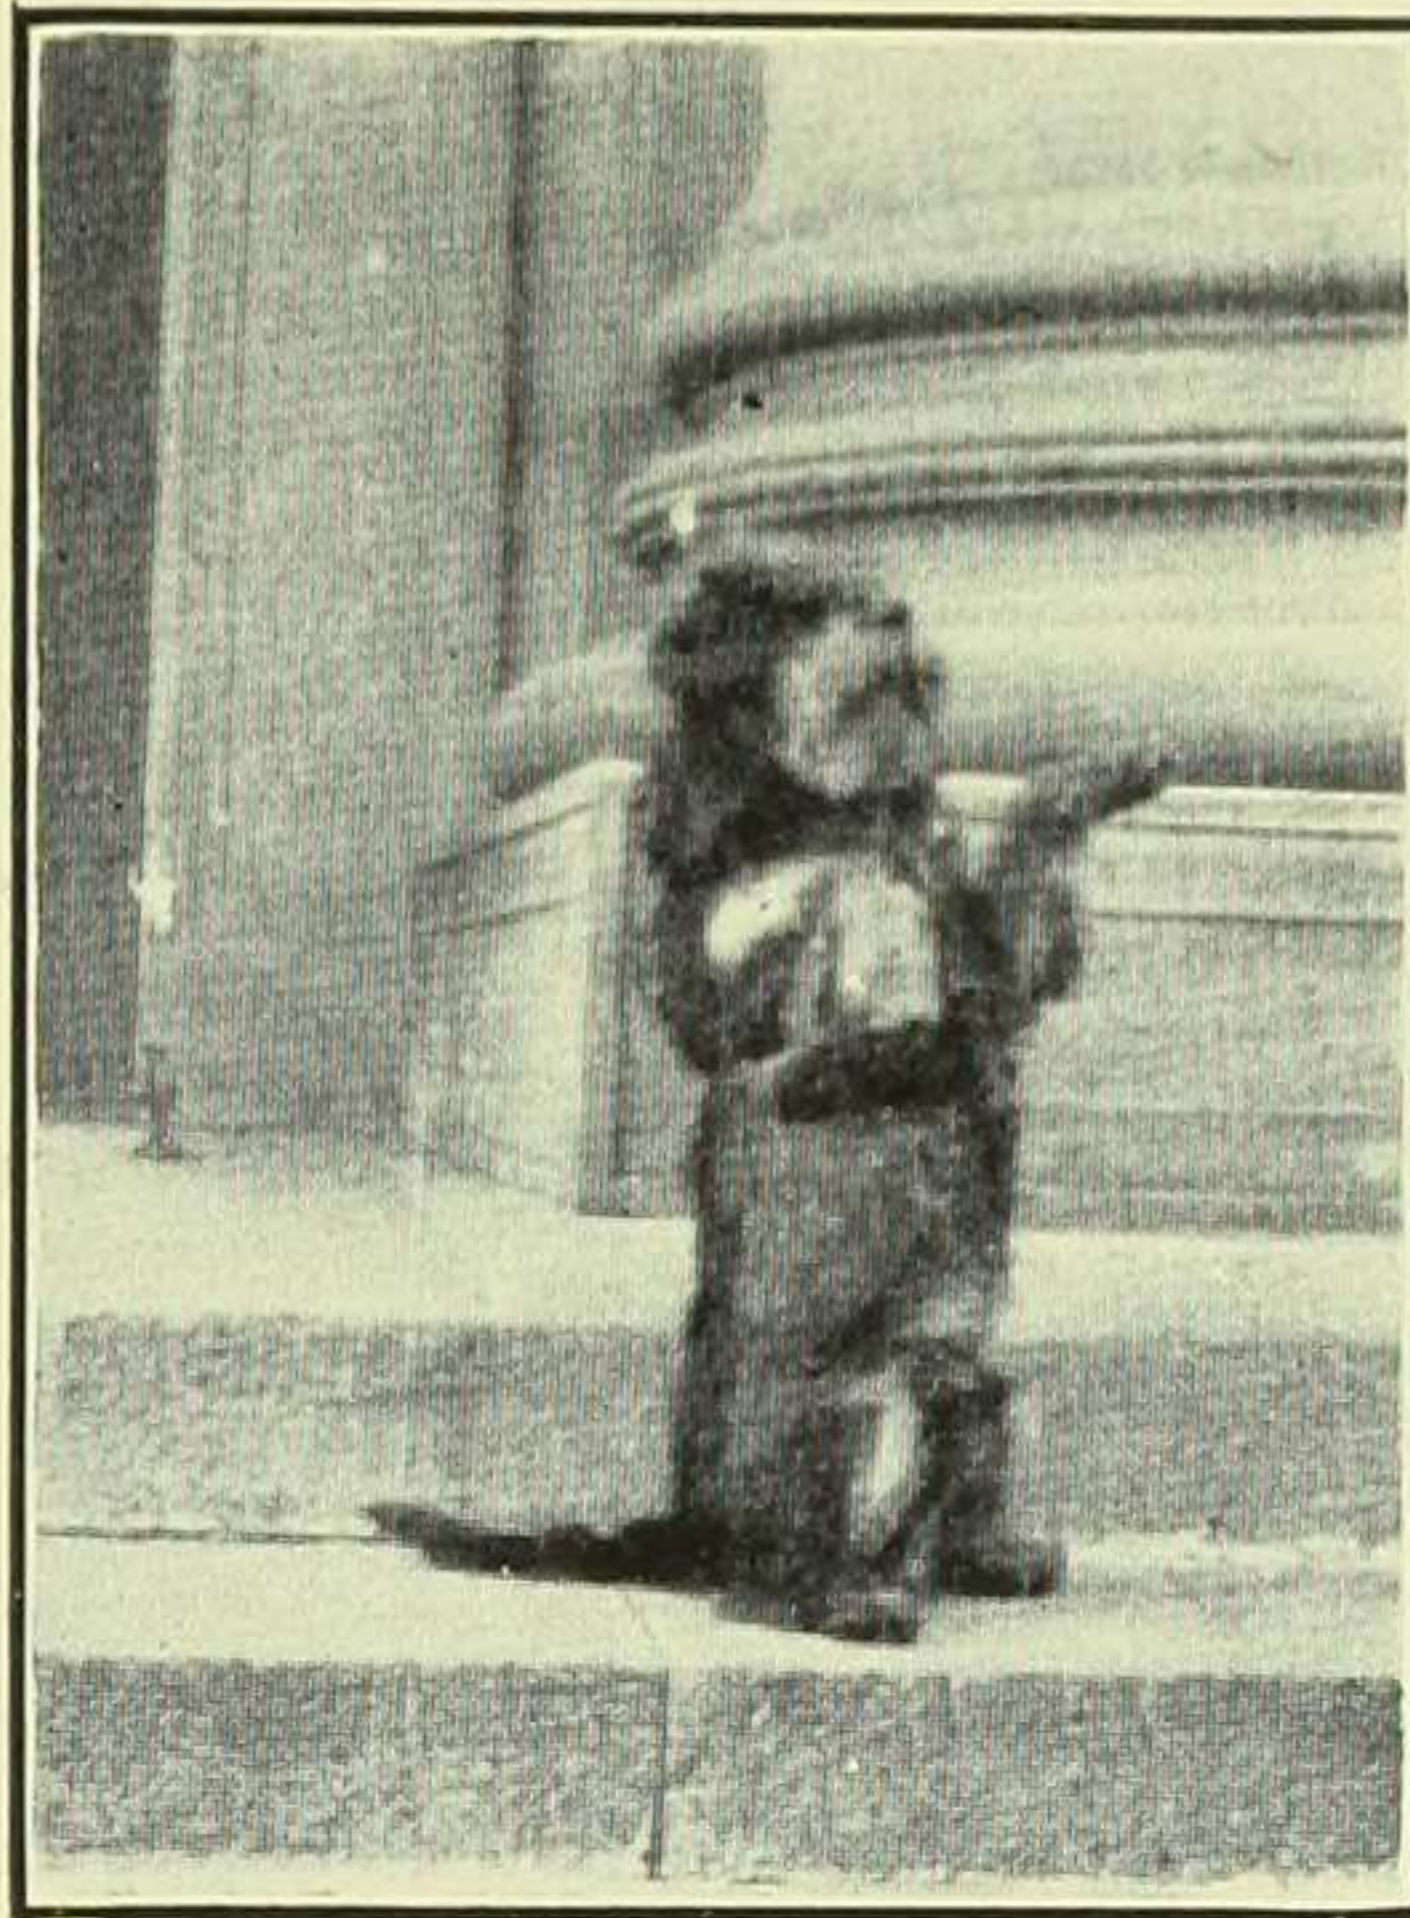

(Freshman and Wise One passing by on boardwalk.)

Fresh. What are they doing?

Wise One. Oh, that's just a little love game.

Hedwig, Millie and Vivian T.
Are all as dignified as can be,
(As if they really were faculty,)
Hedwig, Millie and Vivian T.

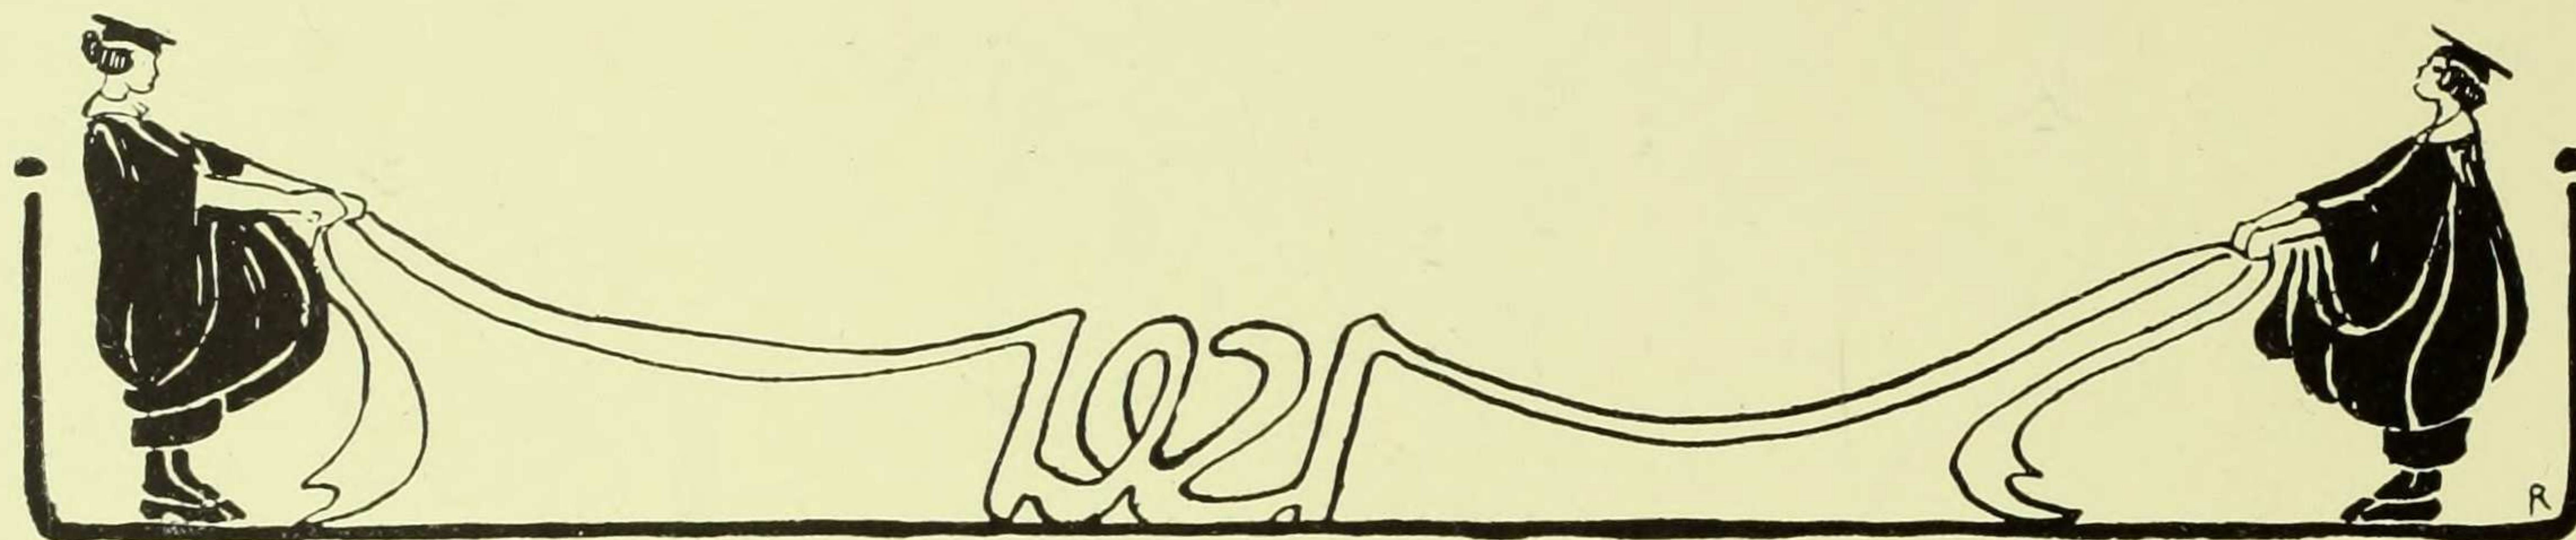

To Rags

Thou very least of all the gods that be,
Who struttest through our stately columned ways
Thy shaggy fur with crimson bow bedight....
Some day, O Rags, wilt thou deign notice me?

'Twas I, one day, who took the liberty
Of kneeling at thy side, caressed thy mane,
But I was scorned, squelched, sat upon and pushed....
Some day, O Rags, wilt thou deign notice me?

Gilt-edged dog-biscuit will I offer thee,
The like of which thou couldst not gnaw in Maine,
In hope that I will win thy love again
And some day, Rags, that thou may'st notice me.

IN PHIL. 61-62

Oh, isn't it wonderful
 To be a Philosopher
 And deeply to ruminare
 Meditate, cogitate,
 On why things are not as they were.
 And whether they ever will be,
 And what they'll become if they will
 And if things exist that we see,
 Or whether all matter is nil.
 Oh, yes! It's just wonderful
 To fathom the infinite blue,
 To learn of sensations,
 Equations, relations,
 In Phil. 61-62.

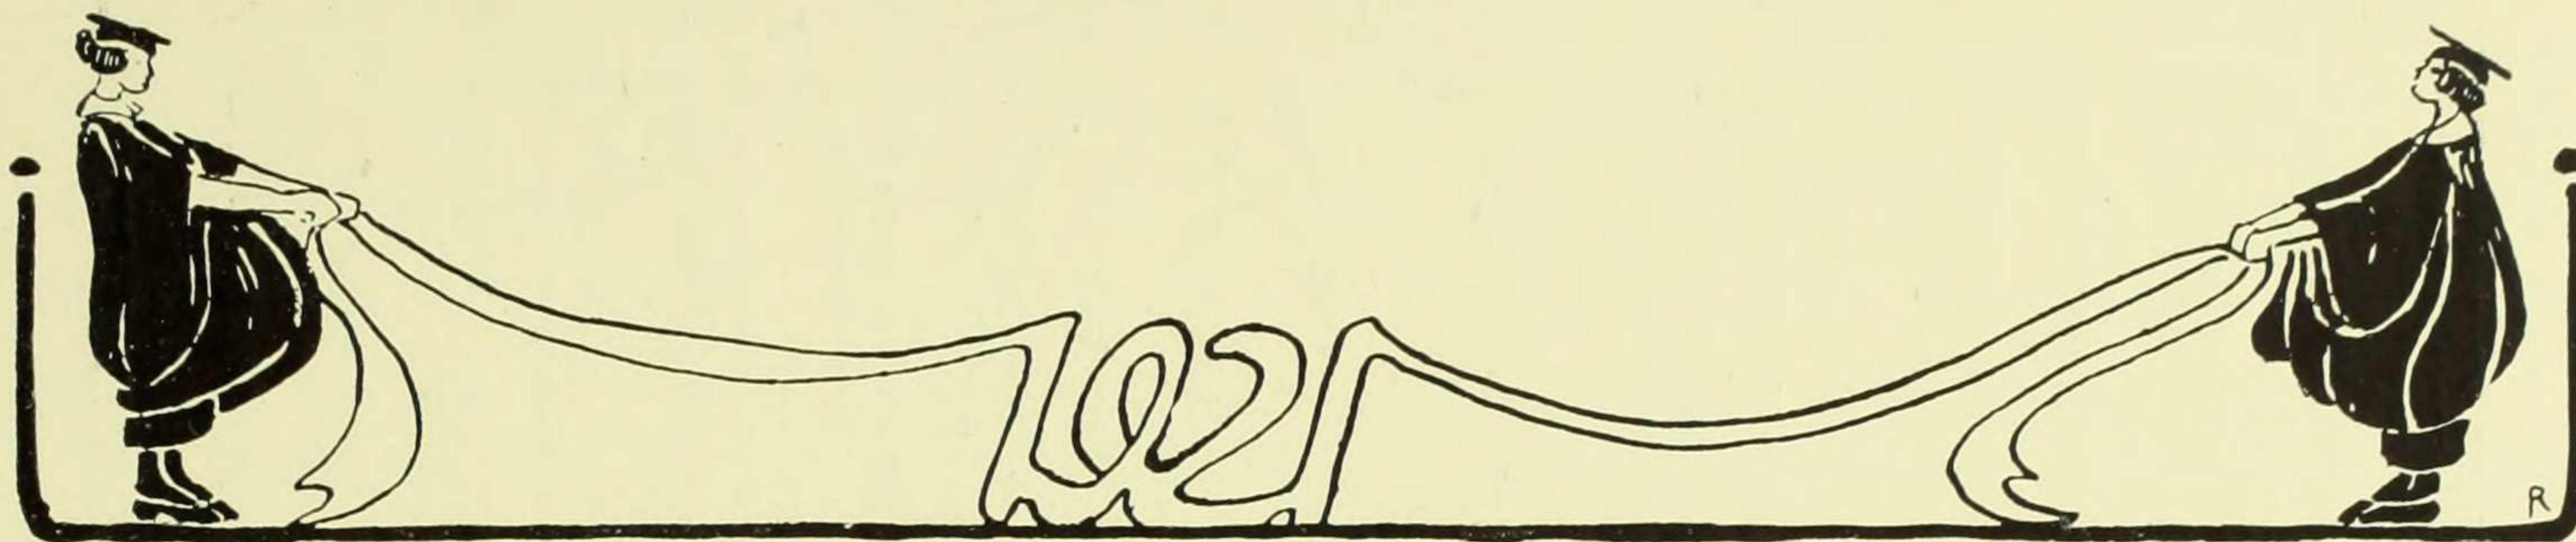

If you're taking Baby Zoo,
 Go slow!
 For you need a lot of patience
 When you're dealing with Crustaceans.
 If you're taking Baby Zoo,

I'm not taking Baby Zoo,
 Oh, no!
 I detest such heartless habits—
 Cutting up those darling rabbits.
 Do you think I'd pass that Zoo?
 Oh, no!

Although my pen is wavering
 Rheumatical and quavering,
 I must keep on a-slavering
 To write a daily theme.

I've tried to be satirical,
 Dramatical and lyrical,
 In manner quite empirical.
 I cannot write a theme.

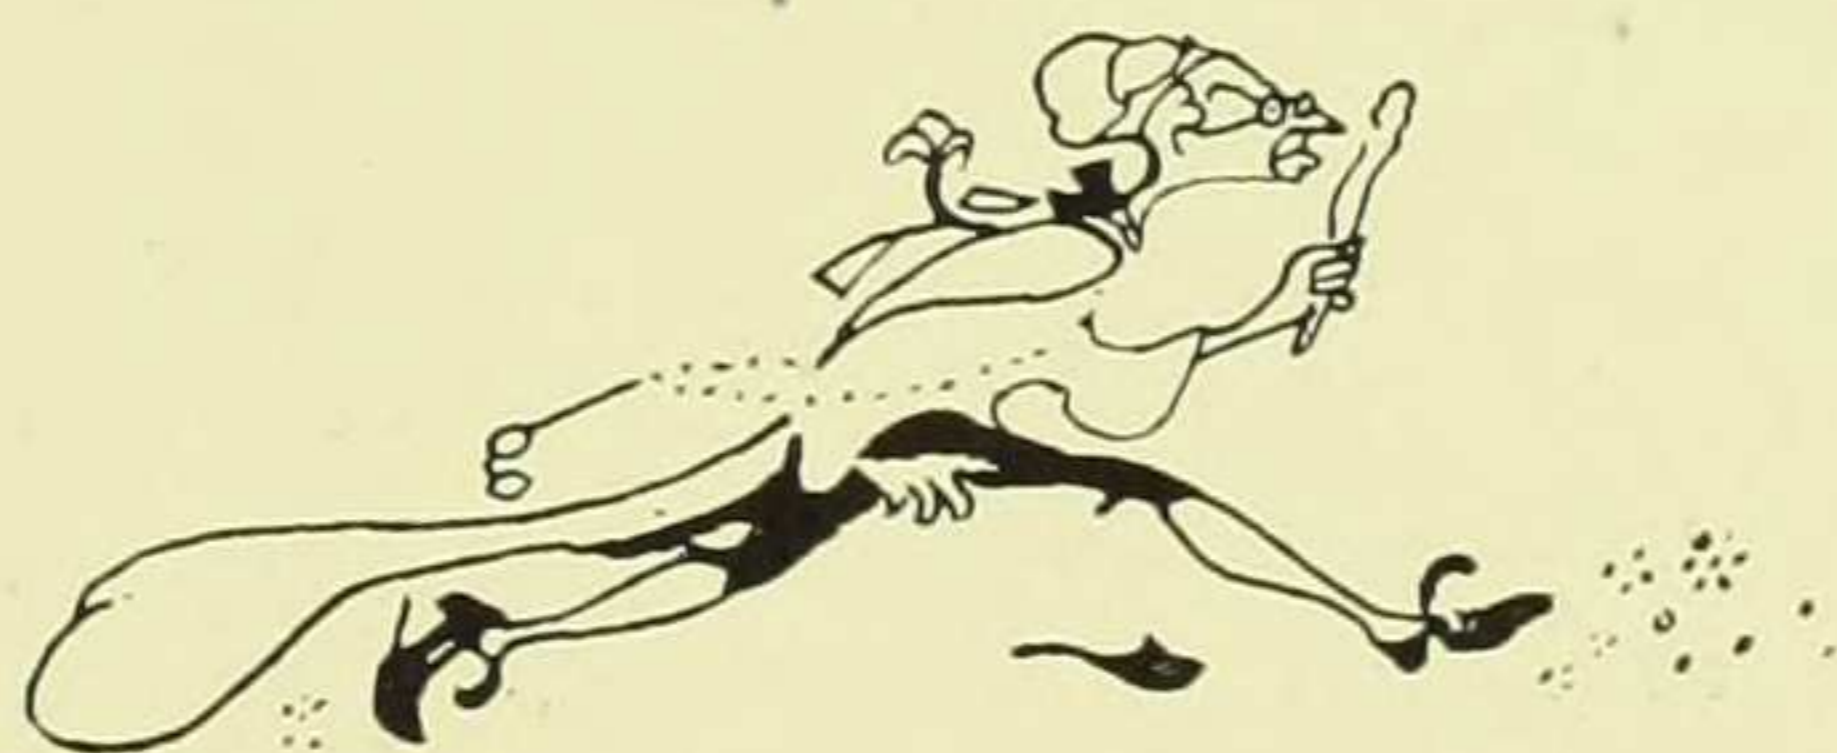

I feel apologetical
 For waxing thus poetical.
 This effort is pathological.
 It is my daily theme.

FIRST AID EXAM.

1. Gas is escaping from all the burners in the stove. You walk into the kitchen with a lighted match. What will you do?
2. You hear screams coming from a building on 117th Street. You call a policeman and enter, and discover many girls playing basketball. What will you do?
3. You swallow your friend's ten-dollar gold-piece. What will you do if you are broke?
4. You hear a childish laugh from upstairs. You run up and find that little Willie has devoured the five pounds of Maillard's that were sent to you the night before. What will you do?

O do not feel superior
Un-knocked, unpictured Professor,
Because you've been left out.
What keeps you out, despite your hope,
Is lack of space; we've lots of dope
To write a knock about.

Prize Letter

[Editor's Note: In reply to our much-advertised "Why I am Not a Grind" contest, the Editors of MORTARBOARD have received letters in competition from all parts of the country. Judging a contest is at all times difficult. The great number of competitors and the poignancy of the subject under discussion rendered this judgment peculiarly arduous. It was only after deep consideration that the Editors chose the following letter as representative of the proper feelings. Special mention should be made of the letters received from members of Brooks, Furnald, The Broadview, and Flying Fame Dormitories, and especially from those of our classmates who deign to dwell with their families. MORTARBOARD takes great pleasure in presenting the author of the following with a season ticket to the New York Public Library, and sincerest congratulations, in the hope that she will not be extravagant with either.]

Editor of MORTARBOARD, Barnard College.

Dear Sir:

The reasons which I am about to submit may be divided into three classes: (1) those due to heredity, (2) those due to environment, (3) those due to neither.

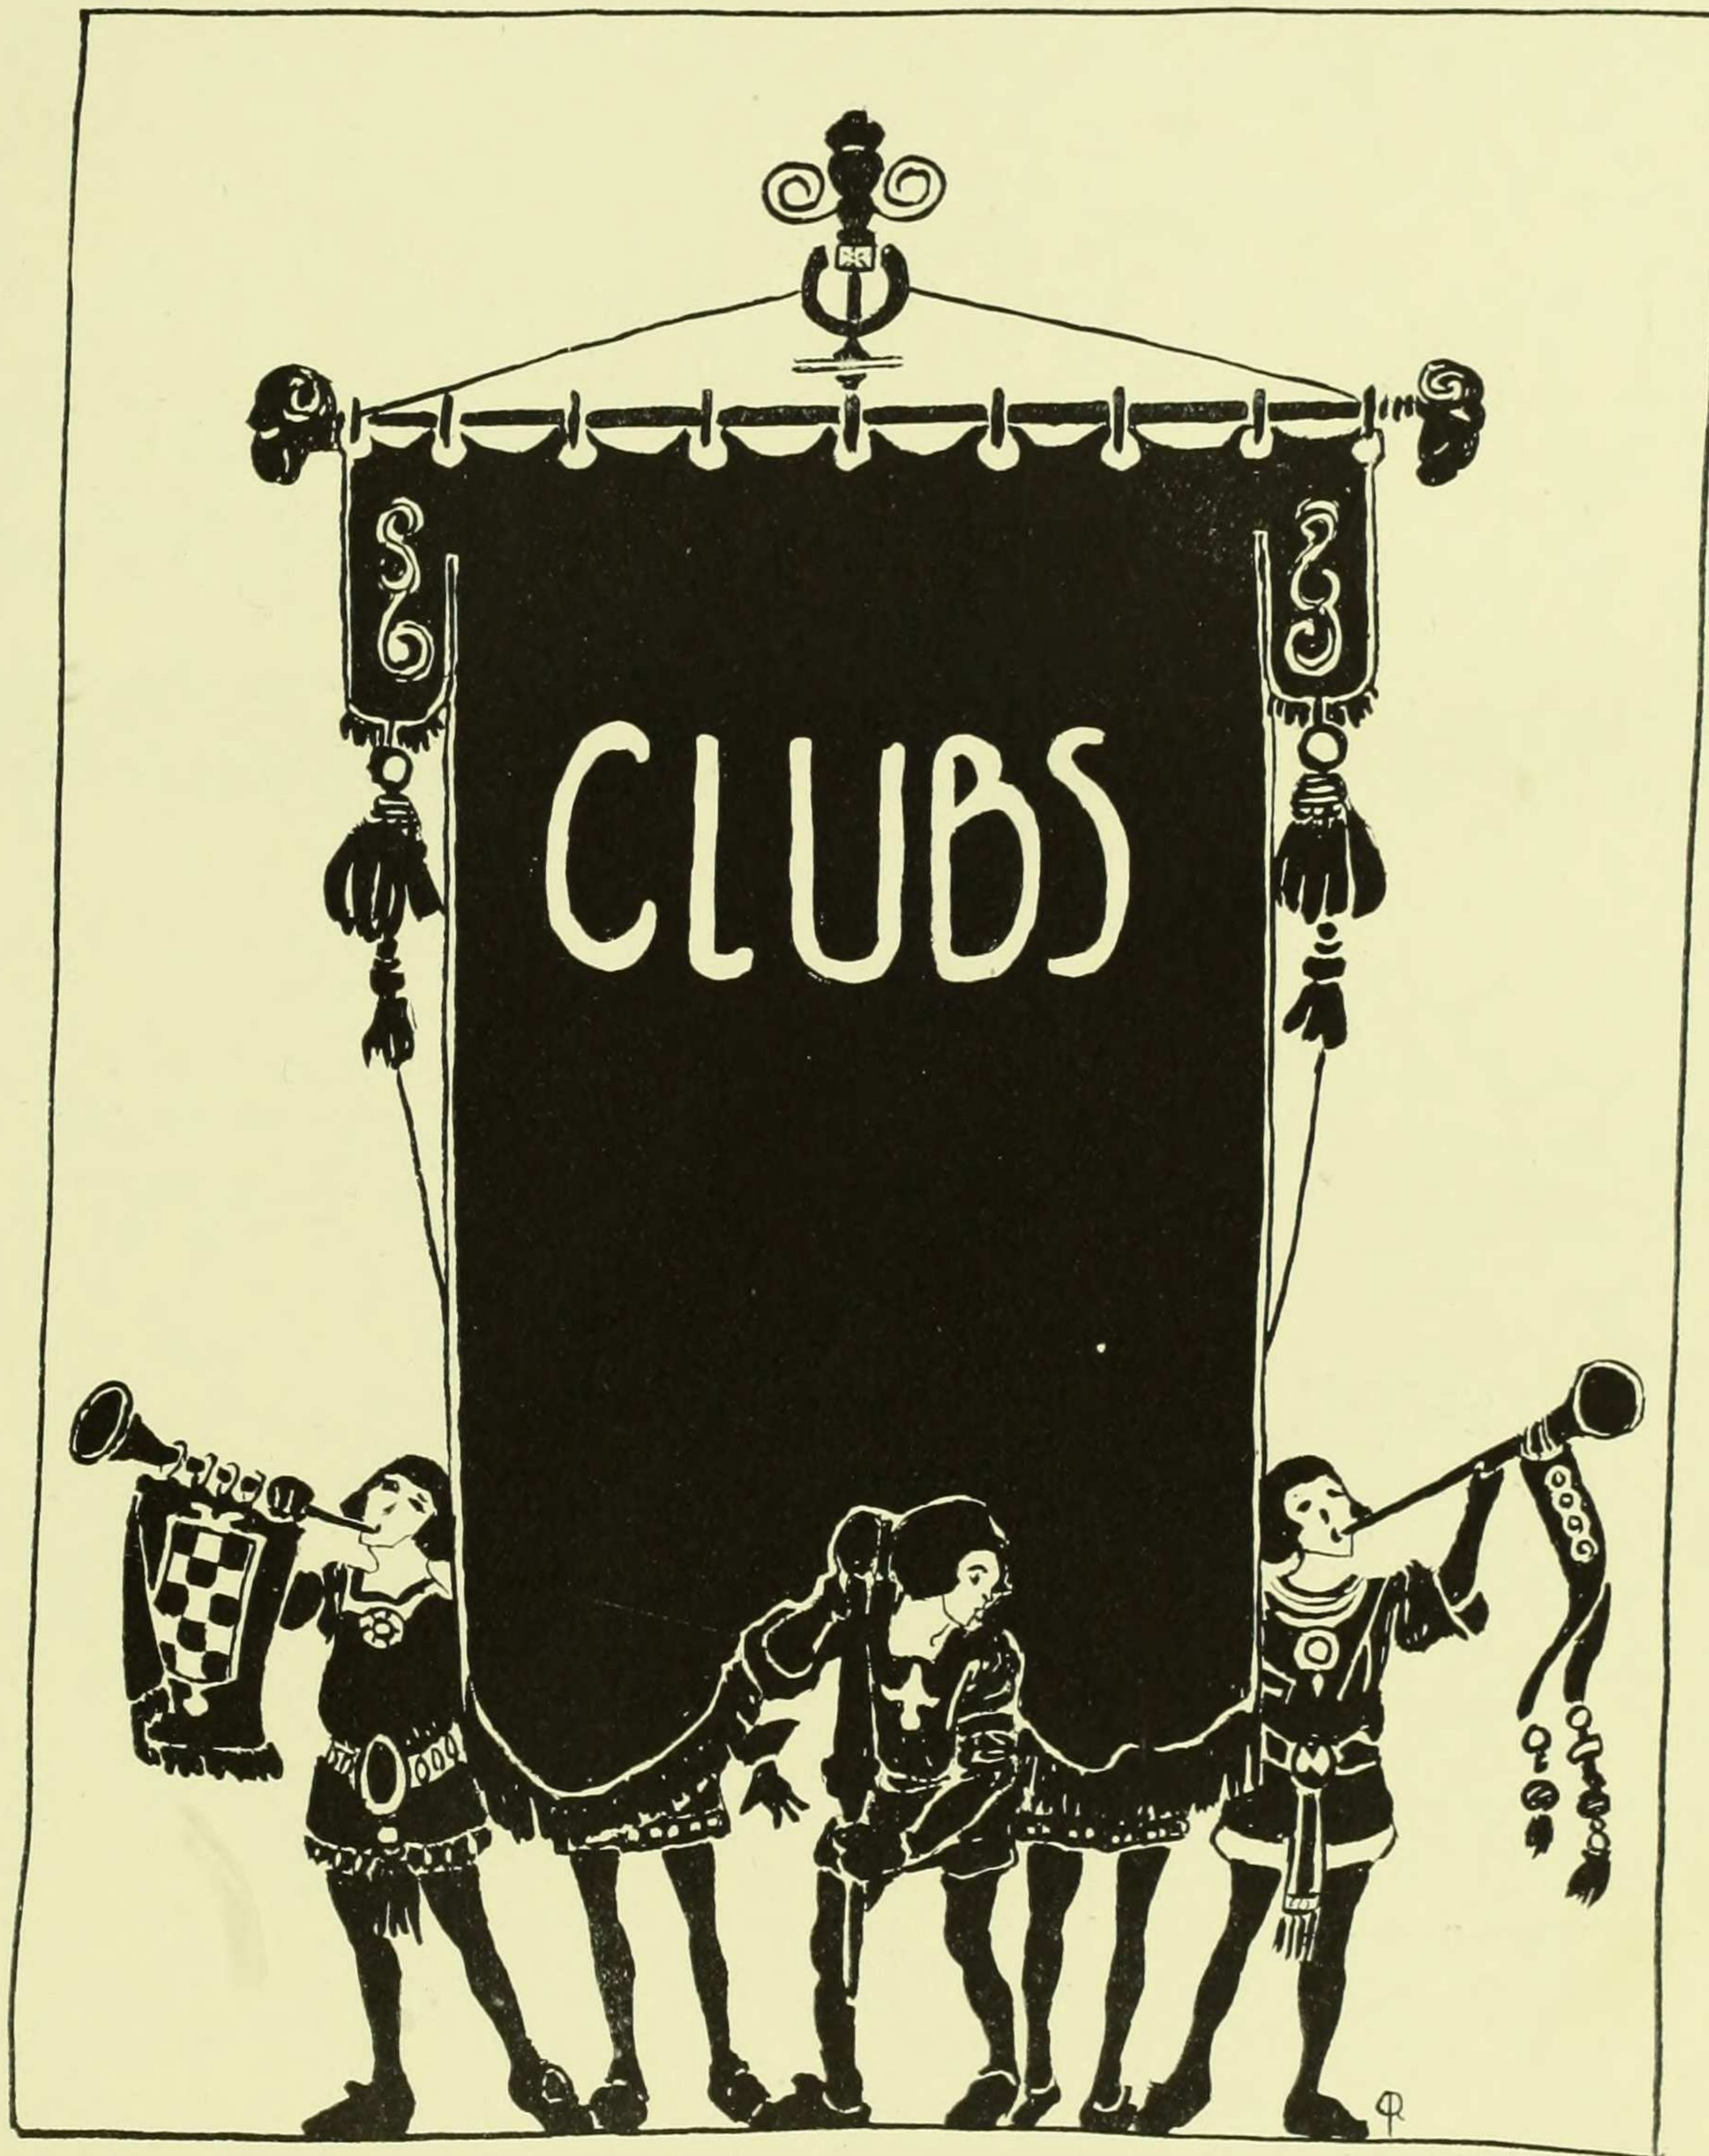

In the first group I may mention my parents briefly, and pass on.

In the second group, I shall endeavor to be more specific. My greatest objection is library books. If I tried to take a book out of the library, it would probably either be reserved or have to be back by 7.30. If I brought it back by 7.30, I would have to eat my dinner very quickly, and then I would get indigestion (my immunity is weak). Even so there would be a great danger that I would lose it on the way, and I might not be able to replace it because of a Printers' Strike. Or if I didn't lose it I might bring it in late and have to pay a fine. This would be an economic waste. Of course, I would not use the book, during the daytime, for that would deprive somebody else. As for papers: I never hand them in on time because I hate to hurt the feelings of those who hand them in late, and I never hand them in late for fear of overworking the Professors. I never study from text-books or from my notes, because then I could not truthfully say before each exam. that I don't know a thing. I always say this: people would be hurt if I didn't, and besides the Dean says that everyone should say this. I like C as a mark. In school all my papers used to be marked C for correct, and I have a sentimental attachment for the letter.

I have so many reasons above that I don't think it is necessary to write the third group.
Yours for the suppression of Phi Beta Kappas,

P. S.—I got A in Freshman Debate.

De Profundis

Cry of anguish:

Help me find it,
Help me find it;
Help me find my locker key.

Soothing voice:

Never mind it,
Never mind it;
Take this one from me.

Cry of anguish:

Pray relate now,
Pray relate now;
Where your locker can be. . . .

Soothing voice:

Well, it's like this: You know the aisle that you would walk down if you kept walking the way you were when you came? Well, it isn't that one; it's the one next to that. You know. Mine's the locker next to the steam pipe before you come to the wall. I don't remember the number, but it had an eight in it. You'll find it. . . .

Moan of anguish:

Er—you're great now,
But I'm late now. . . .
What's a gym cut to me?

A Classic Drama

TIME: Any Noon.

President (shouting loudly): The meeting will please come to order. (She pounds heavily on desk and hubbub dies down somewhat.)

Sarah: May I make an announcement? Well, the Anthropology Club is going to have a play on Friday night, and if any of you would be willing to lend us your grandparents just for that evening we will be very grateful. We'd take good care of them, and . . .

President: Is that all? Very well, then. Is the Secretary here?

Secretary: Yes; I'm here.

President: Er—do you think you'd be able to read the minutes of the last meeting?

Secretary (frantically scattering pages of loose leaf note book): Oh, I'm so sorry. I haven't last meeting's but I have the one before last, if that will do any good.

President: I think we should dispense with the minutes if there is no objection. The business of the meeting—

Helen (rising aggressively): Madam President, I think it is wrong to dispense with the minutes at a regular meeting. The constitution says—

President: We haven't the minutes of last meeting.

Helen: Then read those from the time before. It's better than nothing.

President (desperately): Well, how does the class feel about that?

Frances: I move that we put that in the form of a motion.

Jane: Second it.

President: It has been moved and seconded that we put that in the form of a motion. Is there any discussion?

SCENE: Any Class.

Helen (disengaging herself from private conversation): What is to be put in the form of a motion?

President: That we read the minutes of the meeting before last.

Helen (giggling): Oh!

President: Any more discussion? Are you ready for the question? All those in favor—

Jane (sweetly): I move that we have a closed ballot.

President: There's a motion already before the house.

Jane: Then I suggest it.

Helen: I second the suggestion.

President (helplessly): Any discussion?

Chorus of Yes and No.

President (to Jane): Do you withdraw your motion?

Jane: Uh-huh.

President: The question is now whether we make a motion that we move—

Frances: I moved that we put it in the form of a motion.

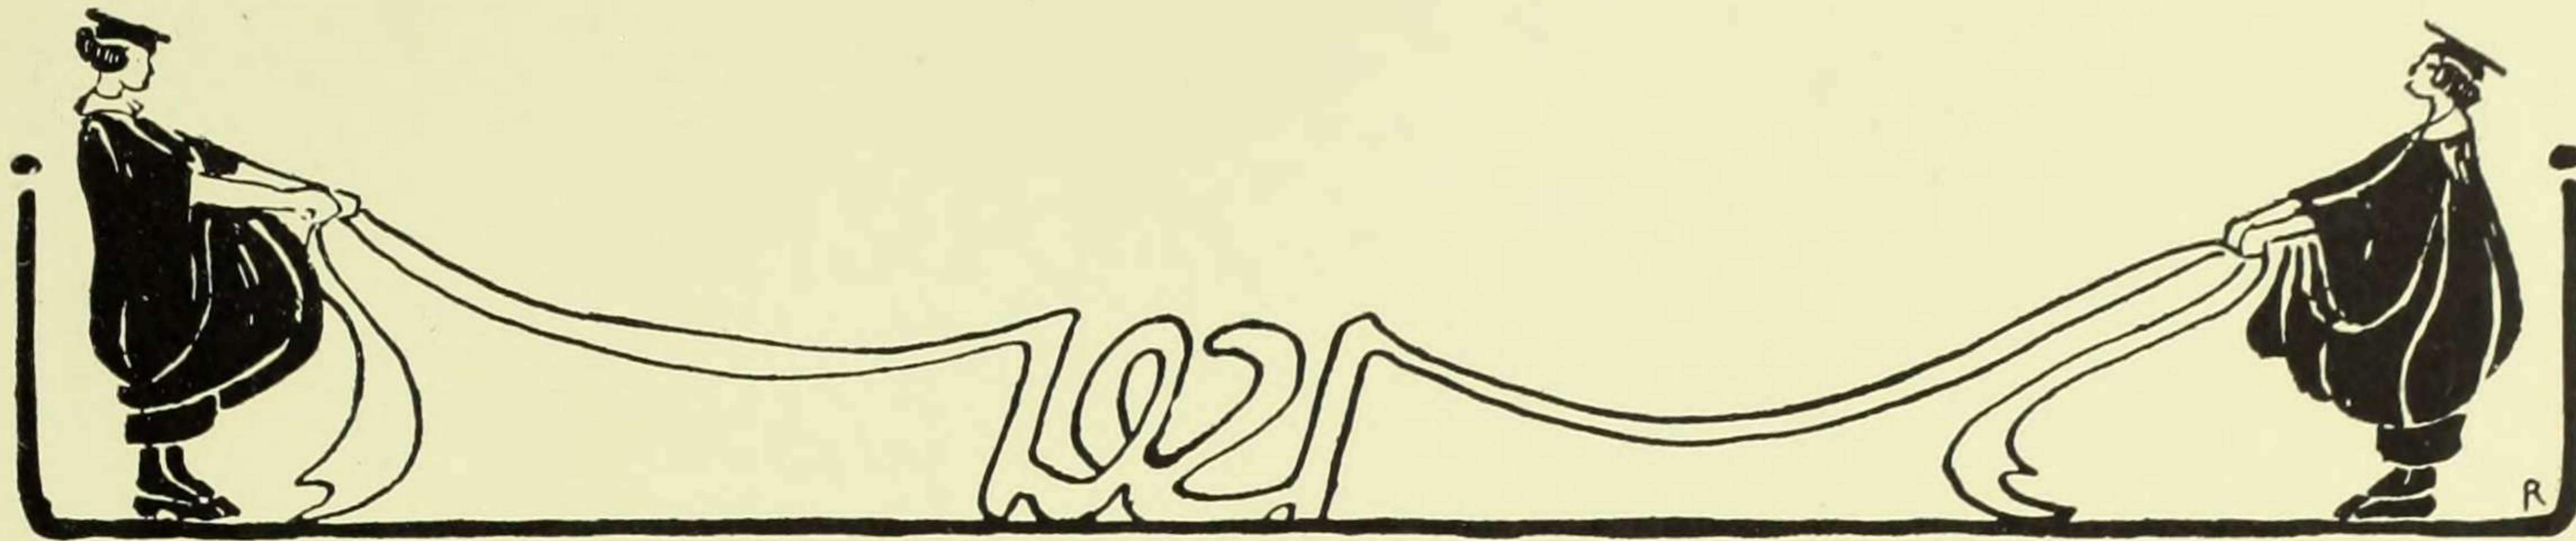

President: All right. Will those in favor please raise their right hands?

Edith: Madam Chairman, do you think it's fair to ask the left-handed girls to raise their right hands?

President: It has been suggested that all left-handed girls raise any hands. Will they please do so? (They do.) Seven.

Maude: It isn't voting as a class if we all don't raise the same hand. Now, wouldn't it be much better to appoint a committee— (The bell rings.)

President: I'm afraid that's all we can do today. Please be thinking— (Her voice is drowned by general exodus.) Will someone please move the meeting be adjourned? (She is alone in the room.)

A Junior Ball-ad

Matilda bought a brand-
New dress in early fall,
And it was very grand,
Of course for Junior Ball.

The dress was made of vel-Vet and was trimmed with fur,
And silver lace as well.
And it excited her.

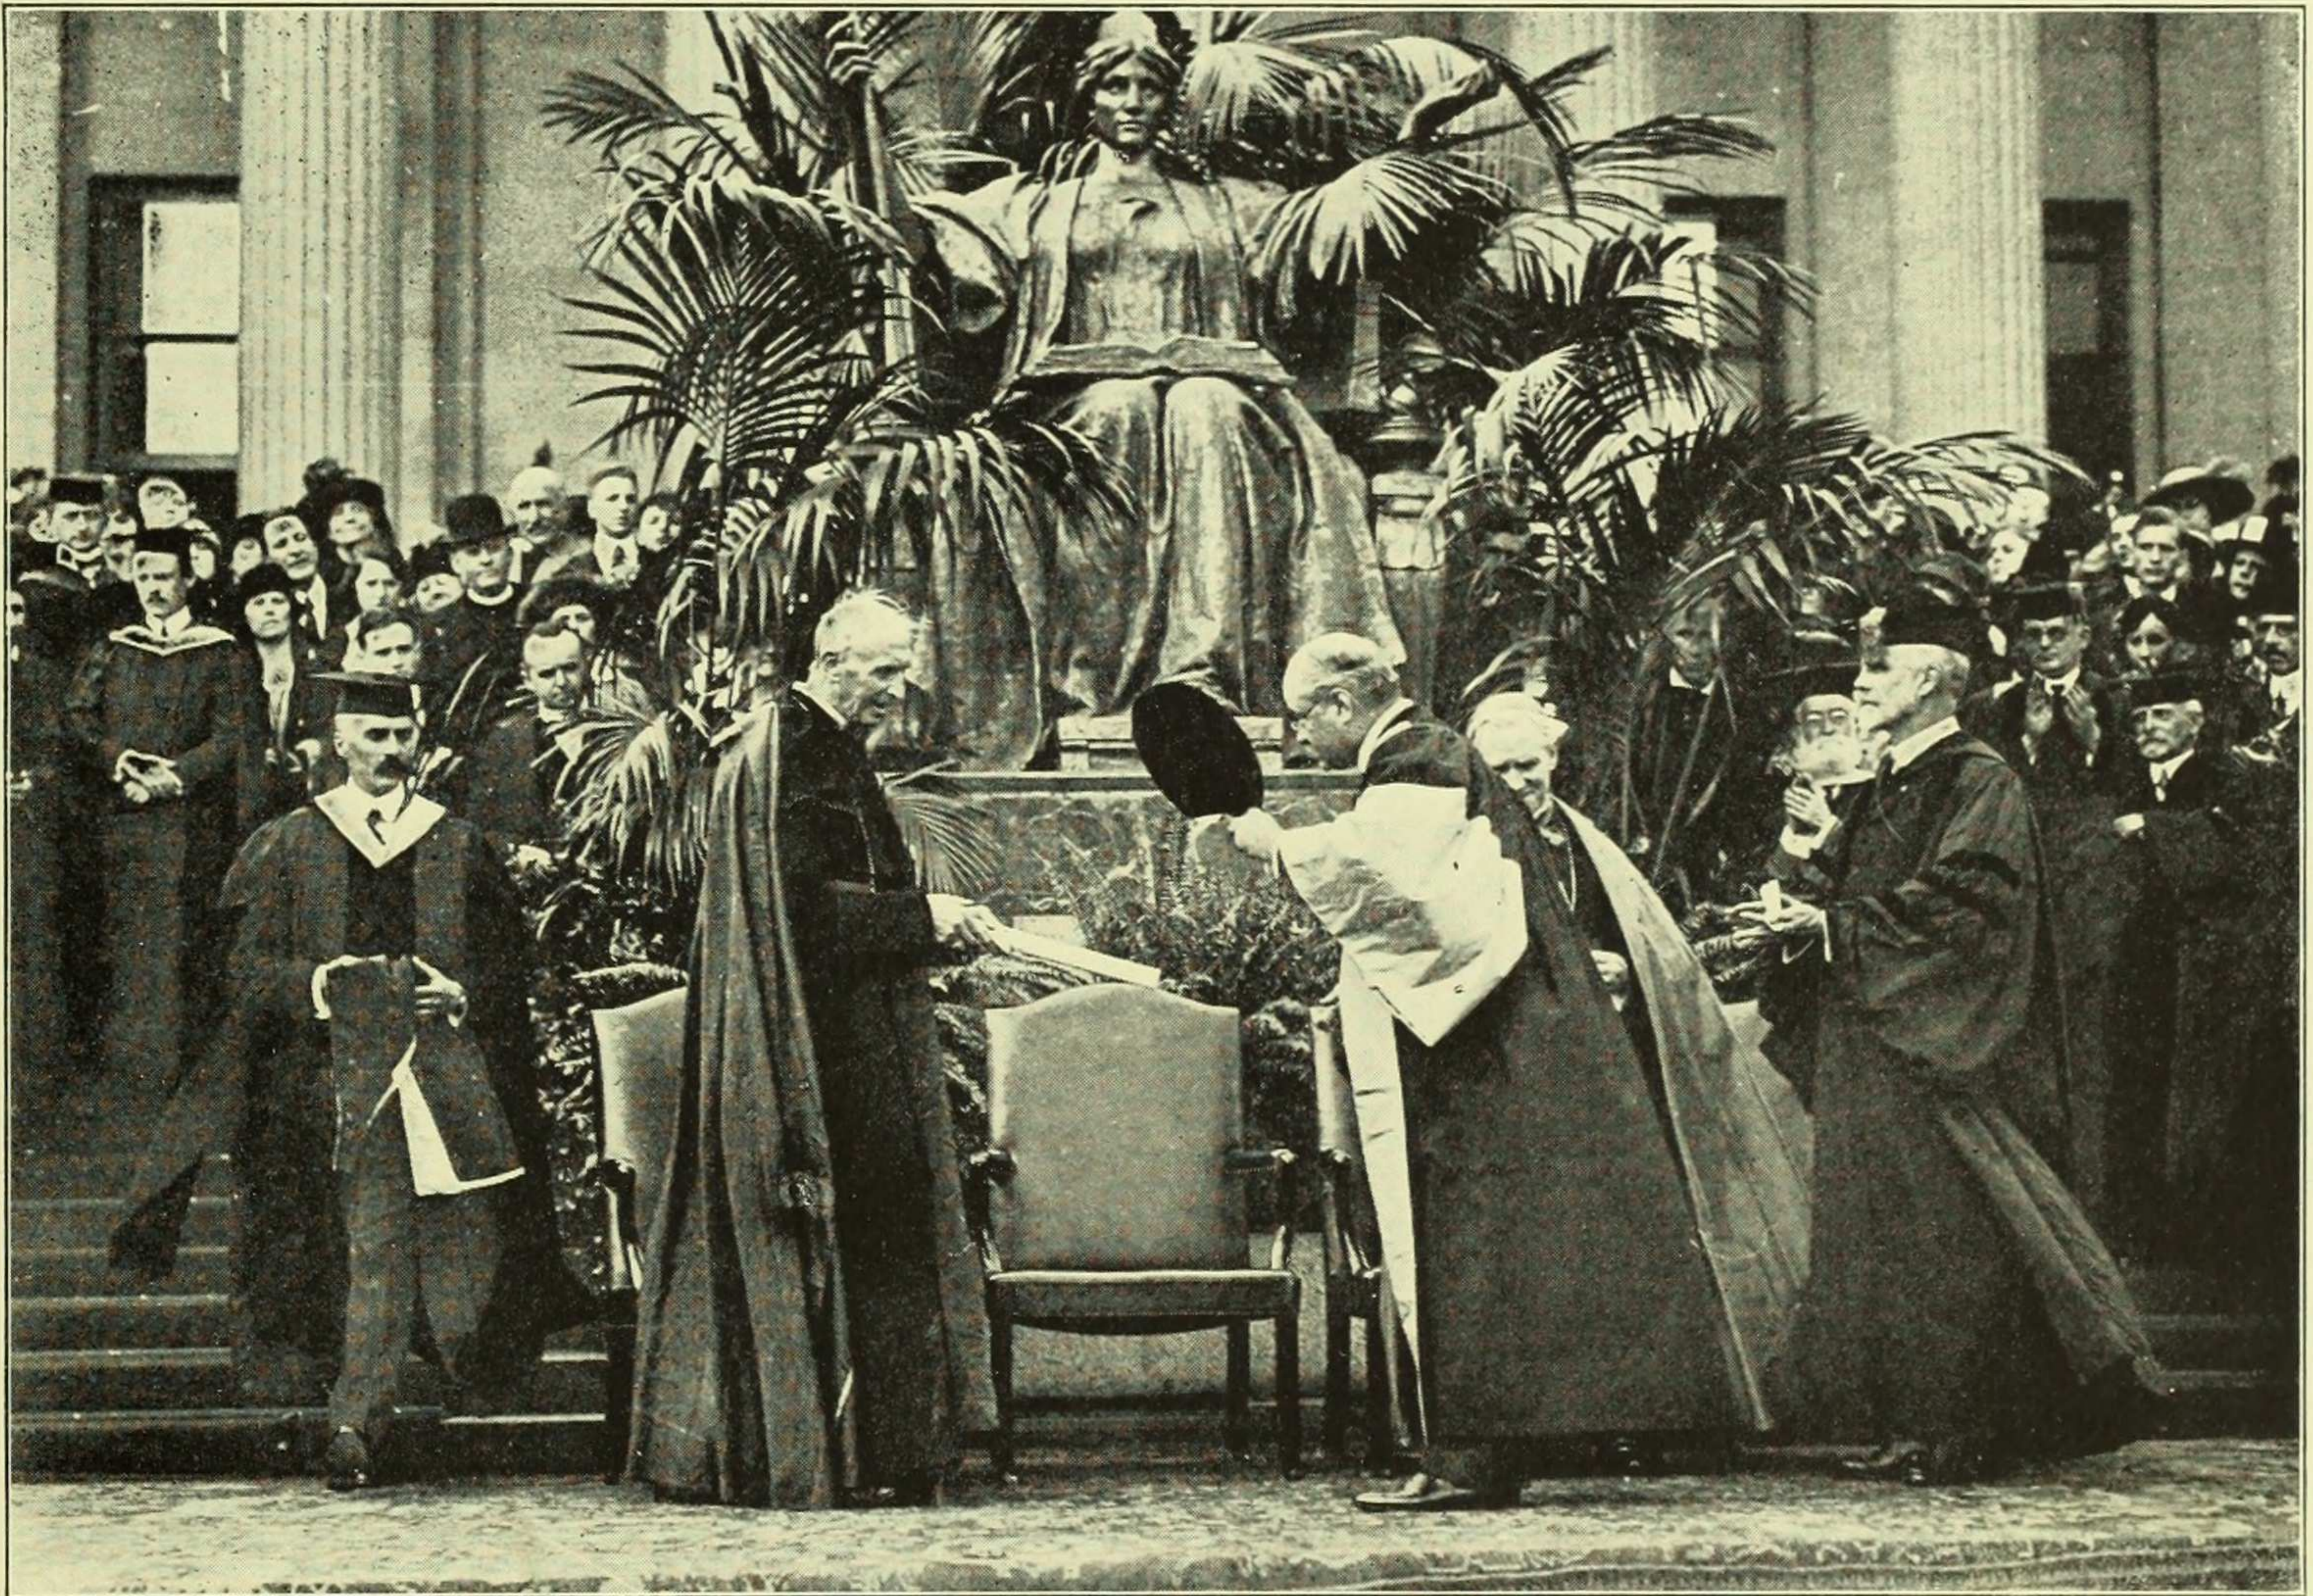

And ev'ry day at lunch,
Full three months in advance,
She'd fixed up with the bunch
The order of her dance.

But little germs of flu
All thoughts of prom disperse.
Whatever should she do?
Whatever could be worse?

Her escort goes away
In March to Hindustan.
Alack and well-a-way!
She cannot get a man.

Matilda's in despair.
Her tears are trickle-ing.
However can she wear
A velvet dress in Spring?

Greek Games

Greek Games

OUR Barnard Greek Games are, we like to think, one of the most beautiful of college festivals. They are a purely spontaneous, local growth, developing gradually and naturally among the Barnard undergraduates. They originated in the Spring of 1903, when a few energetic members of the Class of 1905, then Sophomores, thought it would be amusing to challenge the Freshmen to an informal and private athletic contest, with a suggestion of the ancient Greek festivals about it, and including a competition in poetry. The event proved such very good fun that the students continued it as an annual festival for the Sophomore and Freshman classes. From a simple, sketchy and crude beginning, it has developed from year to year to its present elaborate structure of costuming, setting, poetry, music, dance and athletics.

The fact that this festival of ours, like so many of those of classic Hellas, is a contest, is of great importance. It makes the occasion far more alive and thrilling than any mere pageant, however beautiful, could be. The spirit of striving and competition for the glory of the class keeps every student alert and on tip-toe with interest and enthusiasm. It forces the students, moreover, to invent and develop their work for themselves.

Archaeologically, intellectually, poetically, and aesthetically, our Games are quite worthy of a college environment and are a peculiarly appropriate form of diversion for college students. They undoubtedly contribute towards keeping alive in Barnard the study and the love of Greek literature. For one afternoon, at least, they lead some four hundred girls back into what seems a little like that bright and beautiful world of ancient Hellas, where, as we feel, bodies were all young and lithe and active, costume and setting blended in lovely and balanced beauty; the atmosphere was clear and untroubled, and the spirit of the world fresh and strong. It is as worth while, perhaps, as many a formal college course, to enable the students to taste the joy of physical effort, of enthusiasm, and of beauty in sound, in words, in form, in color, and in motion. Spectators of older years forget the inevitable crudities of the picture and are strangely touched by the spirit of youth which permeates the Games. It is good for us all to live for a few hours in that atmosphere of striving and enthusiasm, of beauty and youth.

Virginia C. Gildersleeve.

Story of the Entrance

THE city has been besieged by a Persian tyrant. The people, starved and war weary, are on the point of surrender when word comes that the enemy will make peace if, among other demands, the daughter of the Greek king is given their leader to wed. To save her people Aglaia consents to the marriage. On the day of the wedding she goes to the temple of Prometheus, god of self-sacrifice, and prays for courage to do her duty to the state. He strengthens her faltering spirit, and she rises uplifted, inspired. The grateful people gather about her to say farewell, but they are driven aside by Persian soldiers—"Make way—make way!" Proudly the tyrant comes, and proudly the maiden steps down to meet him.

Story of the Dance

AGLAIA has died, alone in a foreign land, but her shade has wandered back to Greece, and come down to the River Styx. There, on the dim strand, she is terrified by the ghosts of the unburied dead. But Prometheus has not forgotten the maiden, nor the sacrifice for her people. His flame spirits break into the darkness of the underworld and bear her in triumph to the land of the blessed.

PROMETHEUS — PROPHECY
By FRANCES SWAN BROWN, 1921

Pandora wept—

“Gods, I am mad with the stench of the pestilence, and the smell of the dead!
All of the night must I watch how the fun’ral pyres spot the darkness with red?
All of the day must I listen to children cry, and the noises of death?
Only a moment of blindness, of deafened ears, and a poisonless breath!
‘Gift of the gods’—it is I who am plague and rot, and the maker of fright;
I who have shriveled the flowers, who have spoiled the crops with the foulness of blight;
I who have tortured—I who have slain—I——!
Only the moonlight is fair as it was before, and the stars in their sky;
Only the sunlight is warm as it used to be—and that, too, may die!”

Pandora wept. Then from his tortured height
There came the answer of Prometheus—
A breath of prophecy across the night:

PROMETHEUS

By FRANCES C. COCKE, 1921

Throughout the days he stands; his bound hands sigh
Their supplication to the gods, whose ears,
Grown dull long since by the slow drip of tears,
No longer heed the burden of his cry:

“Oh, ye immortal gods who rest ye soft
On high Olympus where the asphodels
Fling forth glad tidings on their chiming bells
Of laughter and of love; oh, ye aloft,

“Is there no need of pity in your eyes?
These many years I suffer for the sake
Of giving man that which he could not take Himself, and which, despite your jealousies,

The light fails fast, e’en now the day is blind.
The vulture, sated, climbs the darkened sky.
Night bends above, and listening with a sigh,
Hears but a long, low sobbing on the wind.

“I would have raised them to gods, but my dream was lost, and my vision in vain.
Eager, untiring the hands that I filled with fire—now they’re crippled in pain.
All for the ‘will of the gods.’ By their brand of hate men were blinded to grope,
Beaten to earth. But I fling in the face of despair—‘still Prometheus will hope!’
Children of men are lamenting, Pandora weeps, I will choke down my cry.
Then only see a to-morrow that’s sick with woe, I see hope in the sky.
Out of the sorrow, the warring, the wreck of peace, there may raise them at last Kindlier men than the men I was wont to love, in the free golden past.
Yea—they may fight a long fight and in some far day, when they’ve trod down their odds,
Rise to be nobler than even I dreamed for them—to be greater than gods.”

“Ye well could share; and still your wrath belies
The grace men say is yours. For still at break
Of dawn the vulture comes, his thirst to slake,
And still my screams rend the long centuries.

“ . . . The gods are deaf with hate, their hearts are stone—
Ah, happy gulls that wend your purple way
Across the sea beyond the rim of day,
Ye little know your foam-wrought wings alone

“Are all a god would wish for, that his breast
(The cursed shackles broken) might be cast
Against the sunset’s fire—so, at last,
That gift, full long his doom, to bring him rest.”

Story of the Entrance

IT IS the day of Pan's festival. The villagers come to the shrine of the god on the hillside. The young people run ahead with songs and laughter, but soon shouts herald the approach of the procession, and the merriment is hushed. Maidens, bearing gifts of flowers and fruit, approach the shrine, and lay their gifts on the altar, then pass on to hold their games in honor of the god.

Story of the Dance

AFTER the village folk have left the grove, a Wood-Sprite comes to the shrine, playing at hide and seek with his fellow nymphs. But he soon grows tired, and flings himself down to rest from his play. The nymphs leave him, all but one who stays to watch him in his sleep. Suddenly some huntresses, returning from the chase, break into the sacred grove. They see the sleeping sprite, and exult in their find. But a rival band of huntresses enter, and the two groups battle for the possession of the sprite. He, feeling the presence of humans profaning the shrine by their strife, awakes. With a superhuman effort, he wrests himself away from the grasp of the huntresses and in terror prays to Pan for help. In the distance the Pipes of Pan call an answer to his prayer. The huntresses, in fear, slink away. The Wood Sprite, happy once more, calls back his nymphs. They play together for an instant, then go on their way.

PAN AT DUSK

By FRANCES C. COCKE, 1921

All day long have my strong feet sped up the mountains,
Leapt the chasms that mocked with their flowers beneath me,
Dared the ultimate heights and laughed from their summits—
Now I am weary.

All day long has Zephyrus ceased from his crooning,
Stilling his lyre to hark when my reed was piping
Songs far sweeter than any the stars might fashion,
Singing together.

Once as I thrilled the heart of the flushing laurel,
So that her cheeks grew pallid (I saw her tremble)
Came from the copse a maiden with eyes of wonder,
Eyes of enchantment.

Wrought from the untold flowers of countless springtimes,
Moulded from all the laughter and tears of the ages,
Buildd from out the dreams that men dream of Helen,
Ah, how I loved her!

One swift glance as I silenced my reed to marvel,
One swift glance at the poor goat's feet that have made me
Almost a god—and with one little cry she has fled me—
Now I am weary.

Gone the desire to race with the wind on the hilltops,
Feel on my lips the insatiate kiss of the morning,
Follow a beckoning dream till I stumble on Evening
Lying in ambush.

Ah, to be only a man! and when Day has departed, (Smiling a golden smile for thought of the morrow)
Wearily turn toward the windows that shine in the twilight
Bidding me welcome;

Slowly to trudge down the lane with a quickening heart-beat—(Hush! in the darkness a child's clear, radiant laughter!)
Then to the lilt of a lullaby's crooned insistence, Softly to enter.

That were the lot of a man—(cold, cold by the river—)
Mine, to go hungry, a-chill, down the long generations,
Cursed, for the face of fair Death Immortality bars me
Ever beholding.

All of my strength would I give, and all of my power—
My power to woo from the earth the shaft of the crocus,
Whisper bright courage to daffodil hearts that would falter
Fearful of winter;

All of the love that these hearts have given into my keeping (Always the flowers have loved me!) and all of the fearful Thrill of my pipe—all these would I gladly surrender,
But to be human.

Vain the desire—Mine ever the lot of the half-god:
All of man's longing and none of a god's contentment—

Zeus, who art merciful, keep me this night from remembering
Eyes of enchantment.

PAN

By FRANCES SWAN BROWN, 1921

There's darkness on Olympus now,
And on the peaks that Iris trod
The ghosts of old immortals nod
And shiver, and along the brow
Of cliffs once radiant, looms the grief
Of ruins, crumbling in the clouds,
All smothered in their dreary shrouds,
The cobwebs of men's unbelief.

It was so long ago! Why should we weep
Because the gods are dead?

They lived too high!

Perhaps the stars were grieved to watch them die;
Men hardly noticed when they sank to sleep.
They shared too little all our common joys.
But Pan—he was a lover of the earth!
Of mellow fields, and flocks, and wind-blown mirth,
Of all the rustic fun of shepherd boys.

How could he die, while youth still dances on Along the road light-footed laughter goes,
While grass is soft, and dawns the same warm rose?
How could the sunshine live, and he be gone?

'Twas so we dreamed of Pan one golden day
When spring had made a laughing stock of death,
And life eternal sparkled in each breath.
"Ah, surely he will answer us!" we'd say,
And tossed our laughter and a song to May.
That spring-song passed away along with light.
The warm, blue dusk, like incense on the hills,
Was filled with silence, and we bent our wills
In vain to catch his piping—And the night
Was emptiness to us!

For now we know

The shadows of oblivion had passed
Across the sunshine of Pan's soul at last,
As they had blotted out Olympus too.

And yet, as we turned homeward through the mist
Of evening, with the moonlight in our eyes,
Through shadow lands, a-quiver with the sighs
Of dreaming things, our weary hearts kept tryst
With some great power that smiled behind the dark,
With some kind presence that we felt and knew
In secret tree-tops, and the cool white dew,
Our joy sprang upward like a sudden spark!
The silence spoke an answer to our song:
Although his pipes—his dancing, went the way
Of other gods—immortal for a day,
The Soul of Pan lived on, eternal—strong.

Our hearts were rich with springtime joy again,
And close about us in the dark, it seemed Another heart throbbed back!

We had not dreamed

Our dreams of Pan's eternity in vain!

You've helped us so, Miss Larson,
And now we thank you for it.
When we've lacked inspiration
You've helped us to restore it.
You have our admiration
For everything you've done.
We are your humble servants.
Sincerely,

Twenty-one.

Songs

Tune: "Put Your Head Down, Fritzie Boy."

Pull your horns in, Mr. Pan;
 Pull your horns in, Mr. Pan.
 Come out, please,
 From behind those trees;
 We see you, we see you.
 We bring offerings to your shrine—
 Flowers, cakes and wine,
 And we're going to make a coat
 Out of Twenty-two's goat,
 For you to dance in, Mr. Pan.

Tune: "The Farmer in the Dell"

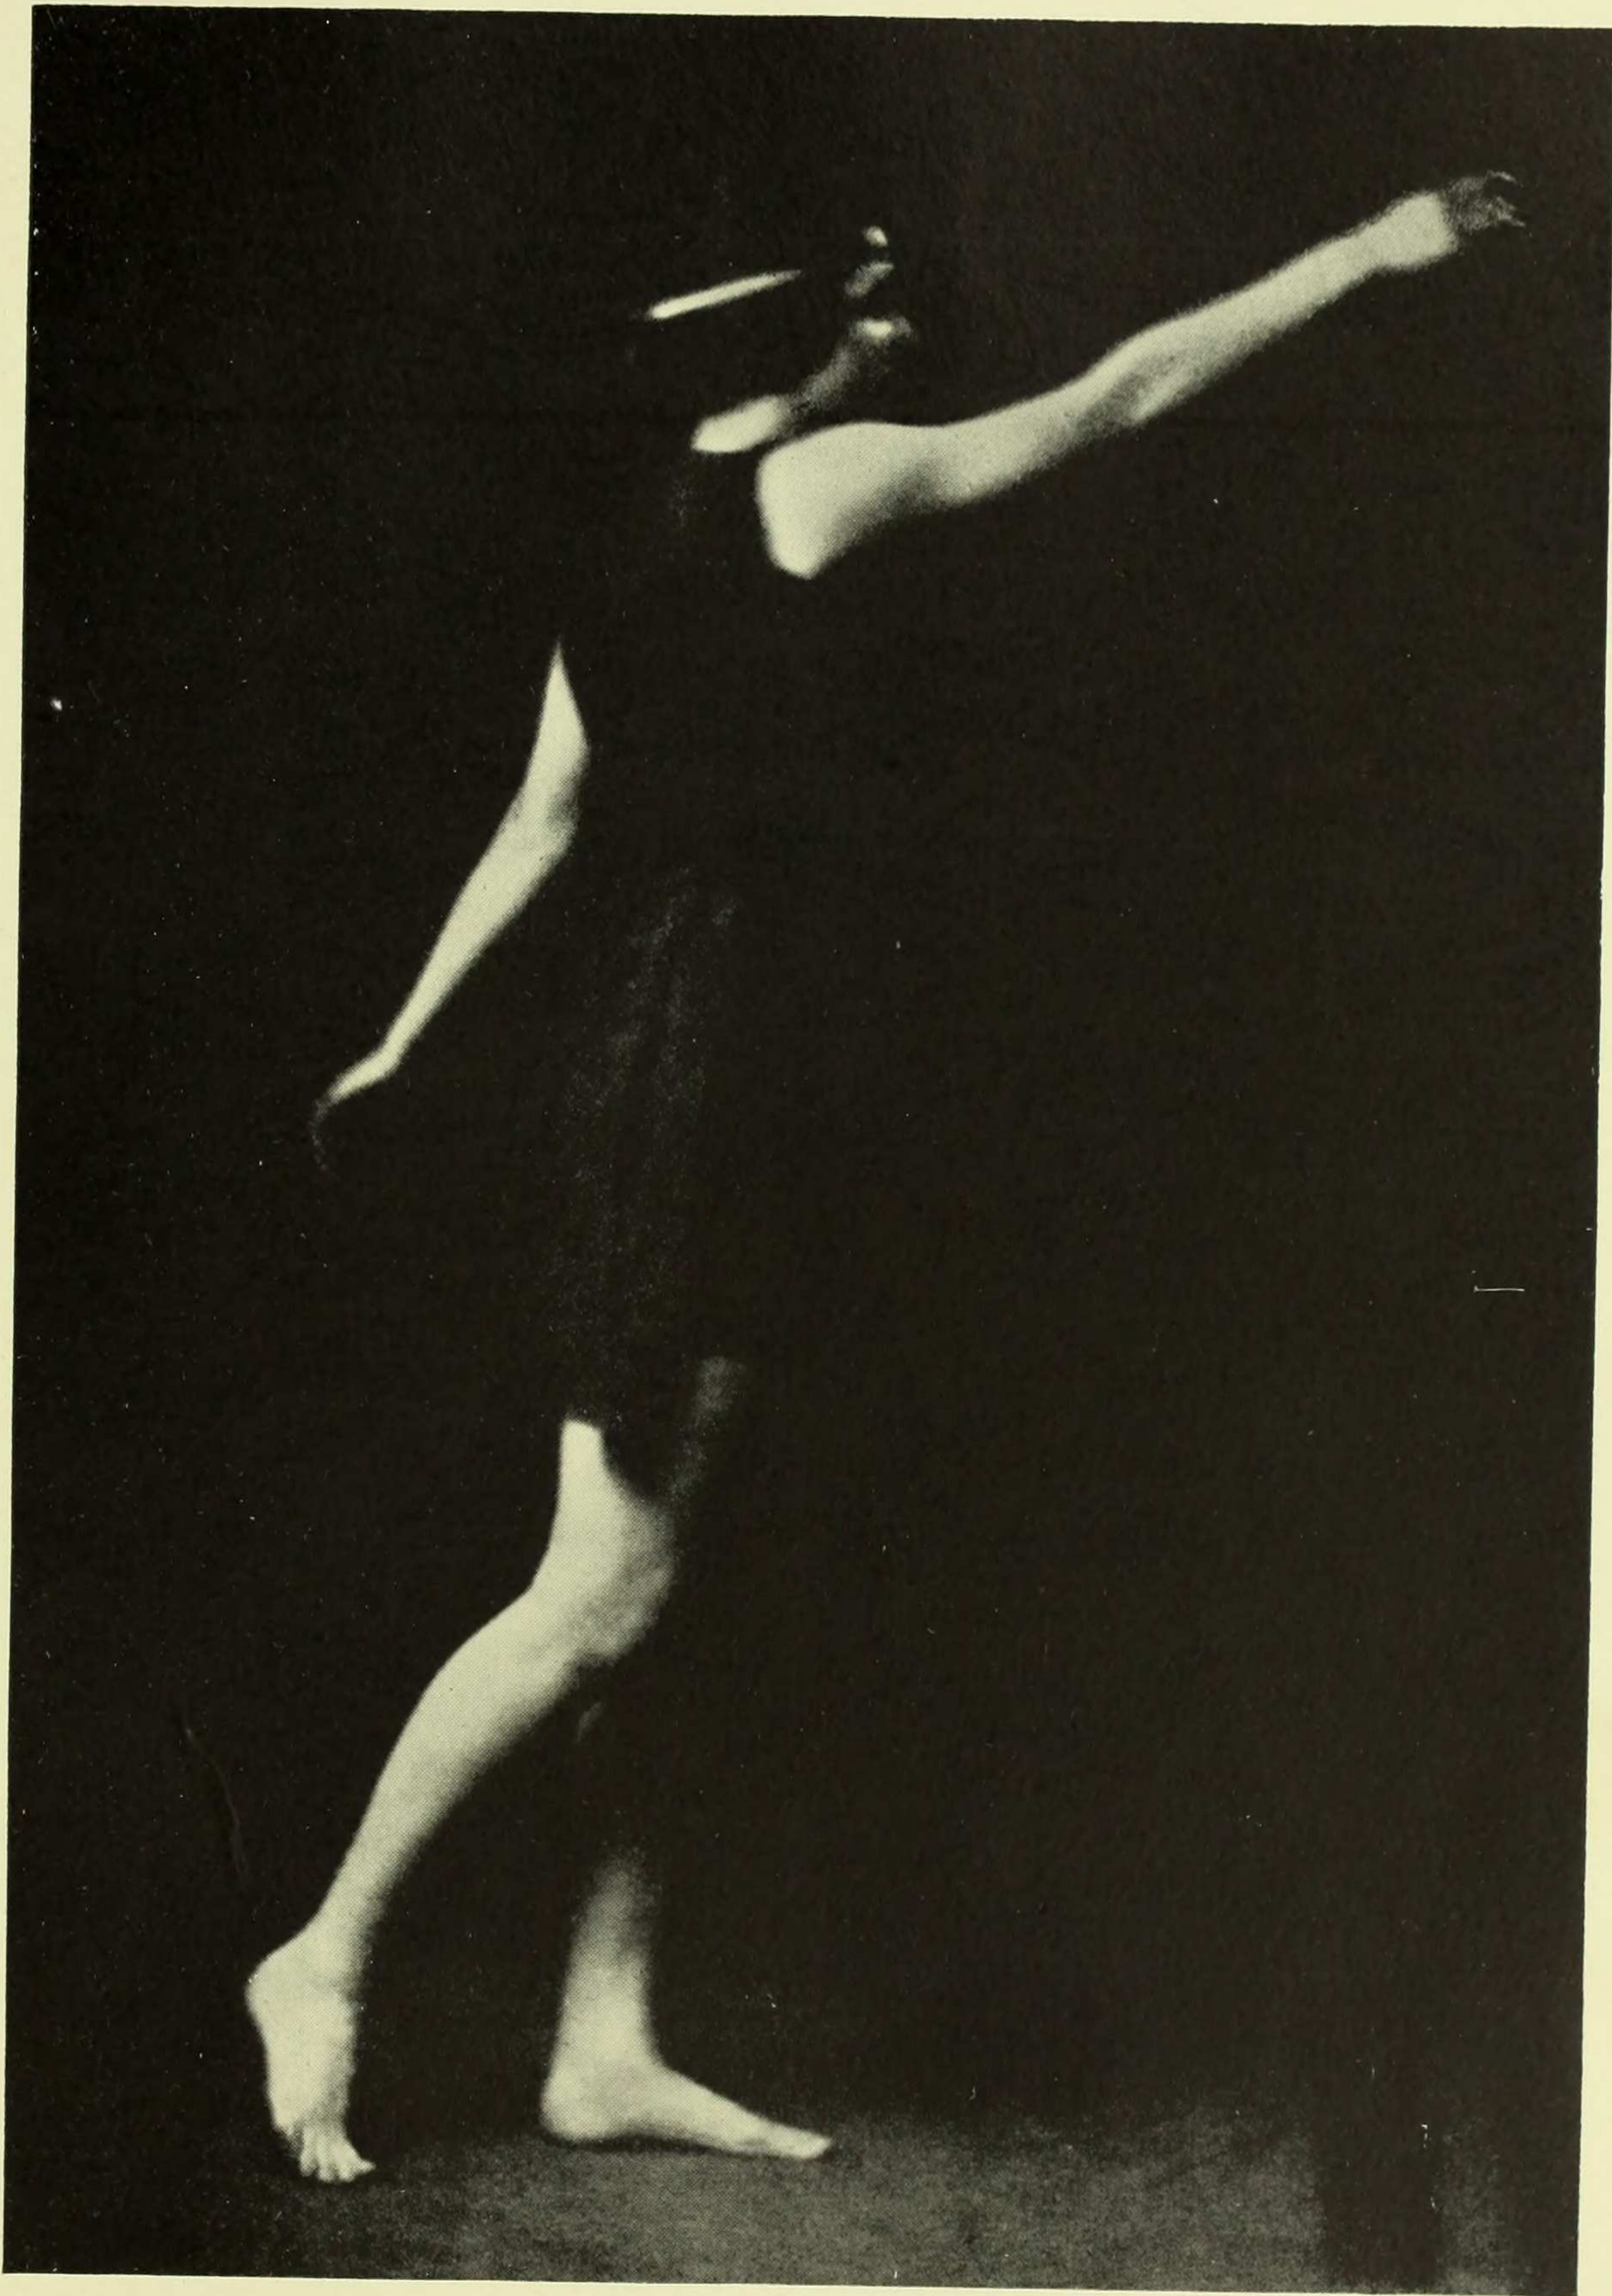

Professors Young and Perry,
 Professors Young and Perry,
 You've changed us all,
 Both great and small,
 To Grecian statuary.

Professors Young and Perry,
 Professors Young and Perry,
 We'd like to speak
 Our thanks in Greek—
 Oh, very, very, very.

Tune: "Good-by, Girls; I'm Through."

Good-by, games; we're through.
 We say good-by to you.
 Each costume that we dyed
 Seemed just like suicide.
 We'll have no more inspections,
 Or Perry's Greek objections.
 To the Classics, adieu.

Good-by, games; good-by, games;
 Good-by, games; we're through!

Questionnaire

Issued by Statistics 13.

- I. Do you wear rubbers?
 1. In rain.
 2. In snow.
 3. If not, when?
- II. Why do you wear them?
 1. For hygienic reasons.
 2. Because of family pressure, habit or the like.
 3. From intellectual curiosity, restlessness, or the desire for a fuller life, etc.
 4. For any other reason.
- III. Which rubber lasts the longer?
 1. Right.
 2. Left.
 3. Both.
 4. Neither.
- IV. Has college changed your point of view concerning rubbers? Give reasons for your answer.

Answer the above questions as briefly as possible. Place a check next to the questions you are answering, a circle next to the one you do not answer, and an anchor next to those it is impossible for you to answer. You need not sign your name unless you wish. It would make it easier for the committee if you did give your name, together with the size of the last pair of rubbers you purchased. If your feet have not stopped growing, you need not answer the questions.

Slender, erect, and strong, you stood an instant on the shore,
Laughing to feel the wind stir in your hair,
Eager to pit your glorious strength against the rushing waves,
Exulting in your youth, that made you lord
Of all the sea and sky.

An instant thus you stood—

Then, flinging back your head in proud defiance,
Gladly you leapt into the surging waters
Breasting the walls of foam, that hurled themselves against you,
Swimming with steady, fearless stroke
Onward through storm and sunshine to the far horizon.

Studying On

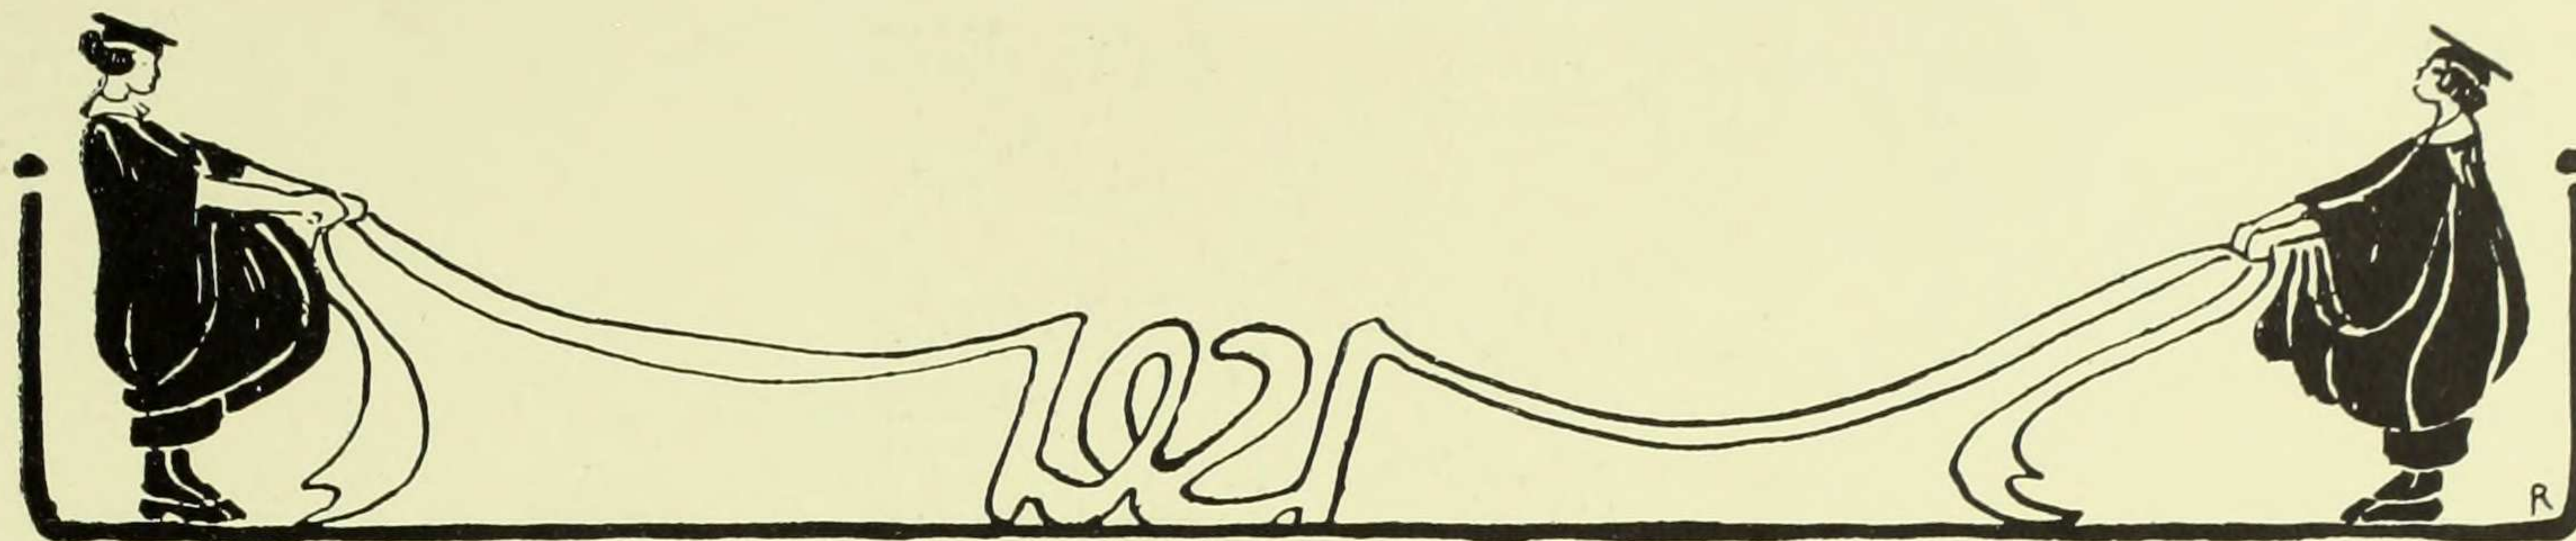

(Tune: "Carrying On")

Our non-college sisters take life at their ease,
They skip off to dances, they wander to teas,
They've hours to shop for the clothes that they wear,
And time in the morning to brush out their hair;
But tho' Barnard is built on the wicked White Way,
'Tis the mood of Olympus with us that holds sway.

If each girl goes studying on (studying on)
She'll be wise as King Solomon (King Solomon),
And when her sisters frivol
Or rattle off their drivel
She'll sneer and mention Xenophon,
Or Plato, and go studying on!

The world that's outside plays a rollicking game—
The stakes are a husband, a fortune, or fame.
Its actors sip sodas at Hegeman stands,
And never are seen having ink on their hands.
We know that they rough-house, we know that they roister,
We hear them sometimes through the walls of our cloister.

But we all go studying on (studying on),
We'll cut them out anon (out anon),
A busy, brilliant band
We'll march from Barnard, and
The whole wide world impress it upon—
And that's why we go studying on!

Songs

To 1919

Tune: "One, Two, Three, Four"

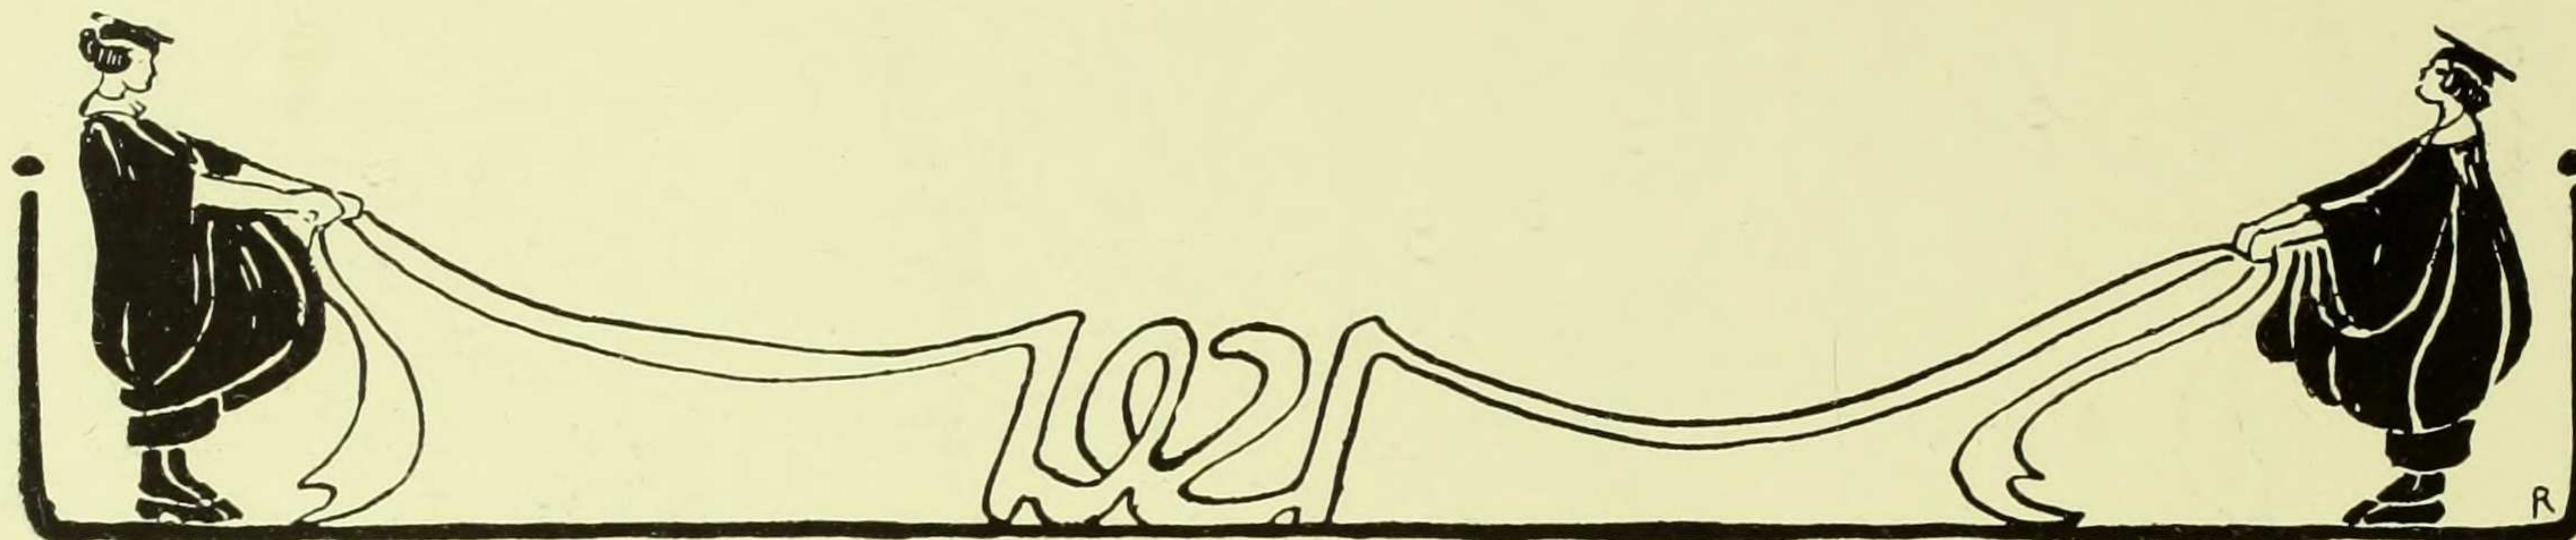

One nine, one nine,
We think that you're pretty fine.
Our big sisters always seem to shine;
And in Barnard, who's at the head of the line?
We guess you've guessed
Who beats the rest—
One nine, one nine.

Tune: "Mush, Mush"

Oh, the bulldog is strong for the Injun,
His loyalty never will fail;
And always he sits by the wigwam,
Complacently wagging his tail.
So—
Bow, wow, wow, wow for the Injun
And bow, wow, wow, wow for Nineteen;
May the pup ever wear a red collar
And the Chief wear a blanket of green.

Tune: "Camp Song"

It's great to have a pal
Like the class One nine, one nine;
We're singing to you, and to you we'll be true;
We've always loved you and we always shall,
O class One nine, one nine,
All the Juniors think you're mighty fine;
Please send your affection
In our direction,
O class One nine, one nine.

Tempus Fugit

When we were Freshmen, Paris green,
With eyes of awe we watched Nineteen;
Their poise, their grace, their savoir faire,
The grown-up way they did their hair;
In worried groups we'd sit and stew,
"Oh, can we ever be like you?"

The years have passed, and here are we Protecting little Twenty-three.
We know the ropes, we've gained finesse,
We feel years older, we confess;
But still in worried groups we fuss,
"O can they ever be like us?"

Among its many charms you see,
The "Mortarboard" has this:
The admirable quality
Of self-analysis:

As upward fly the glowing sparks —
I'm always ready with remarks;
My bites are nothing to my barks —
With best regards, I'm Mary's remarks.

There was nothing to delight us
When we had appendicitis —
Ne'er more vainly have we spent time

Yours sincerely,

Gertrude Bendheim

If a person's always late
Cures will ne'er do much for 'er
If we've ever had a date —
You know this — Love,

Louisa

My fancy only runs, forsooth,
To facts that may contain a Dash of philosophic truth —
Yours truly,

Gertrude Dana

I love to feel all
Nice and smiley.
With best wishes —

Olive Riley

I can't recollect the time
When I half so dumb or dull felt Really, I can't write a rhyme —
Yours sincerely,

Helen Muhlfield

I love to talk to Faculty
On Wednesday afternoons at tea
I hope they love to talk to me —
Your humble servant,

Mary S.

You wouldn't guess that I was bright,
If you should read my penning's —
A very childish hand I write,
A'est-ce pas? In haste,

Mary Jennings

I love to wear both neat and nifty Clothes.

Yours truly,

Evelyn Skrifte

Nothing in the world atones
For wearing spectacles of bones:
They cause me tears and wails and groans —

And hope you are the same,

Helen B. Jones

I live at flying fame,
Alas and woe is me!
I've three n's in my name
Believe me,

Ruth N.C.

When it comes to poetry
I'm always on the job.
Rhymes mean everything to me —
I am,

Antonia Schwab

If I lost my veil
I'd rue it —

Virginia Stewart

About the time I never worry —
Tho' I live uptown so far;
You never see me in a hurry —
Yours sincerely,

If you would touch
A tender chord,
Just ask my age
With love,

Undergrad tea, Undergrad tea,
The weekly taste of society!
I stagger from out of the laboratoree,
Bespattered with drops of NaCO_3 ,
And haste me to Students as fast as can be,

Oh, Wednesdays are the days for me,
With Undergrad tea, Undergrad tea.

Foreword

The 1921 MORTARBOARD guarantees that the following unfinished chronicle is the unaided work of a child of three years, who learned the facts of this history from her sister at Barnard. It has all the simplicity of childhood and a directness of style that many older authors might do well to copy. Let anyone who doubts the authenticity of the history consider the utter impossibility of imitating so skillfully a child's psychology. The original MS. in an old, brown notebook is now on file in MORTARBOARD office, where doubters may read.

CHAPTER 1

Preparashun

Molossa was a blasay girl of 18 with stilash close and hair just up so that the hairpins fell out and rattled on the street. Molossa dear her father said to her one day collidge begins tomoroe and you must not forget to go. I wont said she and went out to buy some new hairpins the kind that dont fall out becaus they have humps in the midle.

CHAPTER 2

What a nice day it is Molossa remarcked to the lady with specktickles who took her yeloe card behind a desk. Get your bill at the windoe she ansered in a snapy tone which Molossa did. Then she found a big room with tables and professers and other misselanius furnichure. One of them said to her er what have you planed to take. O filoserfy and sike and eck and mewsick. I look forwood to being a lawya or else a trajedy actres you see. Yes I see said the prof and rote down kem and math and lattin and ing and do you want french or germun she inkwired. CHAPTER 3

Socierty

Molossas first week at collidge was a gay whearl of teas and partys. She learned how to hold a tea cup and cake in one hand shaking hands with the other which made her feel very sofistickated indeed. One class was nice to her and her other felloe classmates. It was the Juniors and they were her sister class. The sofermores were not nice at all. They treted them like mear infunt with seluloyd tags for ten sents and not collidge wimen making them role pennys with their nose and other childish sports. Even if we are freshmun said Molossa indignuntly you should not trete us so ignerminiously as to give us one anermul cracker for refreshmunts.

A Stilash Call

What a bewterfull manshun Molossa exclaimed claping her litle hands in eckstusie of delite. It was indeed. Room upon room in stewardnts hall was dekerated with harmonius curtins and dark brown chares and tables. How spashus she cried and o look here is a lettre. My name is here it is a lettre from the dean how thortfull of her to rite. It was an invitashun to call at her erlist conveniunse. O dear what shall I ware Molossa thought I gess my patunt lethers which she did. Going up to the forth flore she wated for a long time outside the deans door nocking as perlately as poserble. After a vane intervle where is the dean she asked a sofermore who laft and ansered you are a freshmun. Yes how did you know Molossa ejackulated in a suprized way.

CHAPTER 5

Misteries

Sh Sh she was told when she asked what they were. It was indeed. Clad in childish bloomers Molossa and her class ate a hapy supper overshadoed becaus it mite be there last. The sofermores sang unplesunt songs but not so the Juniors who acted in a sisterly way.

Molossa and her class also sang and returned the baner which they had spiruted away trimmed with green ribon for the ockashun especshully Frances Brown whom they had electked temperery charemun of them. Afterwoods the freshmun went between a line on the tenis cort of girls who tried to ore them very mutch after which they were entertayned by the dragon in four coils the sofermores show and then by an interprutive dance simbolick too and a misteries book given with instruckshuns and misteries was over.

CHAPTER 10

A Classicul Competishun

Preperashuns over and curtins hung the day arived. There was mutch ecksitemunt on both sides and Molassas in pertickelyar for they wanted to win greatly. Clad in a short Greshun costoom with very cold arms before a grate croud she was in the mob after which she sat on a mat. The God was promethyus but unforchunutly Molossas class didnt win duspiste there aplawded dance espeshully the flames and Mary Granger the efishunt charemun and all her comities that died and so on. We didnt win but theres next year Molossas consoled her class and they assented congratchewlating the sofermores.

But trying hard they were seckund in baseball. See said Molossa hortilly.

Misteries How Diferunt

This is from another point of vue she raved haperlie seeing them in bloomers at there mersy so remembering Porsha she did not strain it and fed them first and performed enioiable tricks allah cabaray. The sofermores grashusly dismist the other classes which made Molossa feel soupearior remembering last year. Alone at last she gloted and roled up her sleves figyuratively and like an inkwisishun. How great was her delite when they were condemmed into the misteries line grewsom and dark as it was. The gim was dark but not grewsom becaus of the essthetick runing track lites. A dance the book and all was over. I came I saw my duty and I did it clasickully kwoted Molossa congratchewlating Gladys Van Brunt, charemun.

CHAPTER 14

Dramma

It was a war bennerfit and so it could be twice. Oh Im so glad egsulted Molossa and cut sike to boroe a fur coat for the north pole. It was a sucksess and of course pateriotick. Each act vied with its predusesser ecksepting the first a fizzicul imposserbillutie. Hm Molossa tryumfed an omun for greek games and skwoze cold cream on her face to remove the eskumo. The program and the sucksessfull comitie were:

CHAPTER 16

Odd Evun Ing

The poaster said this so not under standing Molossa went. It was coffie first ending with soup a strange mele feeling kweer tho I dont see why soup on top should hurt she medertated. She enjoid the games all backwoods and rejoised at being odd. For evuns are not so fast she kwoted from the song.

CHAPTER 17

Pan

What a kweer name thought Molossa so domestick for a god but it was diferunt in greese I gess. You see he was the god about whom the games revolved about. Let us hang together they were urged and they did bringing vicktrie in there trane altho at the begining the end appered dowtfull and Molossa shiverd fritefully. She could not but admyer the growtesk dance of the freshmun fawns which justly but sadly won. How Molossa jubilated at the liricks won. They turned the tables tord twenty one and the athleticks also provoked her hilarritie. If Pan only new Molossa said to herself in an altruistick way and lingered in her costoom so as to prehaps meet a judge cashually espeshully if famus. But no as prof Nap took good care of them. But spiruts returning she bort a peenut butter sandwich at the delickertesens and ate it on riverside in comperny with her feloe classmates with moonlite remantick all to no end. Dulce est she kwoted (it was on her entrans egzam so she new) pro patria mori.

CHAPTER 18

Sterling Silvr

I wish there werent so many nice parties with delishus cakes said Molossa full of them becaus I must trane to win Field day. Becaus they were so assetick tryumf was theres. When we are seniors she refleckted screwtunizing George and Marie the soul athletes for the seniors I hope two of us can win so many points and think of all the others in adishun. What a strange conexiun it was to be strung together like a funeral reath.

Poetry { But it pade
How prettie the cup was
And the pink lemernade.

CHAPTER 19

Very Stilash Indeed

The lunchun was at the Biltmore where it simply overwealmed her with its silk gowns and elervater starters. Molossa felt rarther inside out in the elervater but thought it best to conseal it as otherwise they mite noe she was not a native. Marion Baer had engaged a sumpchewus sweet with red velvit. How sublime murmered Molossa taking in the souper-silius waiter. But she took him down a peg by pointing out pensul spots on the table cloth nearly hiddun by the flat silvr. See she said but he said yes will you have coffie miss. The mewsick soothed all those presunt while they consoomed delickusies. Molossa felt her hart sinking becaus she was doomd to make a speach. No lunchun past her trembuling lips becaus of the coming ordele. And it looks so tastifull too she thought. But she made it luckilie before the icecreme. How Molossa laft when Dr. Alsop the onered gest made a umerus orashun on rekwest of Frances Brown the wittie tost mistres. Dancing broke up the afternoon.

Seniors Adoo

It began long before they went to wit at a fuchurist party where they all drest up that way. How amewsing it would be to be a bally dancer I wonder if they reely will Molossa wonderd. And what nice stunts and a play called cabbagus. Qualutie Street was ther reel beginning of senior week festiverties and was kwaint indeed. Molossa drank it in with eger ears forshadoing the rest of the weak. Next came class day hot and tearfull where everyones white dress stuck to there chares and they laft at the nocks. How wonderfull it must be to be a senior and have a bankwit Molossa side wistfullie altho it is a fare well one and you are lost if ingaged. Just think she added sadlie we are now the only odds I wish they didnt have to go.

Grone Up At Last

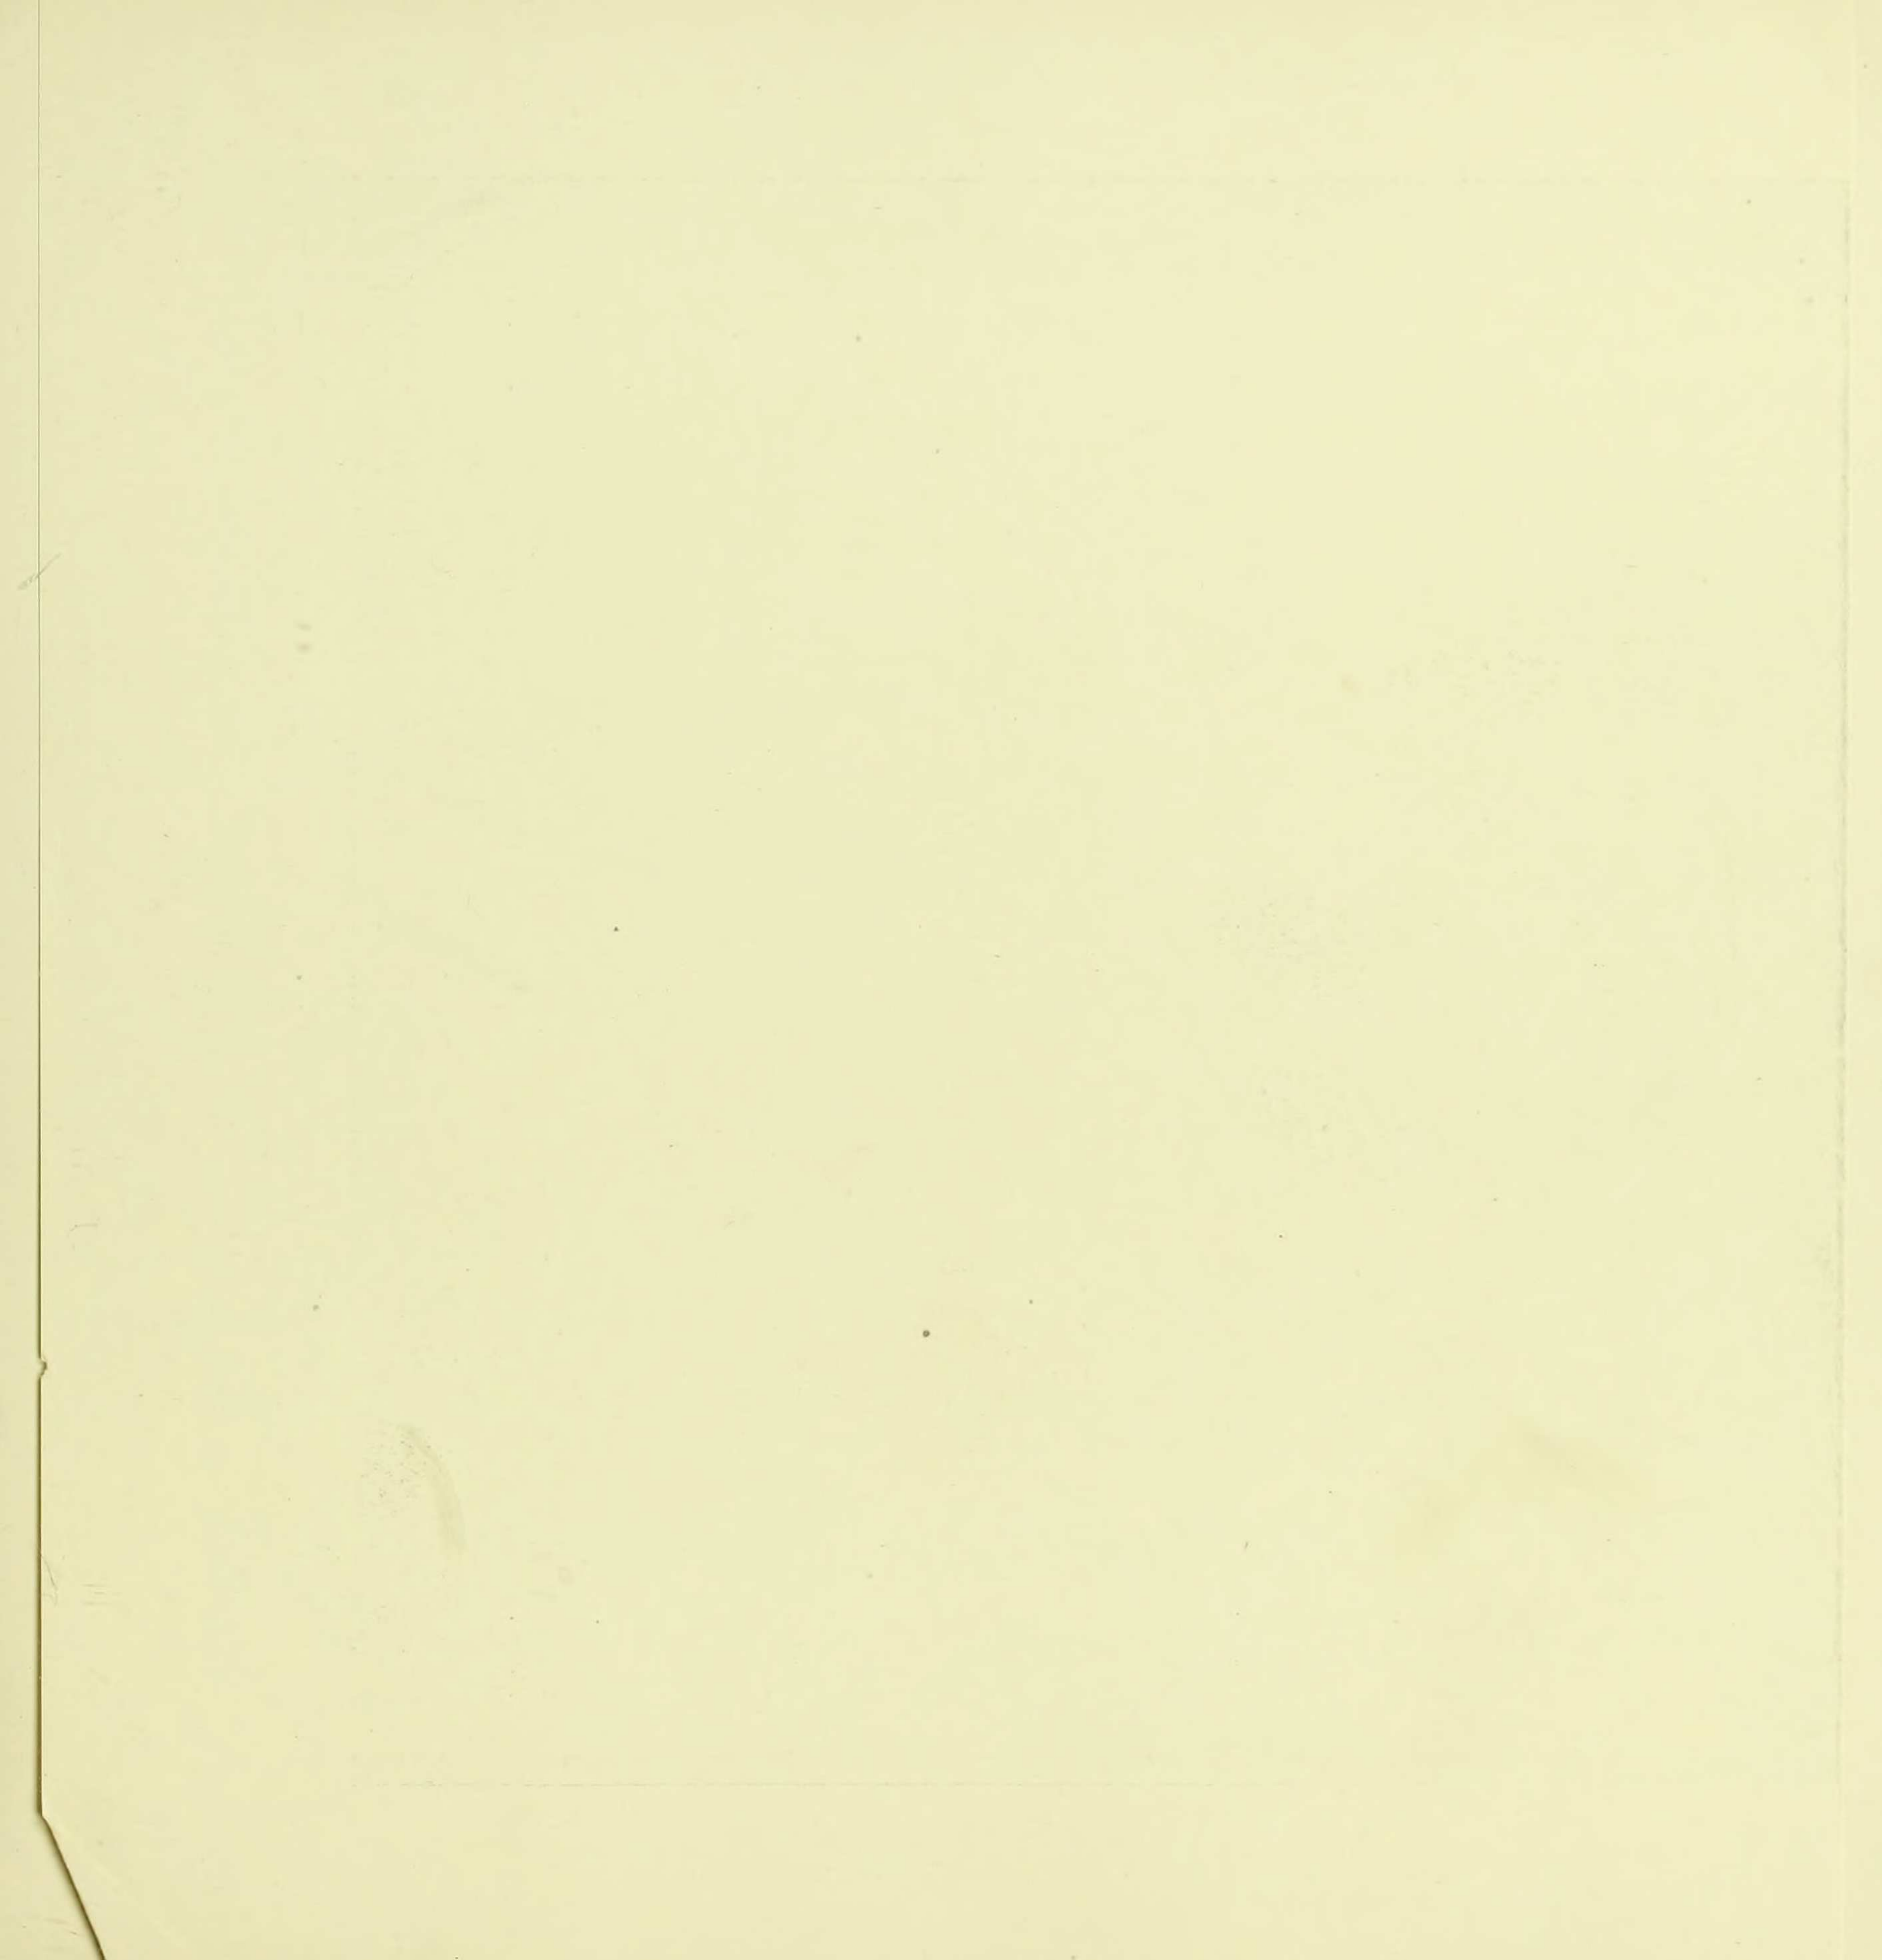

Where are the lists of freshmun sisters Molossa inkwired frantickully realising that was the way to get them. She got a nice one but older than she how parrudocksickul. They gave them a party and proteckshun against the sofermores. At field day Molossa lost to bad. Morterbord ingrost her the bord being so enerjetick and the coming prom Gladys Van Brunt Chairmun. And the junior show Leonora Andrews head. Her new offussers were reagul indeed.

CHAPTER 22

Lanvwa

That is all I can rite now.
The remnunt of Molossas historie is at presunt a thing of the fuchure
The rest will apere as is said in currint magerzines in an erly ishu.

Tune—Yale Bulldog Song

Bulldog, bulldog, bow wow wow,
Twenty-one
Bulldog, bulldog, bow wow wow,
Show them the way it's done.
If you think we'll ever yield them a point,
Wait till the games are won.
Bulldog, bulldog, bow wow wow,
Twenty-one.

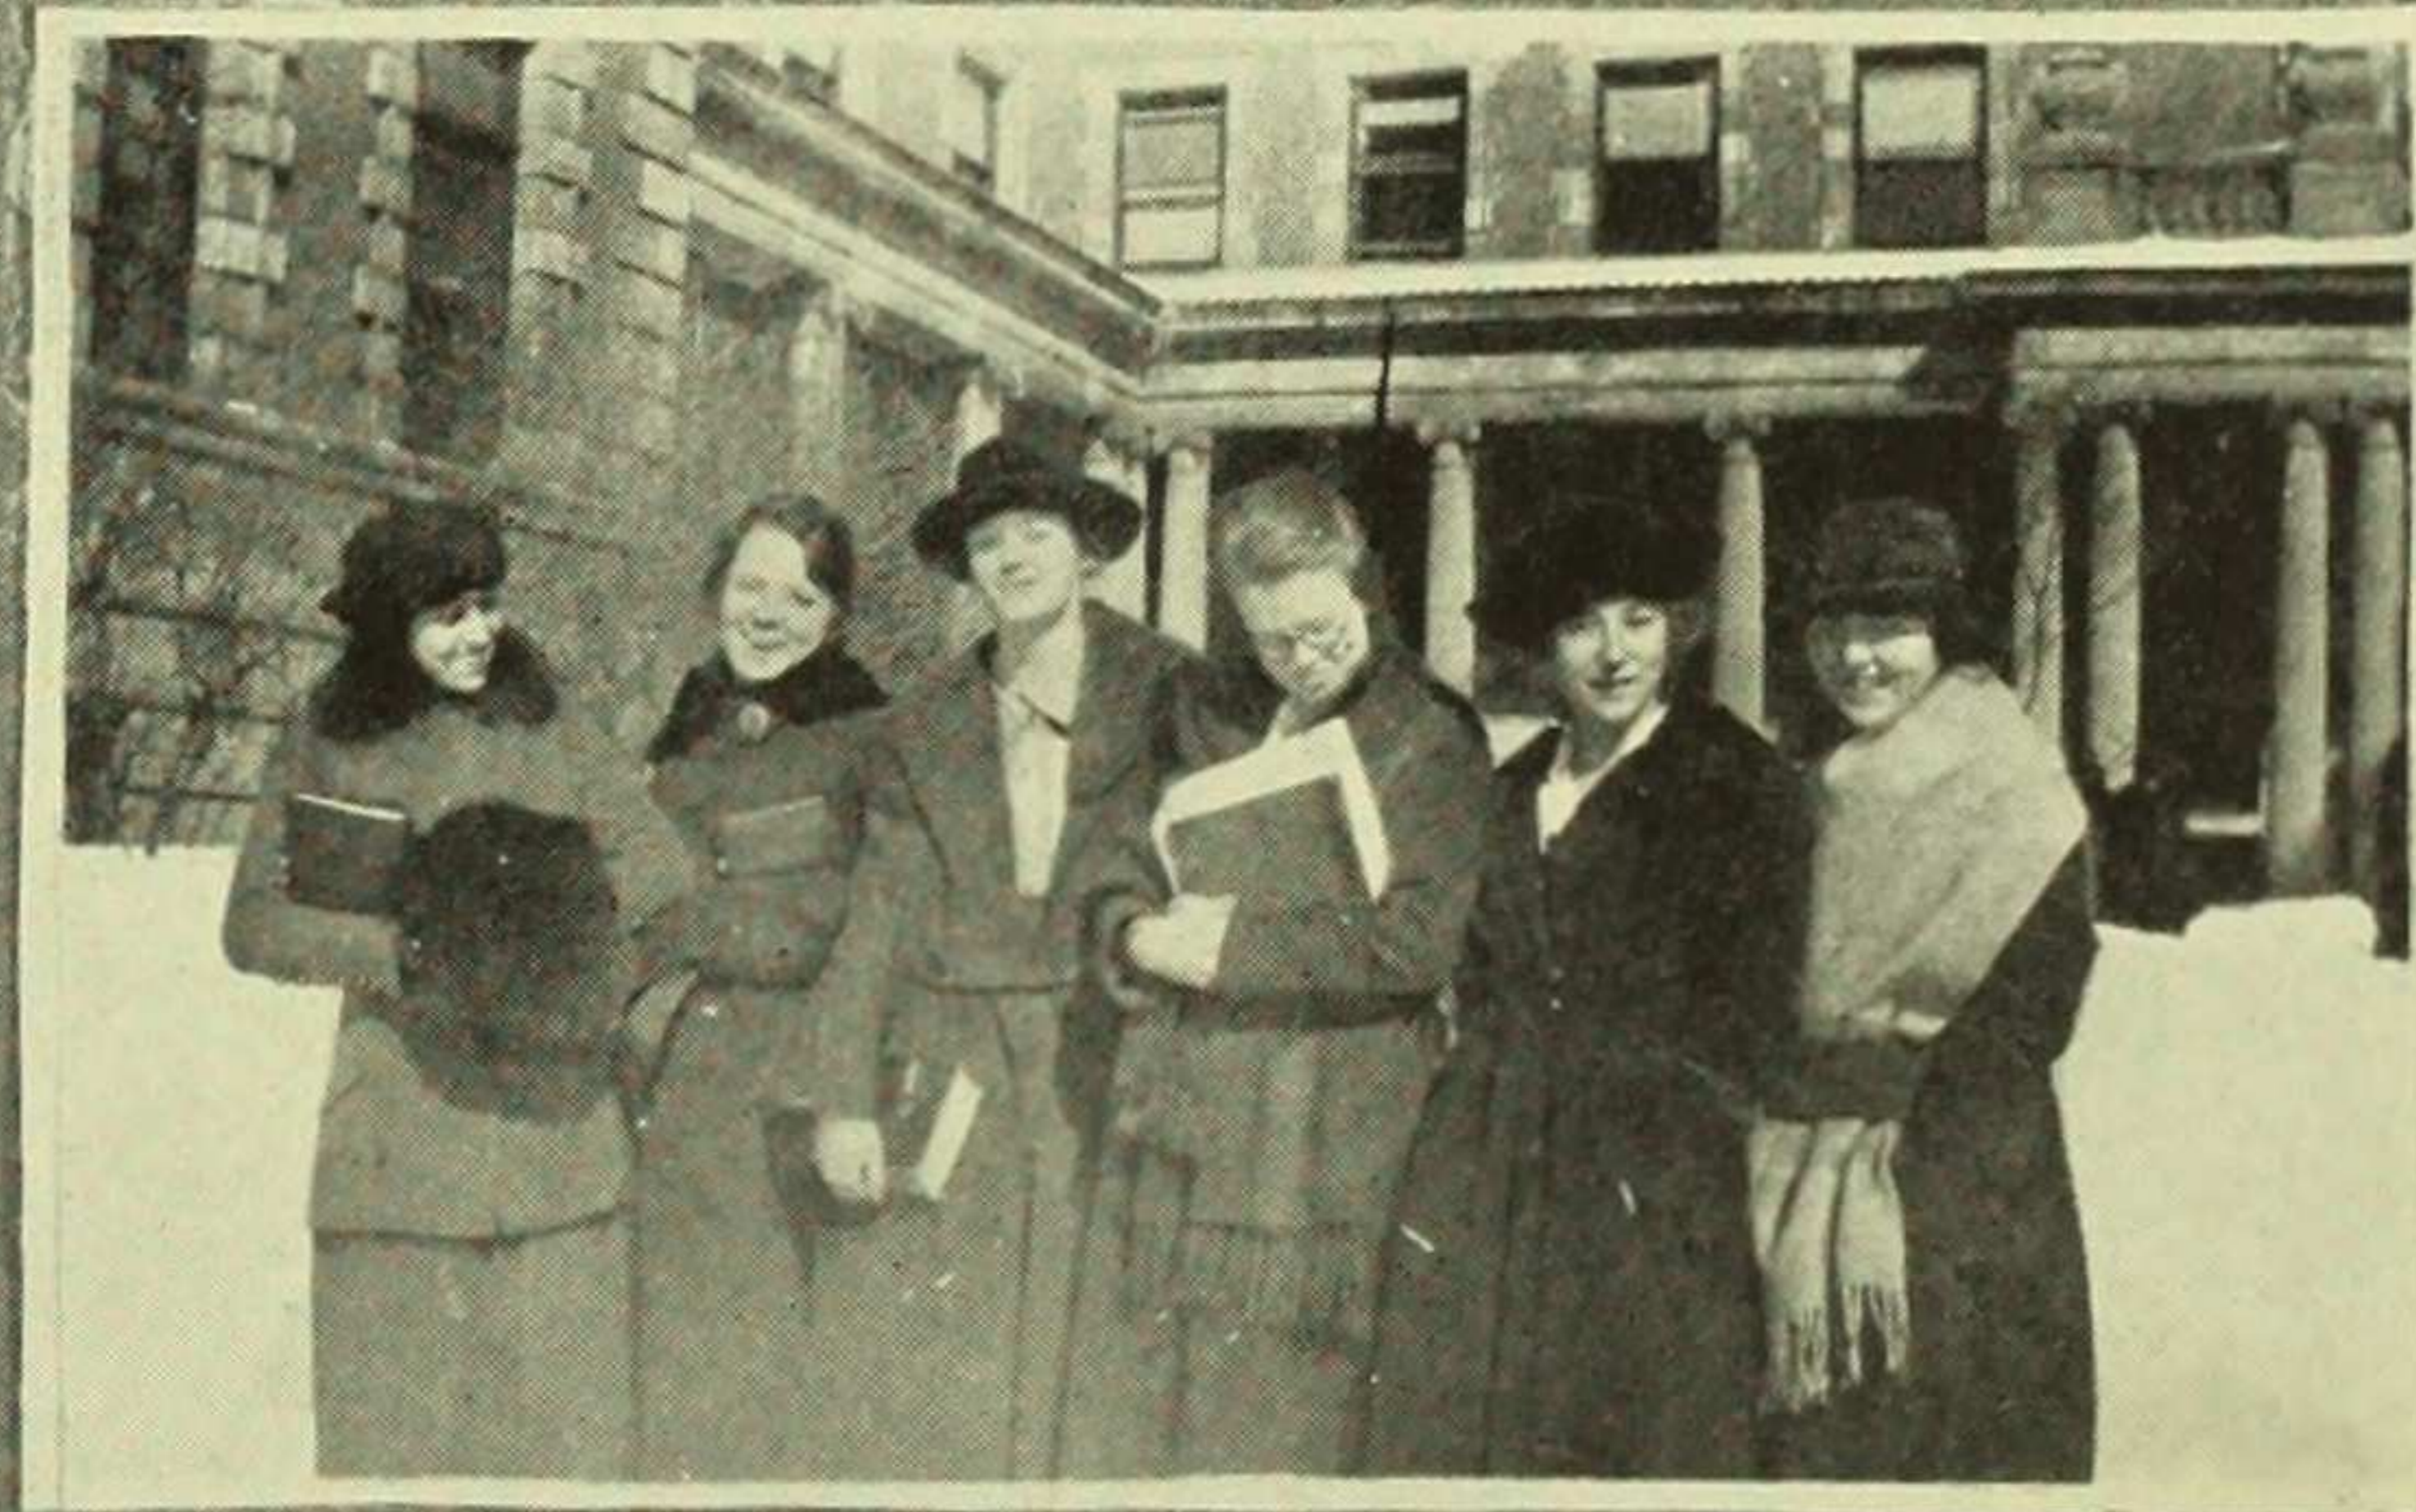

Tune—Princeton Song

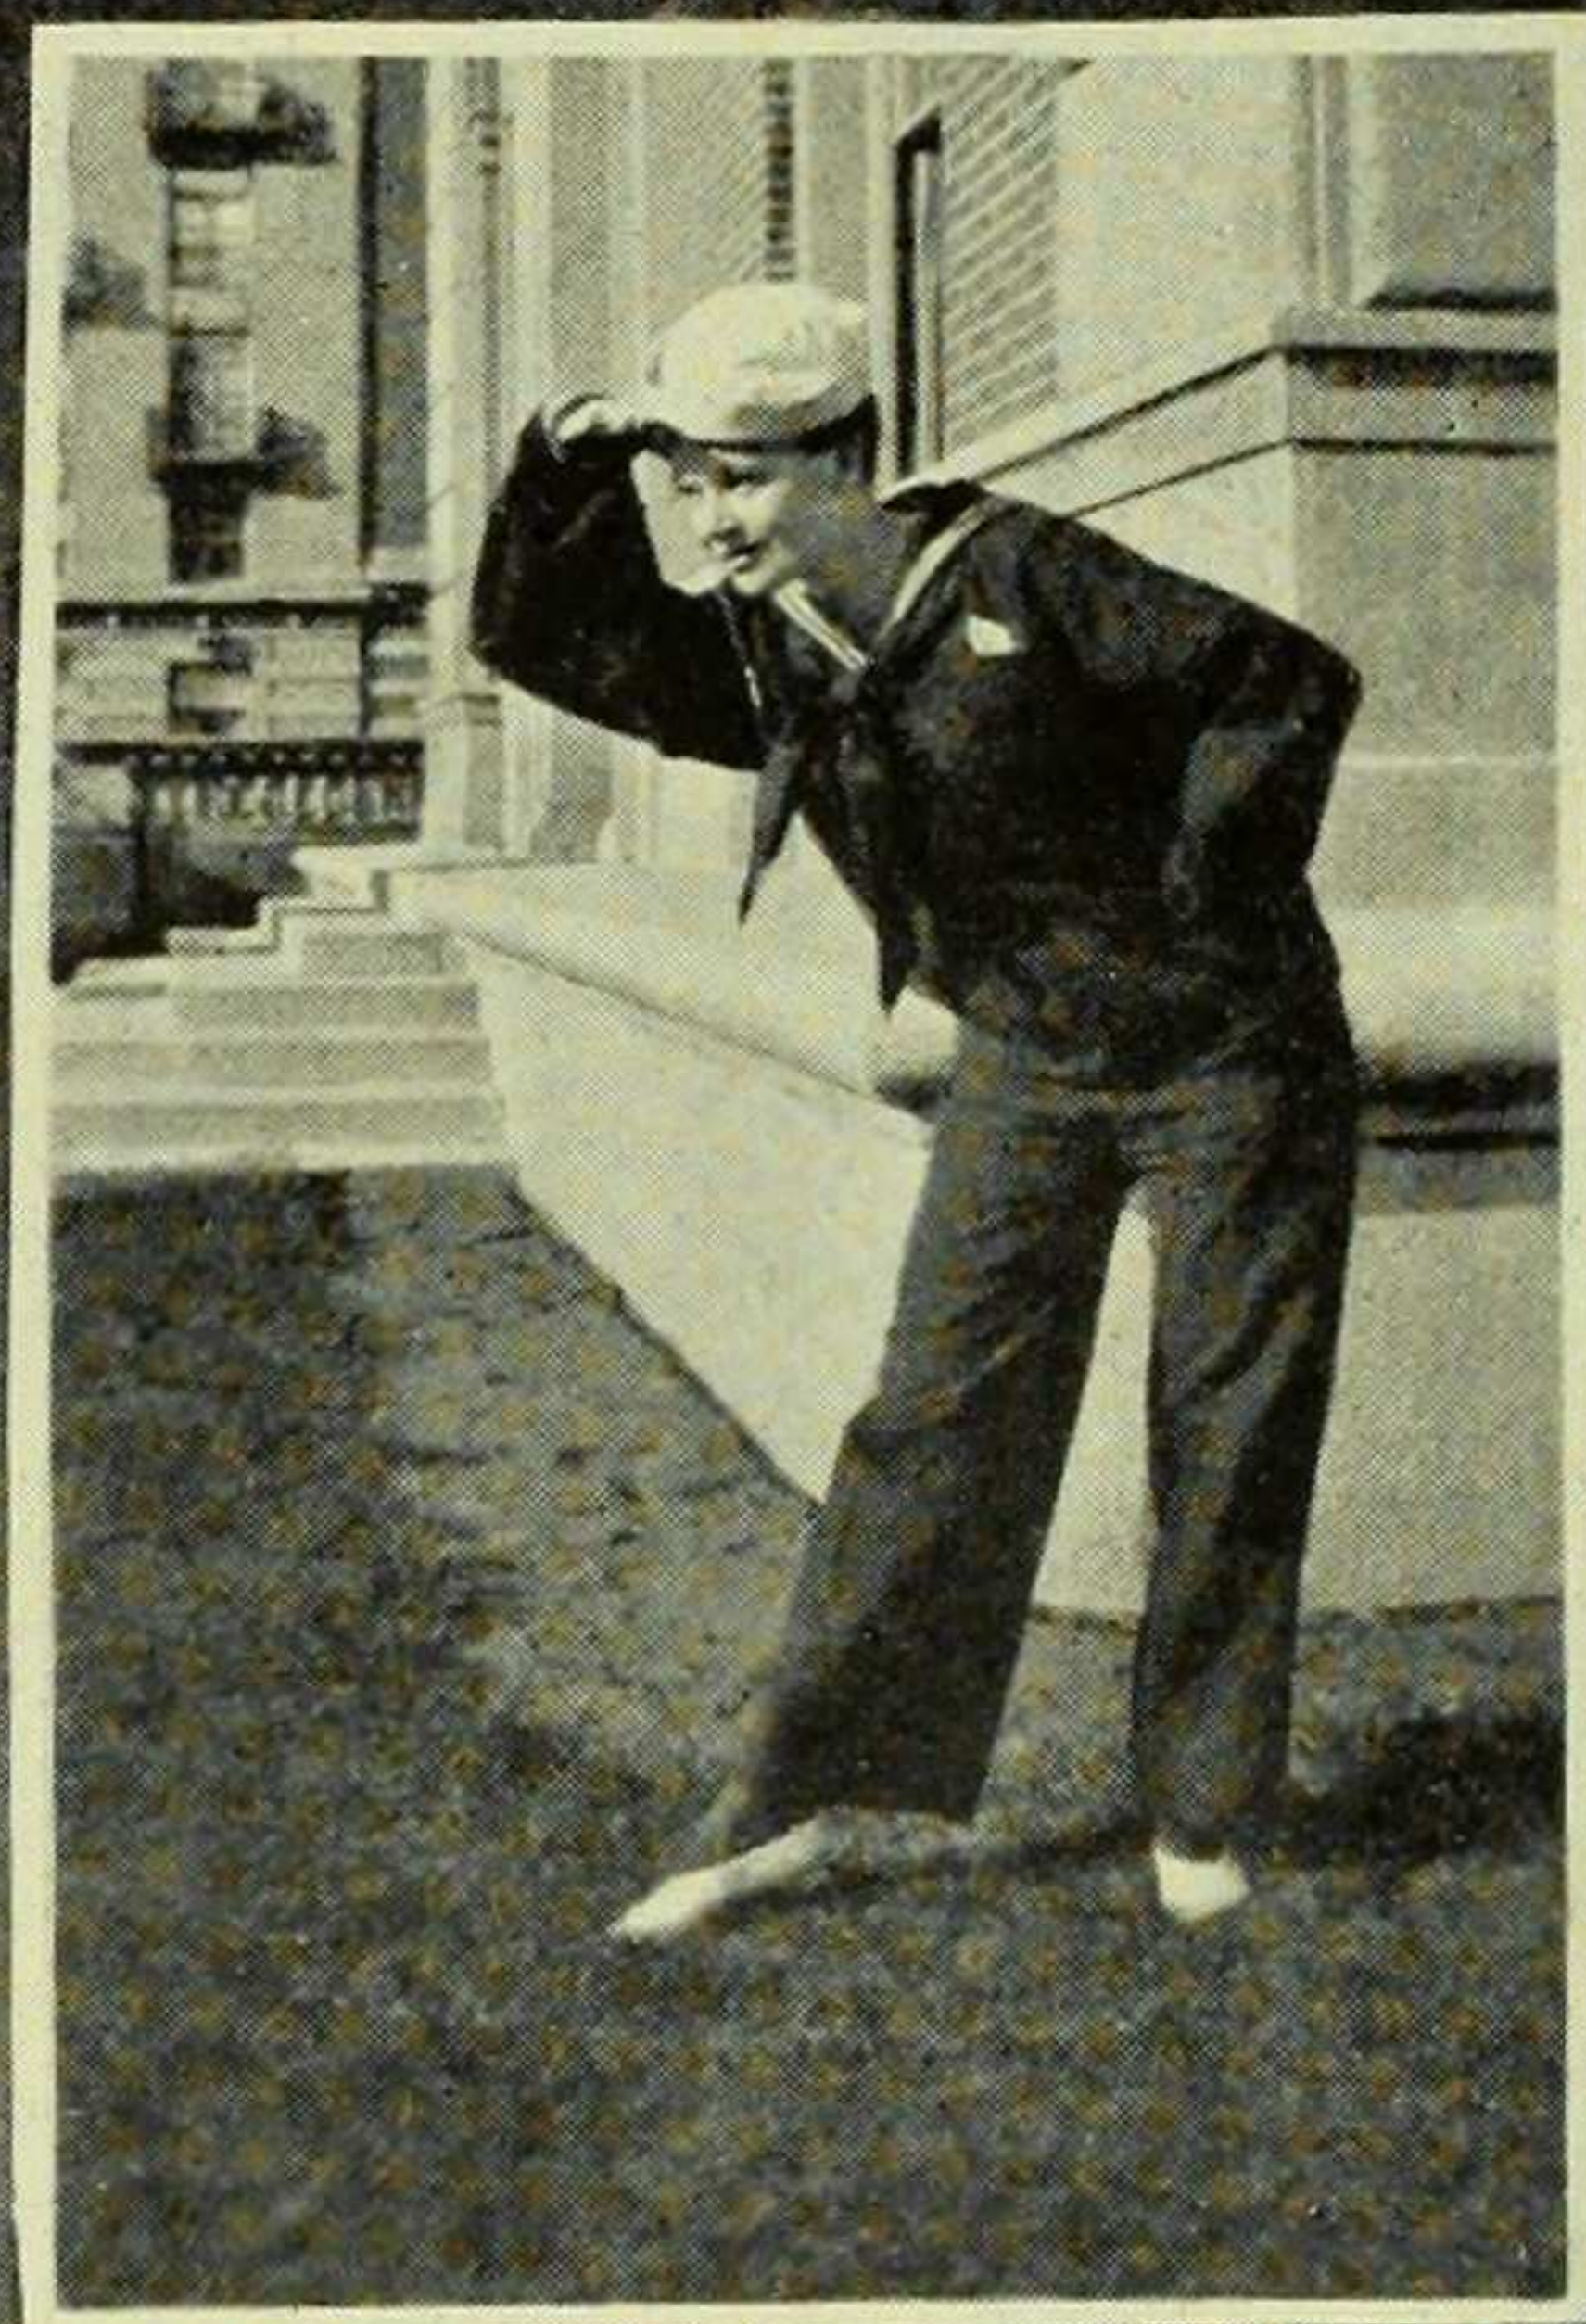

'Twenty-one, forward march to victory,
Twenty-one, lead the way.
Twenty-one, forward march to victory,
This is the Juniors' day, ray!
'Twenty-one, show them how it's done,
Fight with brain and brawn.
We'll leave the others trailing in the dust
As we go marching on.

Any kind of girl can be in 1922,
Any kind of girl can be in Twenty,
Any kind of girl can be an Even, don't you see,
Where there's no discrimination, there's a plenty.
We pity those that follow both the dragon and the lion,
They're not our class, you see.
It takes a doggone, honest Injun sport
To be in Twenty-one or Twenty-three.

Molassas feloe classmates
As planely as can be.

ESTELLE LOUISE
ABRAHAMS

Oh, higher Math's her major,
In which she is proficient;
But even on a wager
She's late—nuff said, sufficient.

HELEN FRANCES
ANDREWS

If you're looking for her she'll
Be somewhere with her friend
Lucile.

EDYTH AHRENS

She's usually found, you know,
Inhabiting the R. S. O.;
In fact, in Barnard there are few
So faithful to Y. W.

LEONORA LOUISE
ANDREWS

She poked her head around the door,
And lightly skipped across the floor—
Then blushing deep and blushing red,
"That Act for Junior Show?" she said.

GERTRUDE
AMMERMÜLLER

She eats at Biacake each day,
Preferring dainty messes;
She dresses in a fluffy way,
And always effervesces.

LUCILE ARKINS

Lucile, we've heard, is fairly happy
When her courses all are snappy,
But she's happiest, perhaps,
When her courses all are snaps.

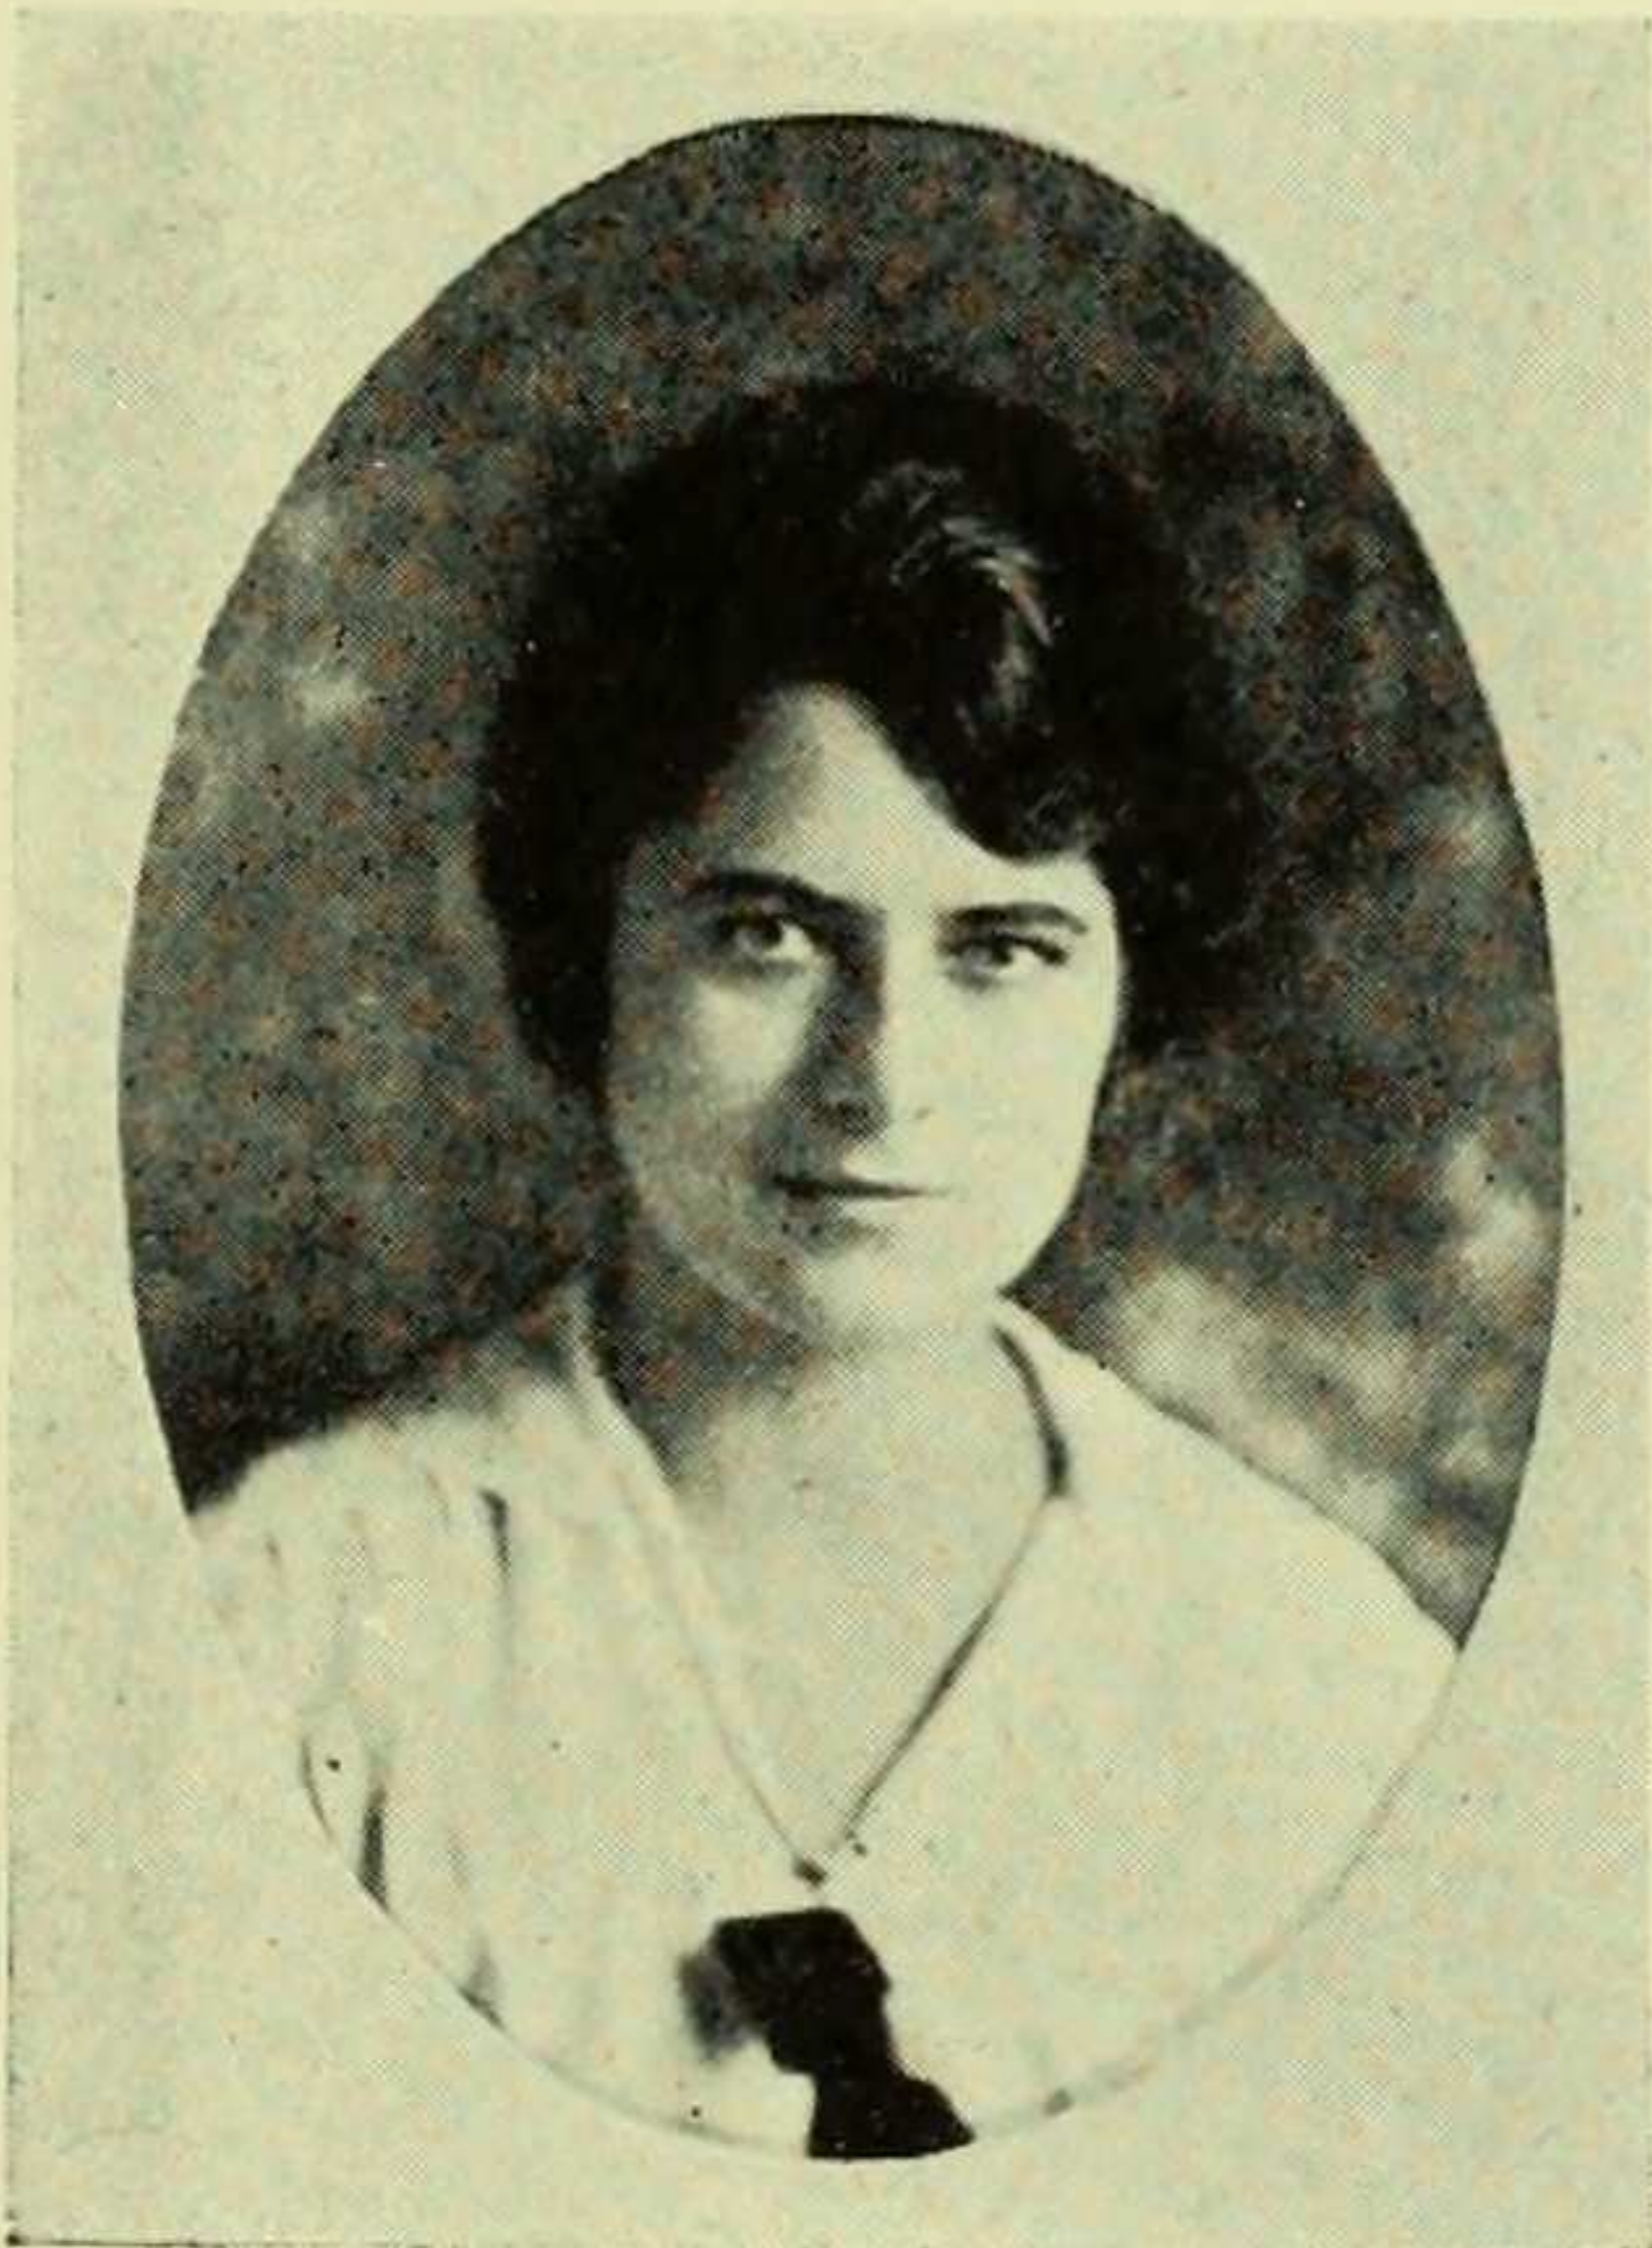

HELEN ELIZABETH BALL

Her smile, as golden bright as May-day,
June-day, or perchance as pay-day,
Makes us think of Sunny Jim,
Though she scarce resembles him.

MARGARETE ADA BENEY

When we looked for flaws in Ada
Only compliments were paid her.
For a knock in vain we're fumin'—
Isn't Ada Beney human?

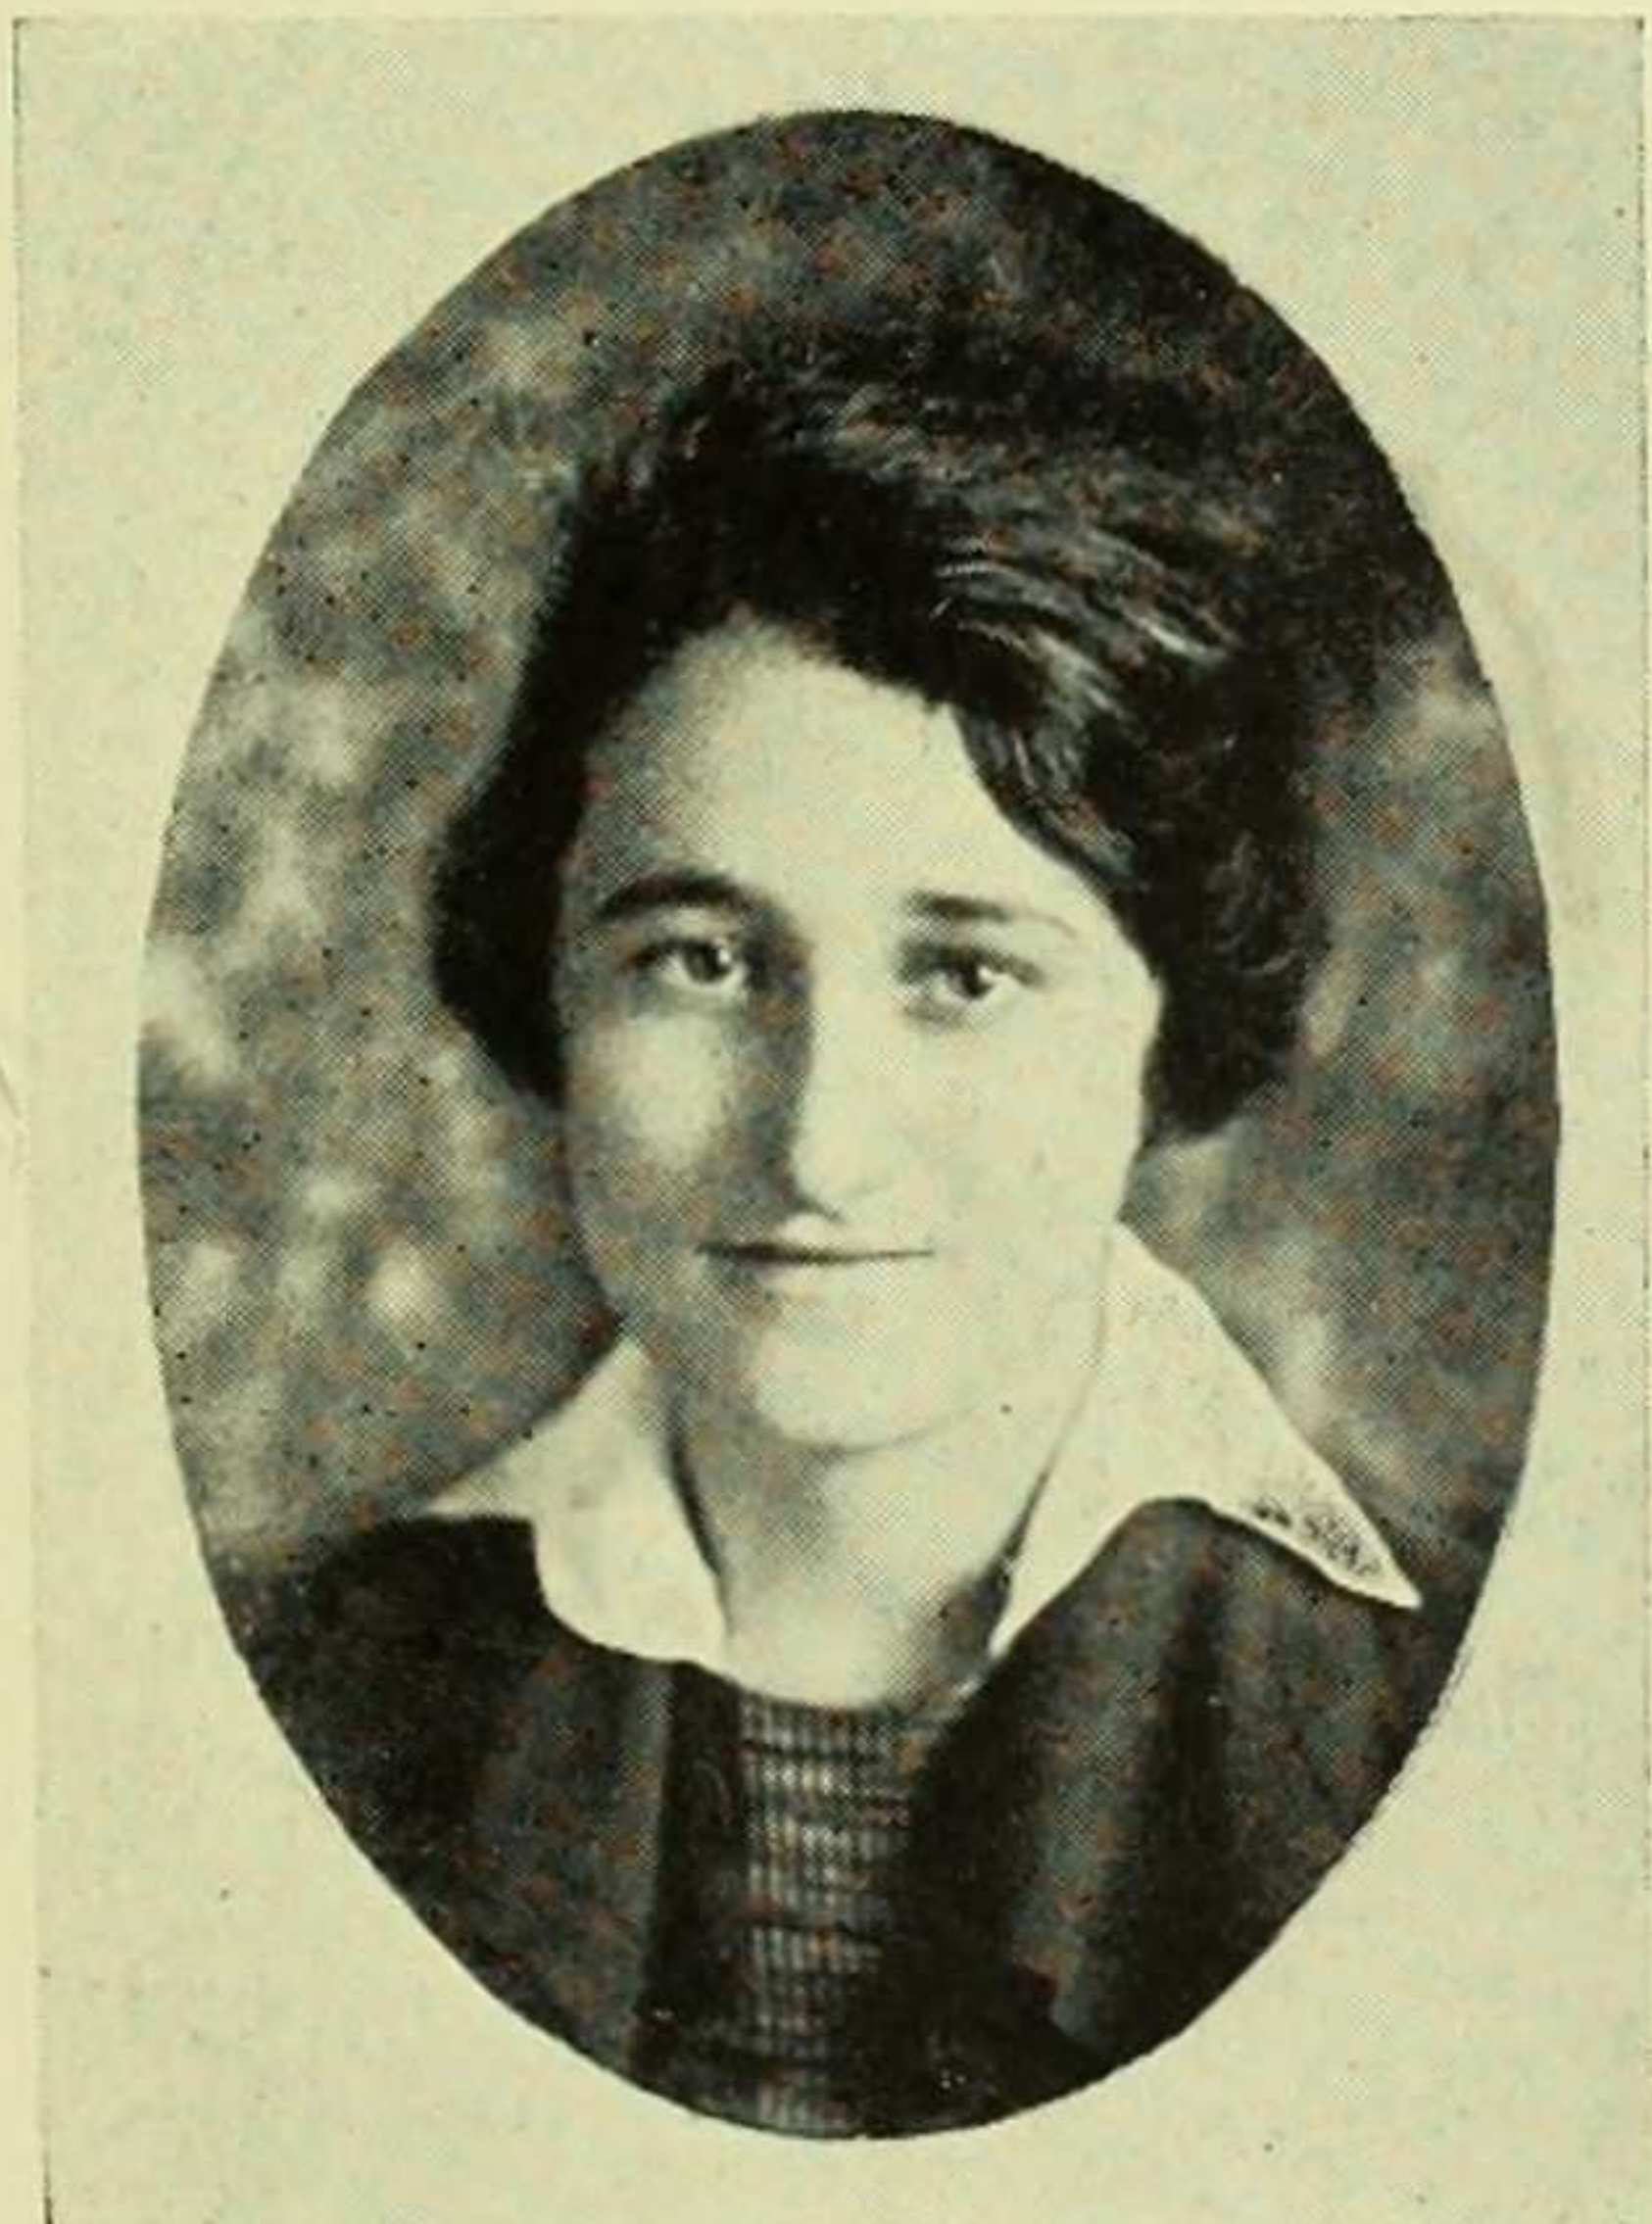

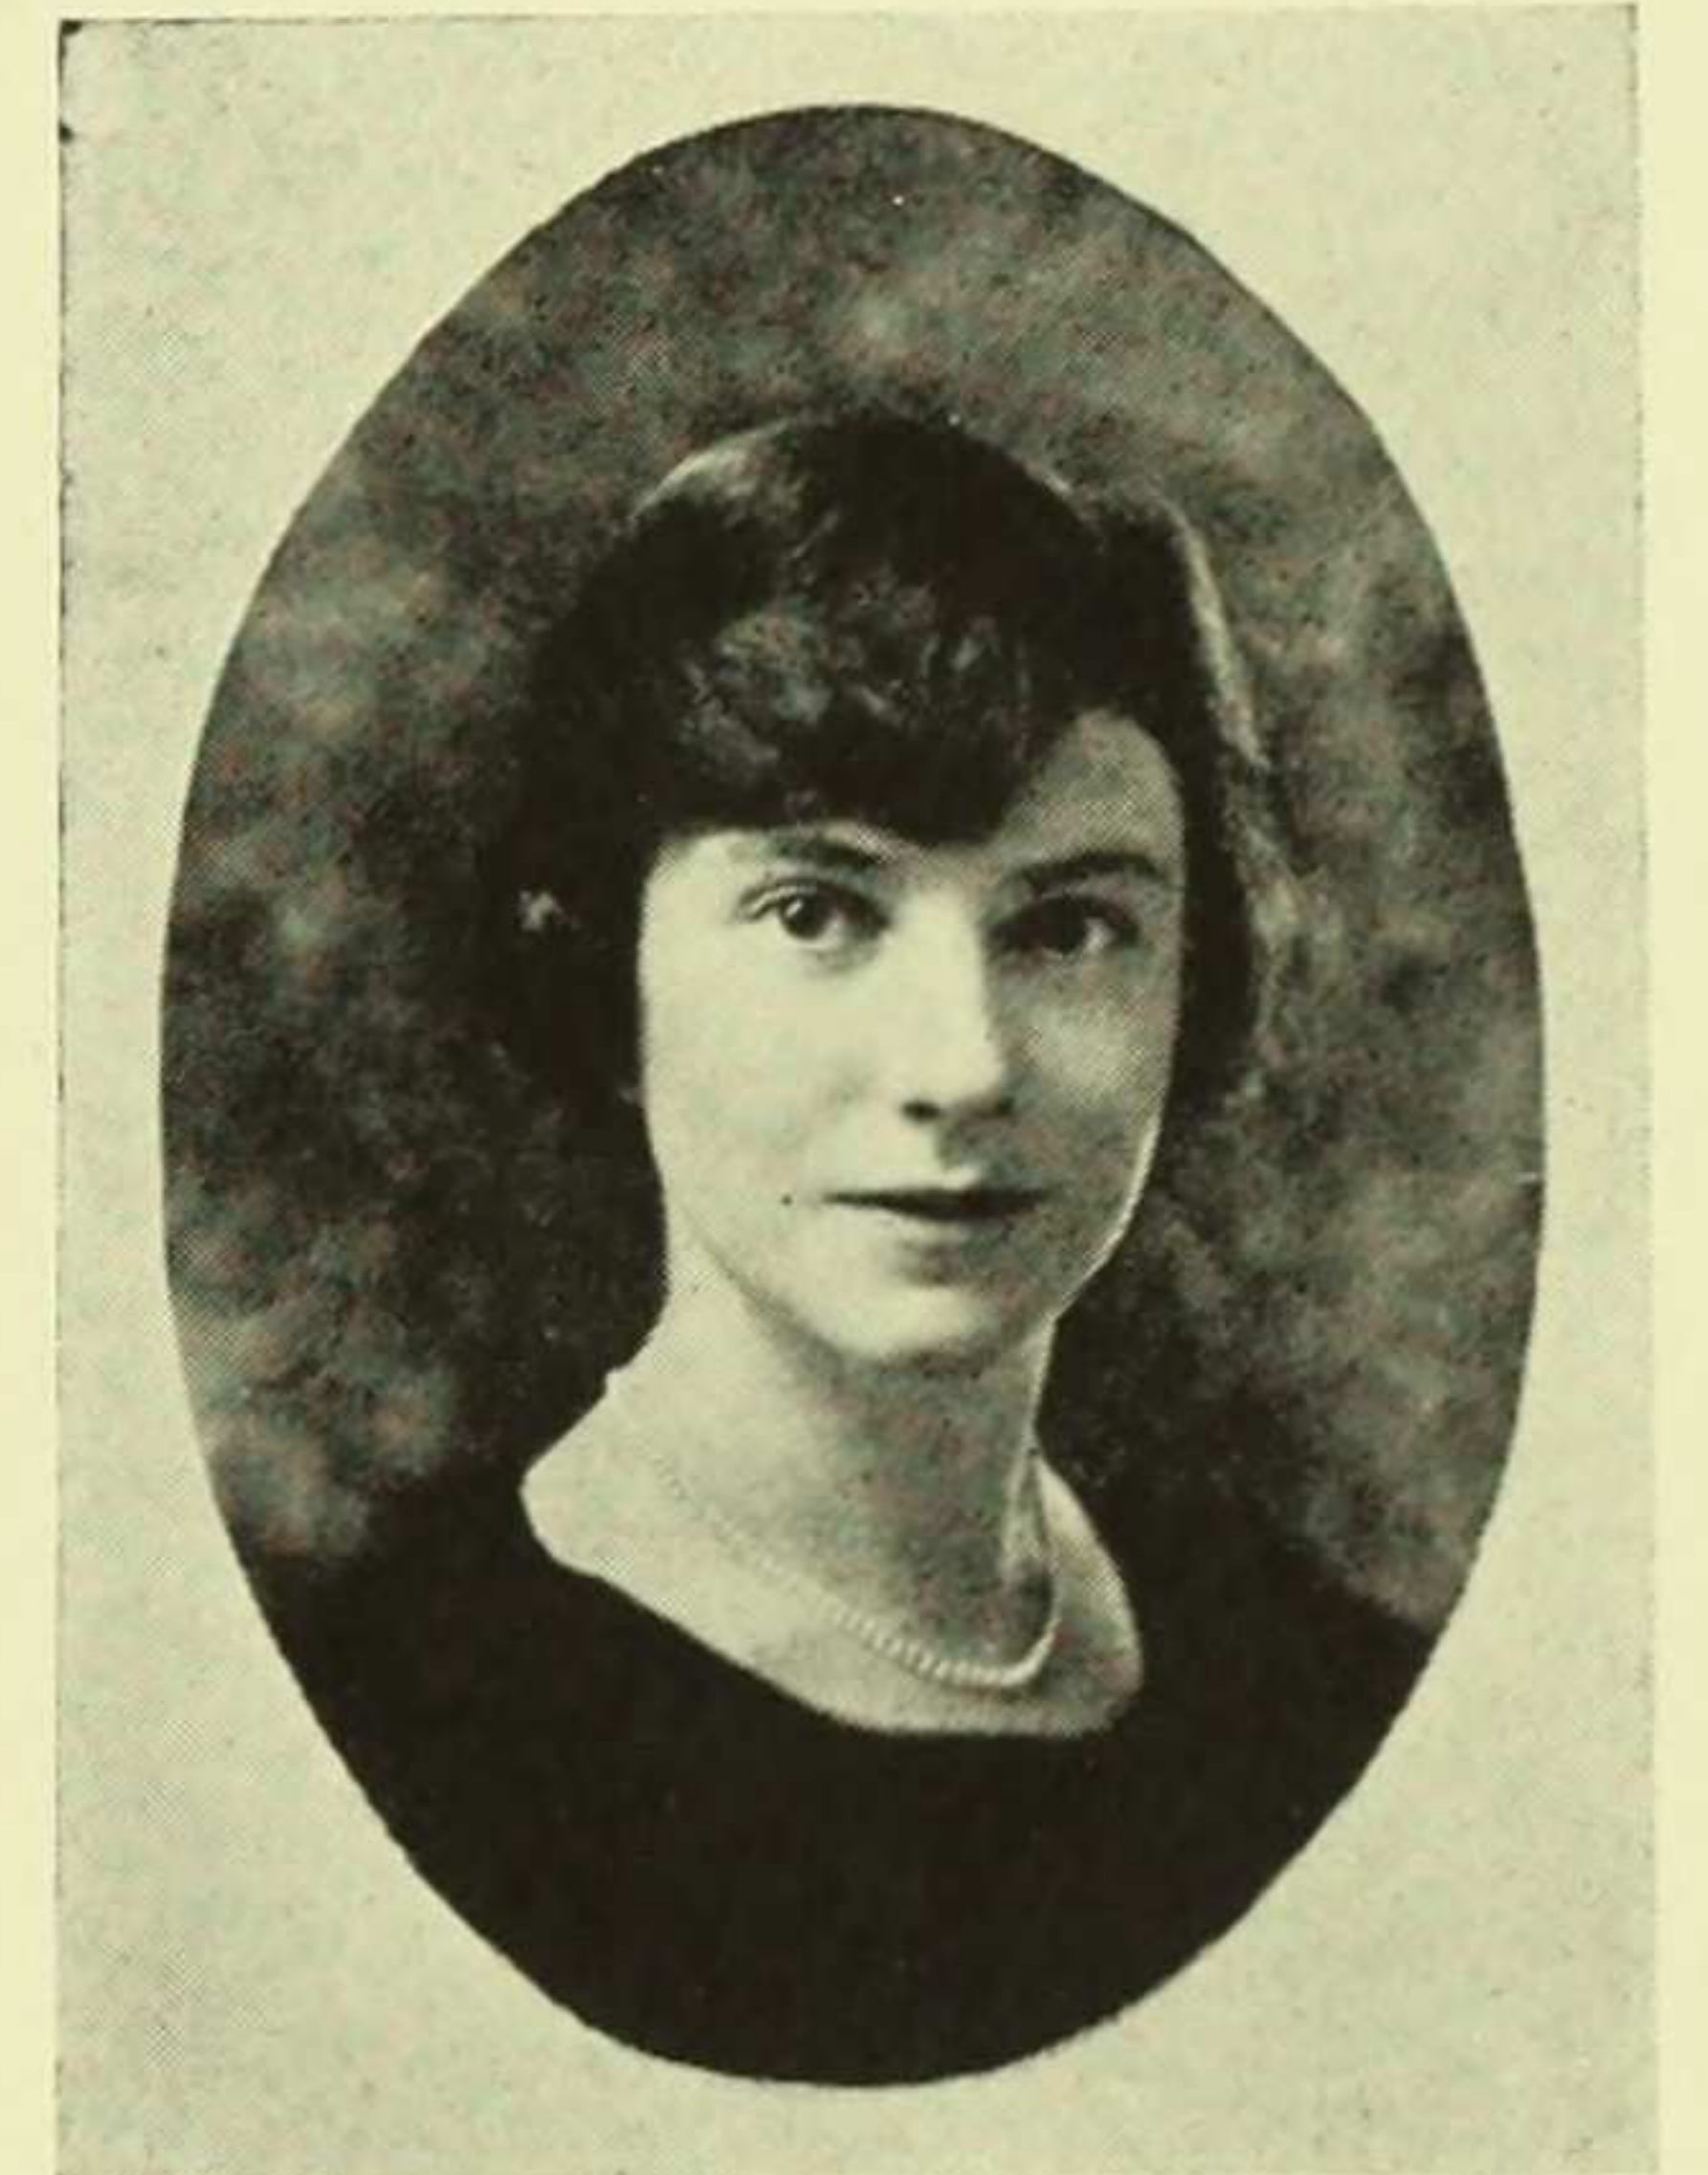

THEODOSIA C. BAY

Every thought is wrapped up wholly
In a certain Marie Soley.

GERTRUDE BENDHEIM

There are not many girls in Barnard as Proficient in the art of writing jazz;
A very sympathetic nature is Another virtue Gertrude Bendheim has.

MAE BELLE BEITH

Though she thought those days were ended
She's a child, is Mae Belle Beith,
For at rolling hoops she's splendid—
Witness one Greek laurel wreath.

MARGARET BENZ

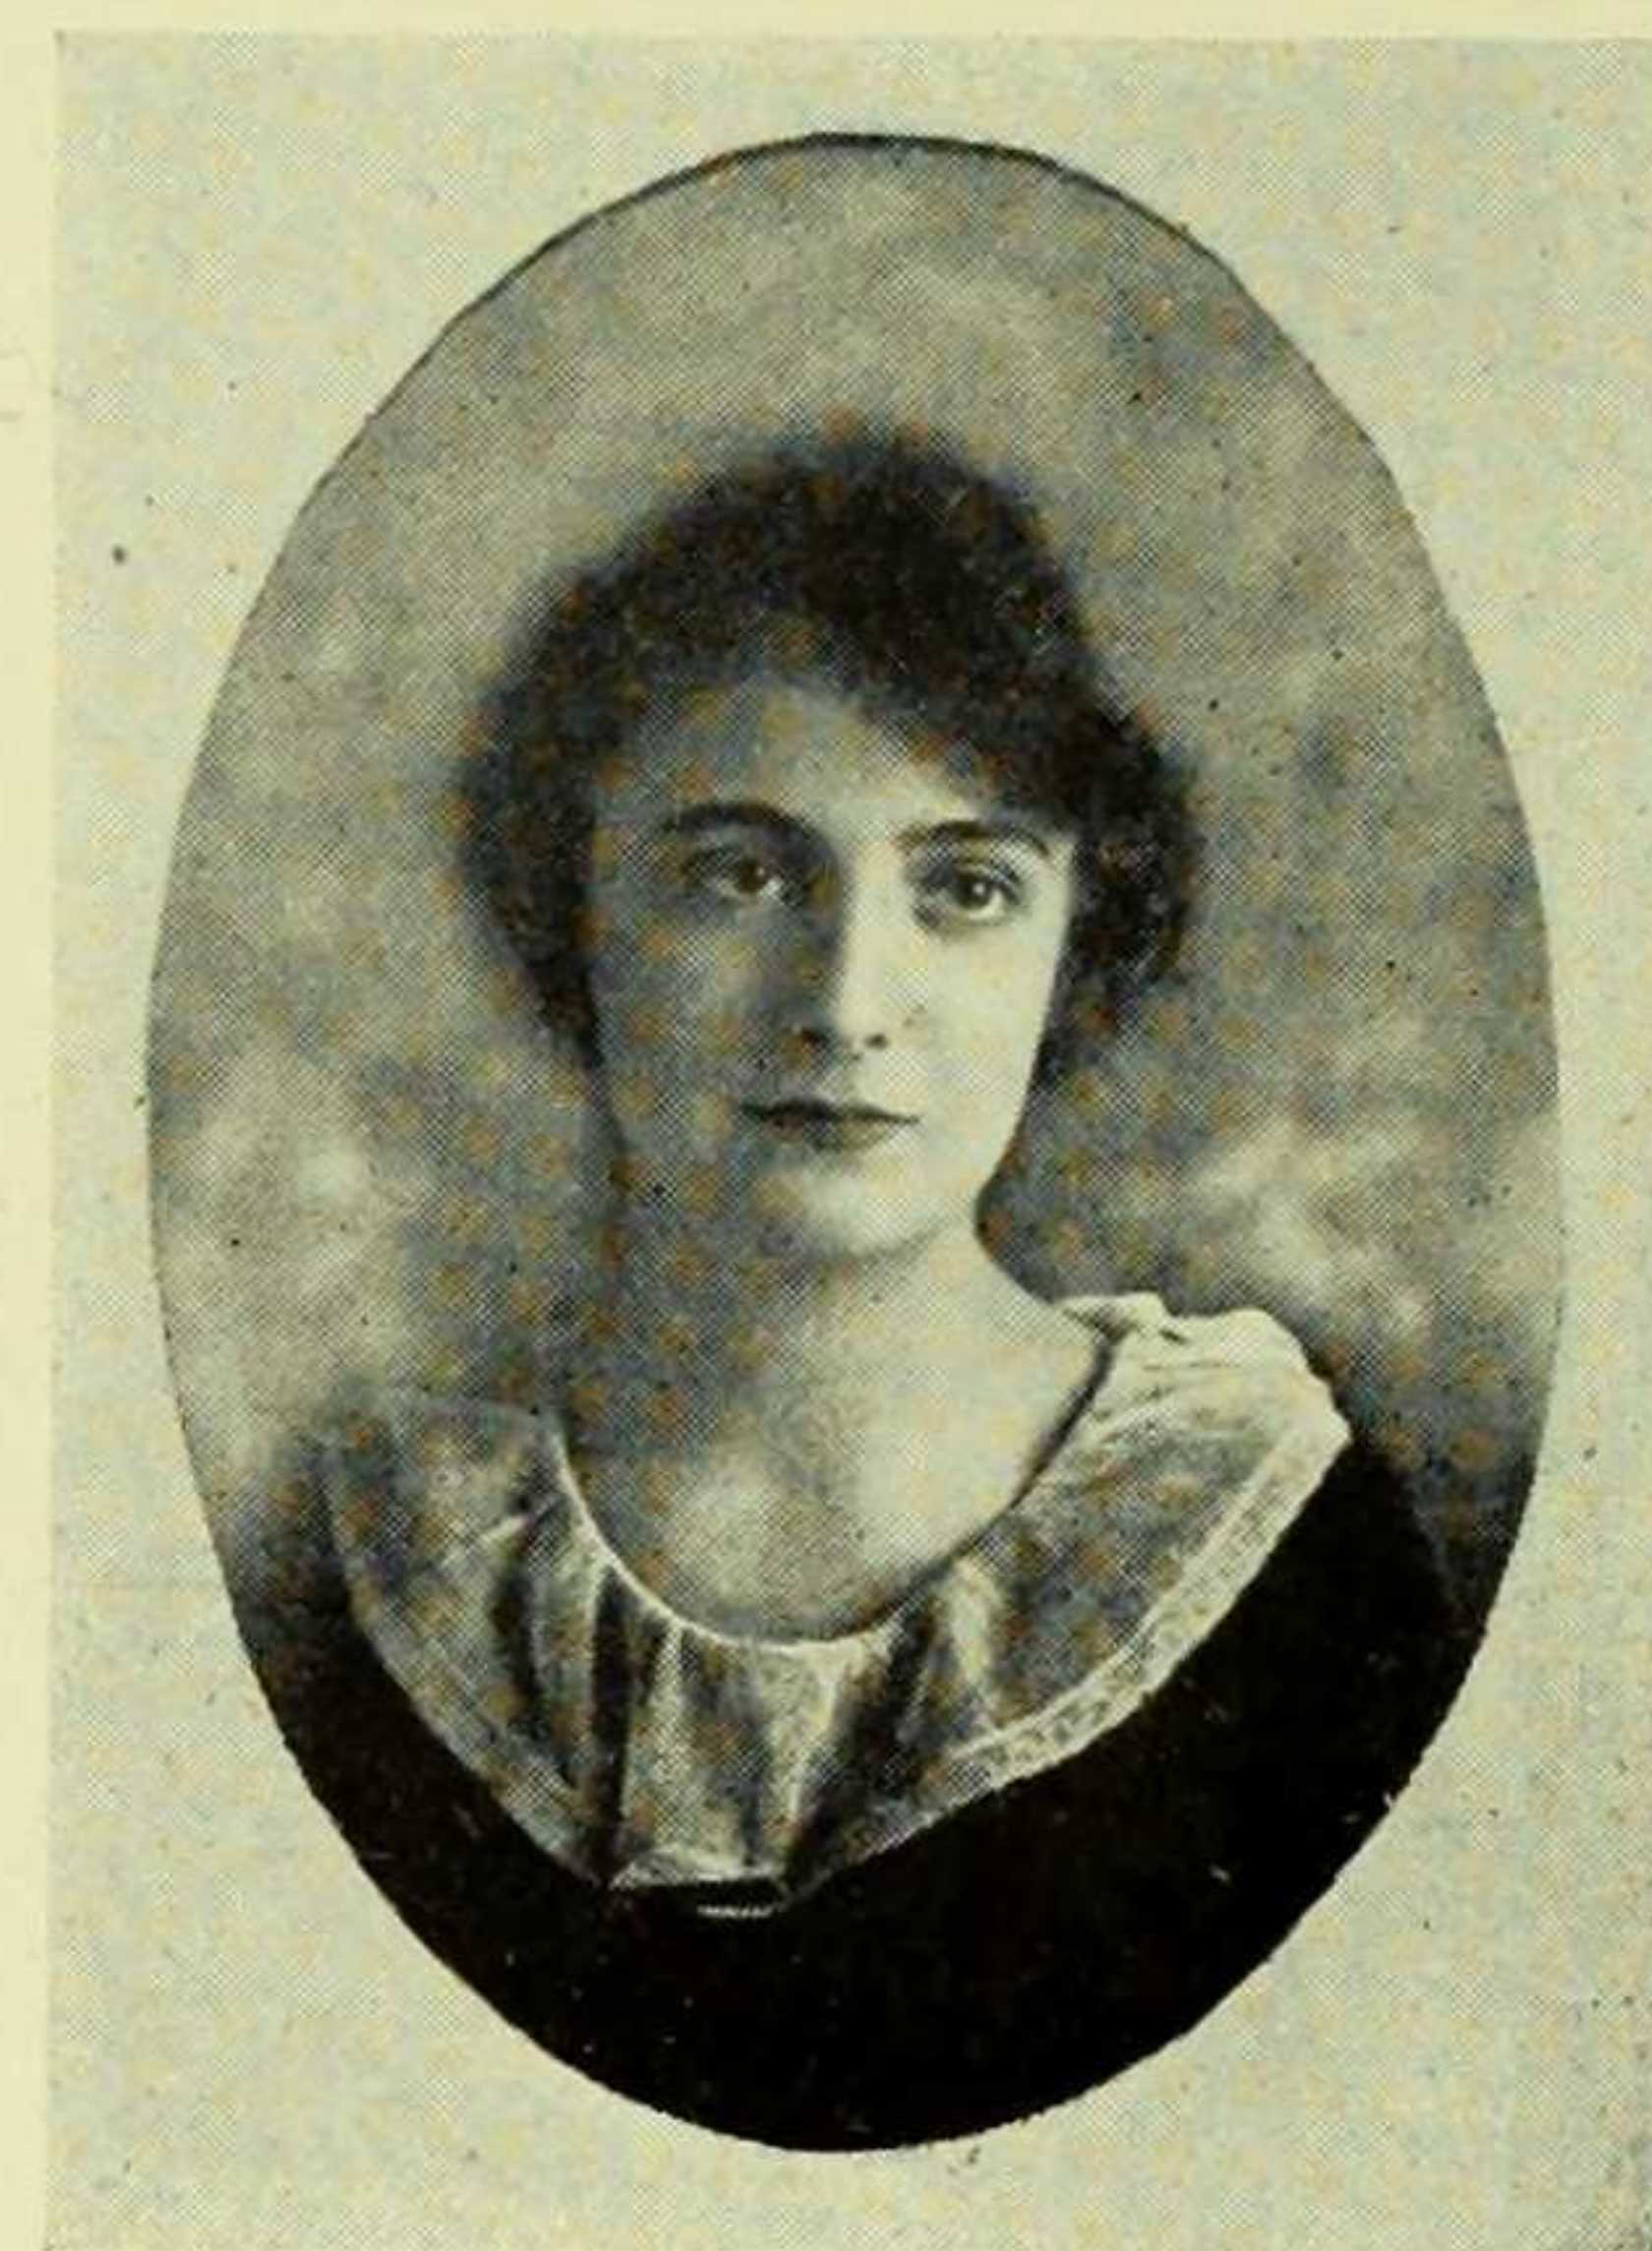

All my energy I use ter
Write my themes for Billy Brewster,
But it's hard to write a story
When you're in a dormitory.

VERA L. BINZEN

With her praises we're almost full,
We can't roast or even parch her;
Of her talents we are boastful—
She won glory as an archer.

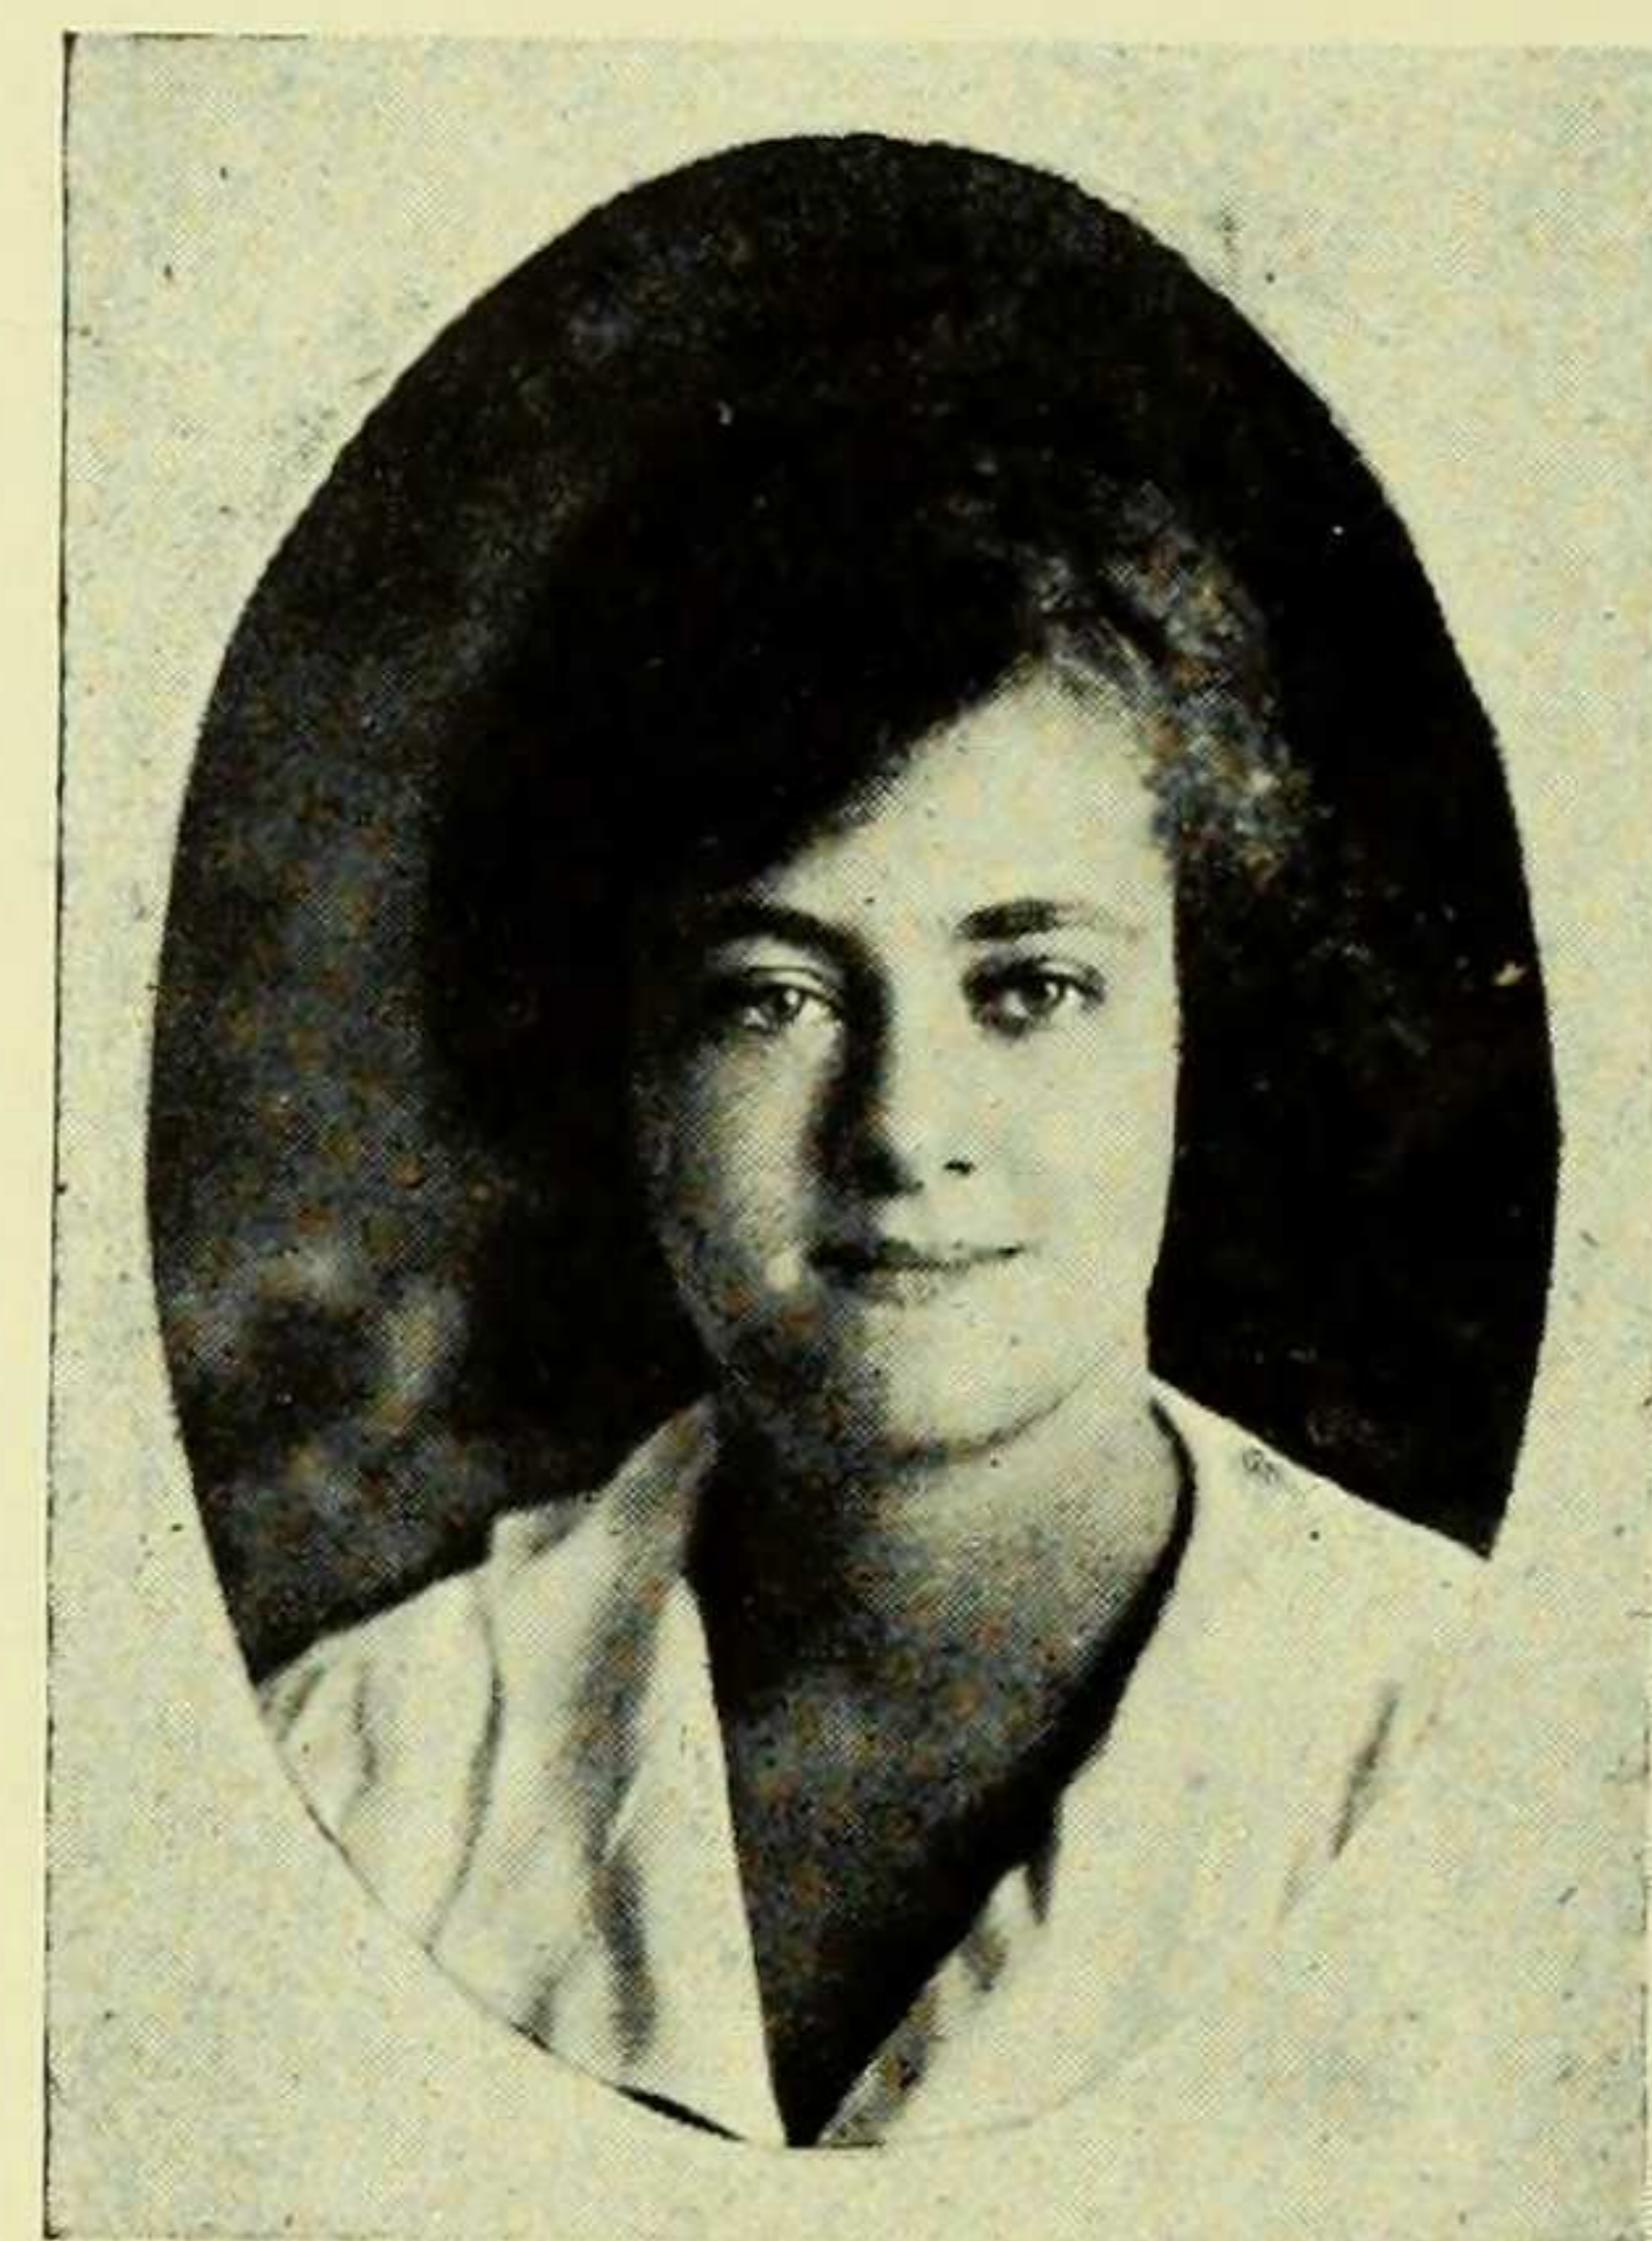

HELEN BORRÉ

She's not as dainty as she looks,
She's majoring in Chem—Gadzooks!

ELOISE MARY BOEKER

A lovely girl in many ways
But getting far too many A's!

ALICE BRADY

We know how trying it must be,
No matter where you are,
To have to say so frequently,
"I'm not the movie star."

DOROTHY BOOTH

We sent a sleuth
To find the truth
About our classmate, Dorothy Booth.
We found that she Works quietly,
But is efficient as can be.

MELVA BREINING

Melva's grave (at least one hears so),
Ever fixed in solemn dream—
Things aren't often what they seem—
Is she grave? She just appears so!

FRANCES SWAN BROWN

We wondered why it was that she Wrote poetry—
But now we look at her left hand
And understand.

LOUISE MARIE BYRNE

An interesting combination
Of social whirl and Math equation.

EDRIS CANNON

When her ship comes in (as it will some day),
The cargo which it reveals,
From deep in its hold (or so we're told),
Will be ice-cream and high French heels!

MARION BURROUGHS

Marion must like to study;
For, whate'er the Profs demand,
her
Explanation's never muddy—Gaze upon the marks they hand
her!

GRACE MERLE CARHART

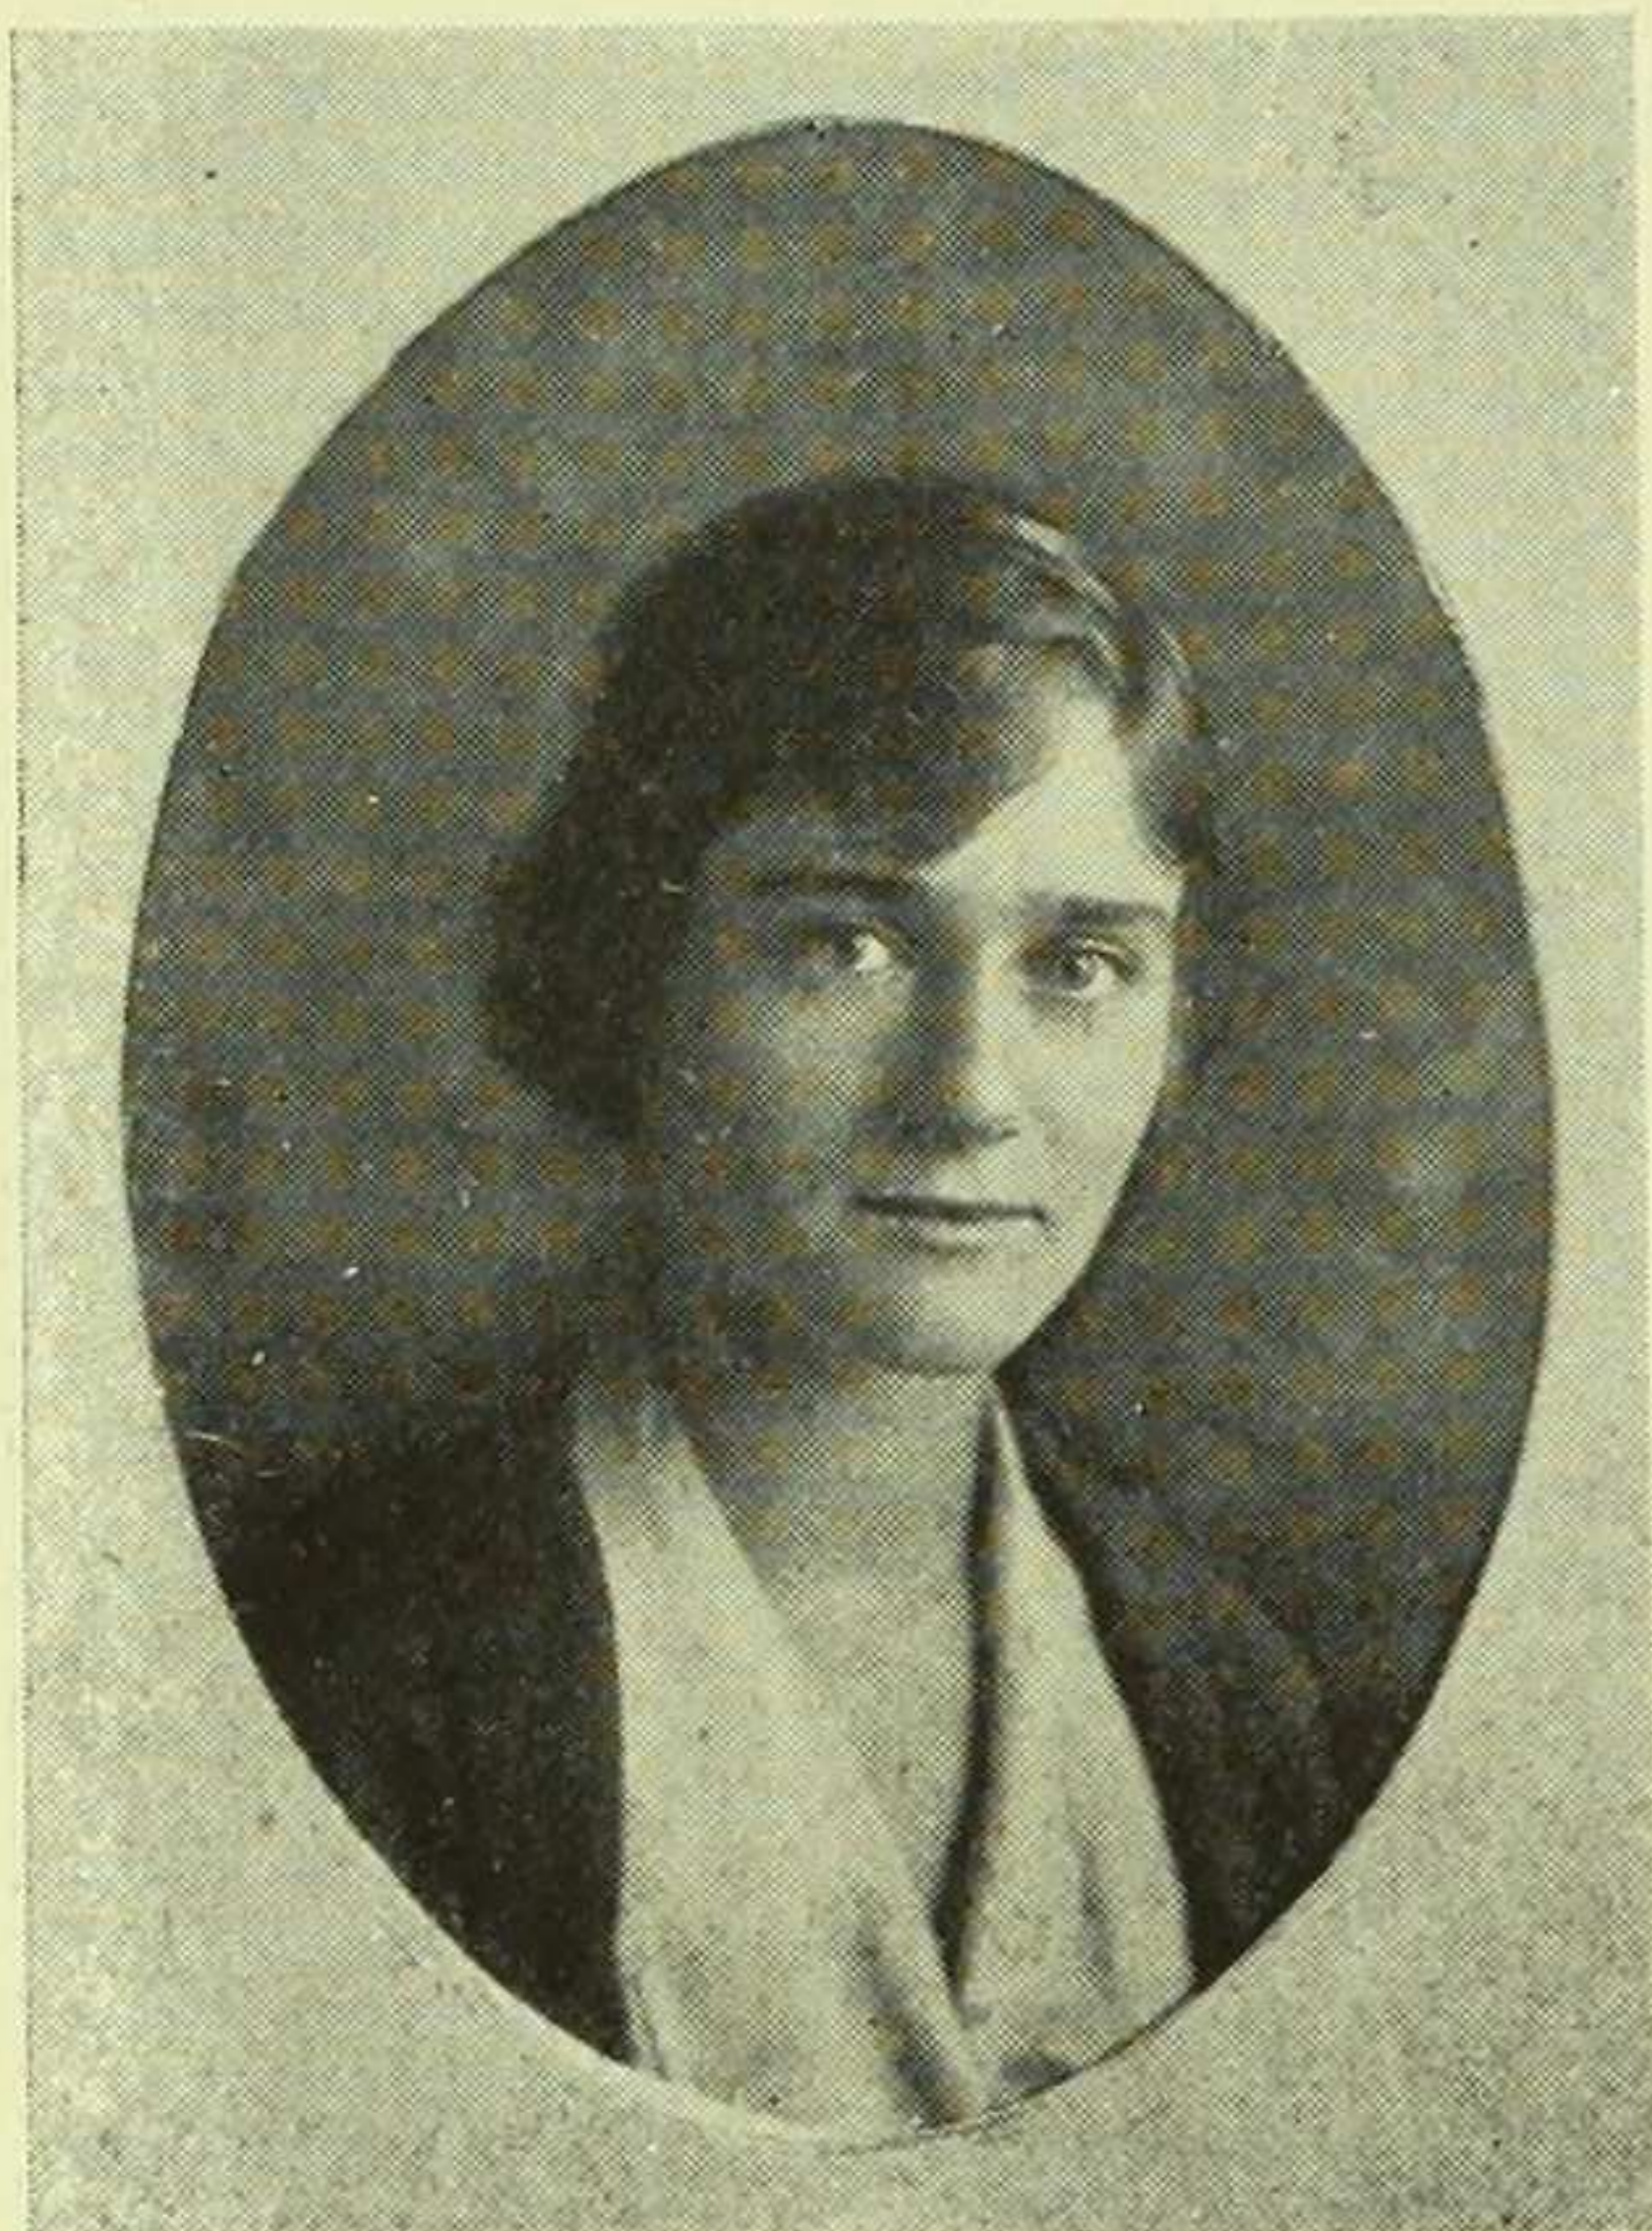

Not over-pacifistic'ly,
She argues syllogistic'ly;
And, turning sleuth,
She searches Truth
As highbrows do—statistic'ly.

LOVILLA BUTLER

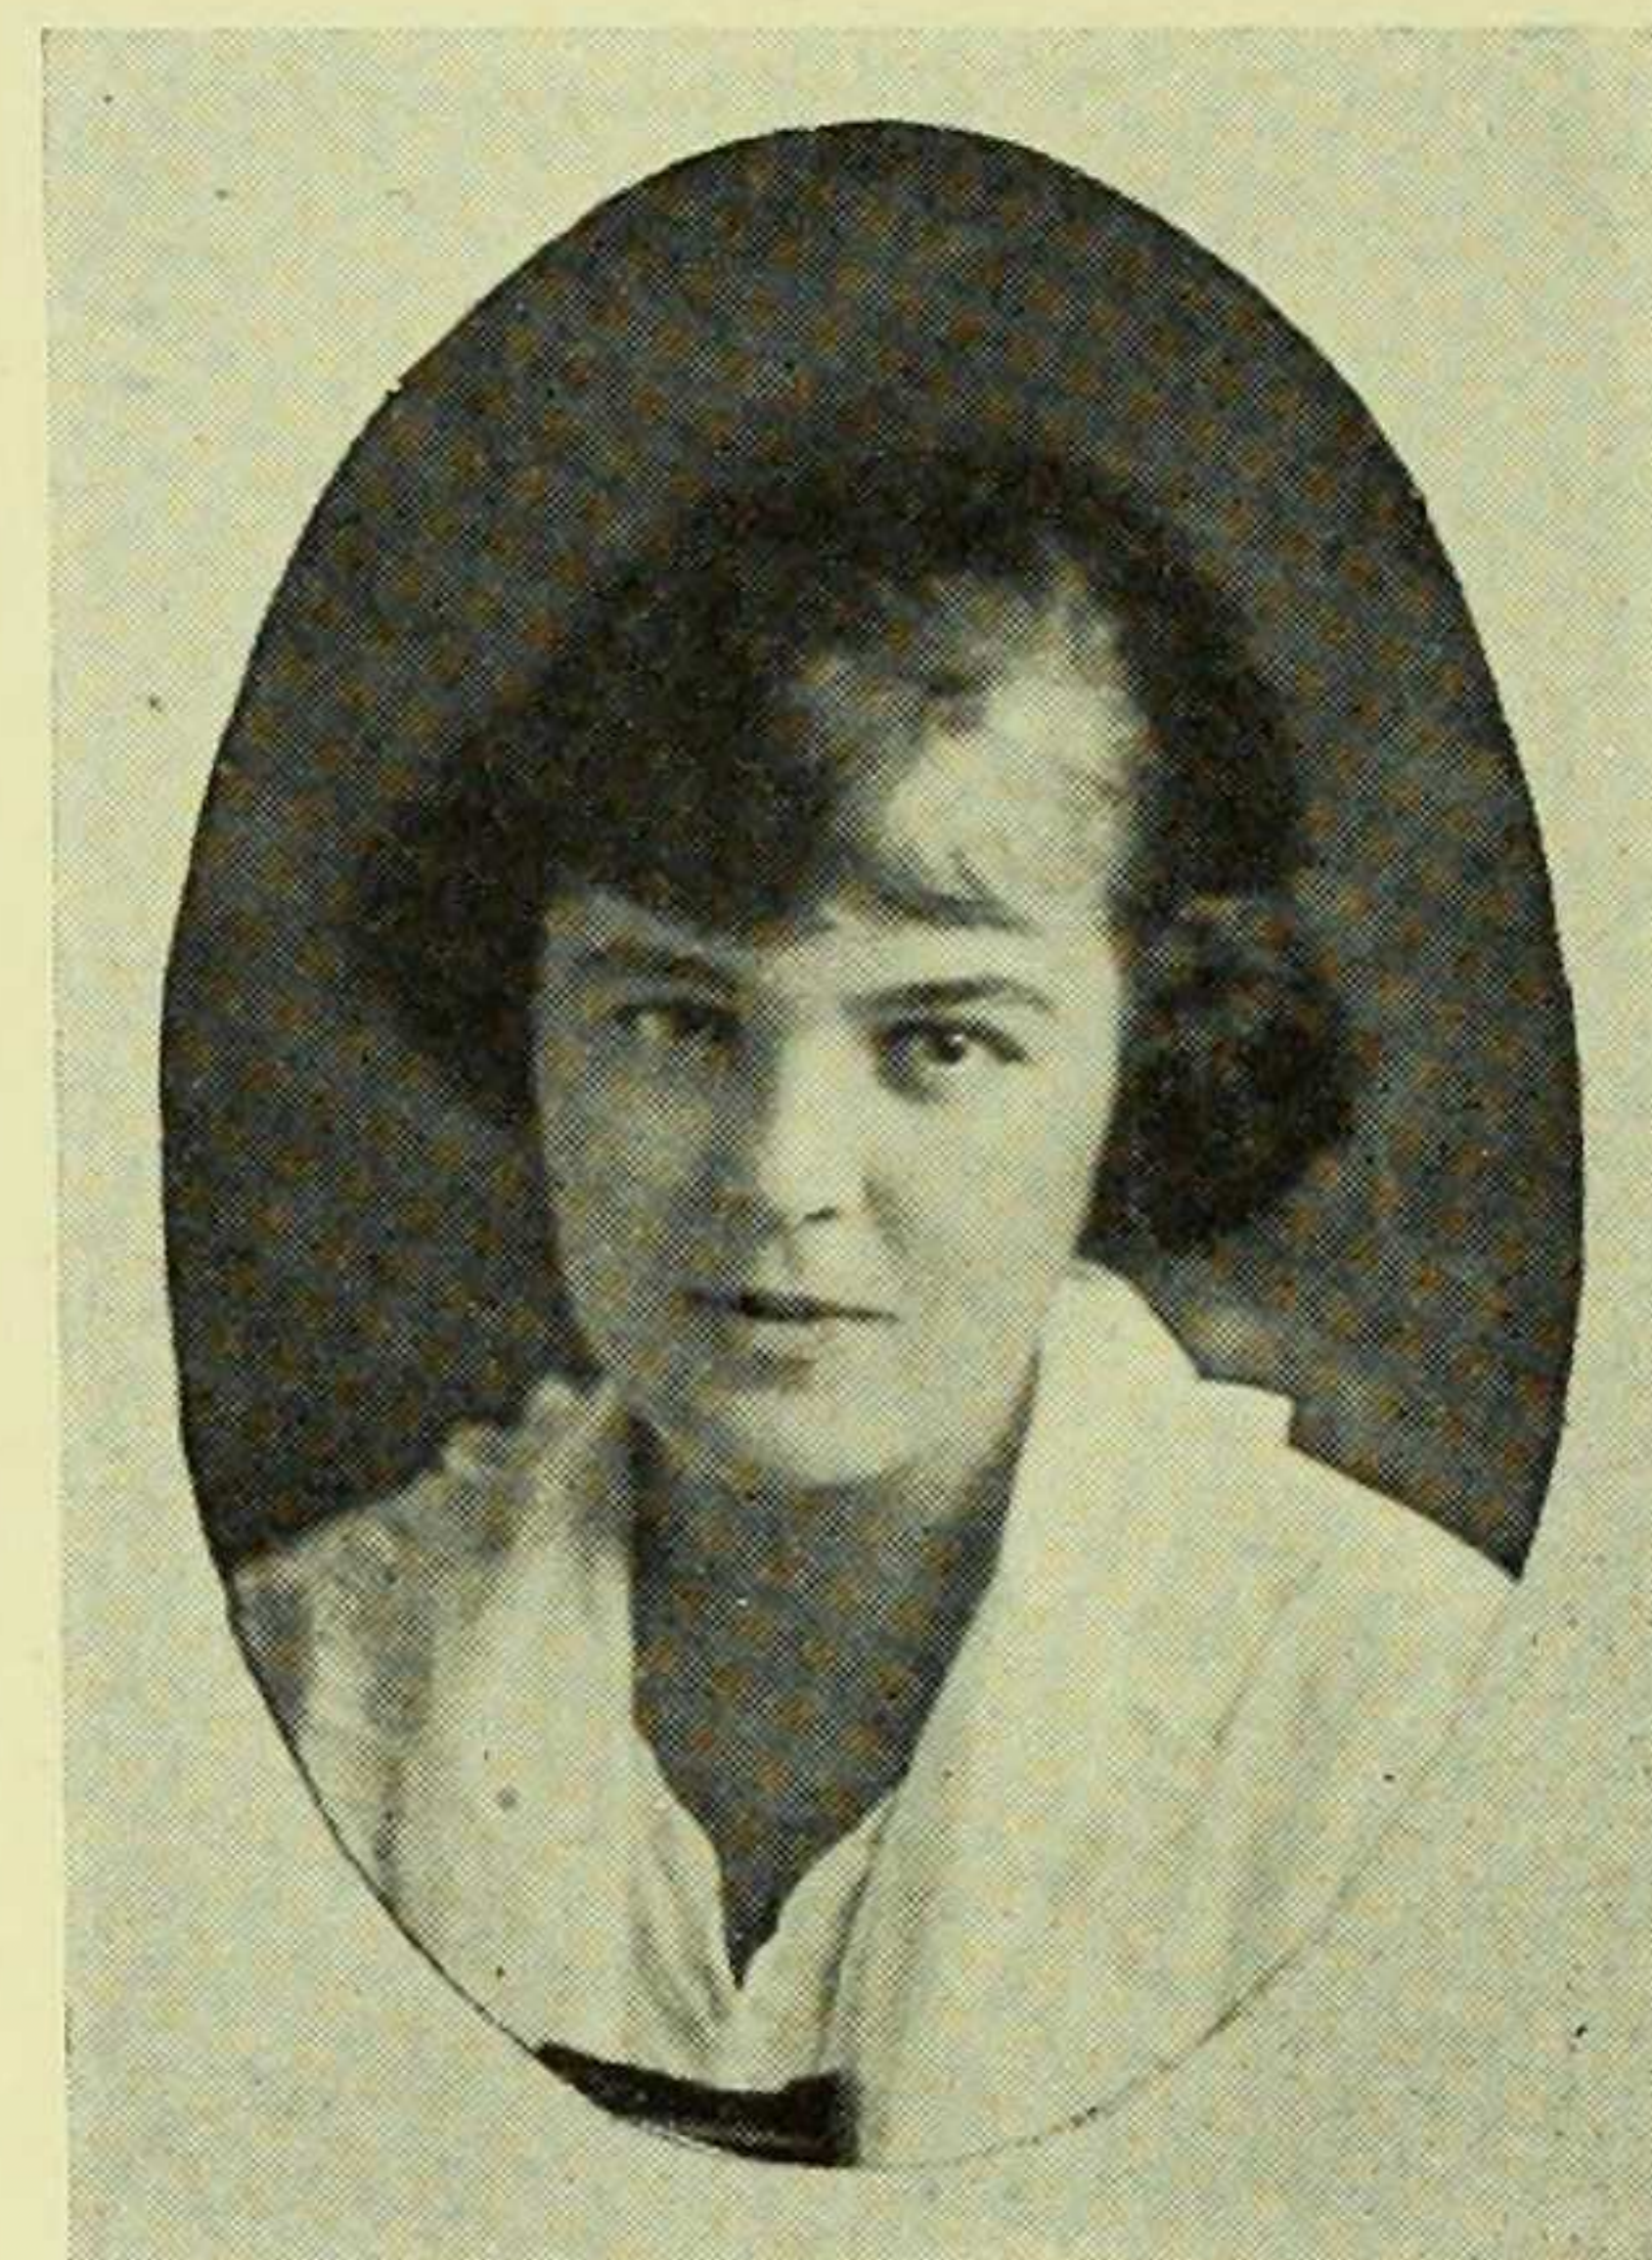

The forward has no chance at all
When she plays guard in basketball.
She turns the trick
By being quick,
And long of arm and very tall.

ALDINE CARTER

Although Aldine
With smile serene
Socratic slush sublimely spurns,
She has a real
And high ideal,
Which burns and burns and burns and burns.

RUTH CLENDENIN

No one's quite so good at pennin'
Little rhymes as Ruth Clendenin,
And if only we had let her
Write this one, it would be better.

ELEANOR CASTLE

After four long years of college,
Where she has been seeking knowledge,
She is going to the altar
With a man whose name is Walter.

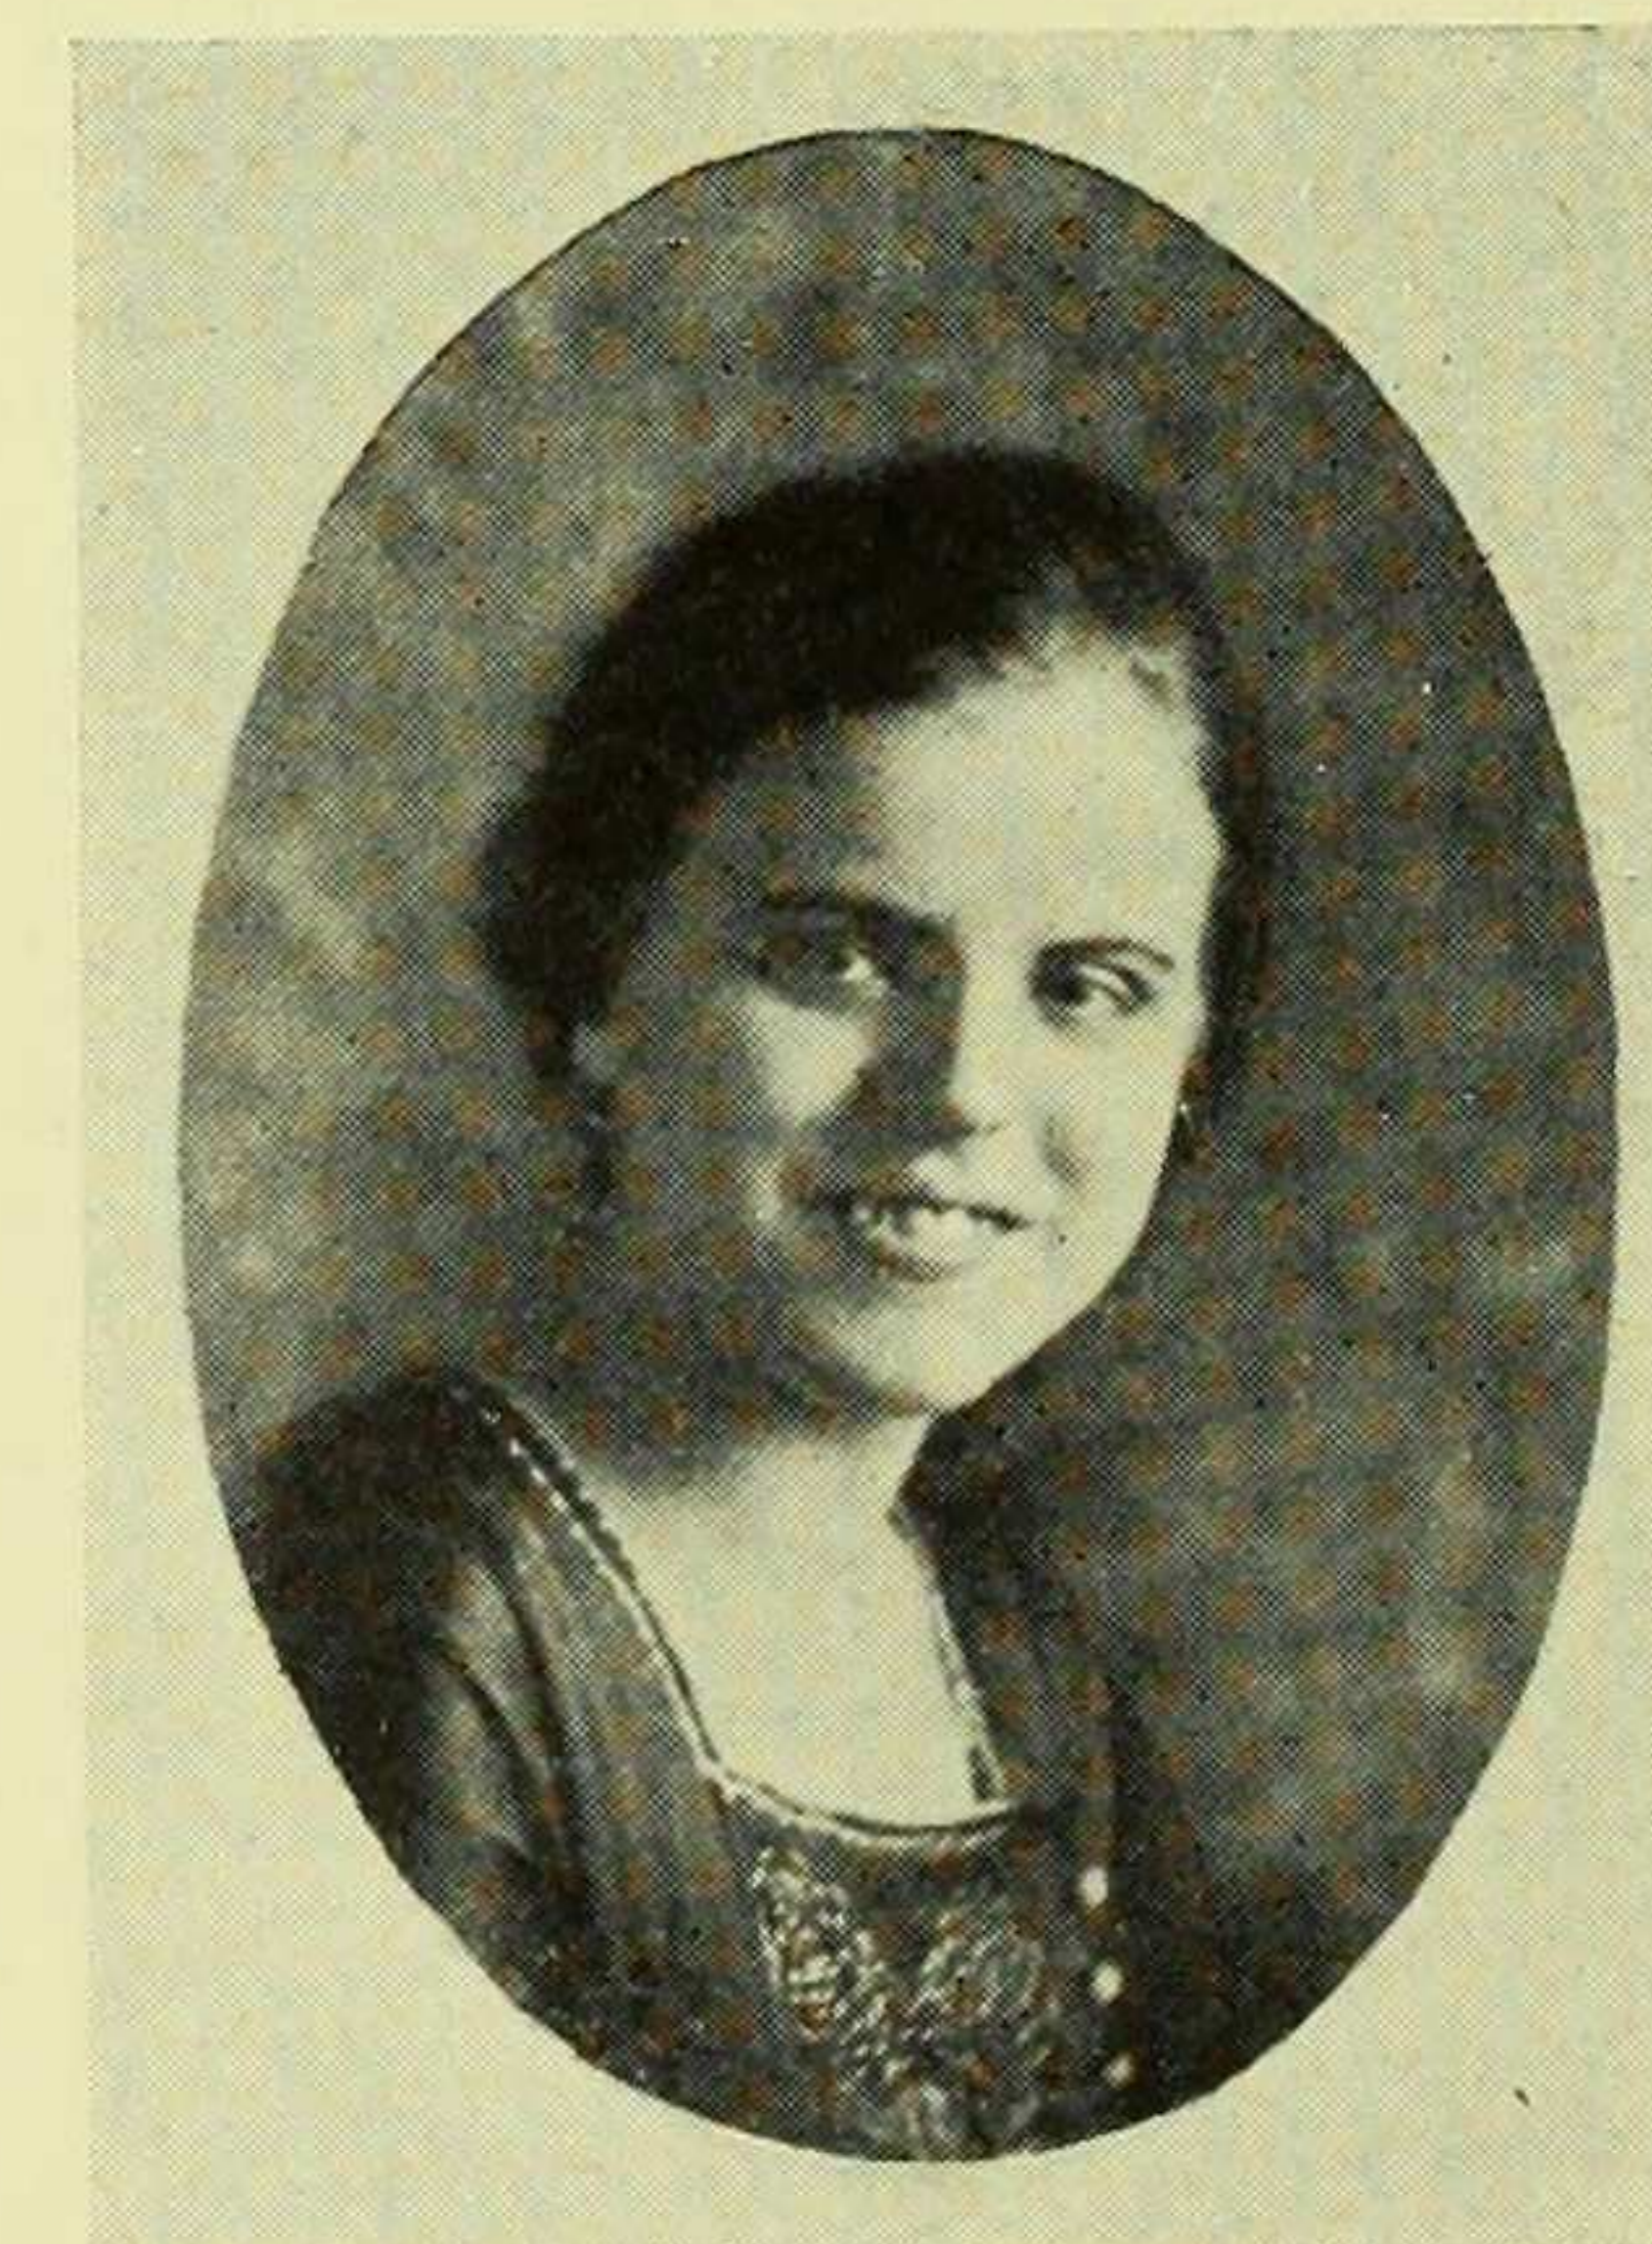

FRANCES C. COCKE

Oh, Frances Cocke,
We cannot knock
Your intellect divine,
For we'd be proud
Were we allowed
A brow as high as thine.

JULIET CLARK

Here's Julie, who floats on, serene,
Through Philosophy, Chem, Mathematics—
Her wave is unruly: you've seen She's a shark—when it comes to aquatics!

GERTRUDE COOKE

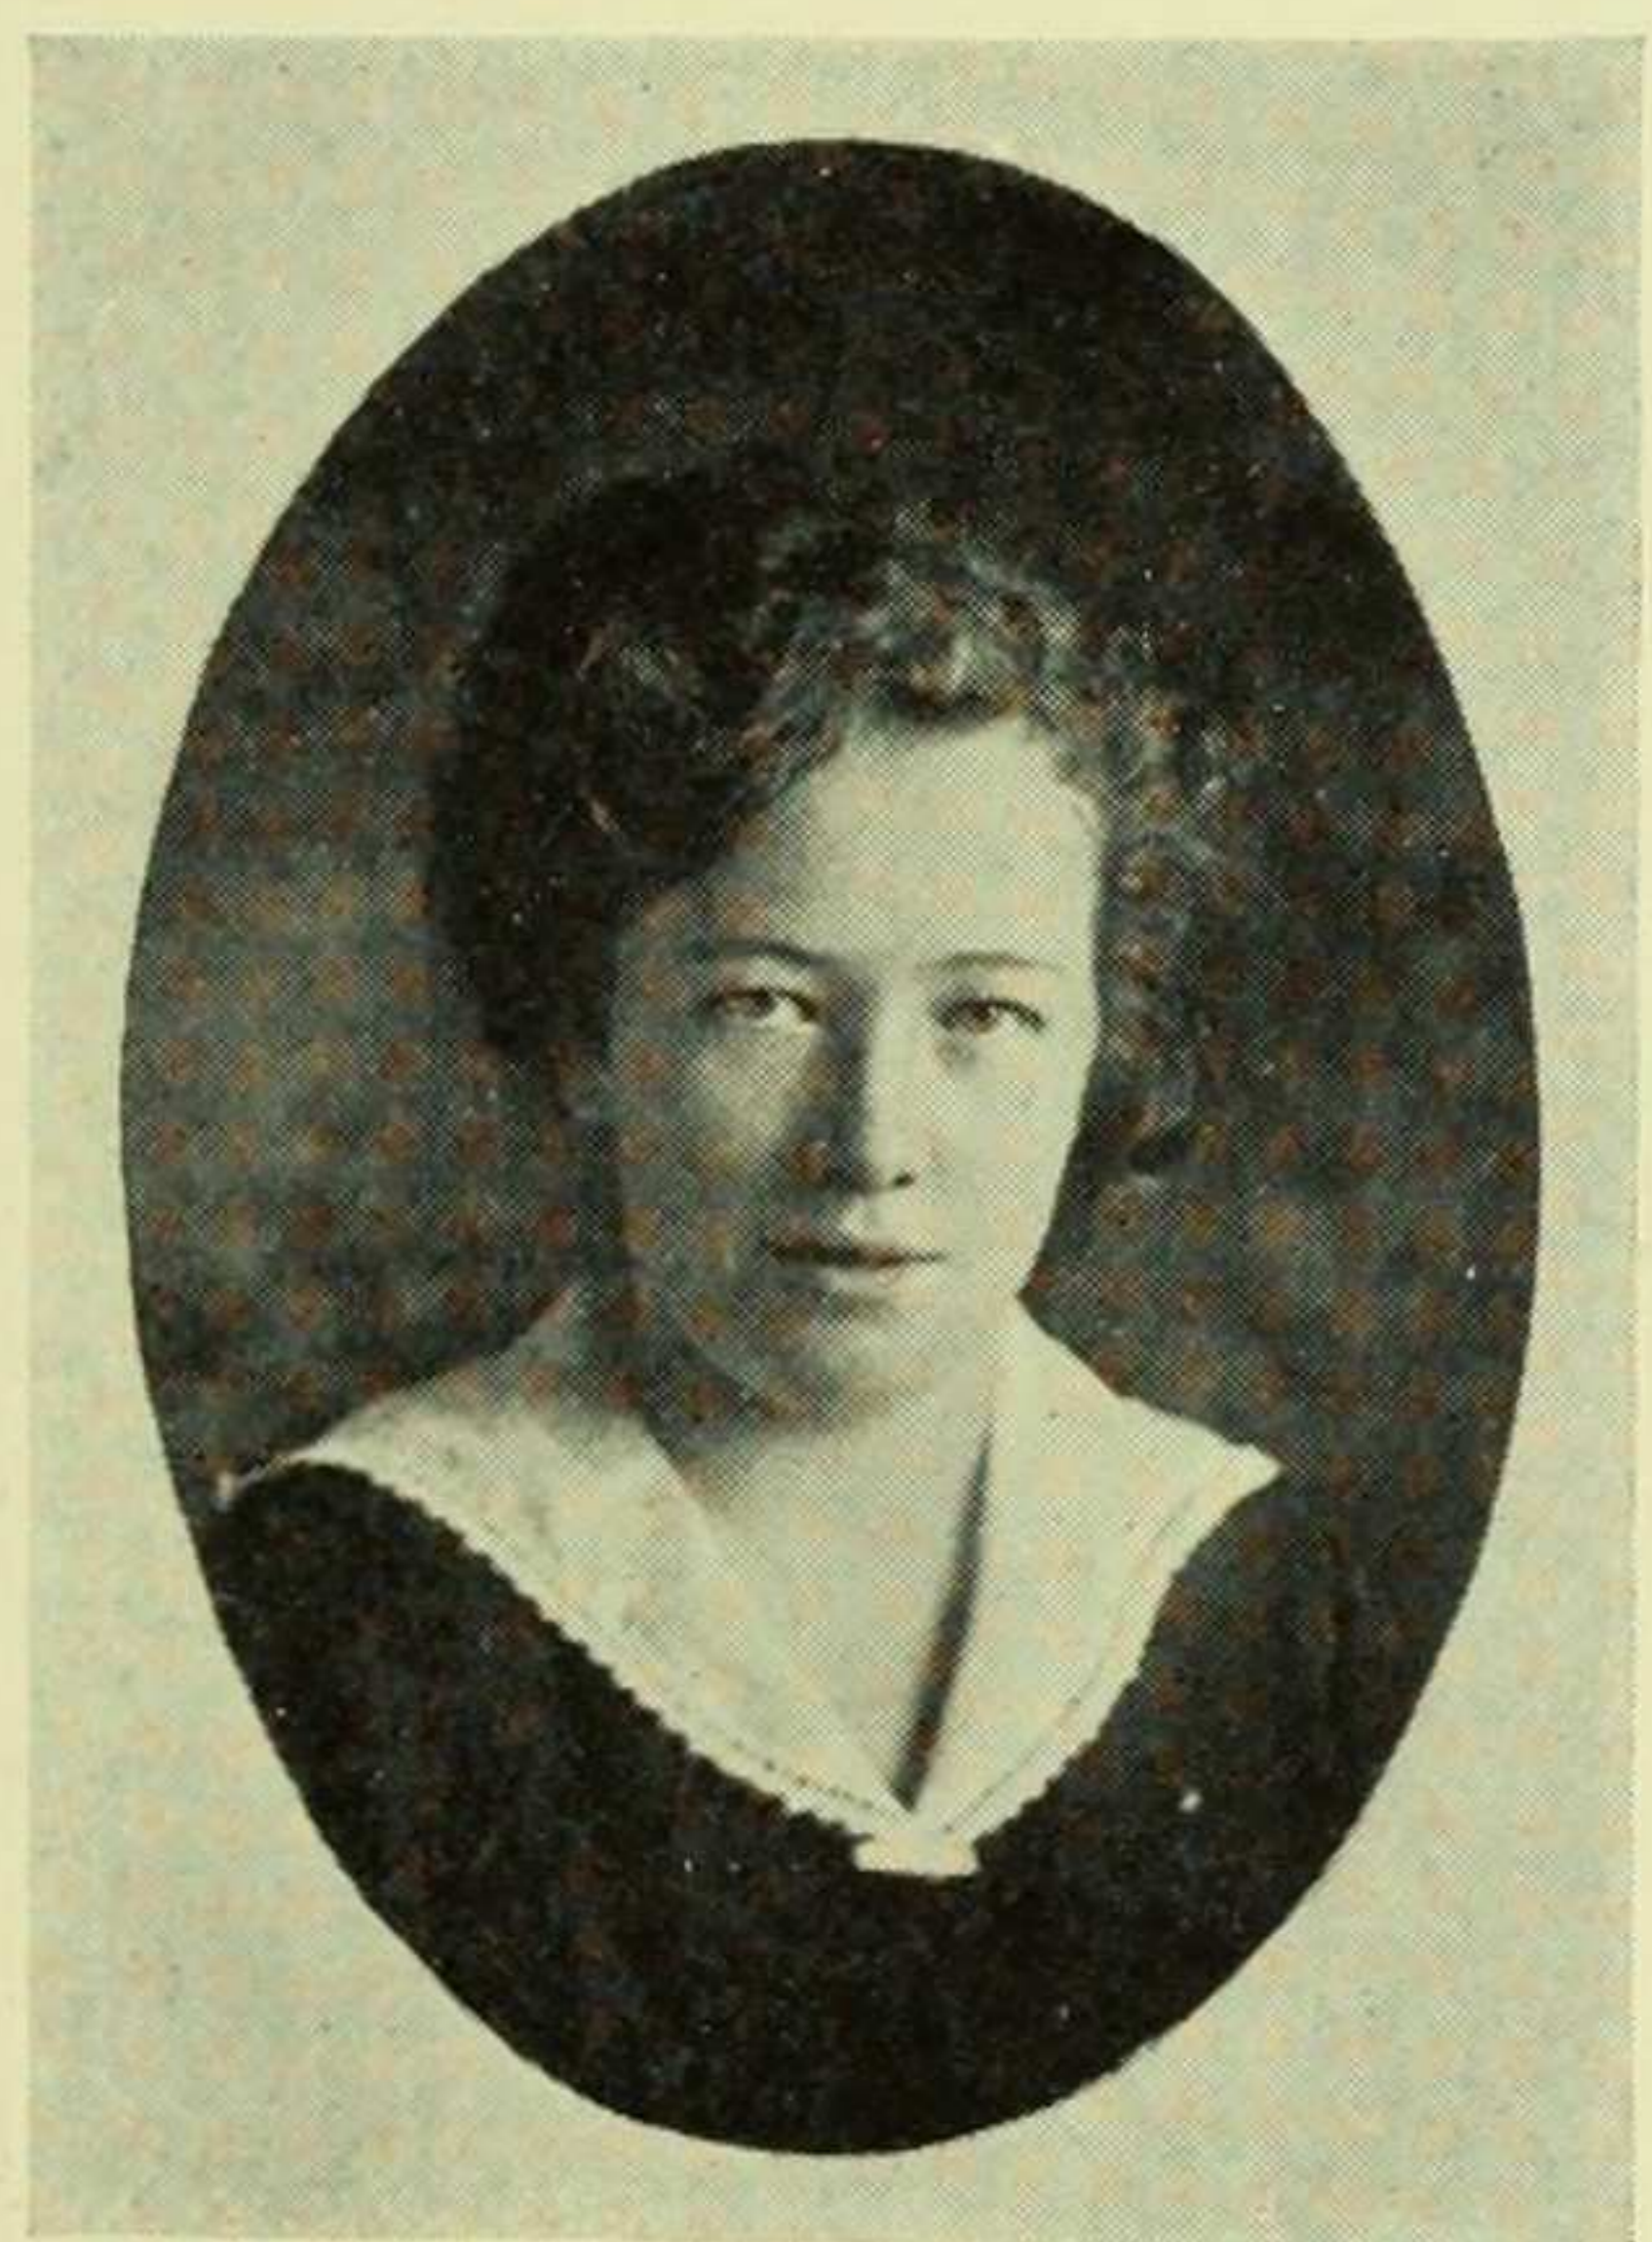

Carefully you'll have to look
If you hunt for Gertrude Cooke—
You'll remain to stay around her
When at last you find you've found her.

ALICE COSSOW

If we only could, we'd requisition
A similarly sunny disposition.

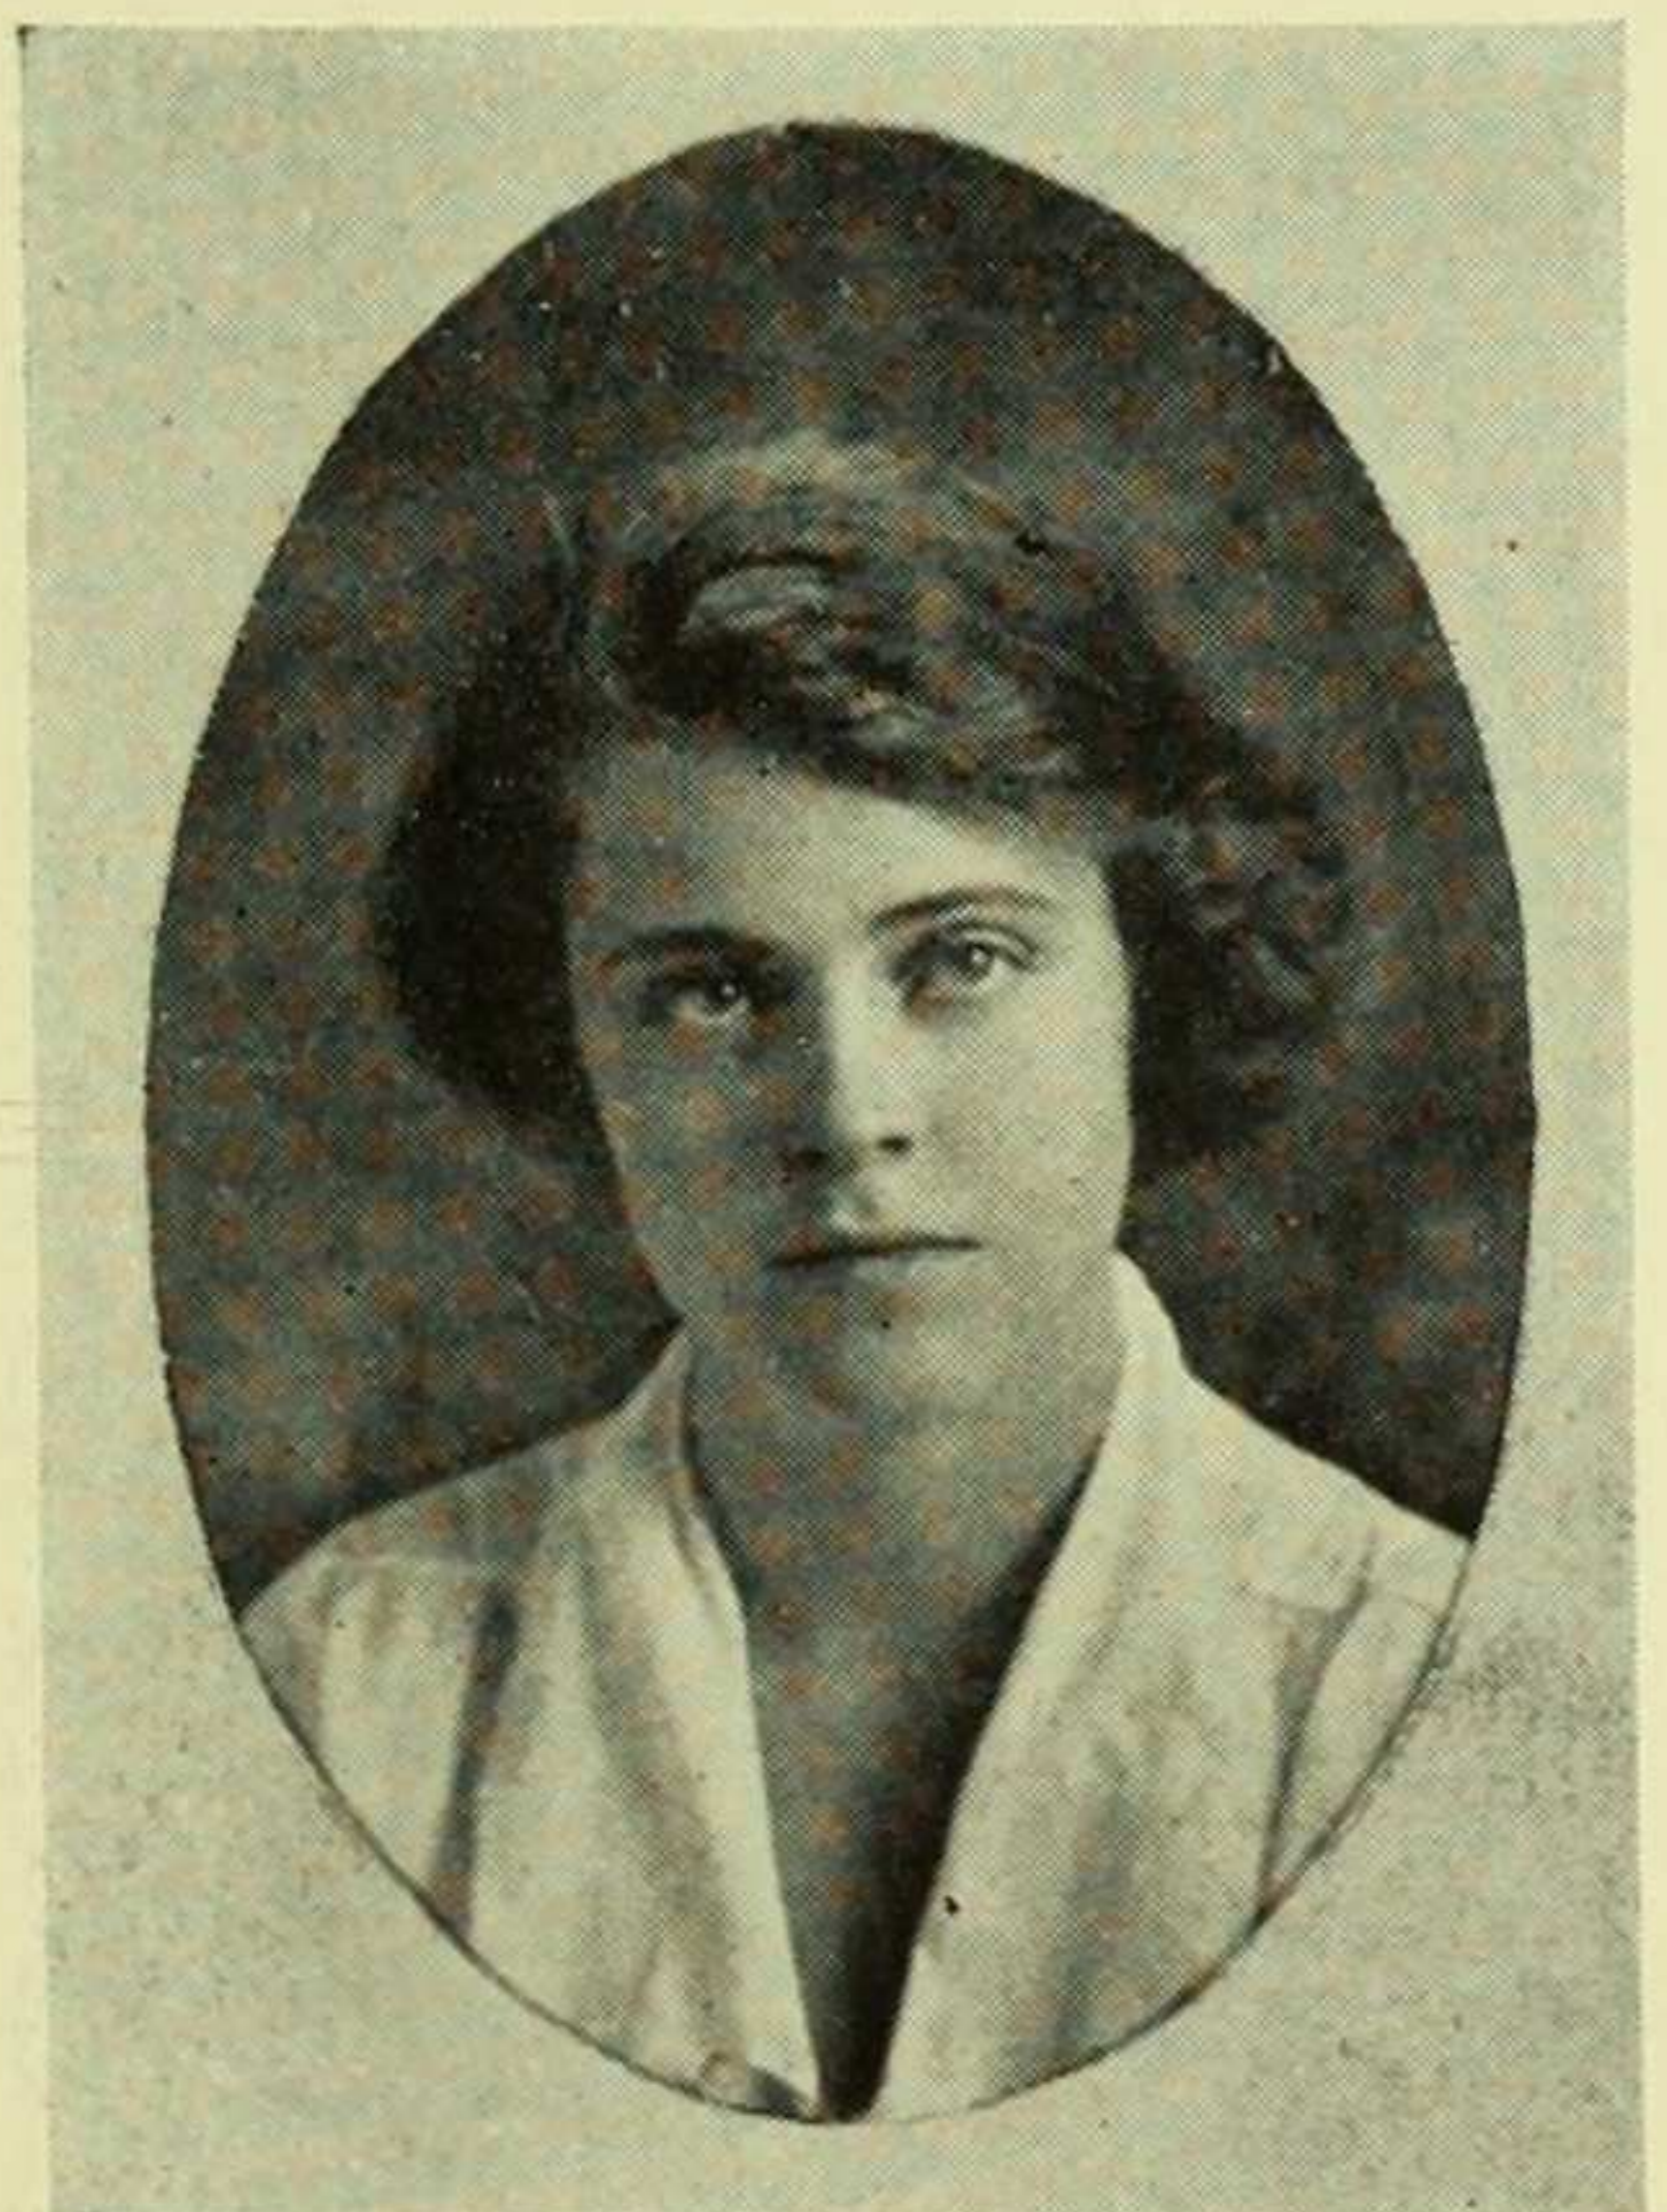

MIRIAM DAVIDSON
On Jujubes—mints and cloves and limes,
We find that she is dieting,
Though in the Library at times
It proves a bit disquieting.

RUTH FOSTER CRABTREE

The professional call was insistent—
And in cases where Flu was persistent,
No patient could tussle
With baseball-trained muscle—
She's the doctor's most able assistant.

FELICE DAVIS
Felice is very tall and slender
And many people recommend her
As being bright in Fields of writin'—
We're surely glad the West could lend her.

GERTRUDE VAN RENSSELAER DANA

—I'm awfully sorry that I'm late,
—I've come from Forty-second Street.
—I hope you didn't have to wait—
—I haven't had a bite to eat!"

THELMA B. DEGRAFFE
We wish that we knew half
As much as T. De Graffe;
In Greek she gets A plus—
Quis possit melius?

MARY ETHEL DONOVAN

Ethel D. is so elusive—
One sees her flitting through the hall;
That she studies hard's conclusive,
Unless—she studies not at all!

RUTH A. EHRICH

That she's æsthetic one soon guesses
From her dresses—
The fields of dancing, art and drama
Also claim her.

DRACHMAN

At writing short stories
Mattie's a shark;
Why does she keep it
So in the dark?

RUTH J. EHRICH

Ruth J. wins her greatest fame in
What has proved to be her forte,
'Tis none other than that game in
Which they roughly term her
"short."

GLADYS EDWARDS

Gladys E., whene'er she dances,
All her little friends entrances;
Is it strange she lures them thither
When she knows the latest slither?

EISENMAN

She's good in Math and other sciences,
And complicated Chem appliances;
Exceeding rare such self-reliance is.

DOROTHY LOUISE FALK

Breathe not what we tell, or we
Would be most severely rated,
But the youthful Dorothy
Fain would seem sophisticated!

LILLIAN MARGARET
FAWCETT

What can she be thinking of
When, in an abstracted fashion,
She removes her brown kid glove
And sets a diamond ring a-flashin'!

ESTELLE FINE

Up towards fame she hews her path
Along the careful lines of Math,
And, to prove it all some day,
She takes snapshots on the way.

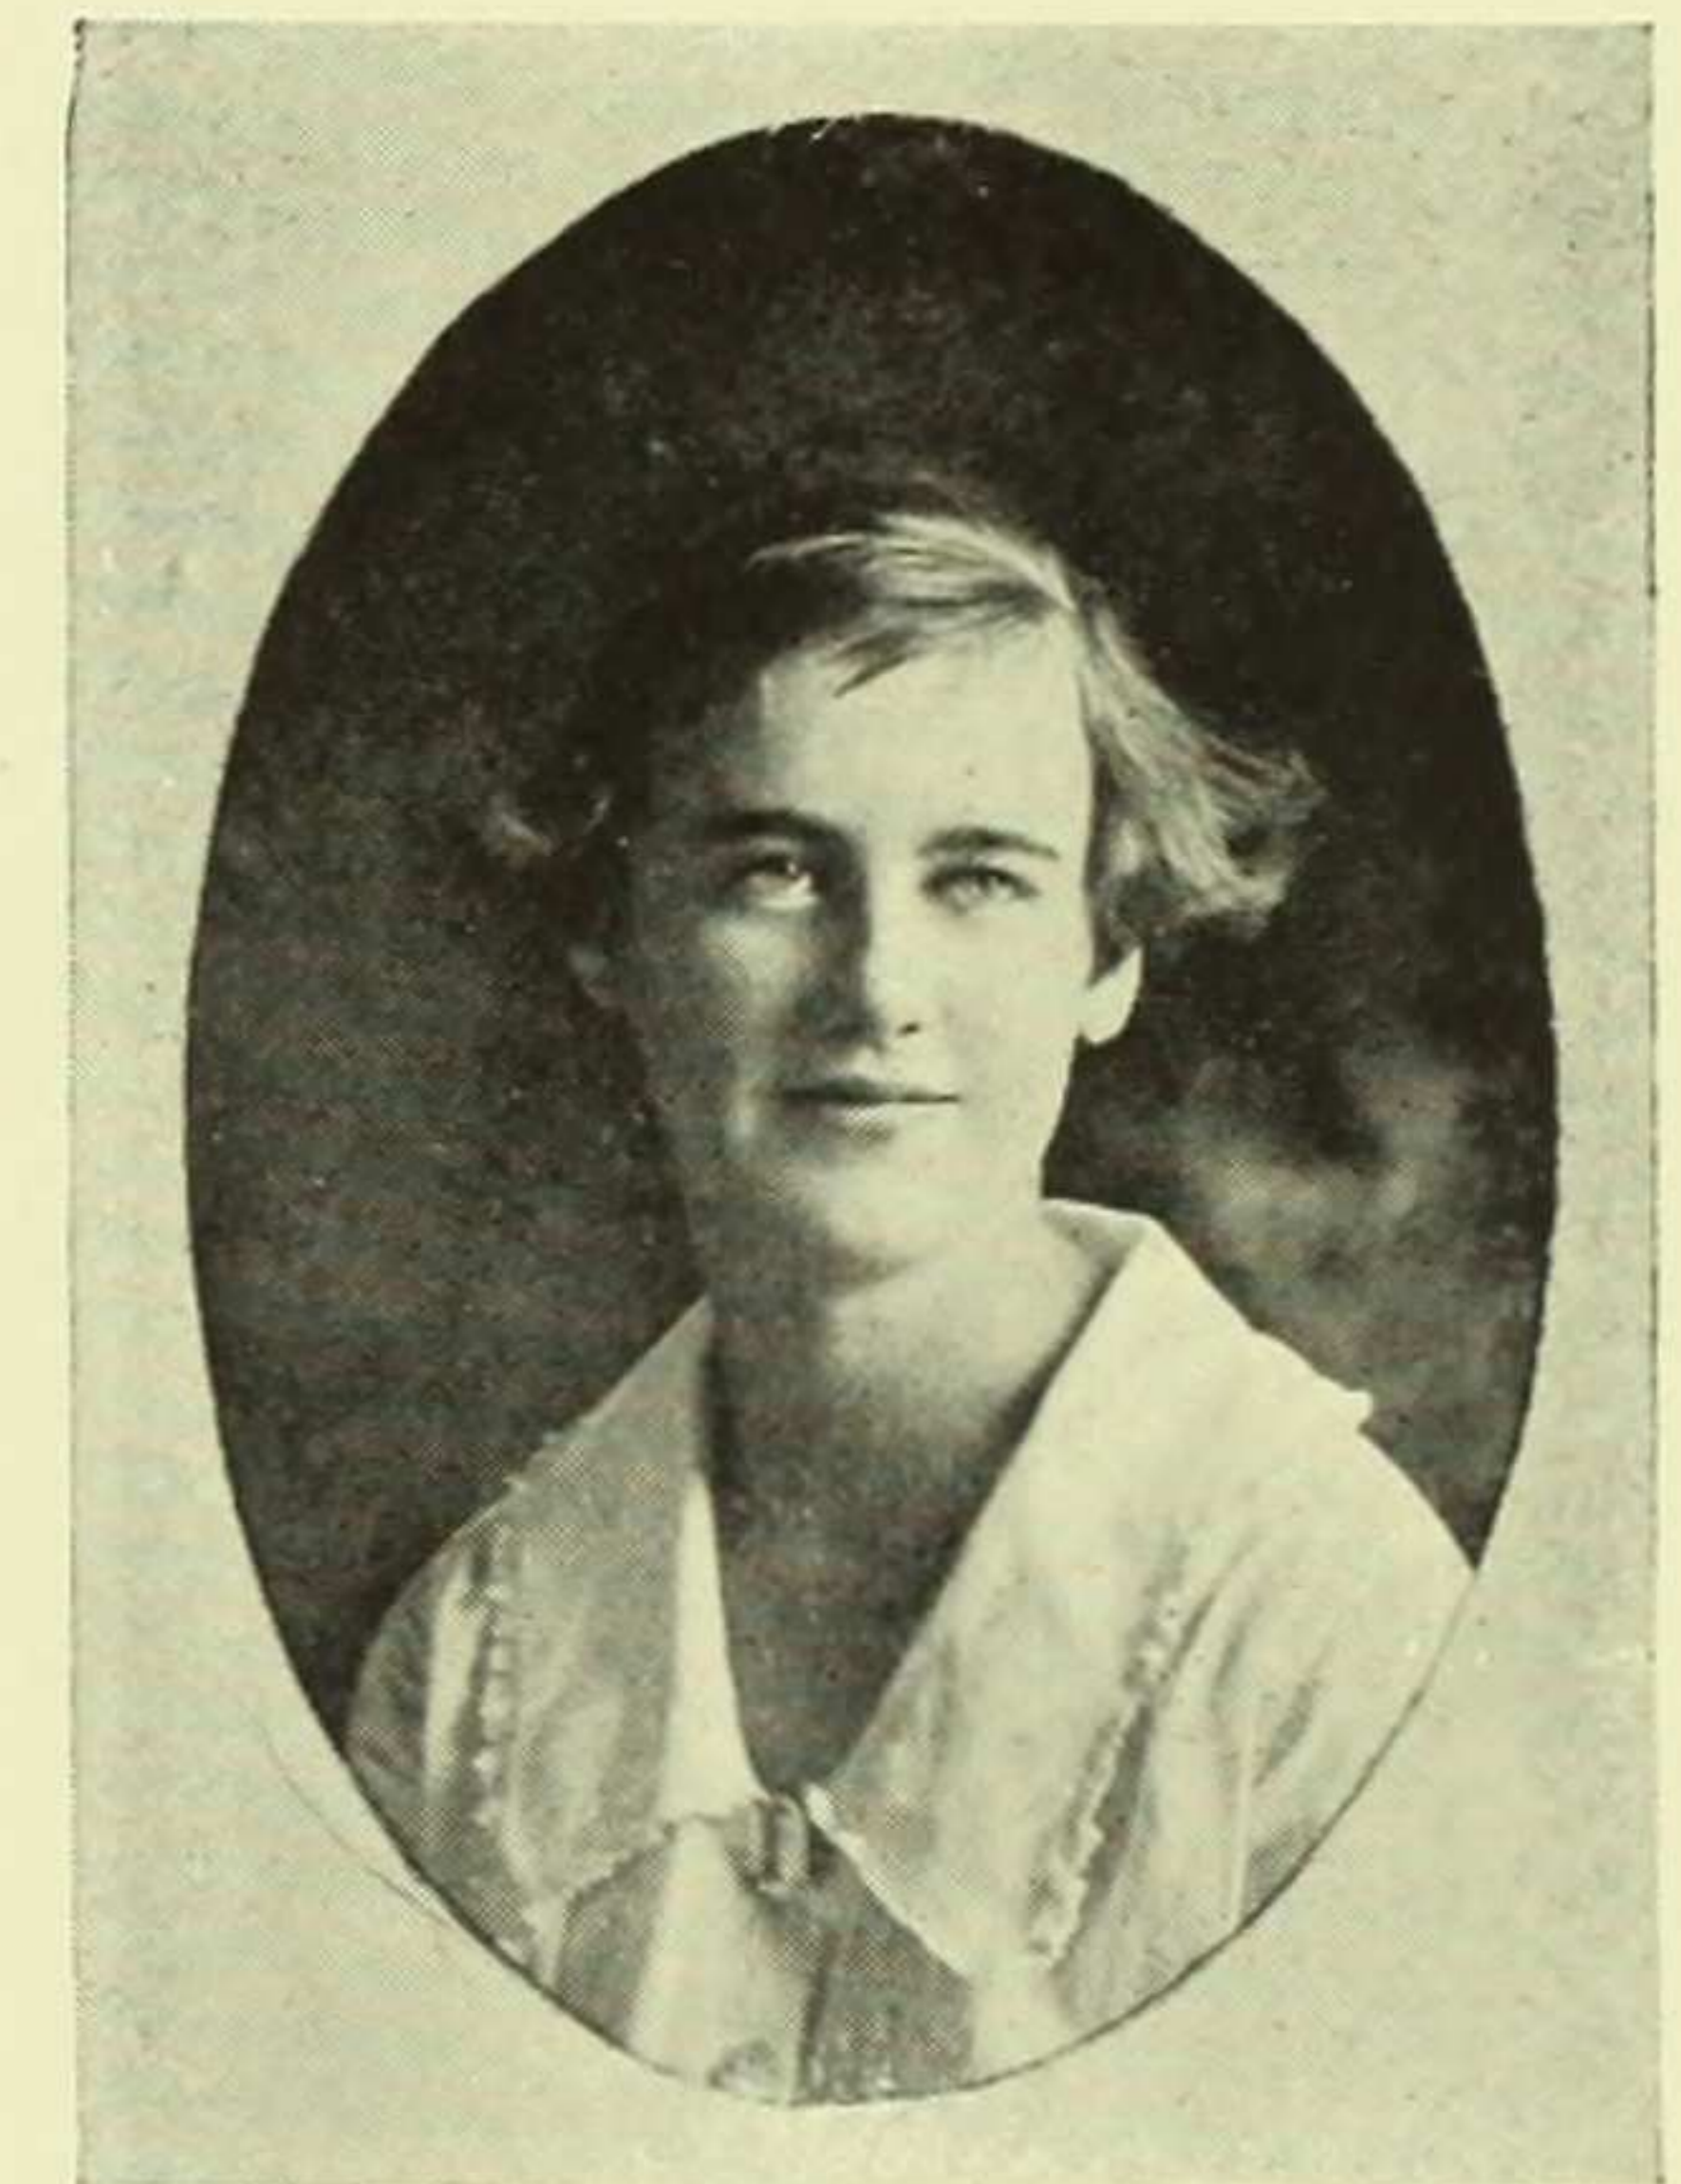

MAUDE B. FISHER

Of circumstances it's the oddest
That her latter name is Fisher;
She would withdraw in manner
modest
From all the jobs her classmates
wish her.

MADELEINE FISKE

We a secret would disclose,
Madeleine has many beaux;
She is often in despair,
Planning out which dress to wear.

LESLEY FROST

Though problems deep her Prof. is solving,
She scarce heeds his lengthy poem—
Spends her lecture hours evolving
Some delightful poem.

MARY ETHEL DONOVAN

Ethel D. is so elusive—
One sees her flitting through the
hall;
That she studies hard's conclusive,
Unless—she studies not at all!

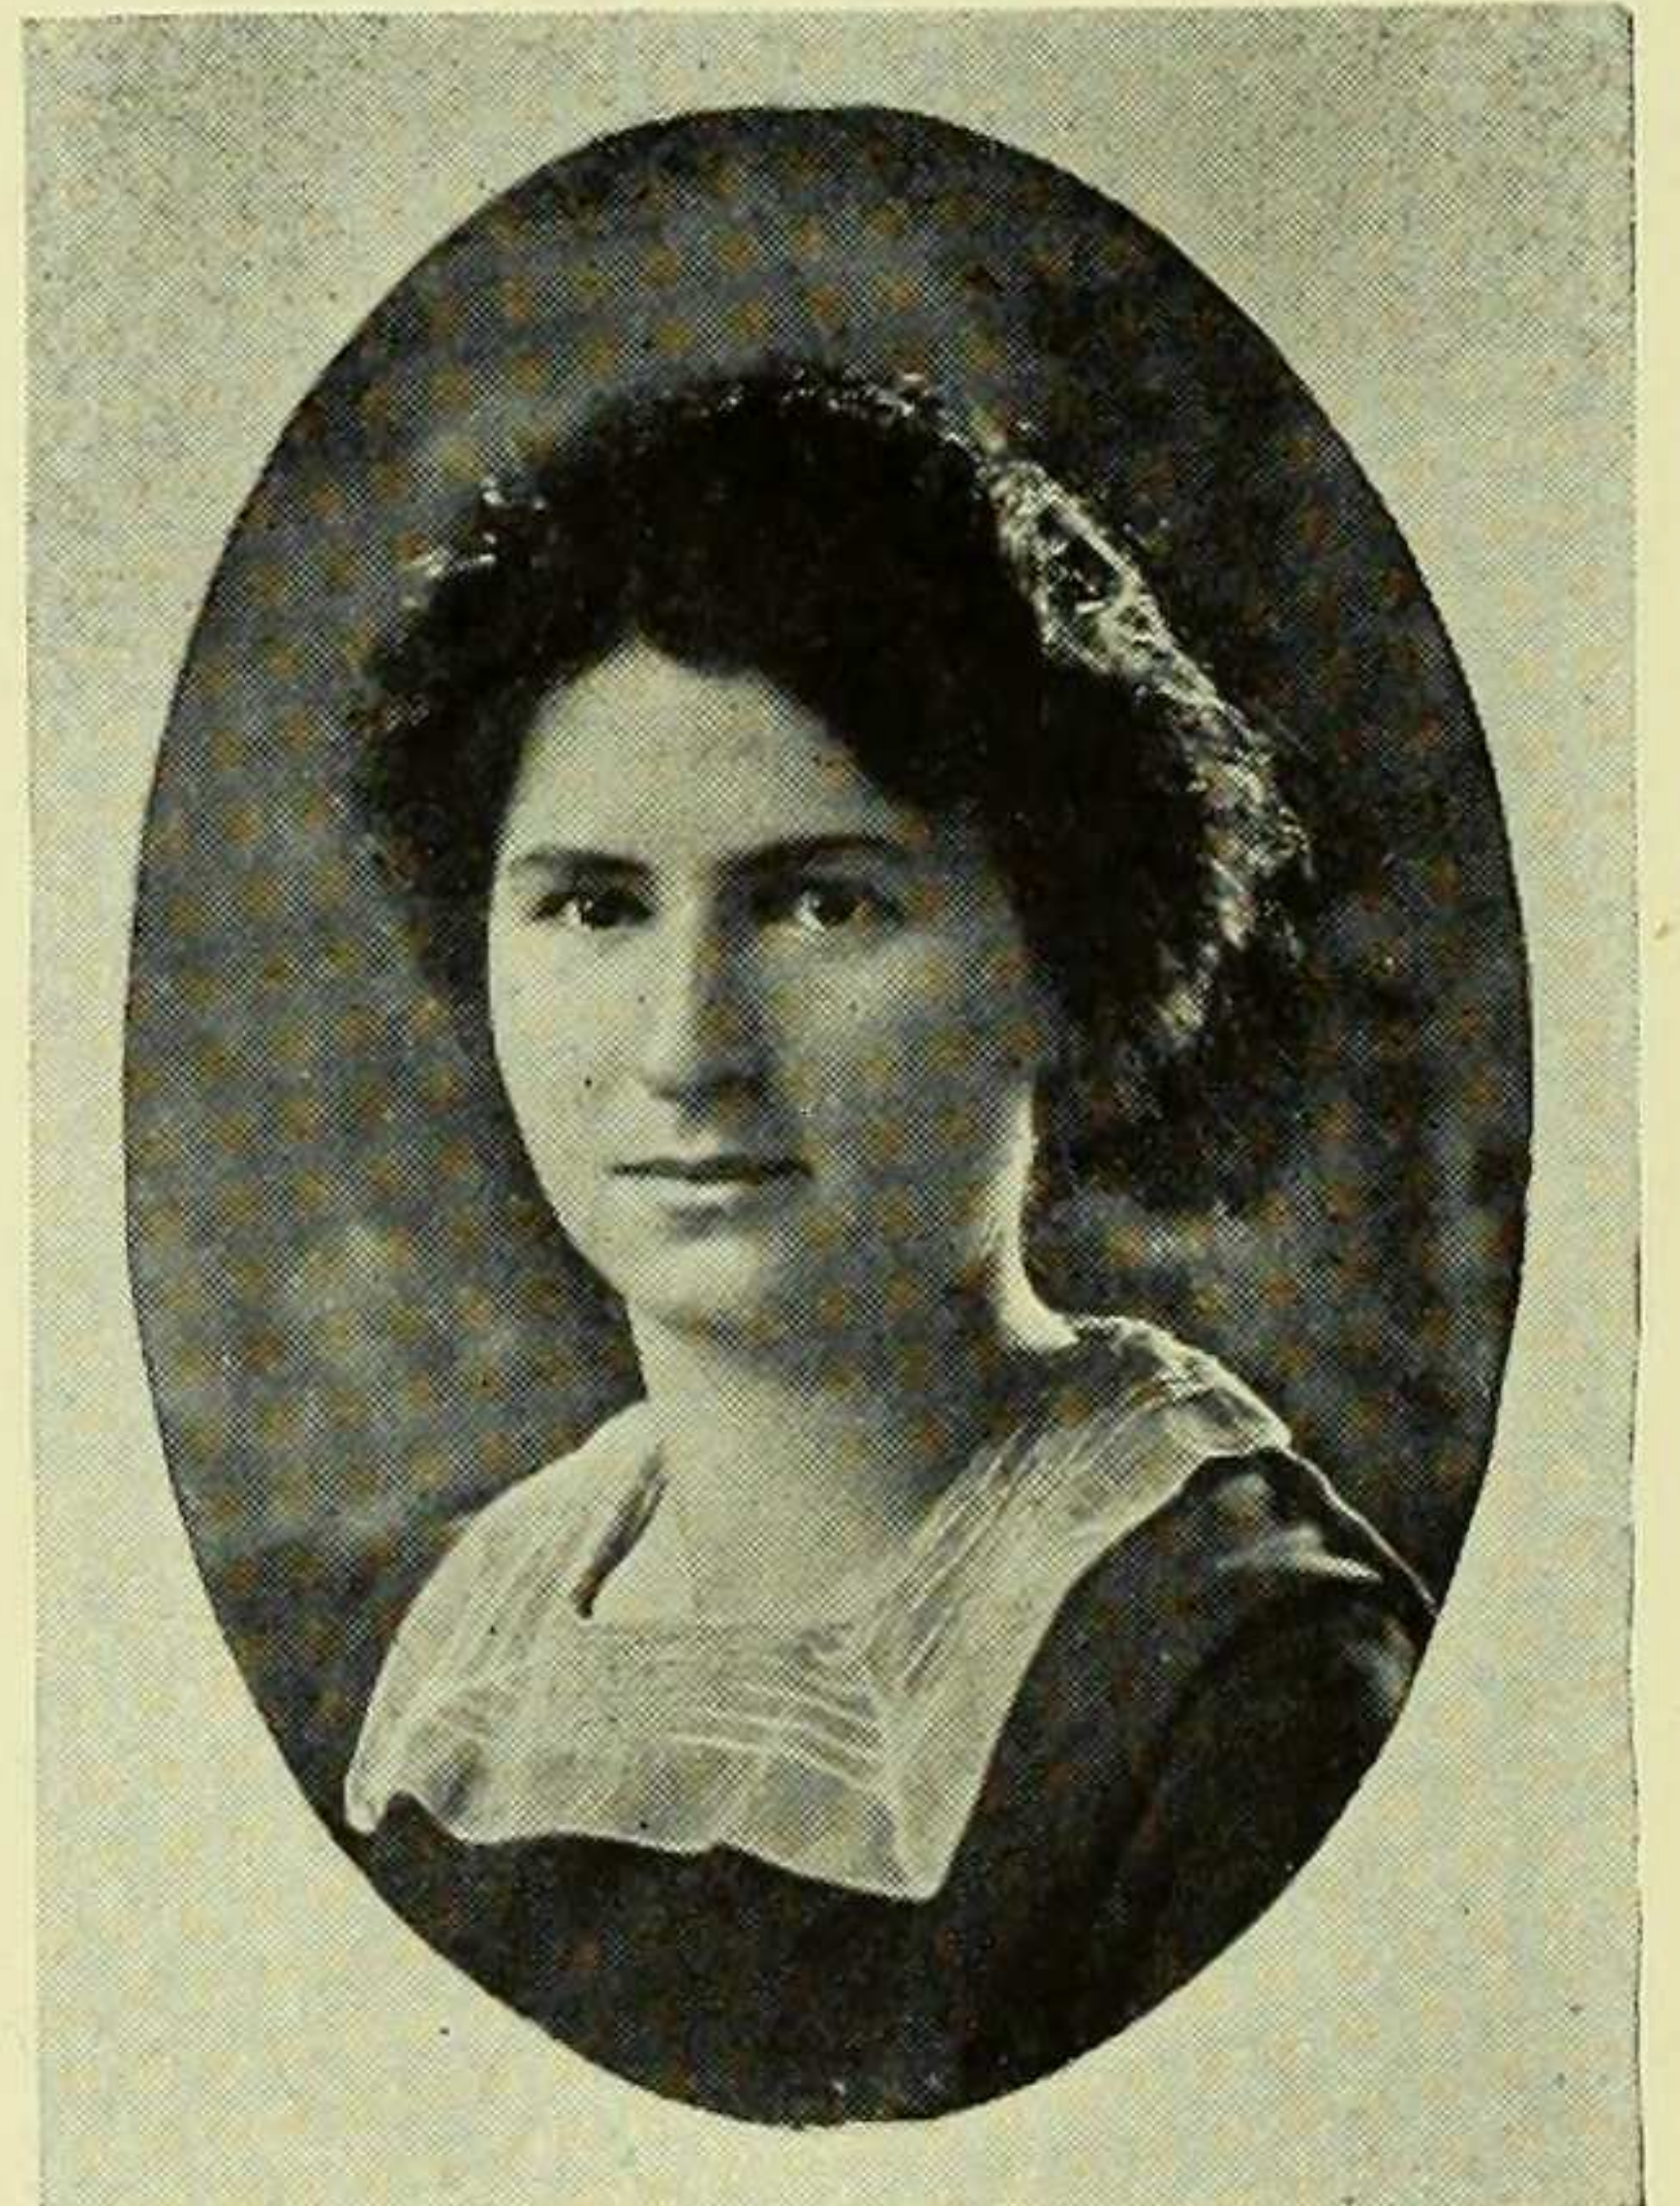

RUTH A. EHRICH

That she's æsthetic one soon guesses
From her dresses—
The fields of dancing, art and drama
Also claim her.

DRACHMAN

At writing short stories
Mattie's a shark;
Why does she keep it
So in the dark?

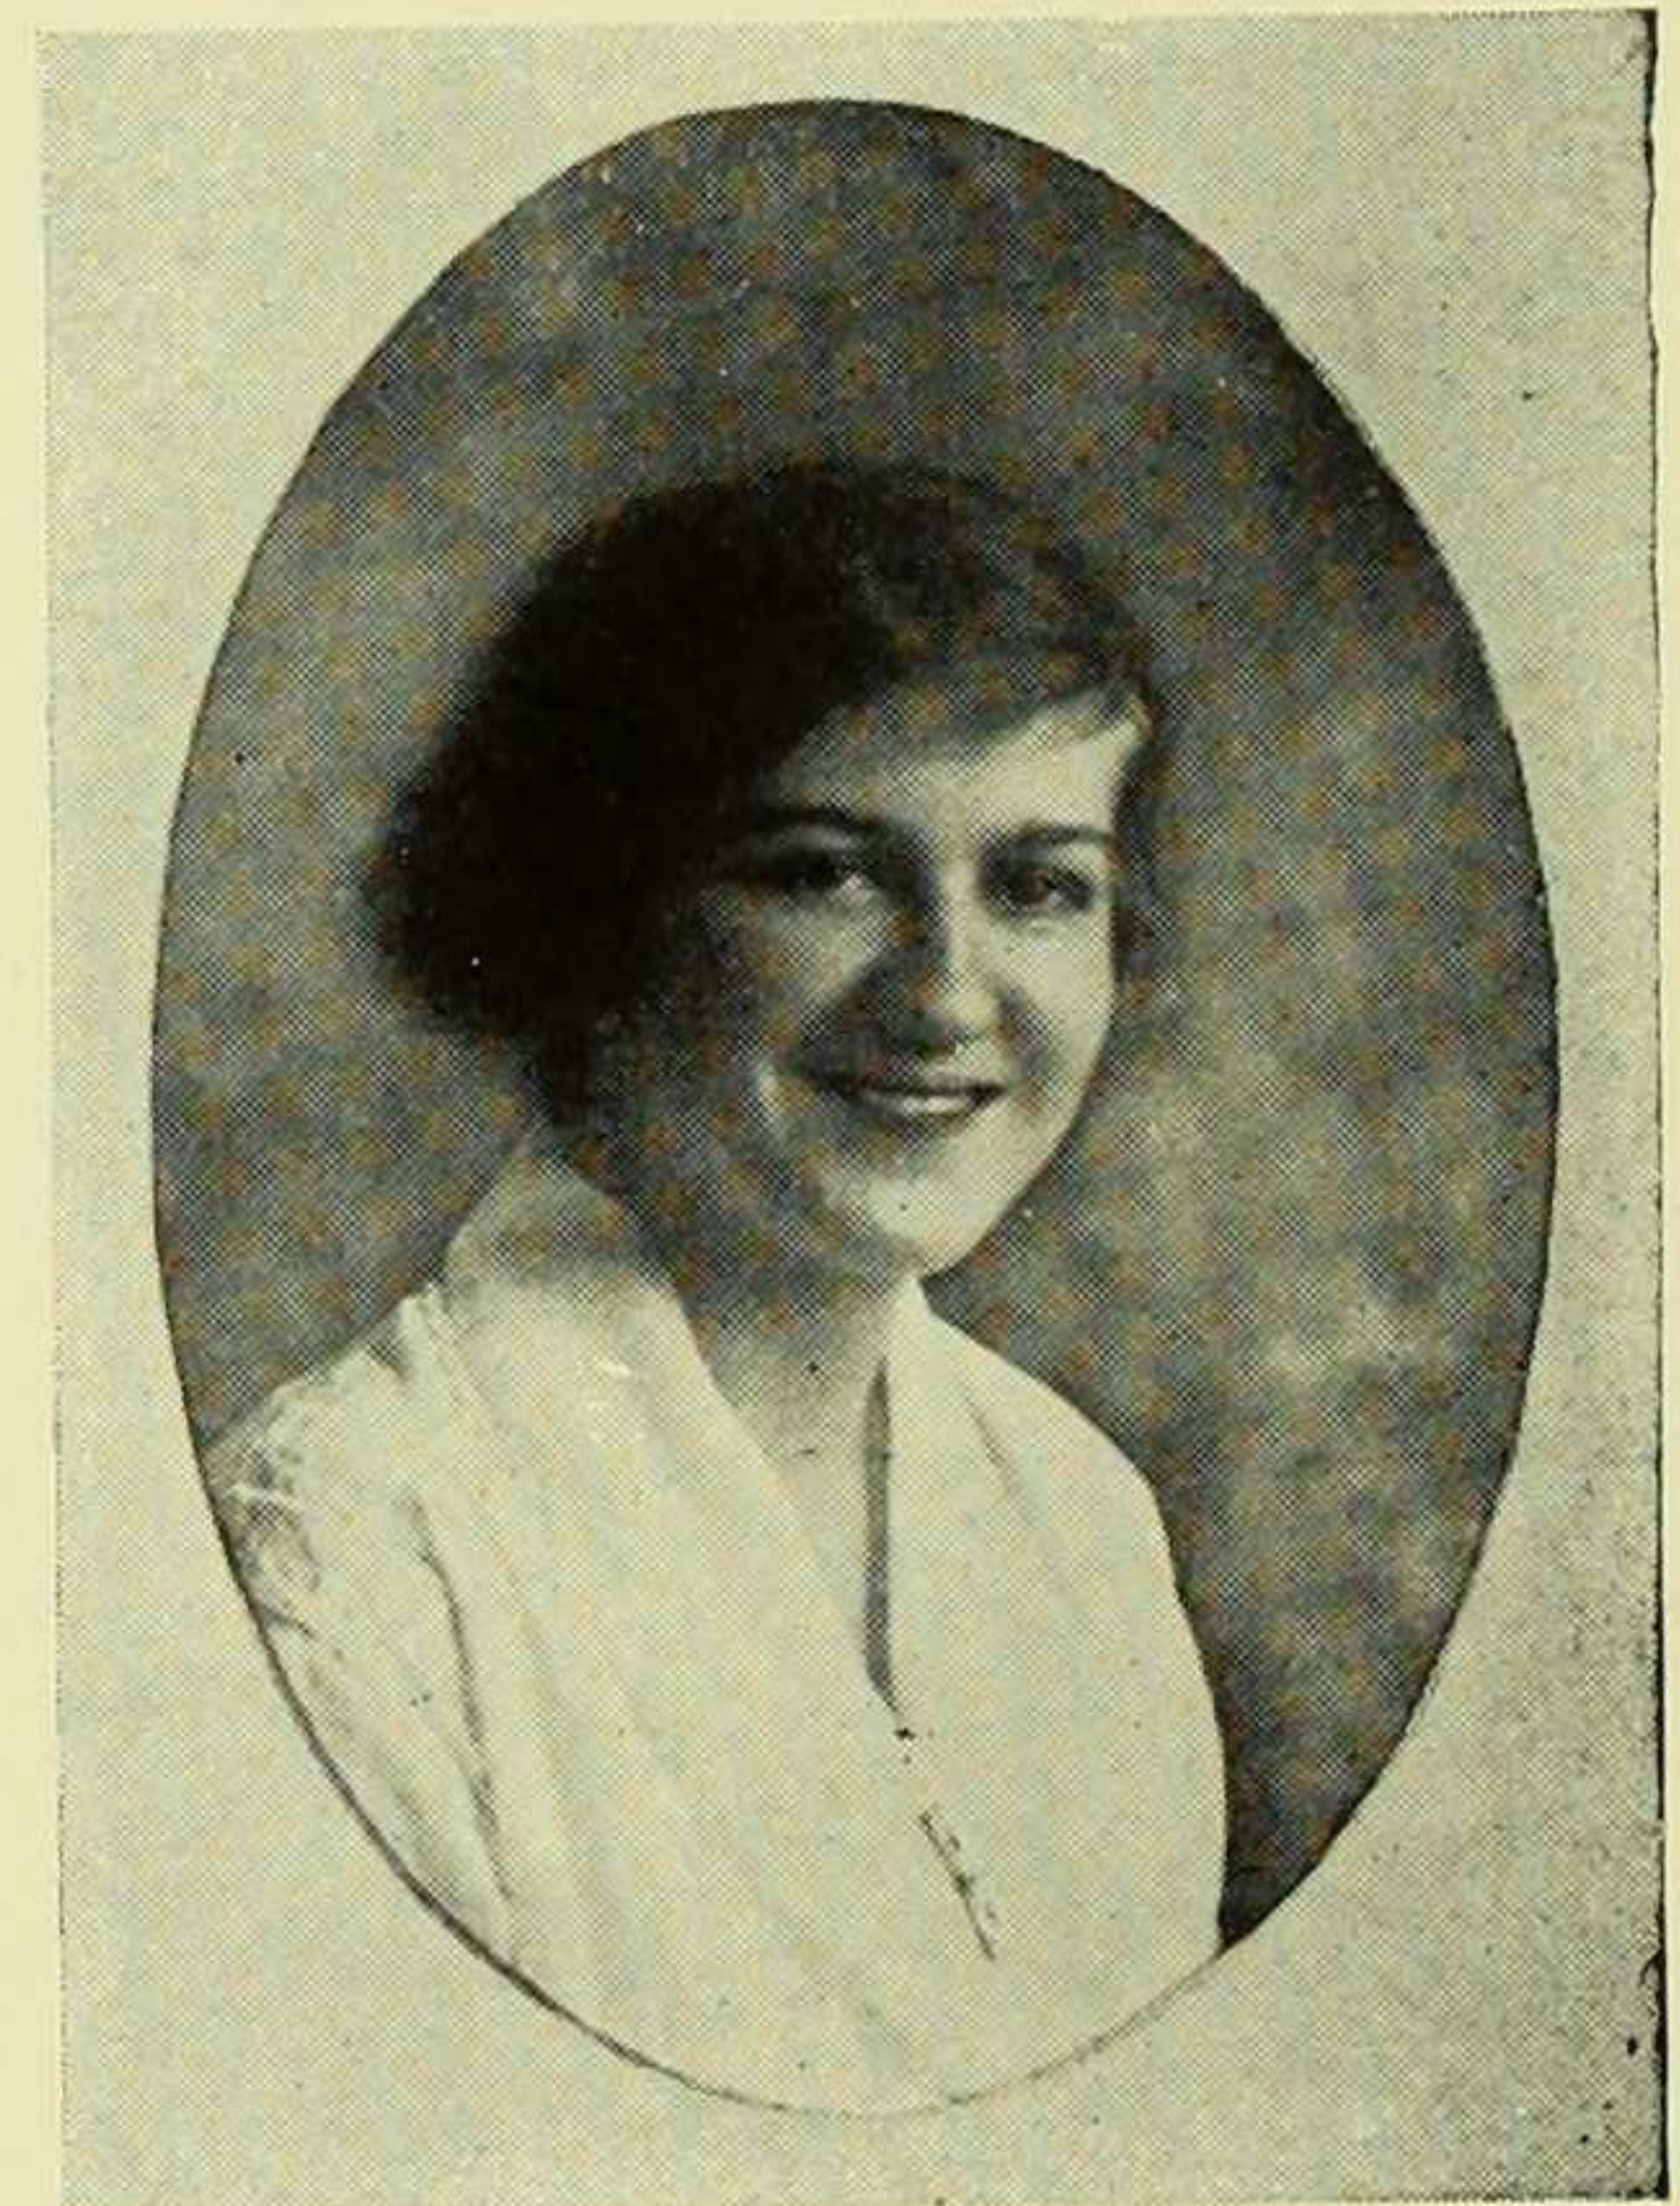

RUTH J. EHRICH

Ruth J. wins her greatest fame in
What has proved to be her forte,
'Tis none other than that game in
Which they roughly term her

GLADYS EDWARDS

All her little friends entrances;
Is it strange she lures them thither

And complicated Chem appliances;
Exceeding rare such self-reliance is.

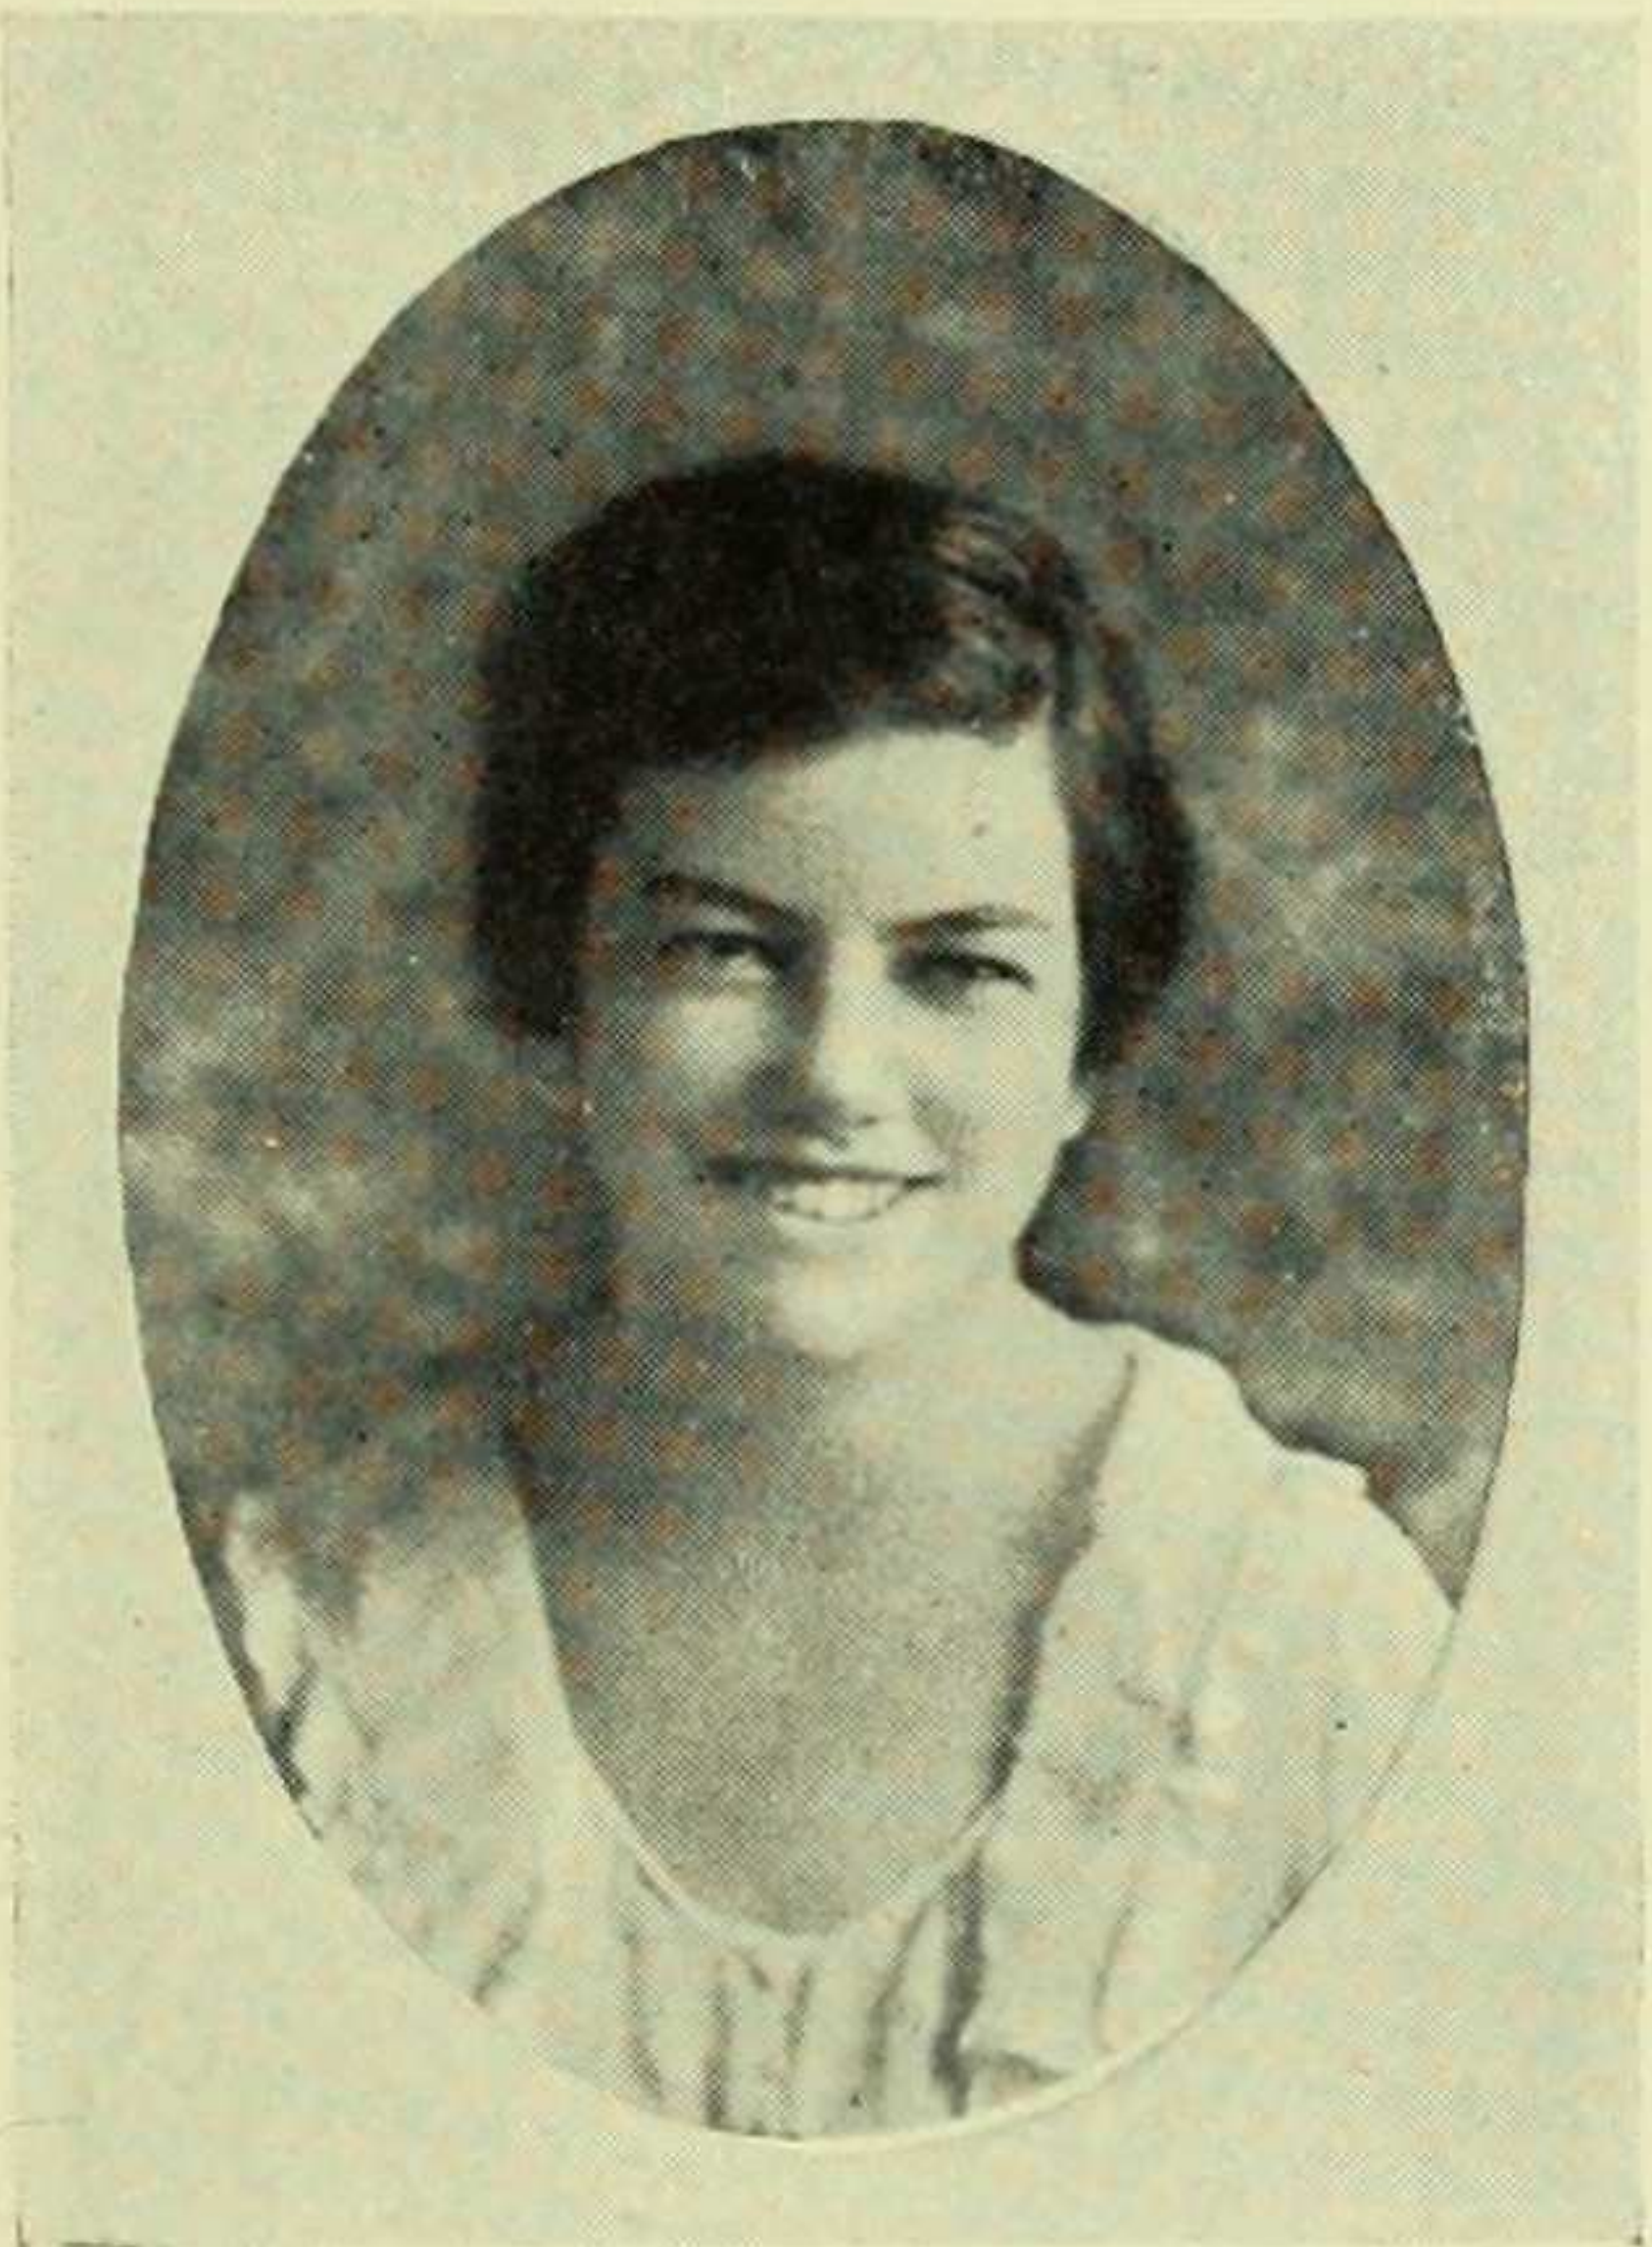

DOROTHY LOUISE FALK

Breathe not what we tell, or we
Would be most severely rated,
But the youthful Dorothy
Fain would seem sophisticated!

MAUDE B. FISHER

Of circumstances it's the oddest
That her latter name is Fisher;
She would withdraw in manner
modest
From all the jobs her classmates
wish her.

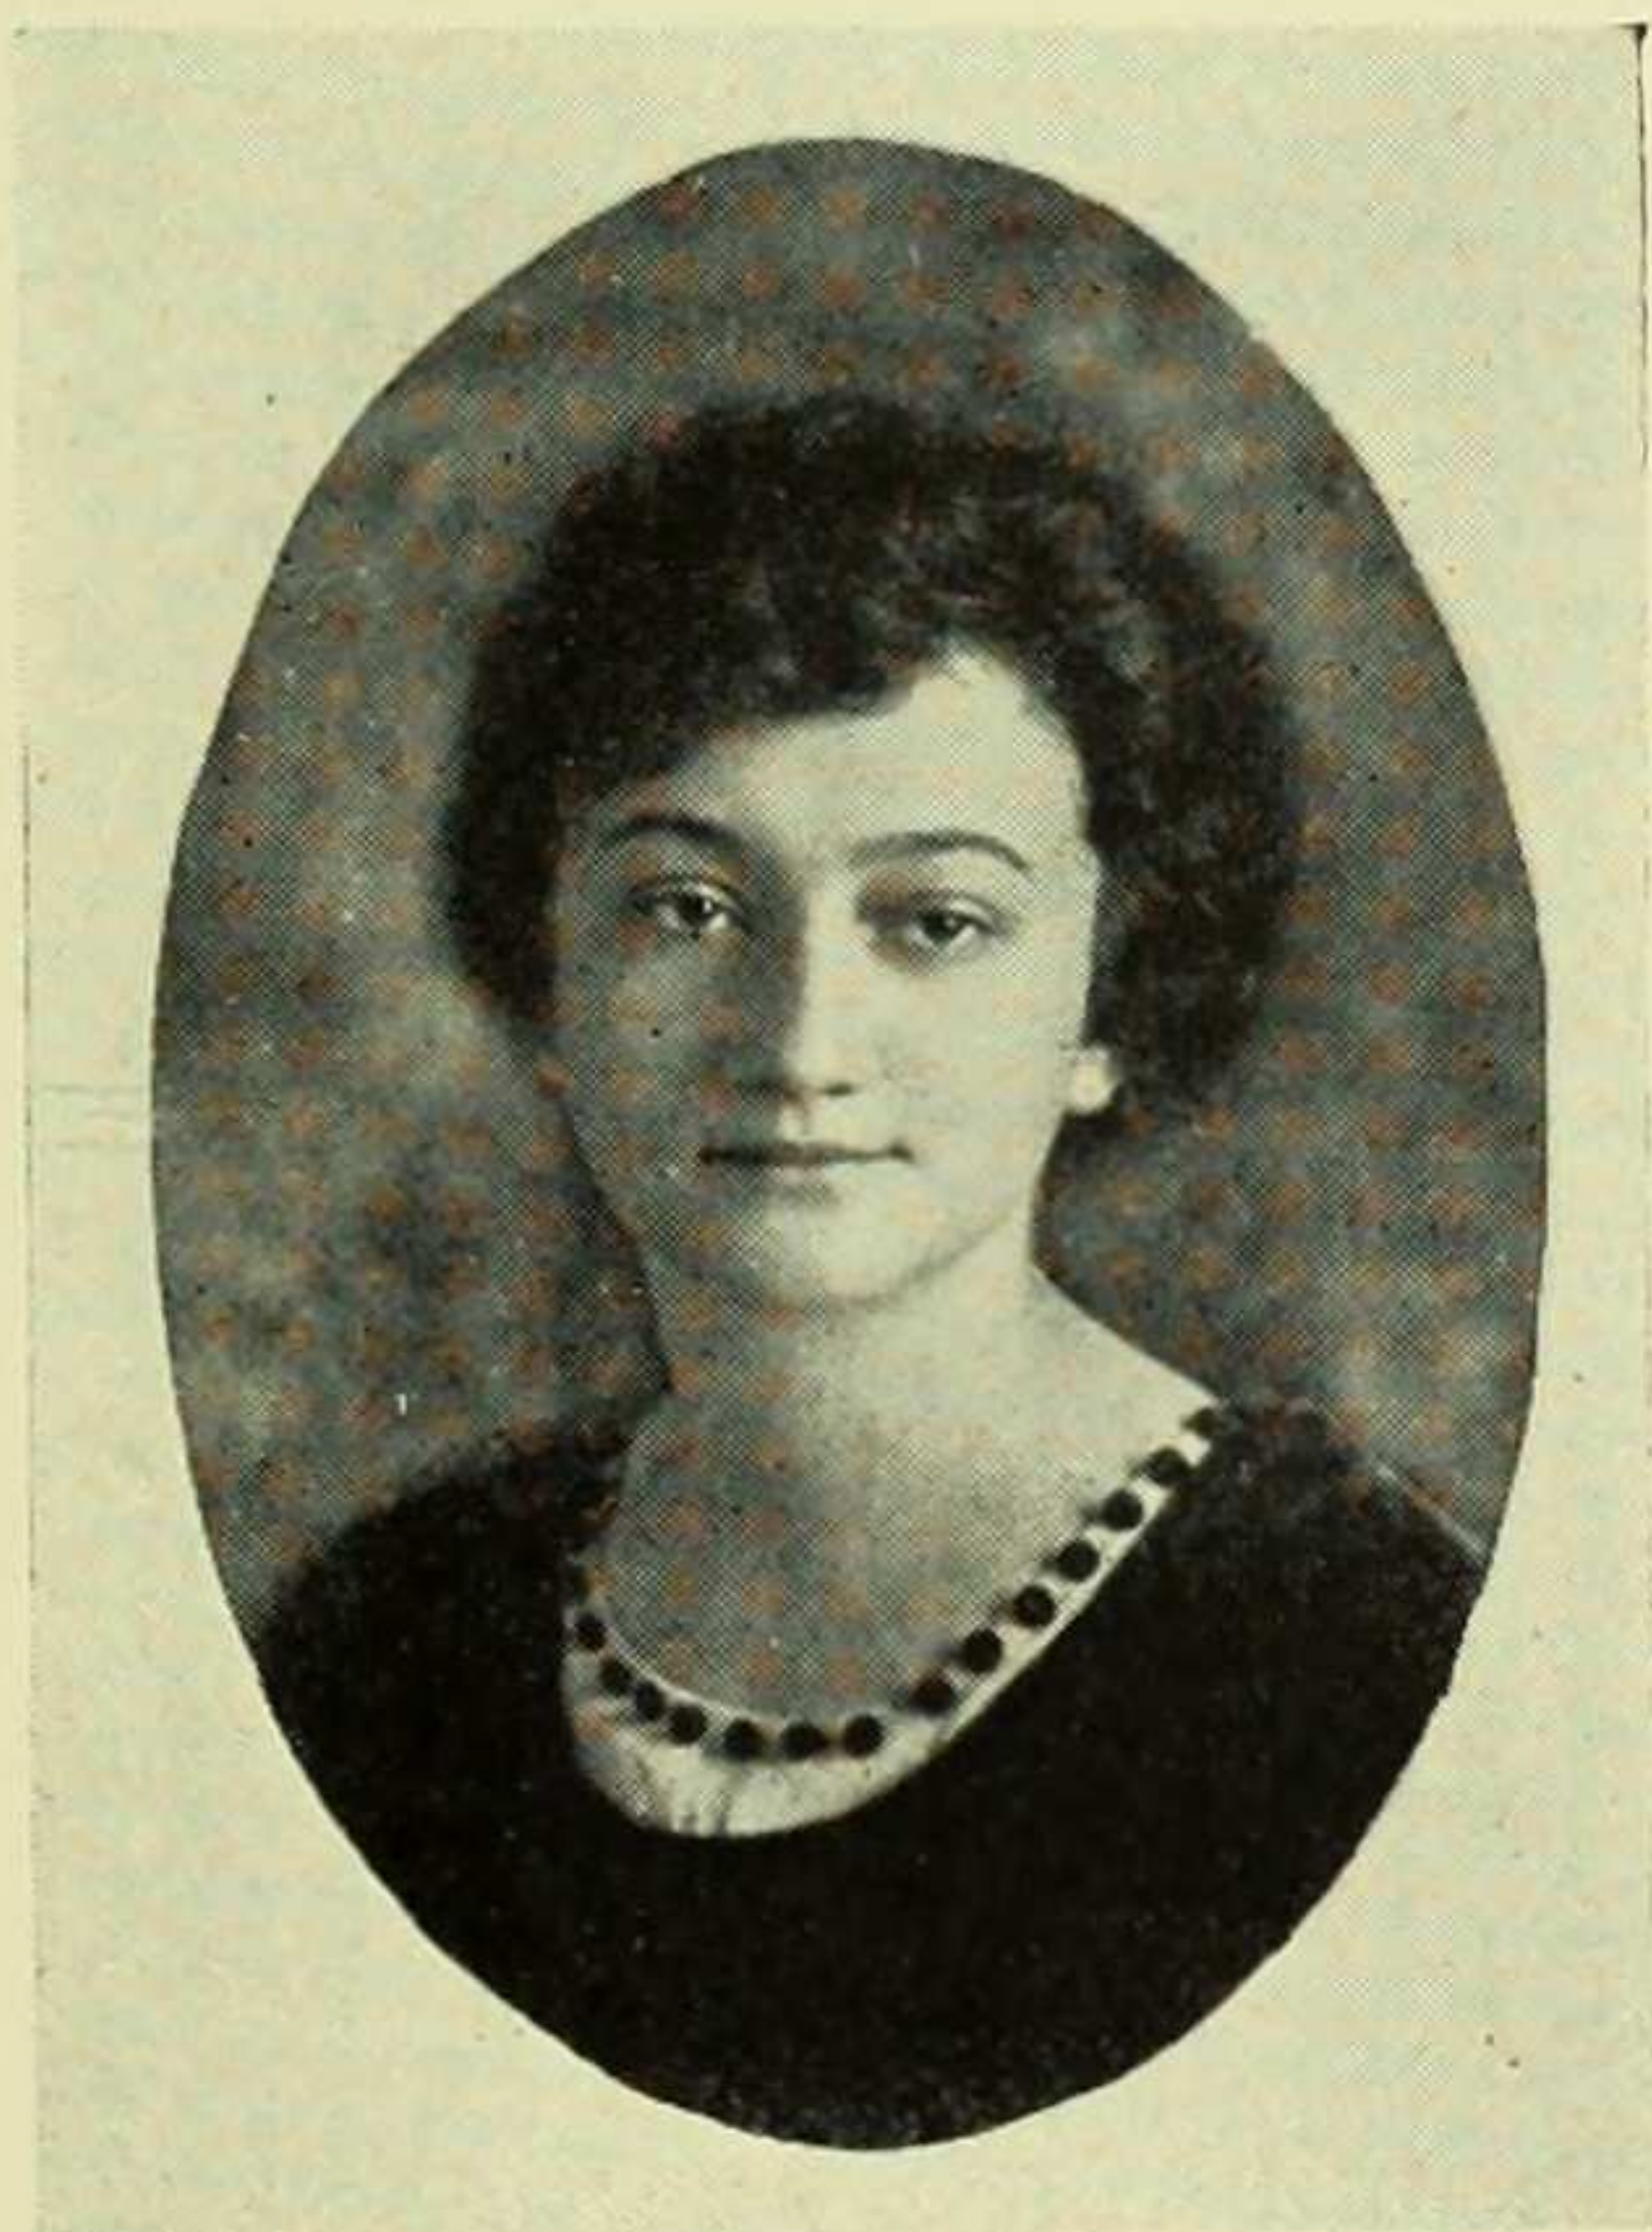

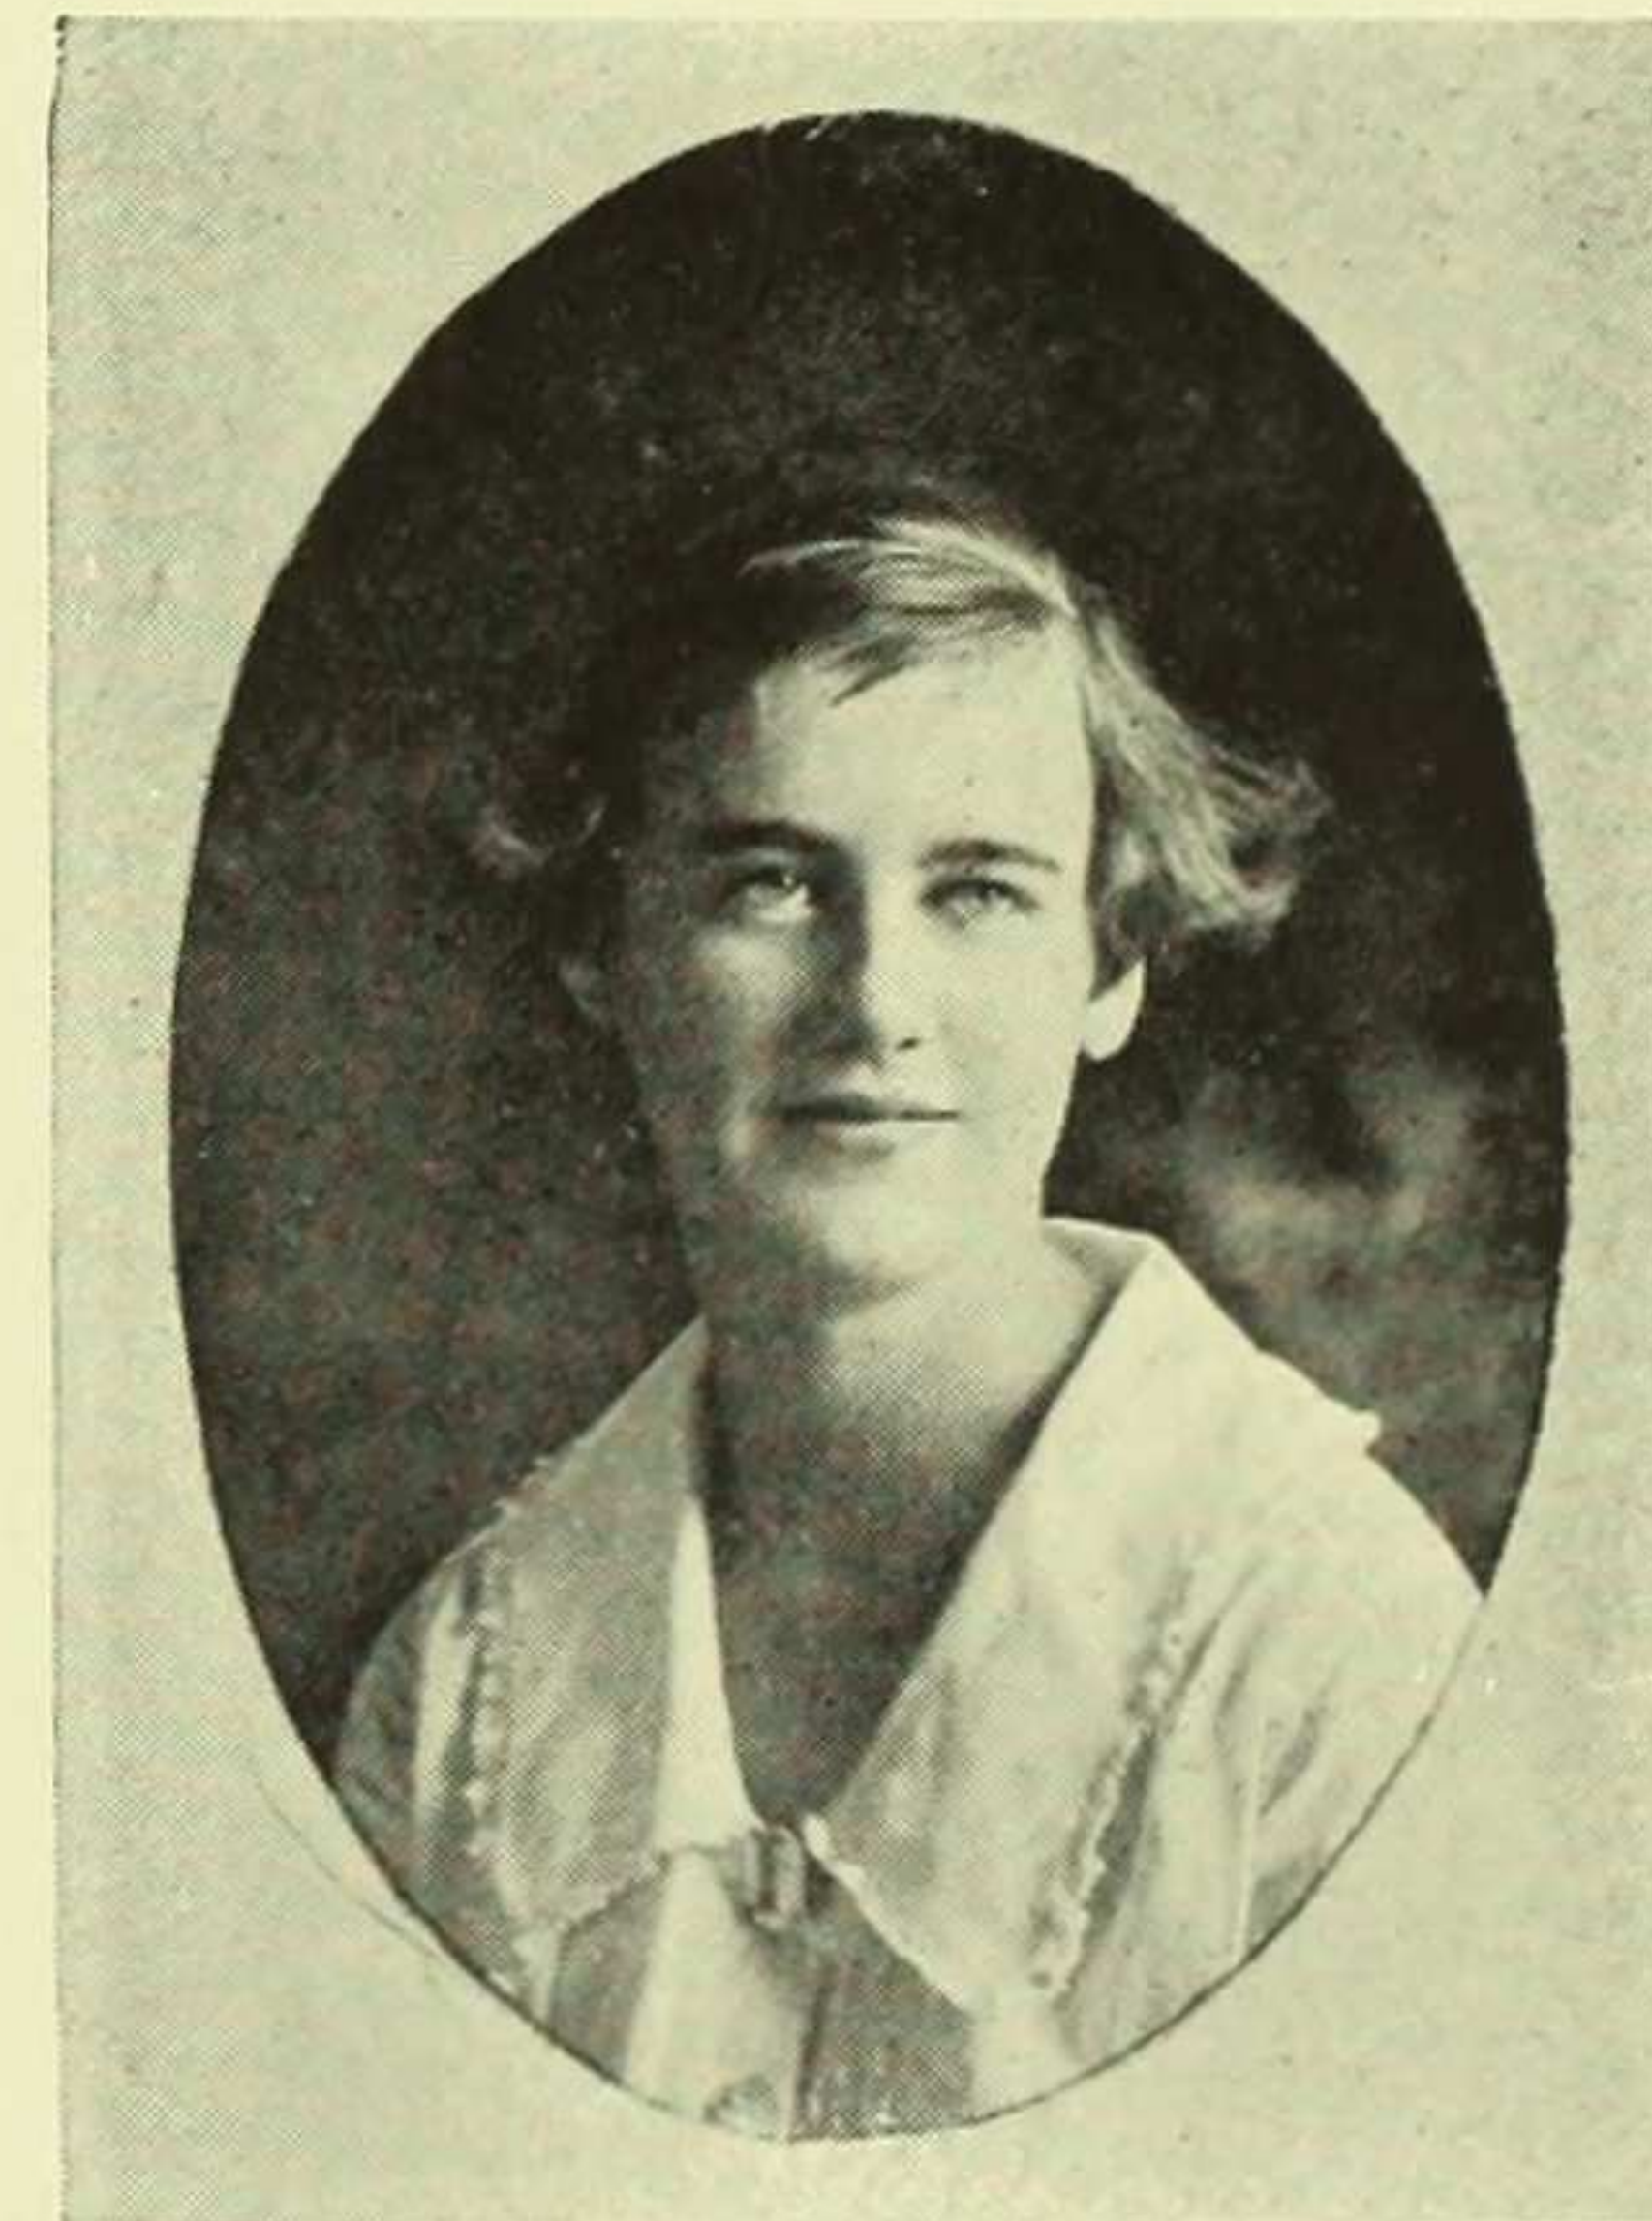

LILLIAN MARGARET
FAWCETT

What can she be thinking of
When, in an abstracted fashion,
She removes her brown kid glove
And sets a diamond ring a-flashin'!

MADELEINE FISKE

Madeleine has many beaux;
She is often in despair,
Planning out which dress to wear.

ESTELLE FINE

Up towards fame she hews her path
Along the careful lines of Math,
And, to prove it all some day,
She takes snapshots on the way.

LESLEY FROST

Though problems deep her Prof. is solving,
She scarce heeds his lengthy proem—
Spends her lecture hours evolving
Some delightful poem.

EDNA WILEY GIBSON

When Gibby was a farmerette
You should have seen the meals she et!
But in the Winter we're surprised
To find she's very civilized.

WINIFRED VAN P.
GORTON

She would simply have conniptions
Were we herewith to disclose,
That upon her little nose
Freckles are, of all descriptions!

AGATHA GILBERT

Twenty-one will ever laud her—
She high-jumps, wins glory thusly;
But we grin while we applaud her,
For she jumps so curtsey-ously!

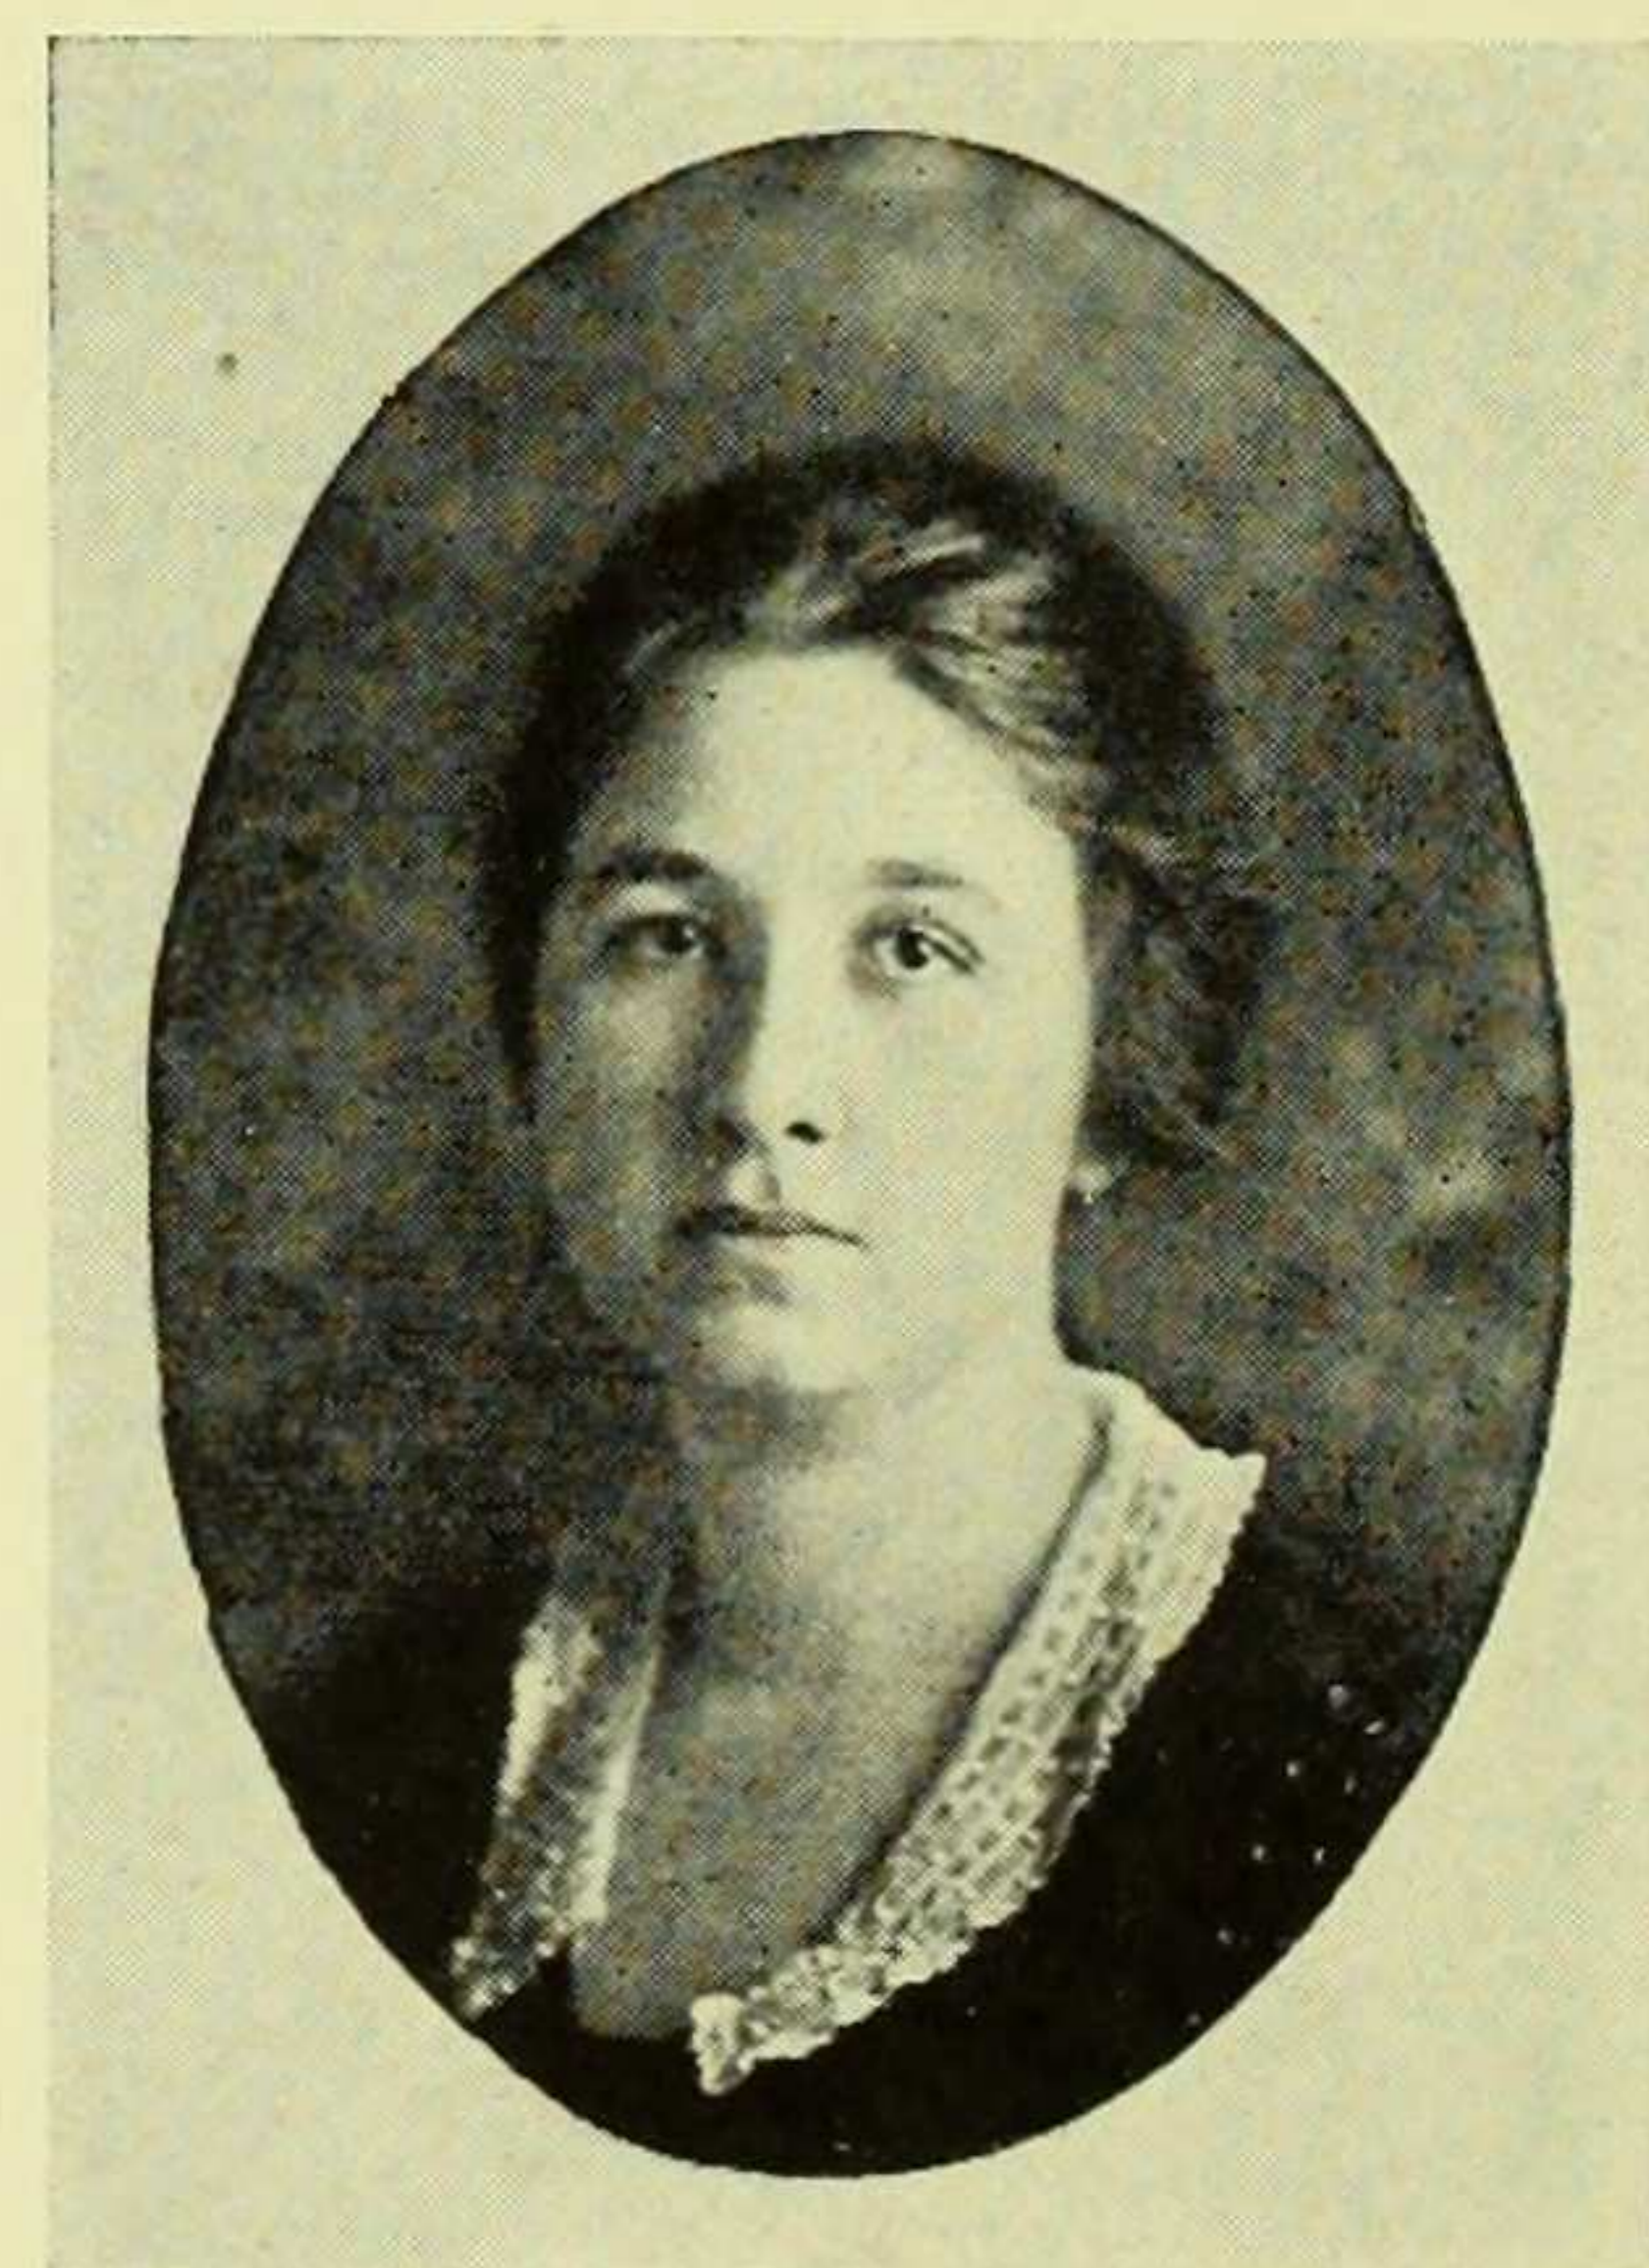

RUTH SUMMERFIELD
GRAFFLIN

She only comes to study,
And then she slips away;
Her thoughts are never muddy,
Alack and wel-a-day!

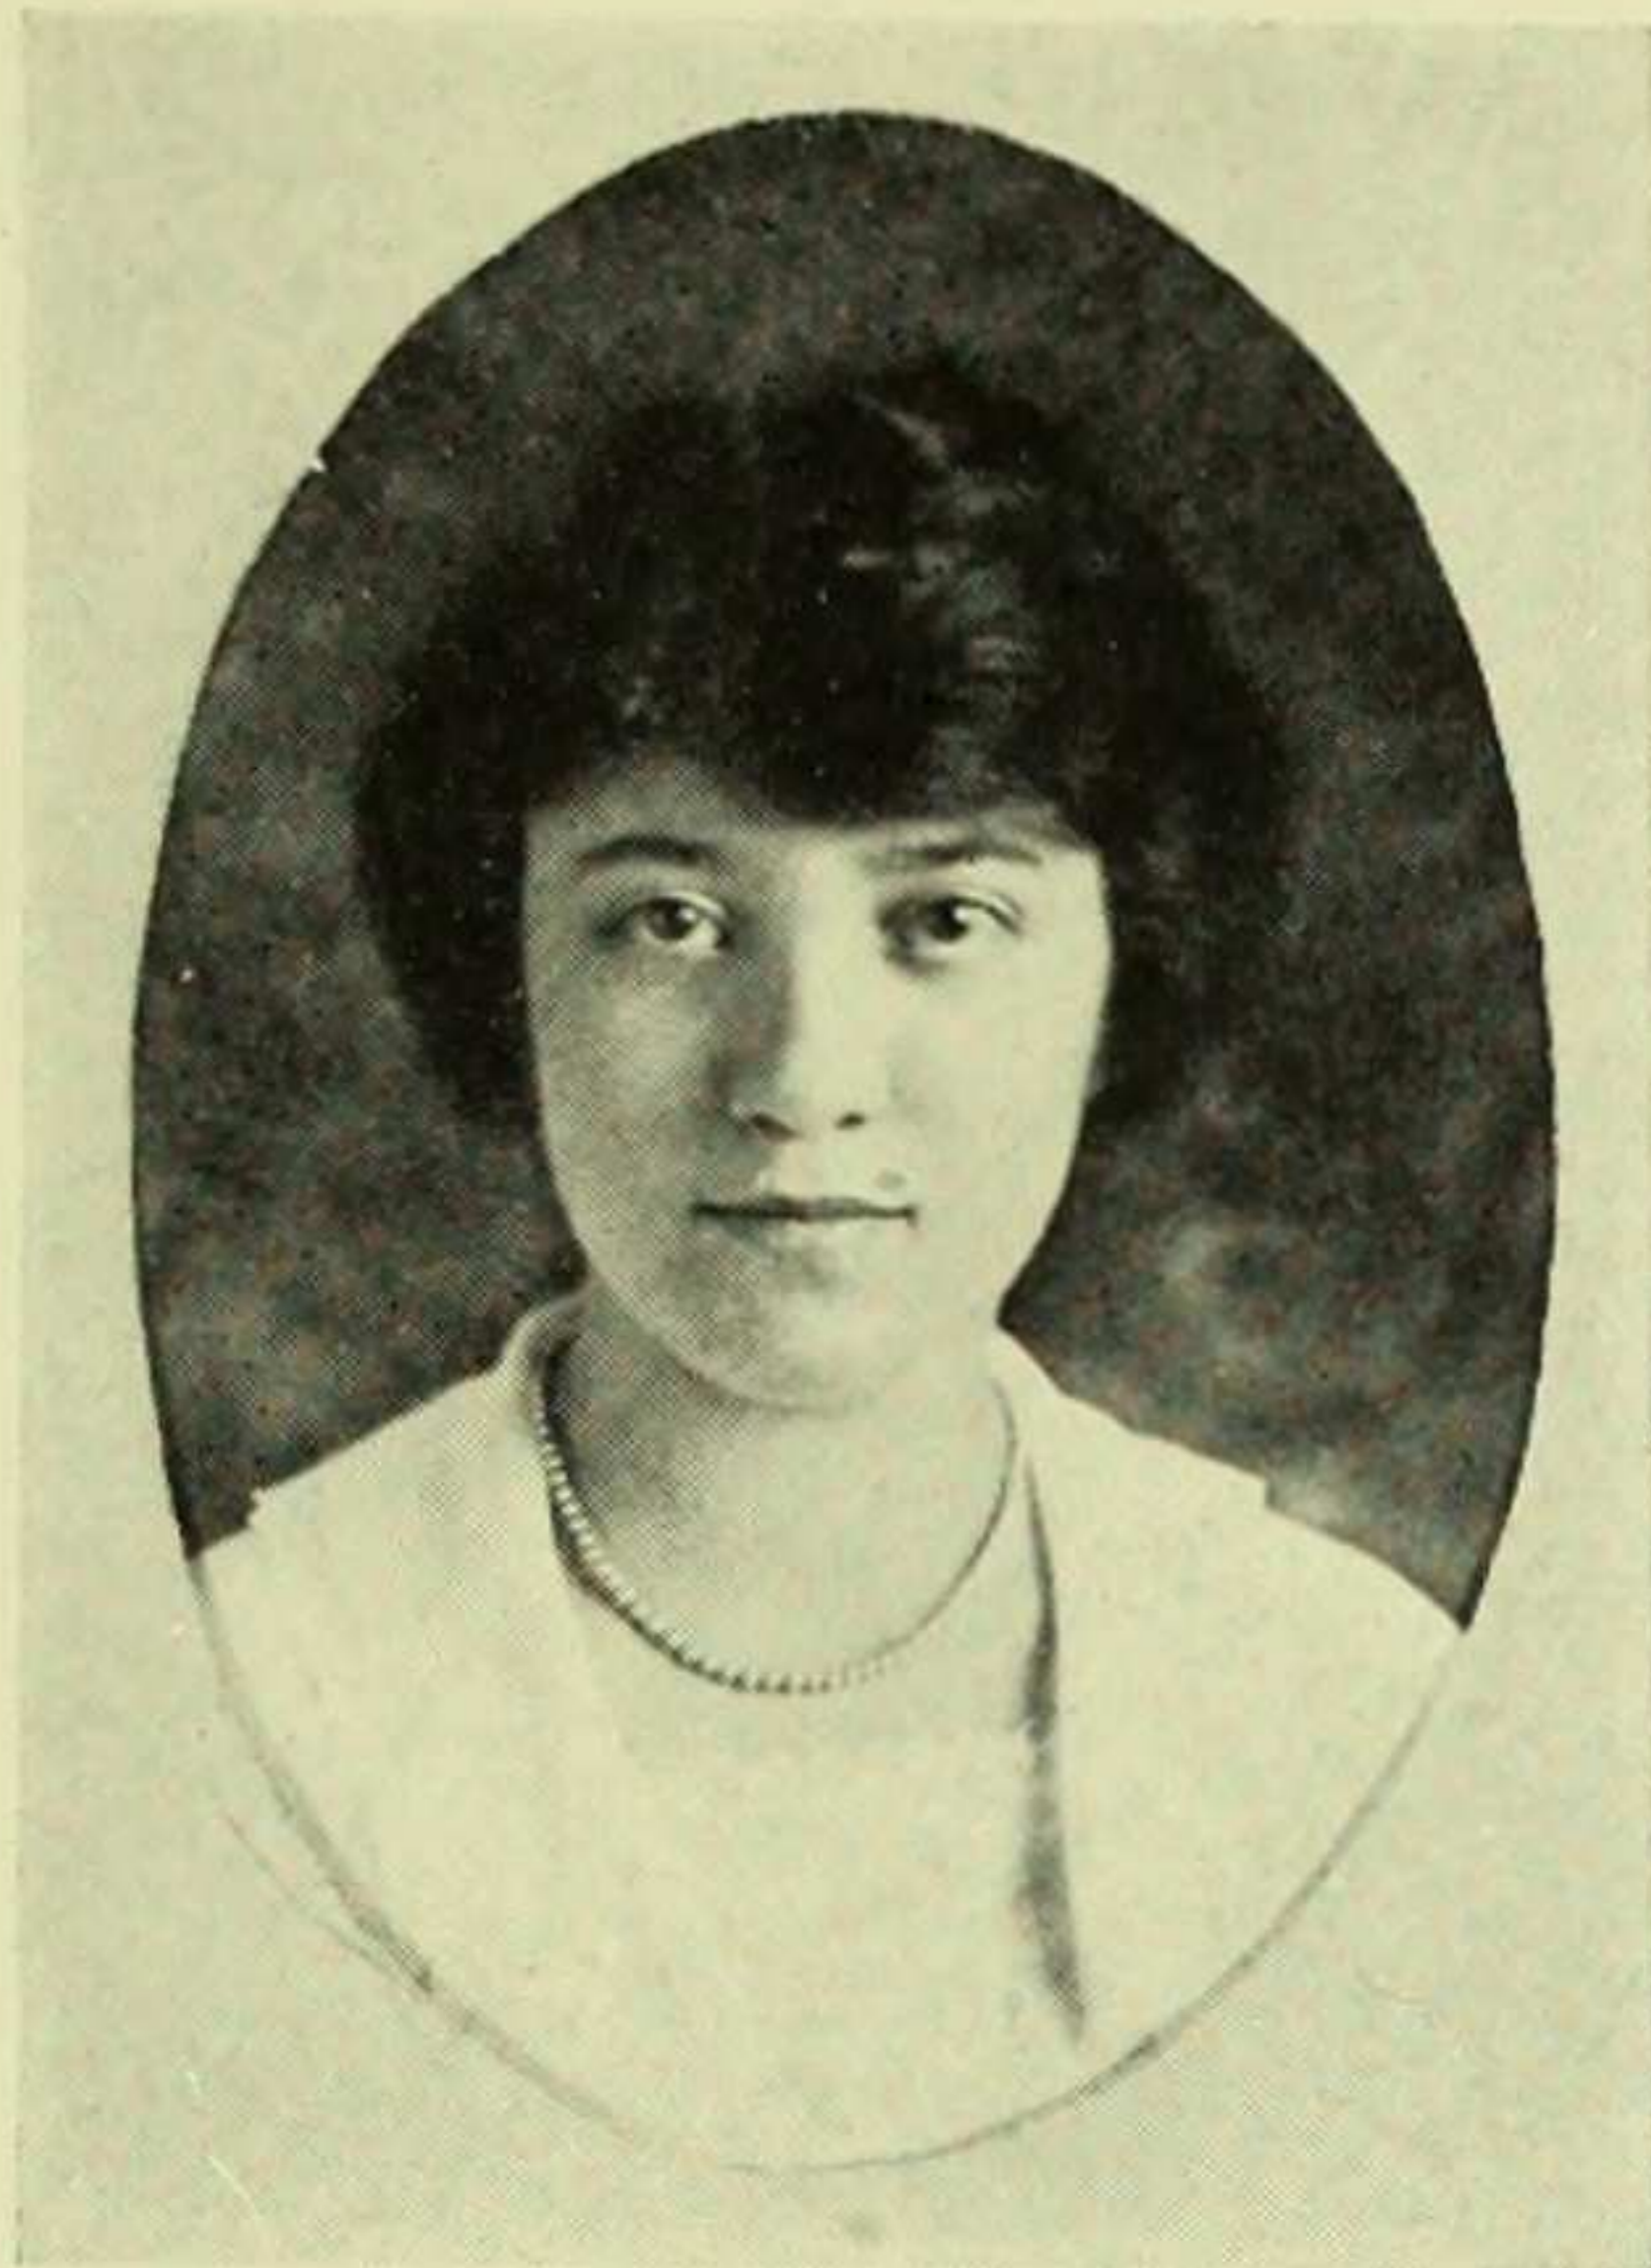

LEONA HAMMERSLEY
GOLDSMITH

There never was a girl so very Flexible and agile
As Lee at climbing trees of cherry,
Though she seems so fragile.

MARY LOIS GRANGER

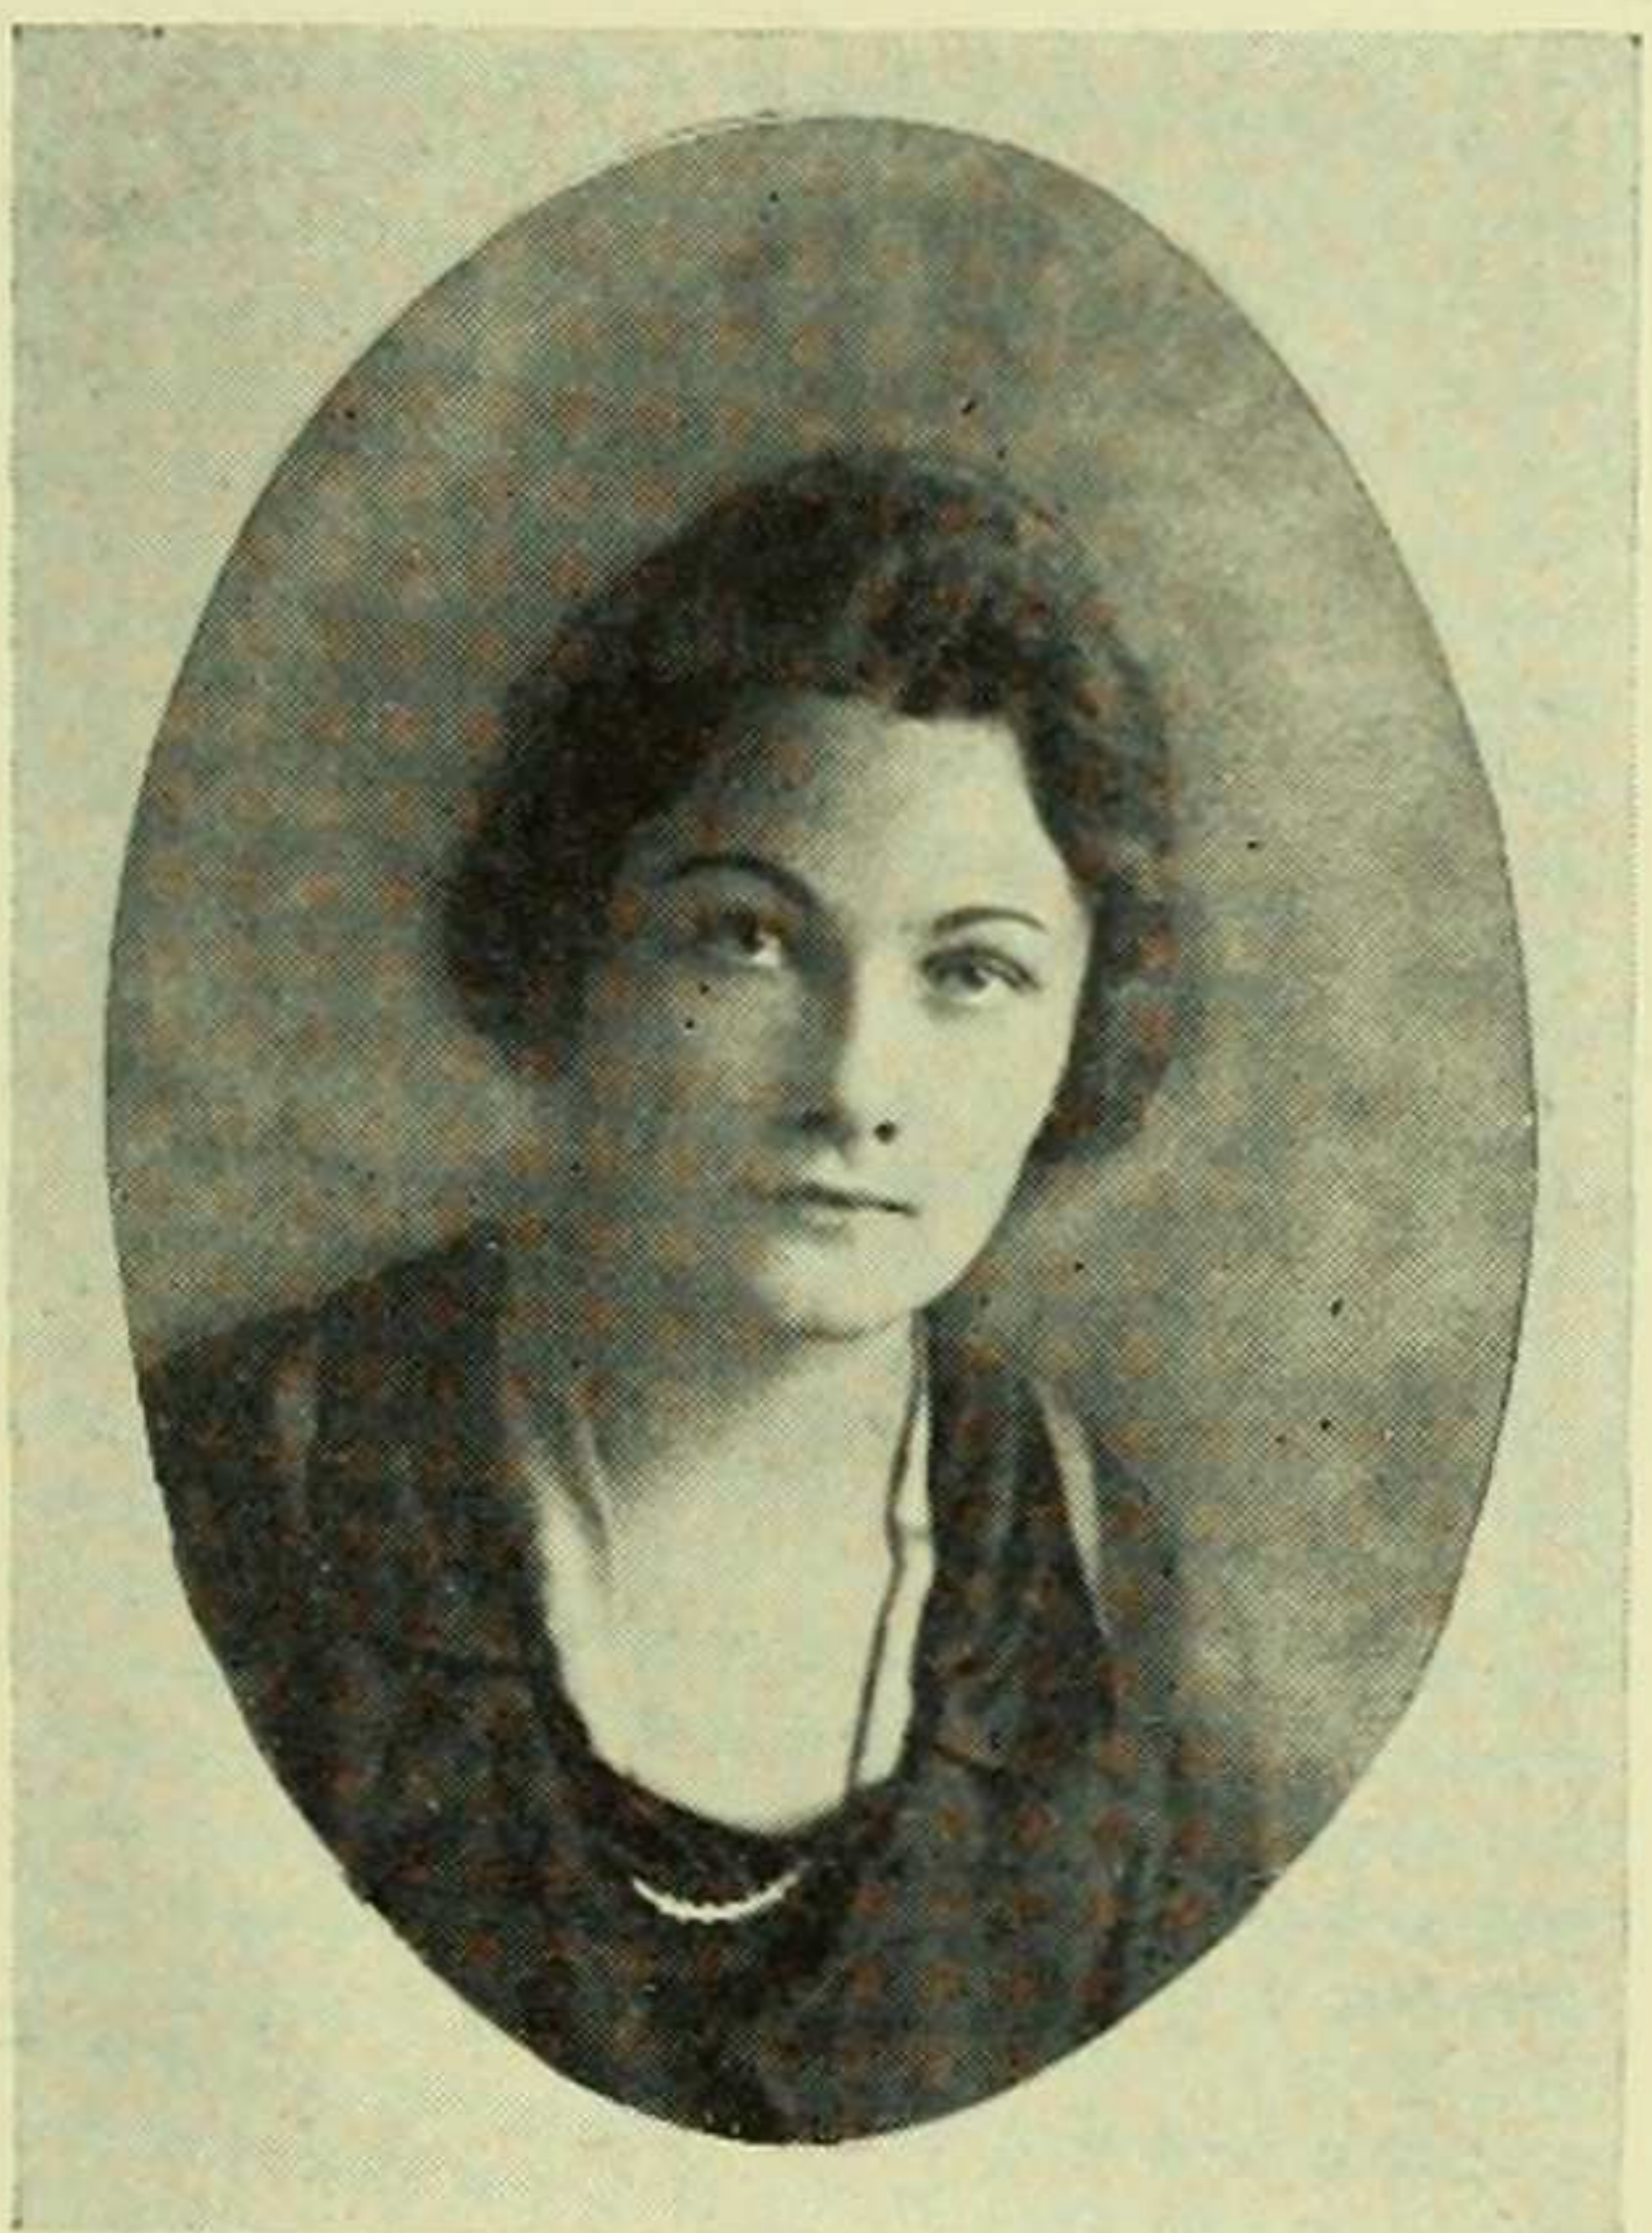

She manages you and manages me
And Mortarboard, too, most admirably—
A manager born is Mary G.

GRACE HELOISE GREEN

In her presence best be wary,
Have your P's and Q's down pat;
She would be a missionary—
"Why does everyone think that?"

LOIS ADELE GURNEE
A soft and pleasing voice she owns—
Oh, such!
Perhaps that's why she telephones
So much!

MARION RUTH GROEHL

Late! (The Prof's a perfect griffin—)
Lunched with Adelaide at Tiffin—
Swam in meet at T. C. (Mess!)—
Dance — wore jade-green evening dress.

MARY BRADT HALL
When we first knew Mary Hall
We thought she didn't talk at all;
It's really quite a paradox
To find she's such a chatterbox.

ELSIE MARY GUERDAN

E'er marks were posted, fearfully
She scorned to look, nor made a fuss;
But when they were! All tearfully
She said she'd made A, not A plus!

LUCY J. HALLOCK
Lucy's smile's a smile resplendent,
Lucy's calm is enervating;
But who'd not be independent
With a wave so undulating?

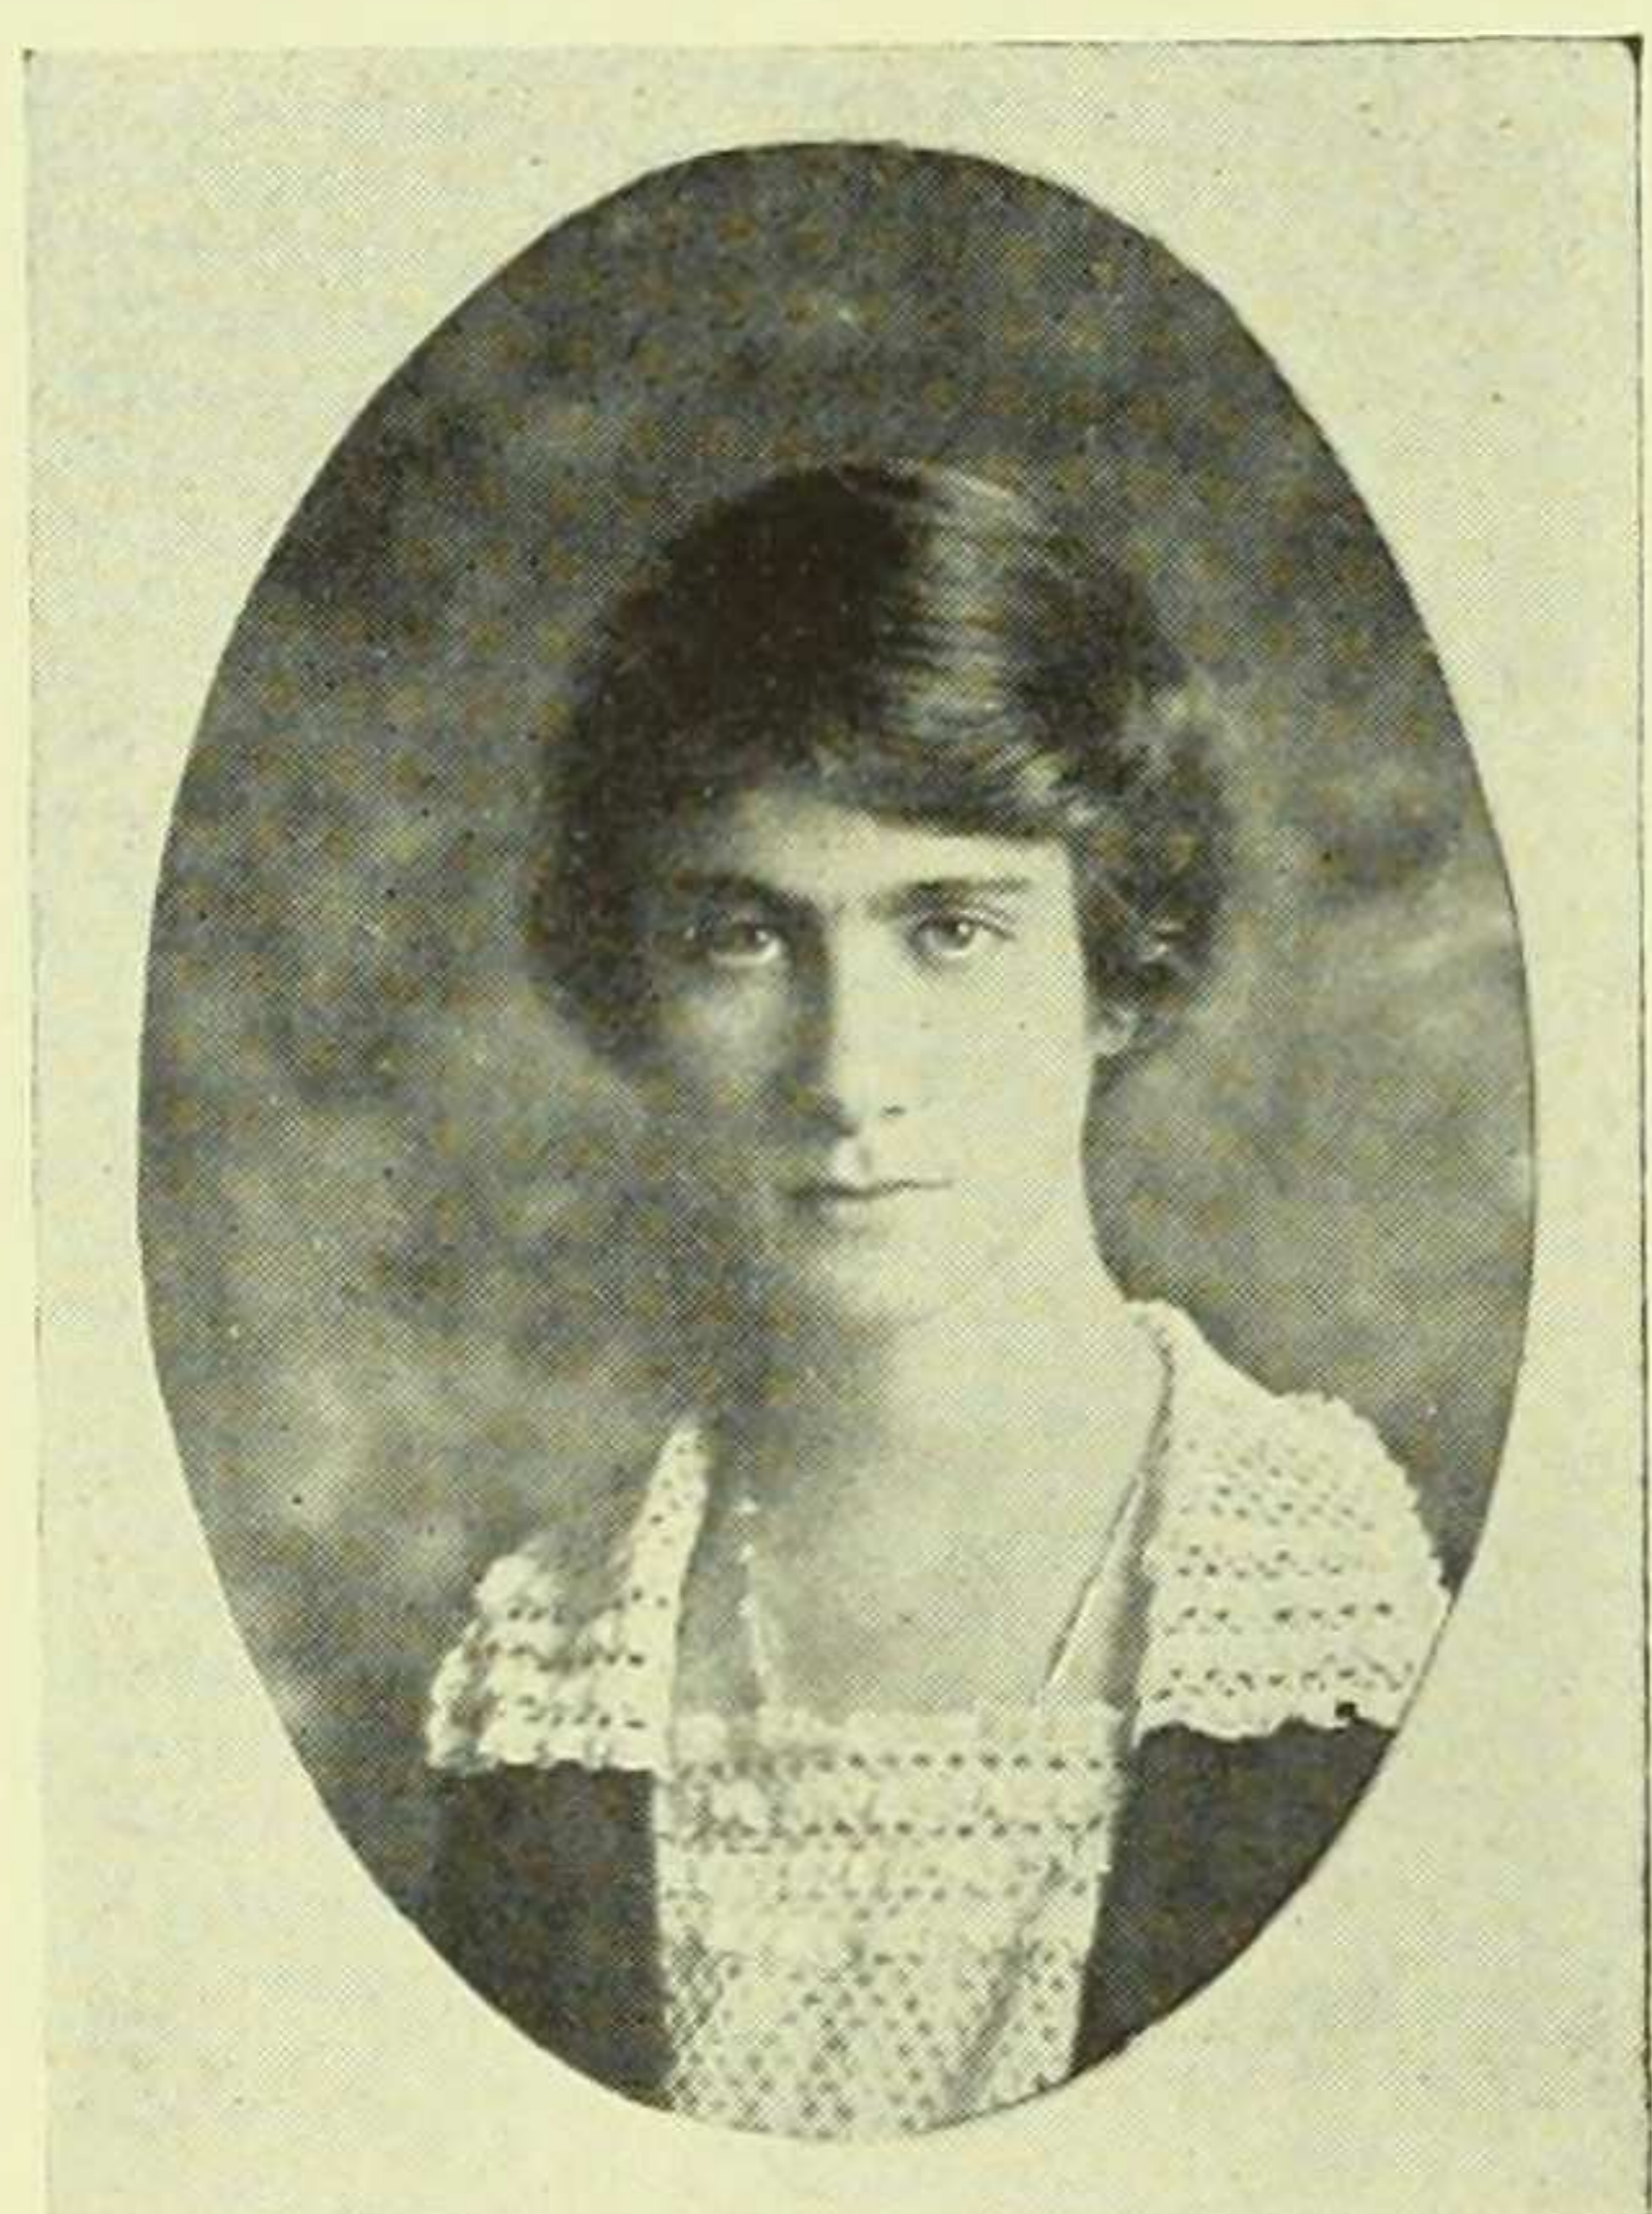

MARION HASKELL

We're afraid M. Haskell,
If we write of her as pretty,
Always sunny, ever witty,
Will declare a rascal
The writer of this ditty.

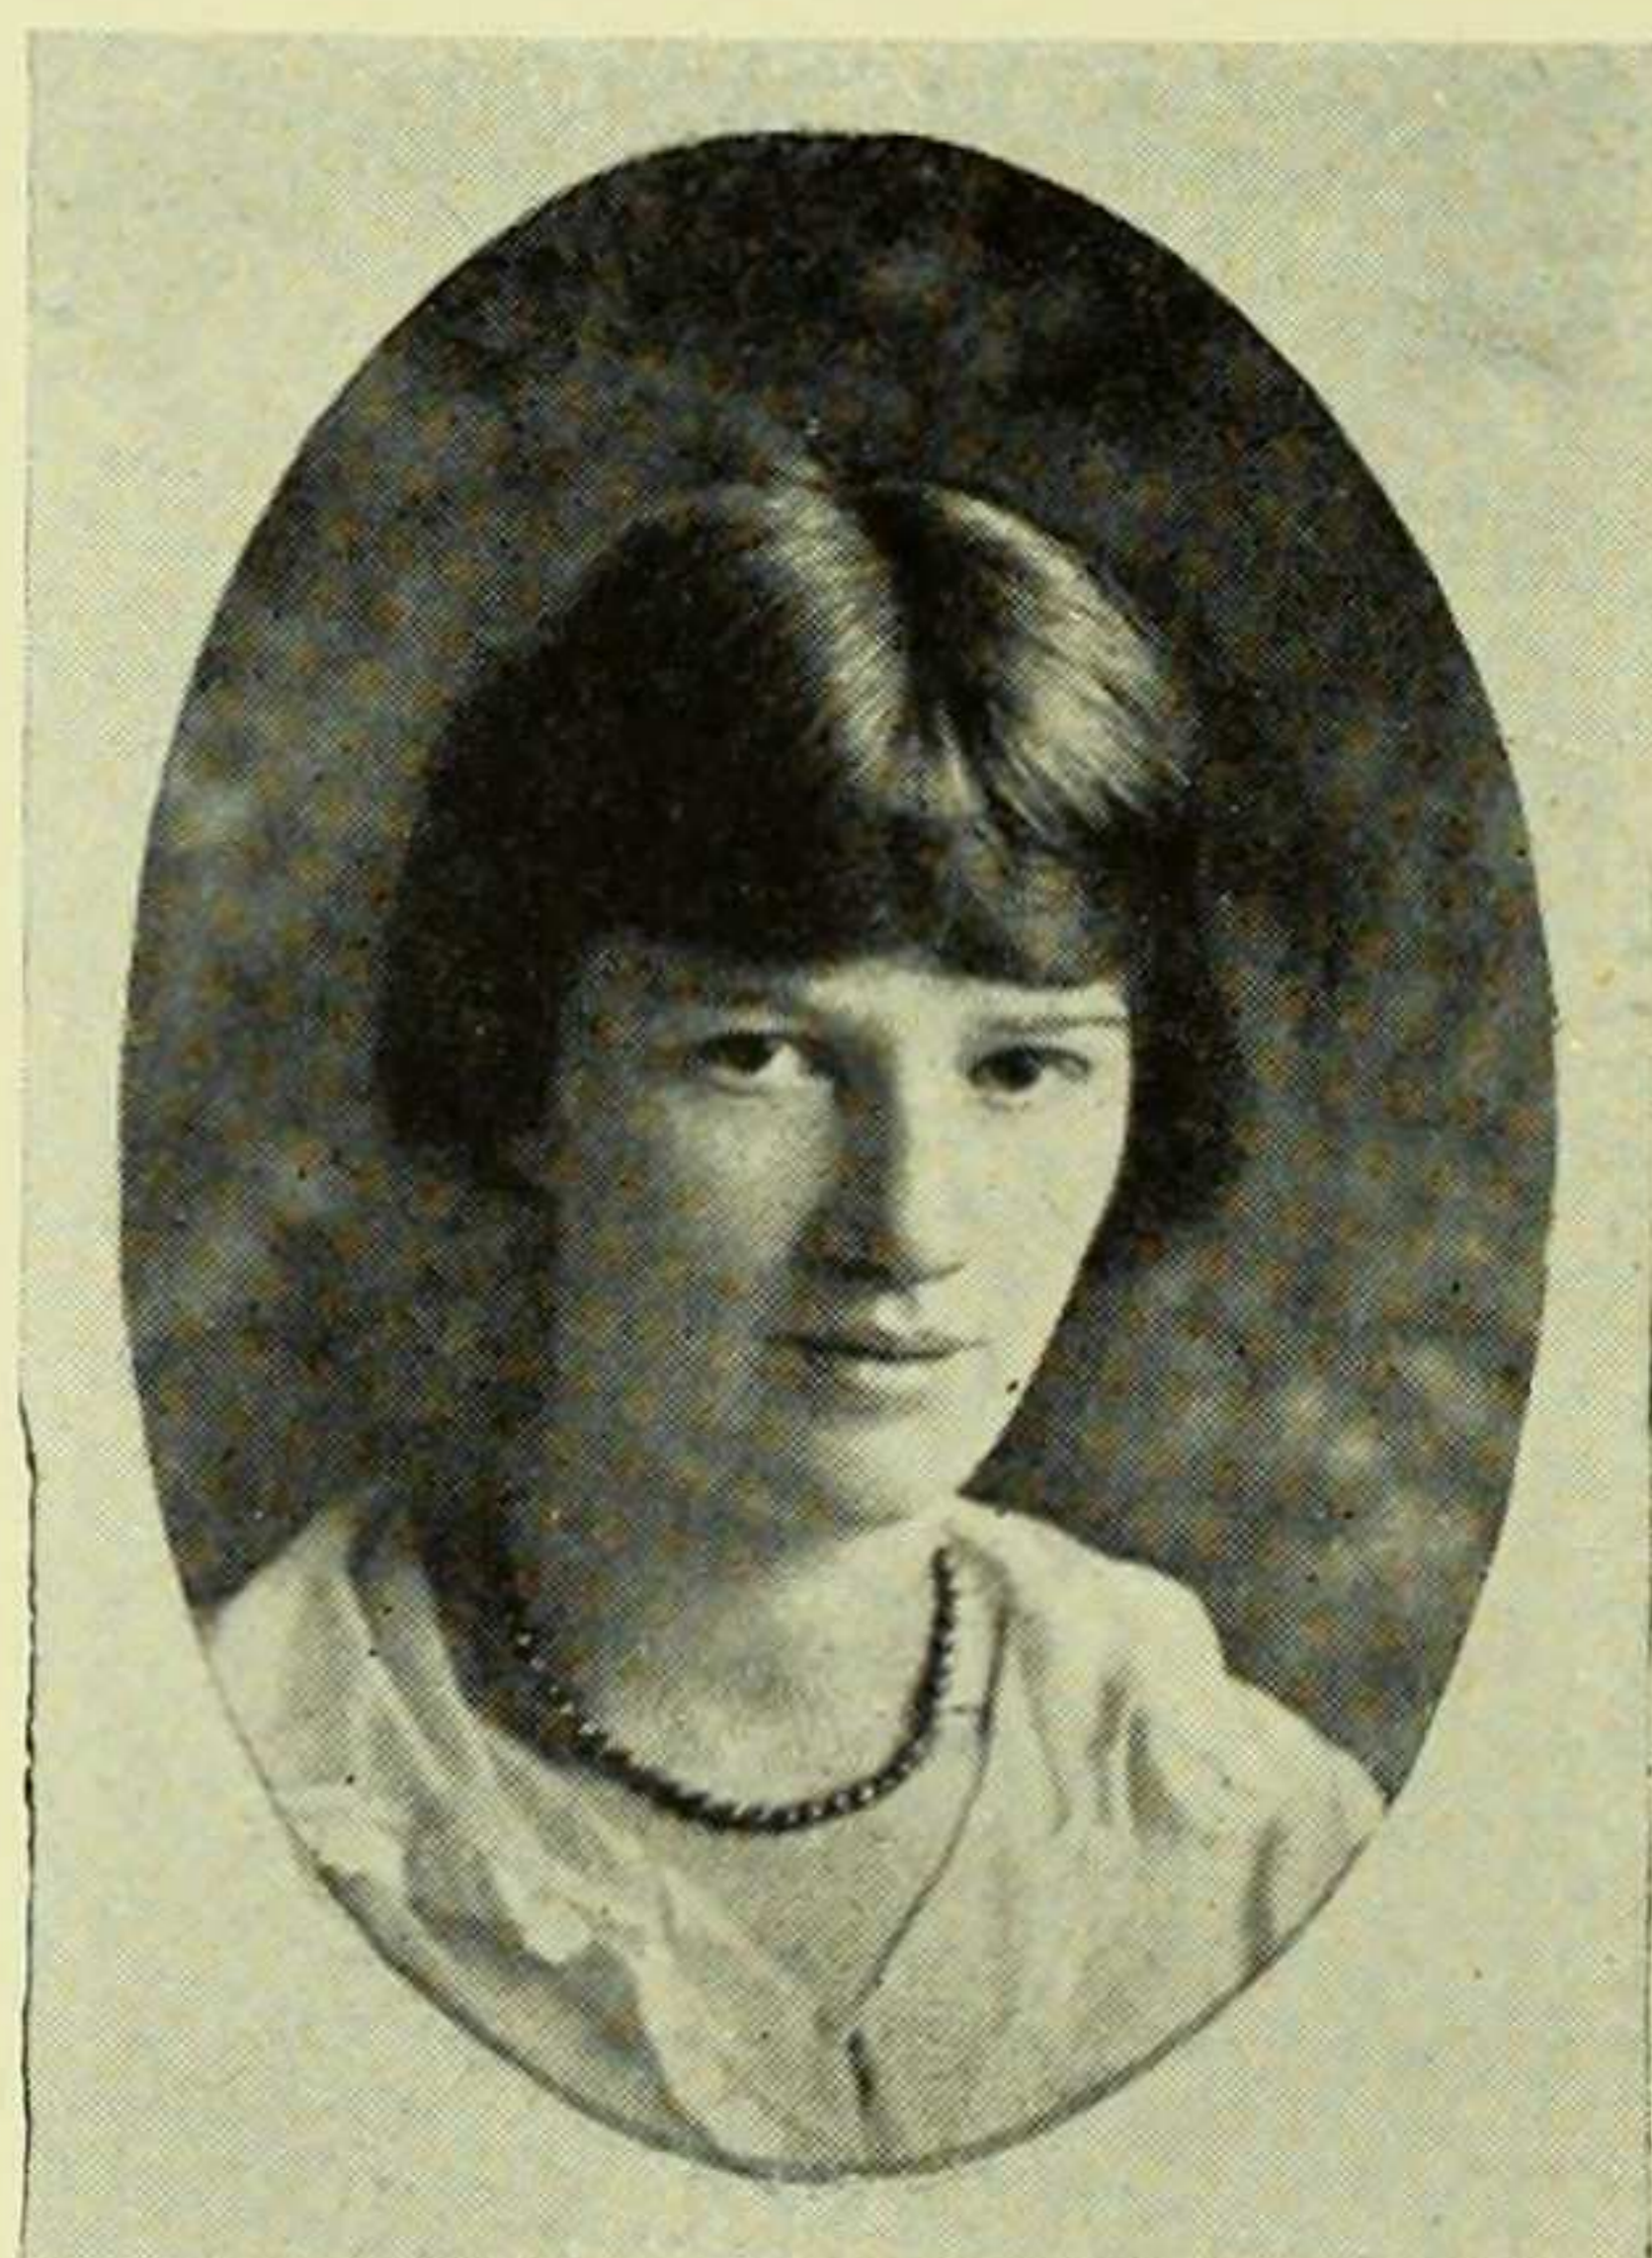

LILLIAN HORN

Lillian's sager
Nature's chronic;
But her major
Is Teutonic.

RHODA H. HESSBURG

It wouldn't take much to induce
her
To act in the role of Medusa;
Her make-up is there
In the strands of her hair,
And she is a staunch Wigs-and-Cueser.

EDITH HUTTON

An M. D. she Aspires to be,
With pills for ills
Of you and me.

AMANDA HOFF

As the sugar
Is to candy,
So is Lilli-
An to Mandy.

MARY A. JENNINGS

Her little friends she fusses
And their childish fancy shatters,
When with gusto she discusses
Very deep religious matters.

RUTH A. JEREMIAH

She's trig and trim and debonnaire,
And wears a net upon her hair,
And has a quaint, old-fashioned air.

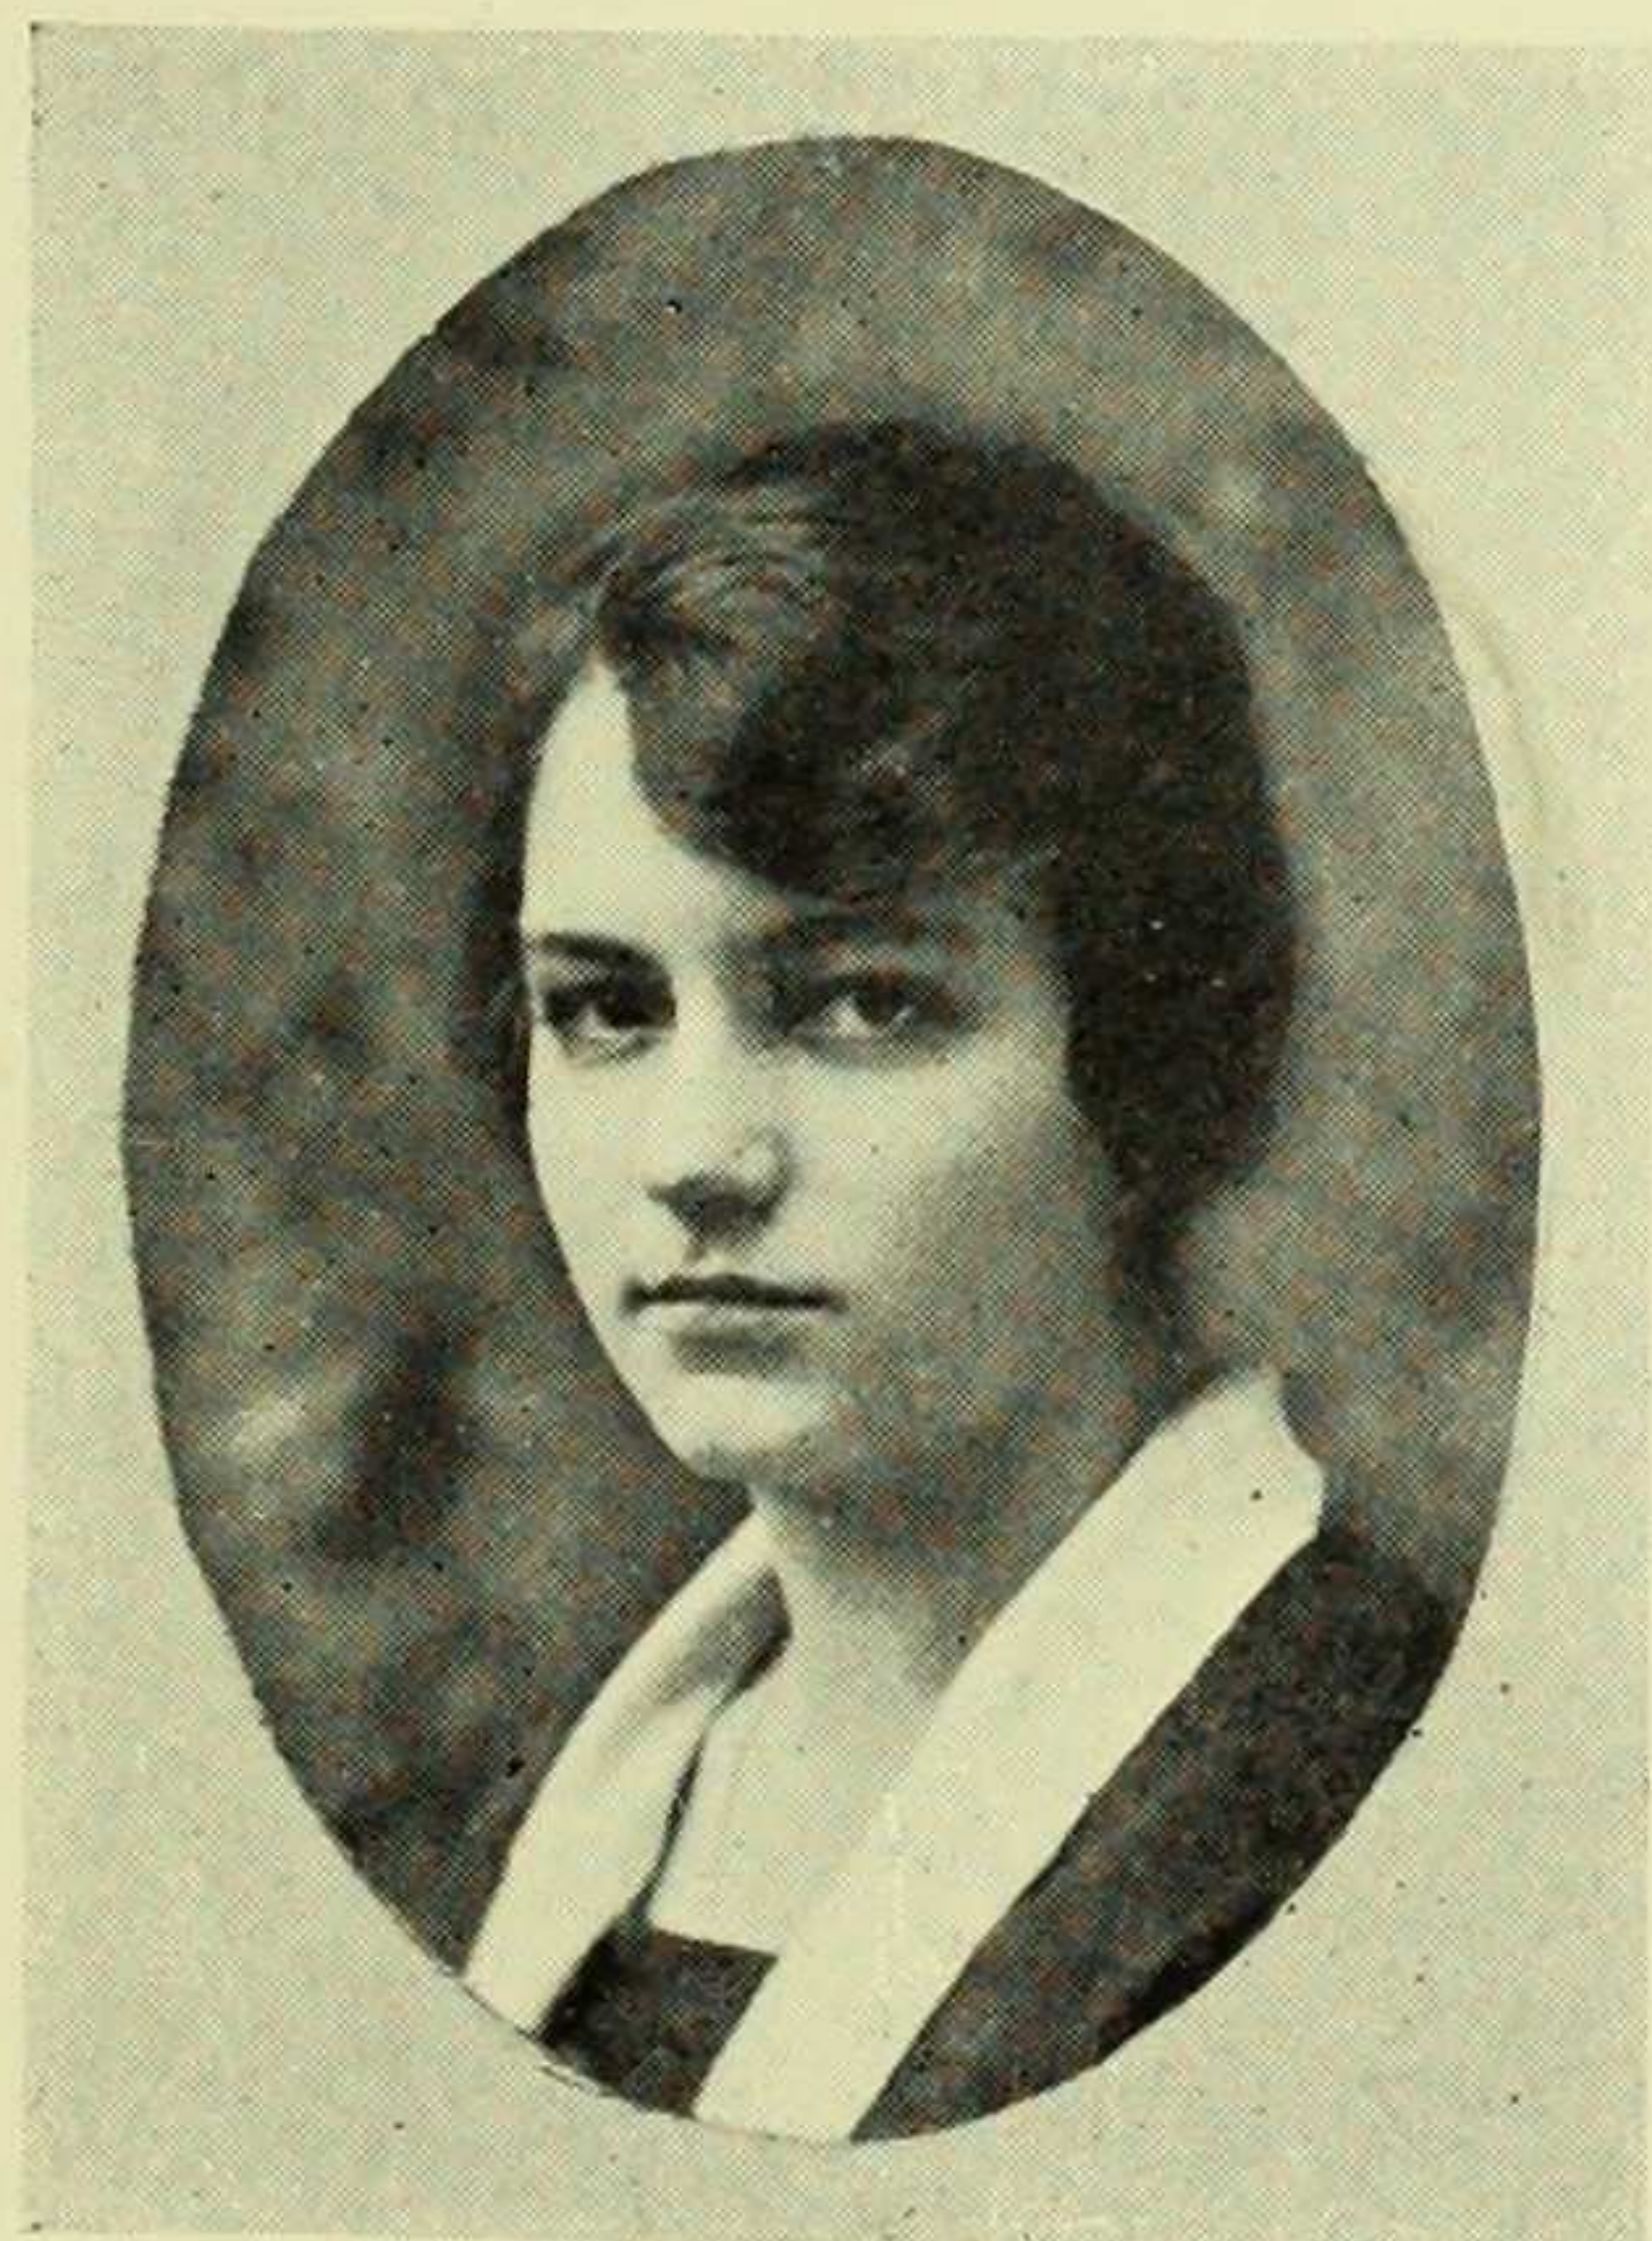

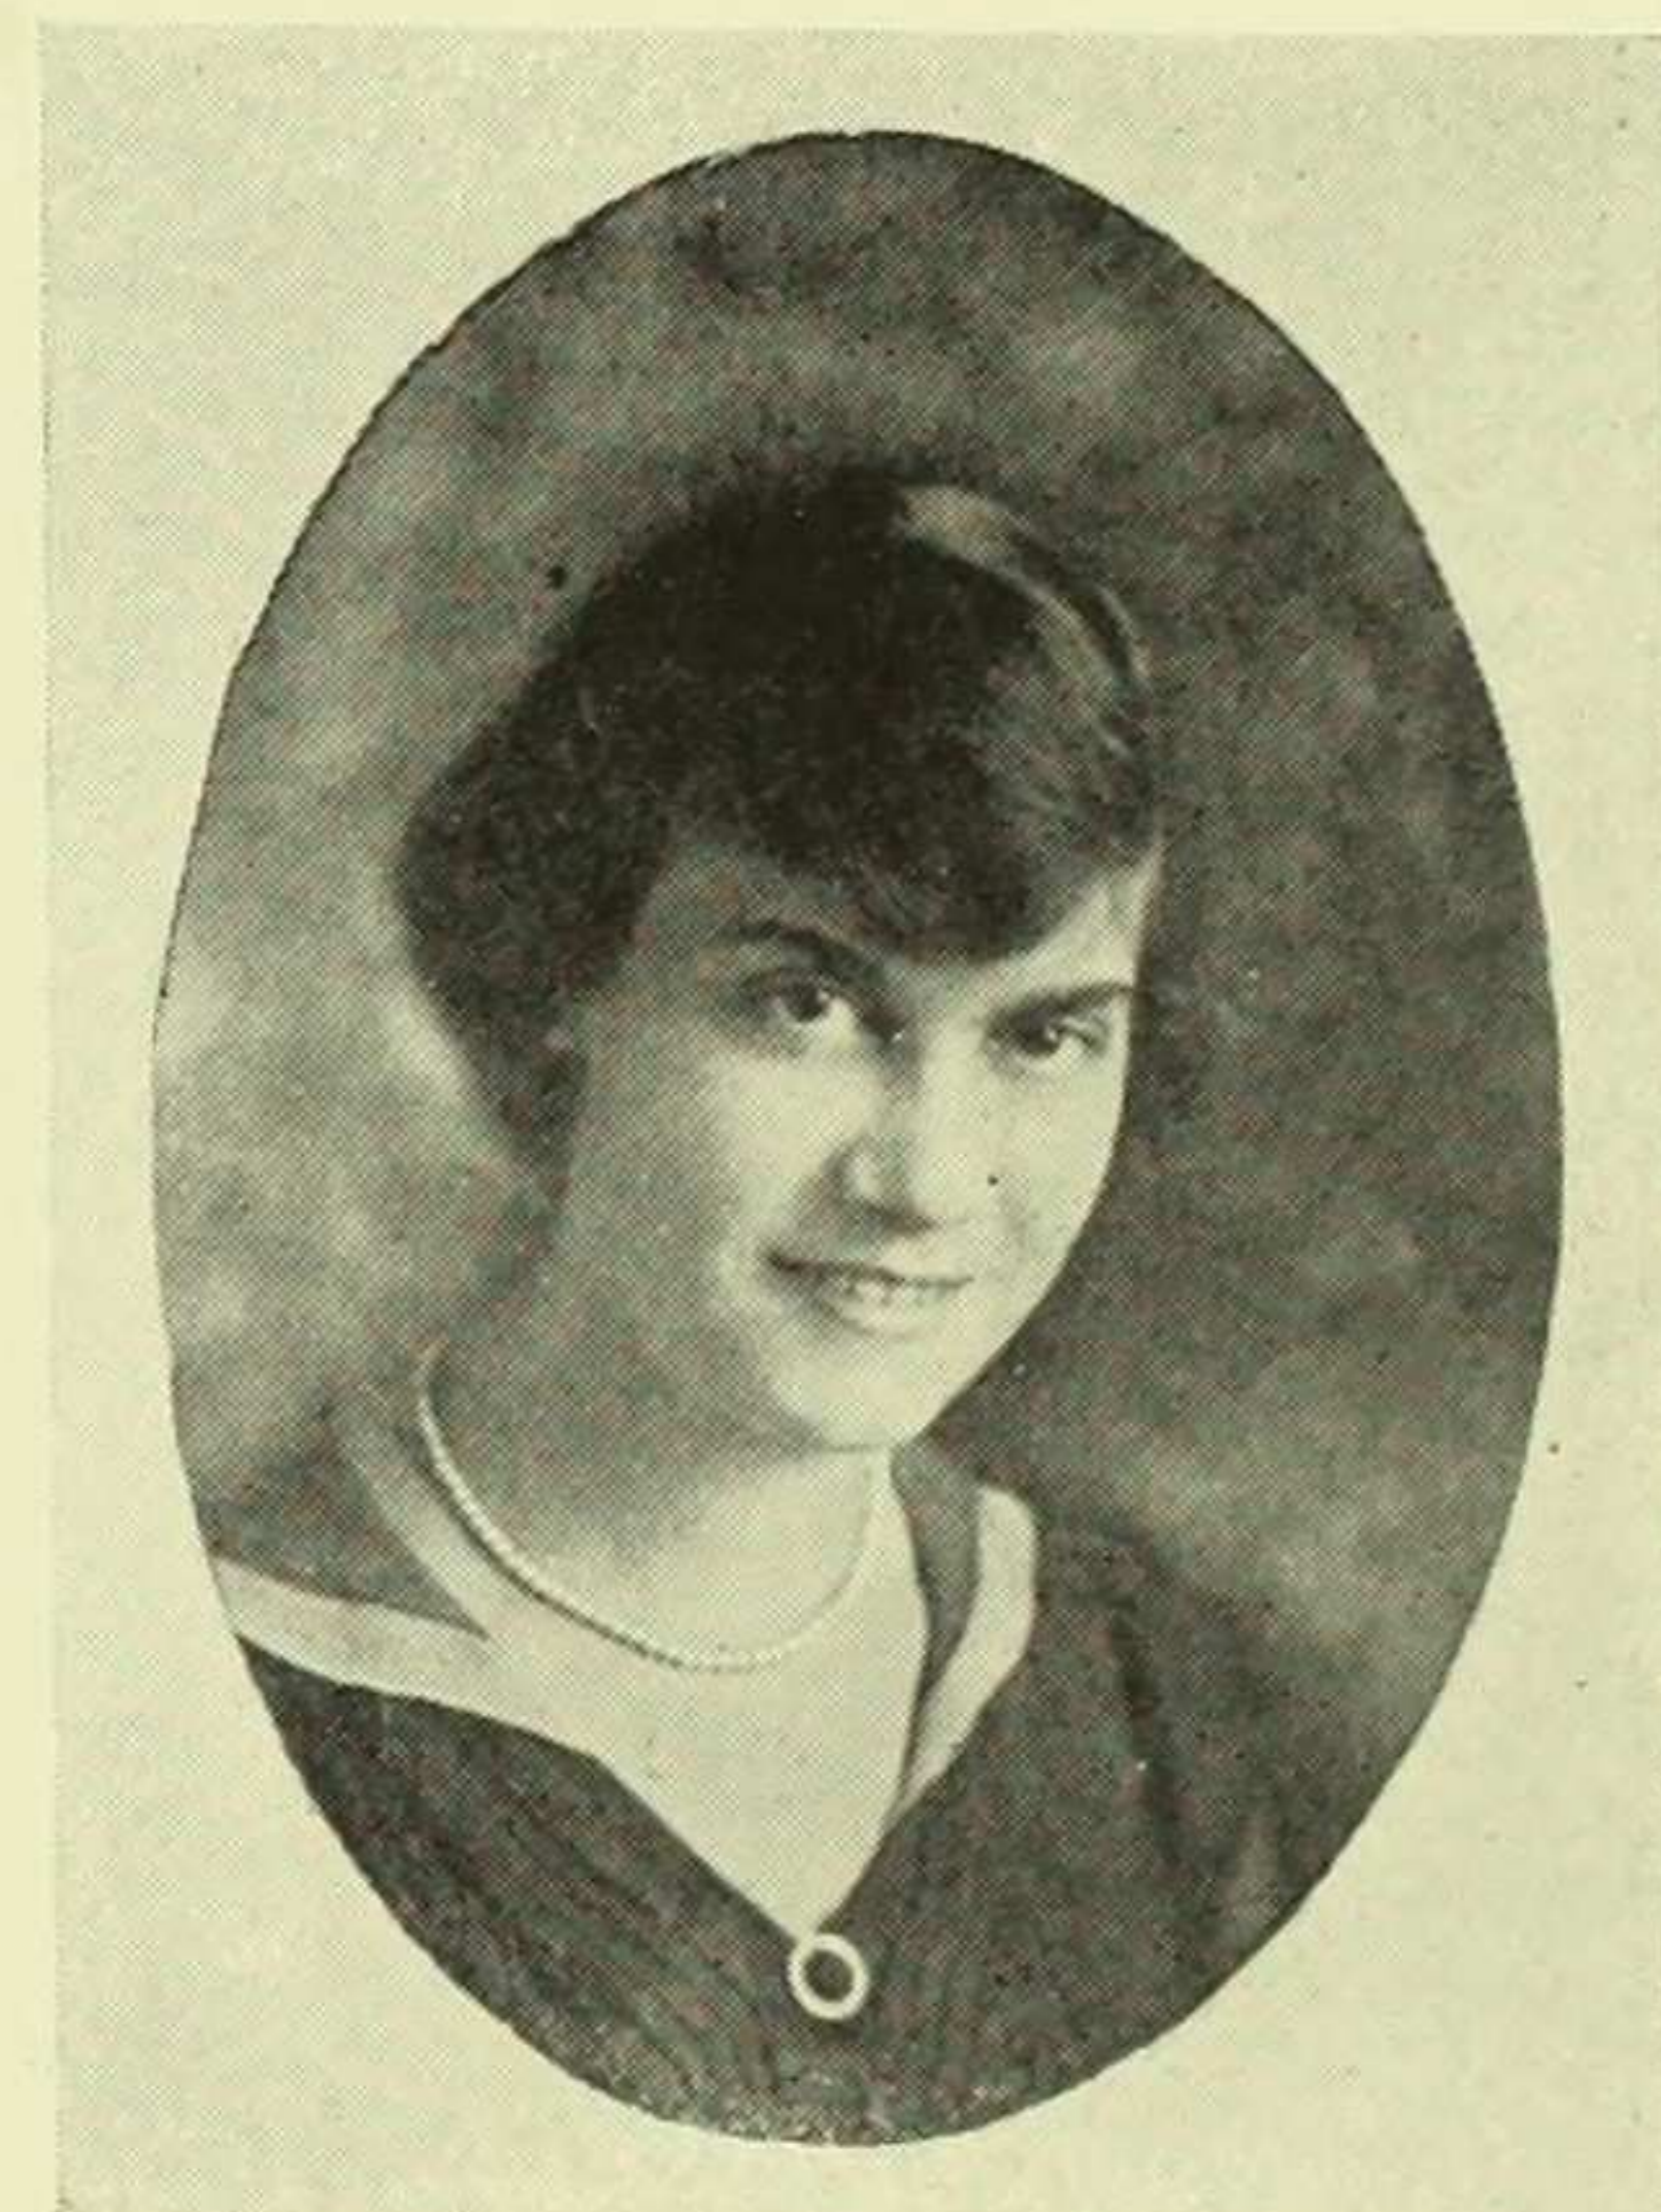

RUTH RUSSELL JONES
Within her cloister, i. e., Brooks,
You'll find her buried in her books;
Alas! The vol. that grips her most
Is called the "Saturday Evening Post."

ALICE JOHNSON

Johnny, please don't be enraged—
We were e'er in search of Truth:
so
Tell us, how can one so aged
Keep her youth so?

BEATRICE ETHEL KAFKA
Bee, with artlessness that's rare,
Is the original questionnaire.

HELEN BROWN JONES

Here is Helen Jones,
The President of us all;
And let us make no bones—
She's square as she is tall.

LAENA ROSENBAUM
KAHN
In her southern drawl we slam
her—
"Ah'm from Selma, Alabama."

DEBORAH KAPLAN

She's one of the few, sincere in their way,
Who say what they mean, and mean what they say.

RUTH HELENE KNEIPER

If you think you must be aged
To be engaged,
Change your mind, for Ruth, 'tis
said,
Soon will wed.

PORTIA KELLOGG

Which, we ask, her favorite namesake—
Shakespeare's character, or corn-flake?

ELEANOR KOHN

She, each classmate understands, is
The most loyal girl we've seen,
For the ink upon her hands is Always green.

SARAH KITAY

She throws herself right into
The spirit of a thing,
And no one can begin to Surpass her fiddle-ing.

DOROTHY KOHNSTAMM

We remember Greek Games supper
Long ago,
And we're sorry Dotty Kohnstamm
Had to go.

LILLIAN MILDRED
LUHRMAN

Lillian's bent on emphasizing
Every kind of calamity.
This is really not surprising—
She commutes from Jersey City.

RUTH LAZAR

A lot of compliments there are
That we could give to Ruth Lazar.
To write them in we do not dare.
'Twould make her rise to see them there.

MILDRED MABIE

Is there anything sublimer
(Here the argument grows hot)
Than Chem. 5-6 à la Reimer?
Maybe so and maybe not.

DOROTHY ALINE LIND

Here's mathematical ability
Combined with running track ability.
You'd have to search through all creation
To find a better combination.

GERTRUDE MANNHARDT

Once so young and blameless, she—
Modest as a maid should be—(Weep, ye—for the tale divinely sad is!)

Now she corrugates her locks!
Buys La Dorine—by the box!
Why? 'Tis very plain. She lives with Gladys.

VIRGINIA LITTAUER

Jinny, with your shortened tress,
Smile, and fairy lissome-ness;
Penchant, too, for Pekin blue—
You're the perfect ingenue.

GERTRUDE ELIZABETH
MANNIS

With pains and care
She draws her hair
From off her brow of alabaster;
The author fears
'Twould take her years,
Such skill in dressing hair to master.

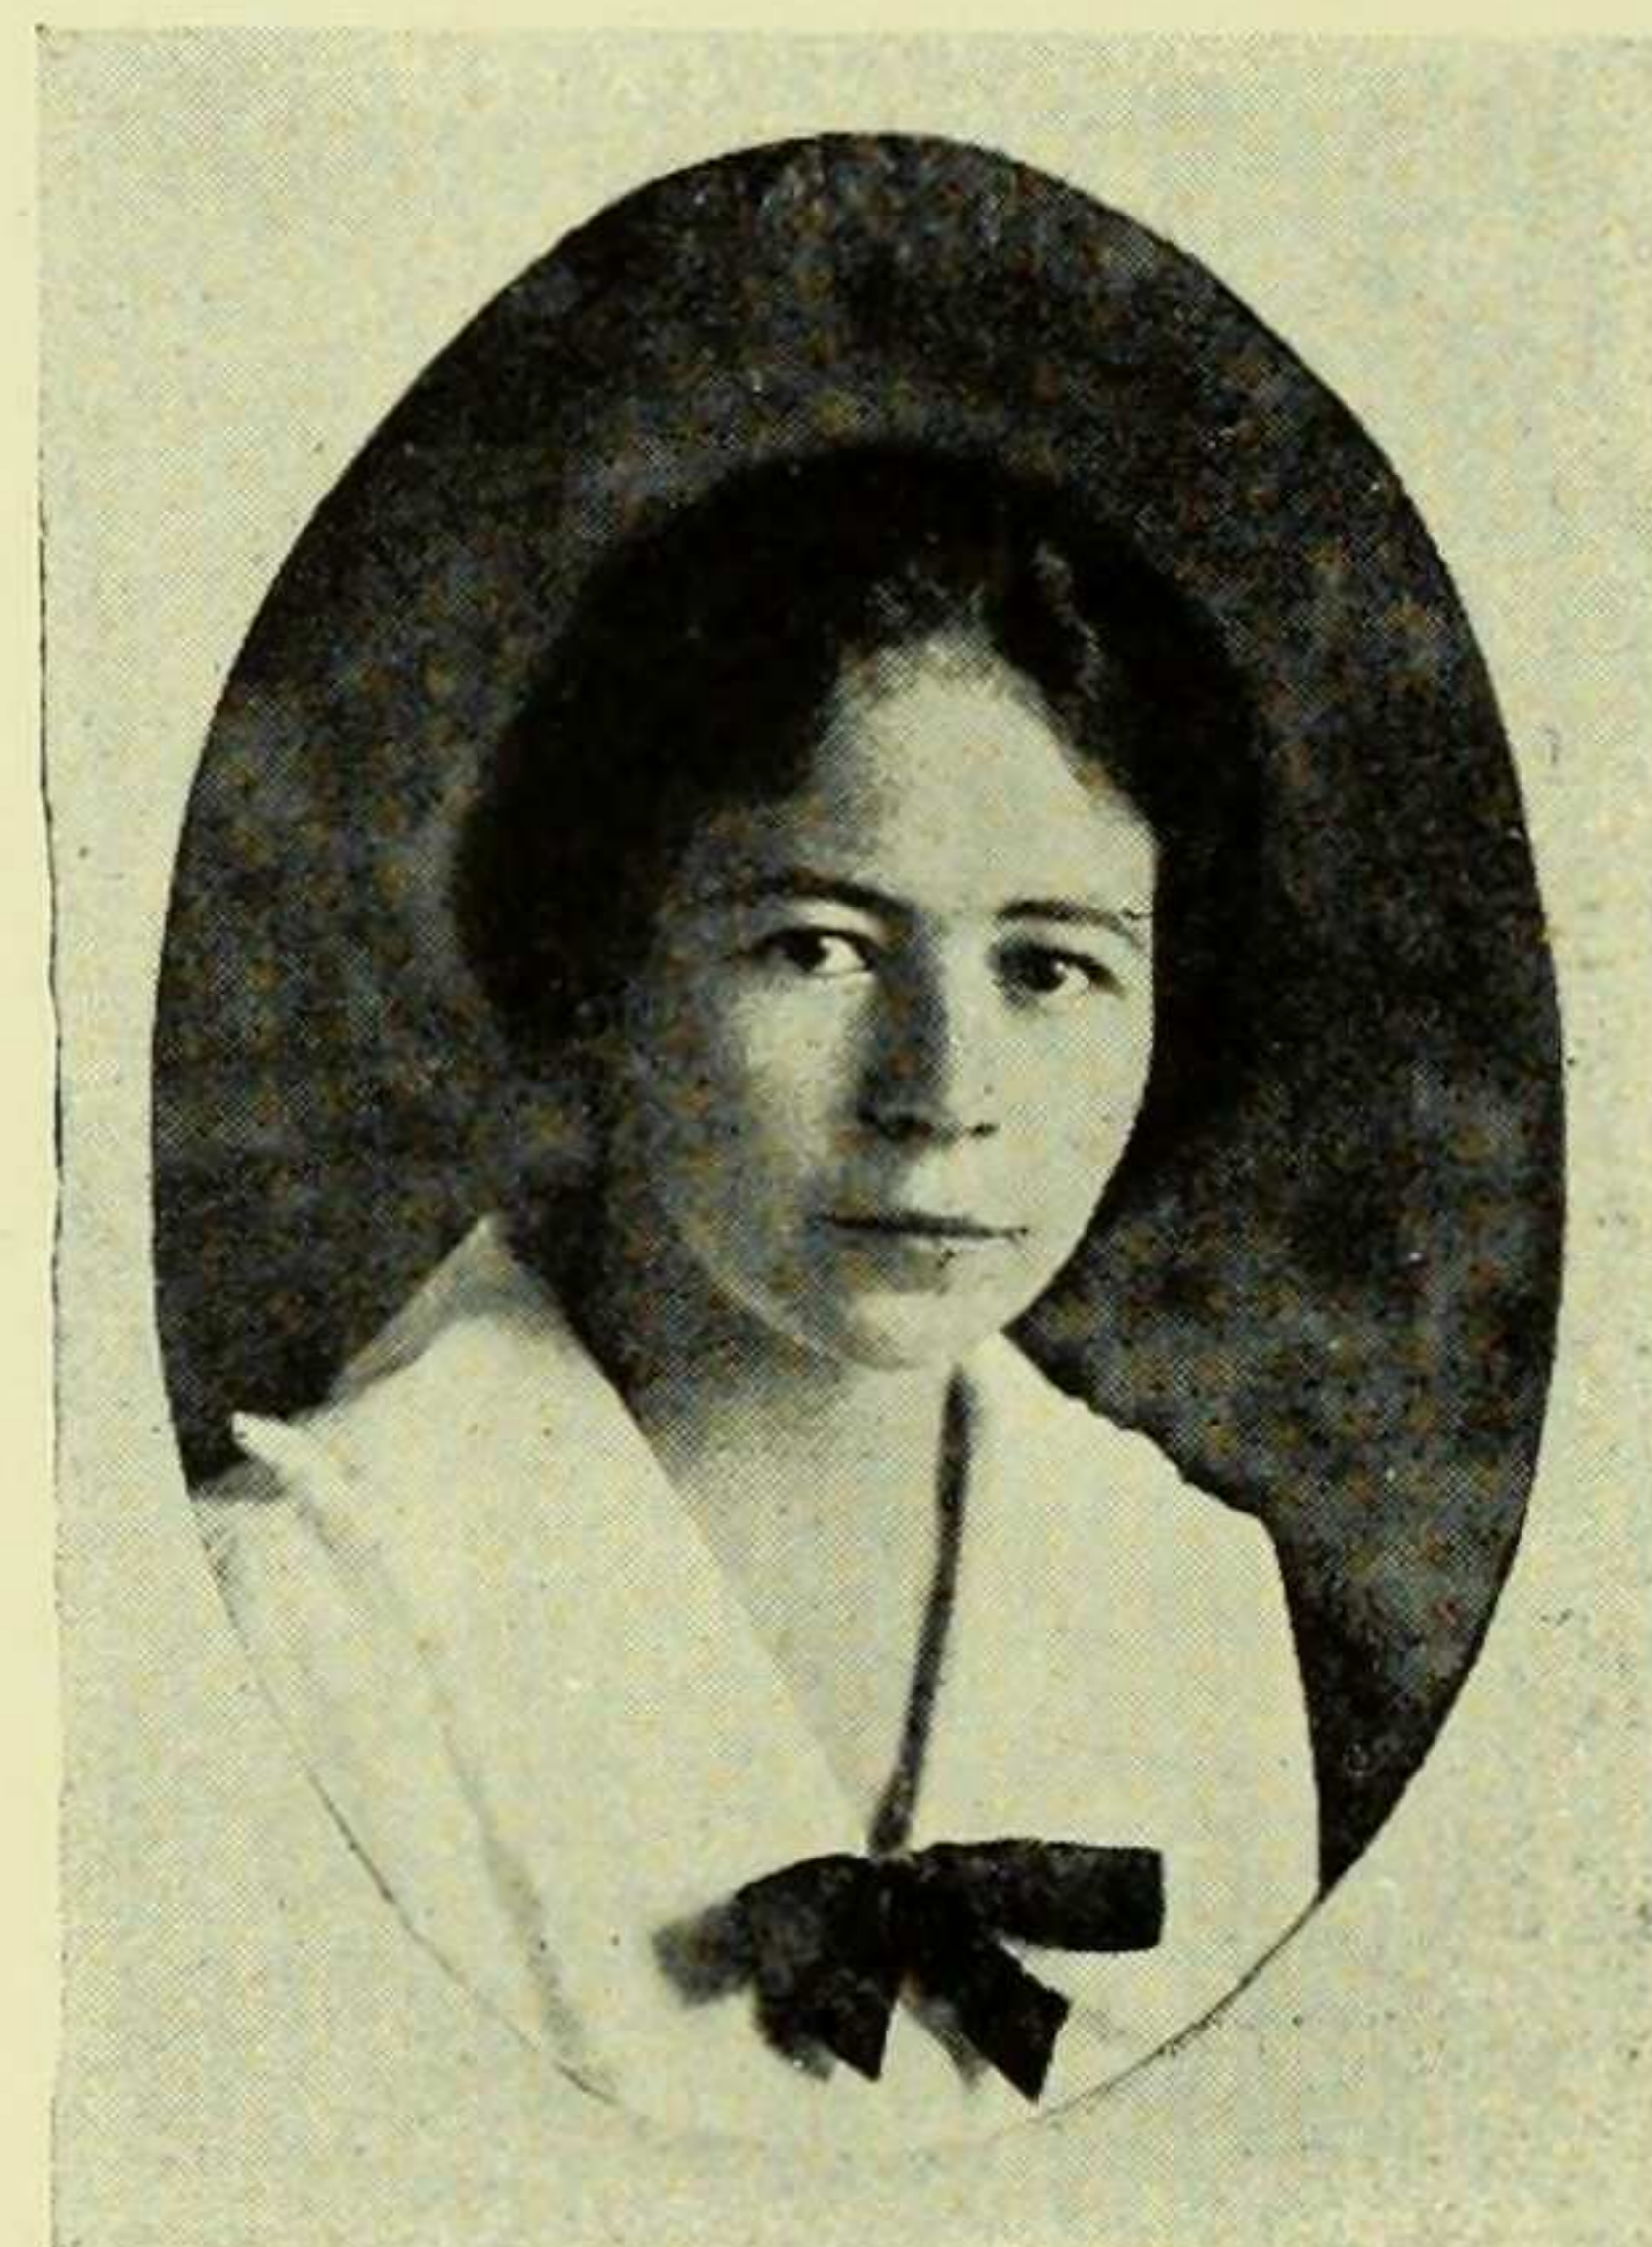

HELEN MAUCH

We're convinced that in her place, man
Couldn't make a better baseman.
One thing more we'll say and that's—
You should see her when she bats!

MARJORIE CECILE MARKS

Very neat and systematic? Yes, she is!
And at all this "clever writing"
she's a wiz.
You can see the childish glee shine from her phiz
When she scatters Greek quotations through a quiz.

ISABEL MARGUERITE
MAUGER

She considers you an ogre
If perchance you call her Mauger.
Moral: If you'd not enrage her,
Call her Mauger.

FRANCES KNOCHE
MARLATT

Her nature's very stable.
Her work is dependable.
And she is great
In a debate.
In other words, she's able.

ELIZABETH B. MAYER

You should hear her classmates holler
When she sports a mannish collar
Can it be that taking Psych.
Makes her seem so business-like?

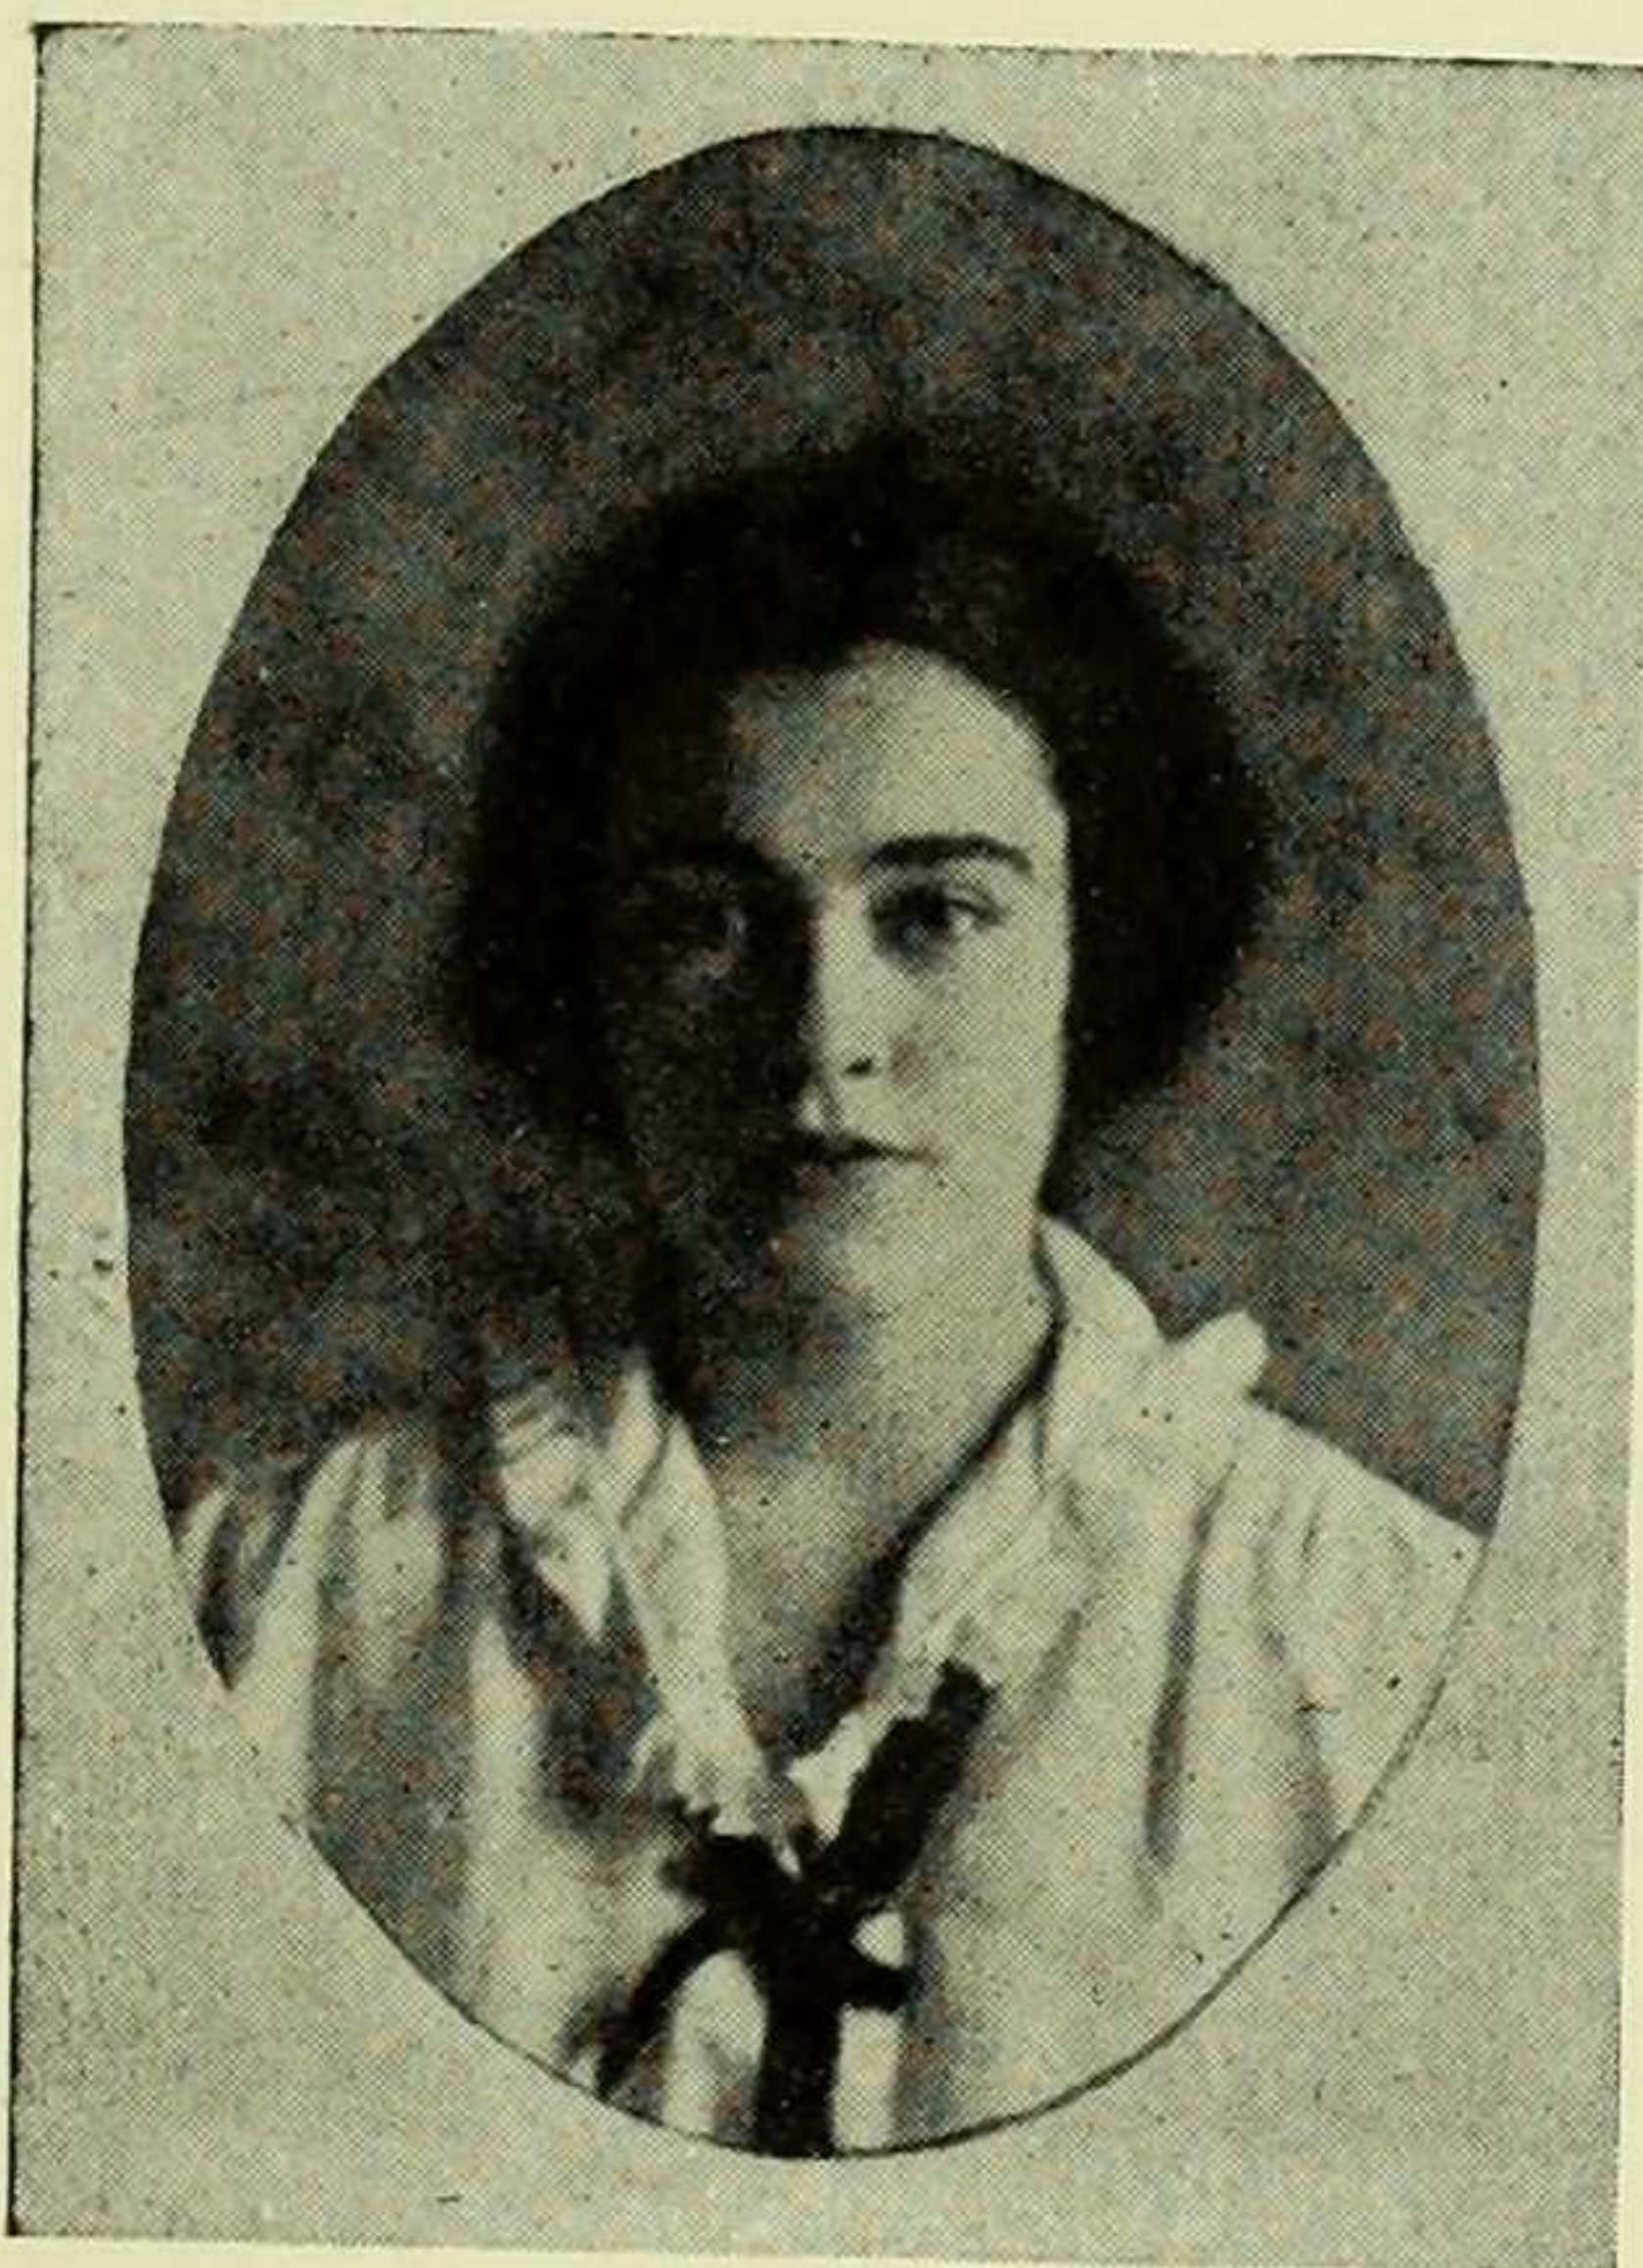

MARIE ROSE MAYER

A combination, so they say,
Of the naïve, and the blasé.

HELEN MUHLFELD

Her nature's very gentle,
And slightly temperamental.
In class she sits
And sketches bits
Of pictures ornamental.

MARGARET MONTGOMERY

We never saw a girl so calm,
So very;
Or dignified as Margaret Montgom-Ery.

EMMA THOMSON NEALE

She's very, very quiet
And has never raised a riot.
And nobody in Barnard College
Ever would deny it.

LORETTA MOORE

If you have a grief or woe
To Loretta you must go;
She will soothe your woe or grief
And provide a quick relief.

HORTENSE NEUMAN

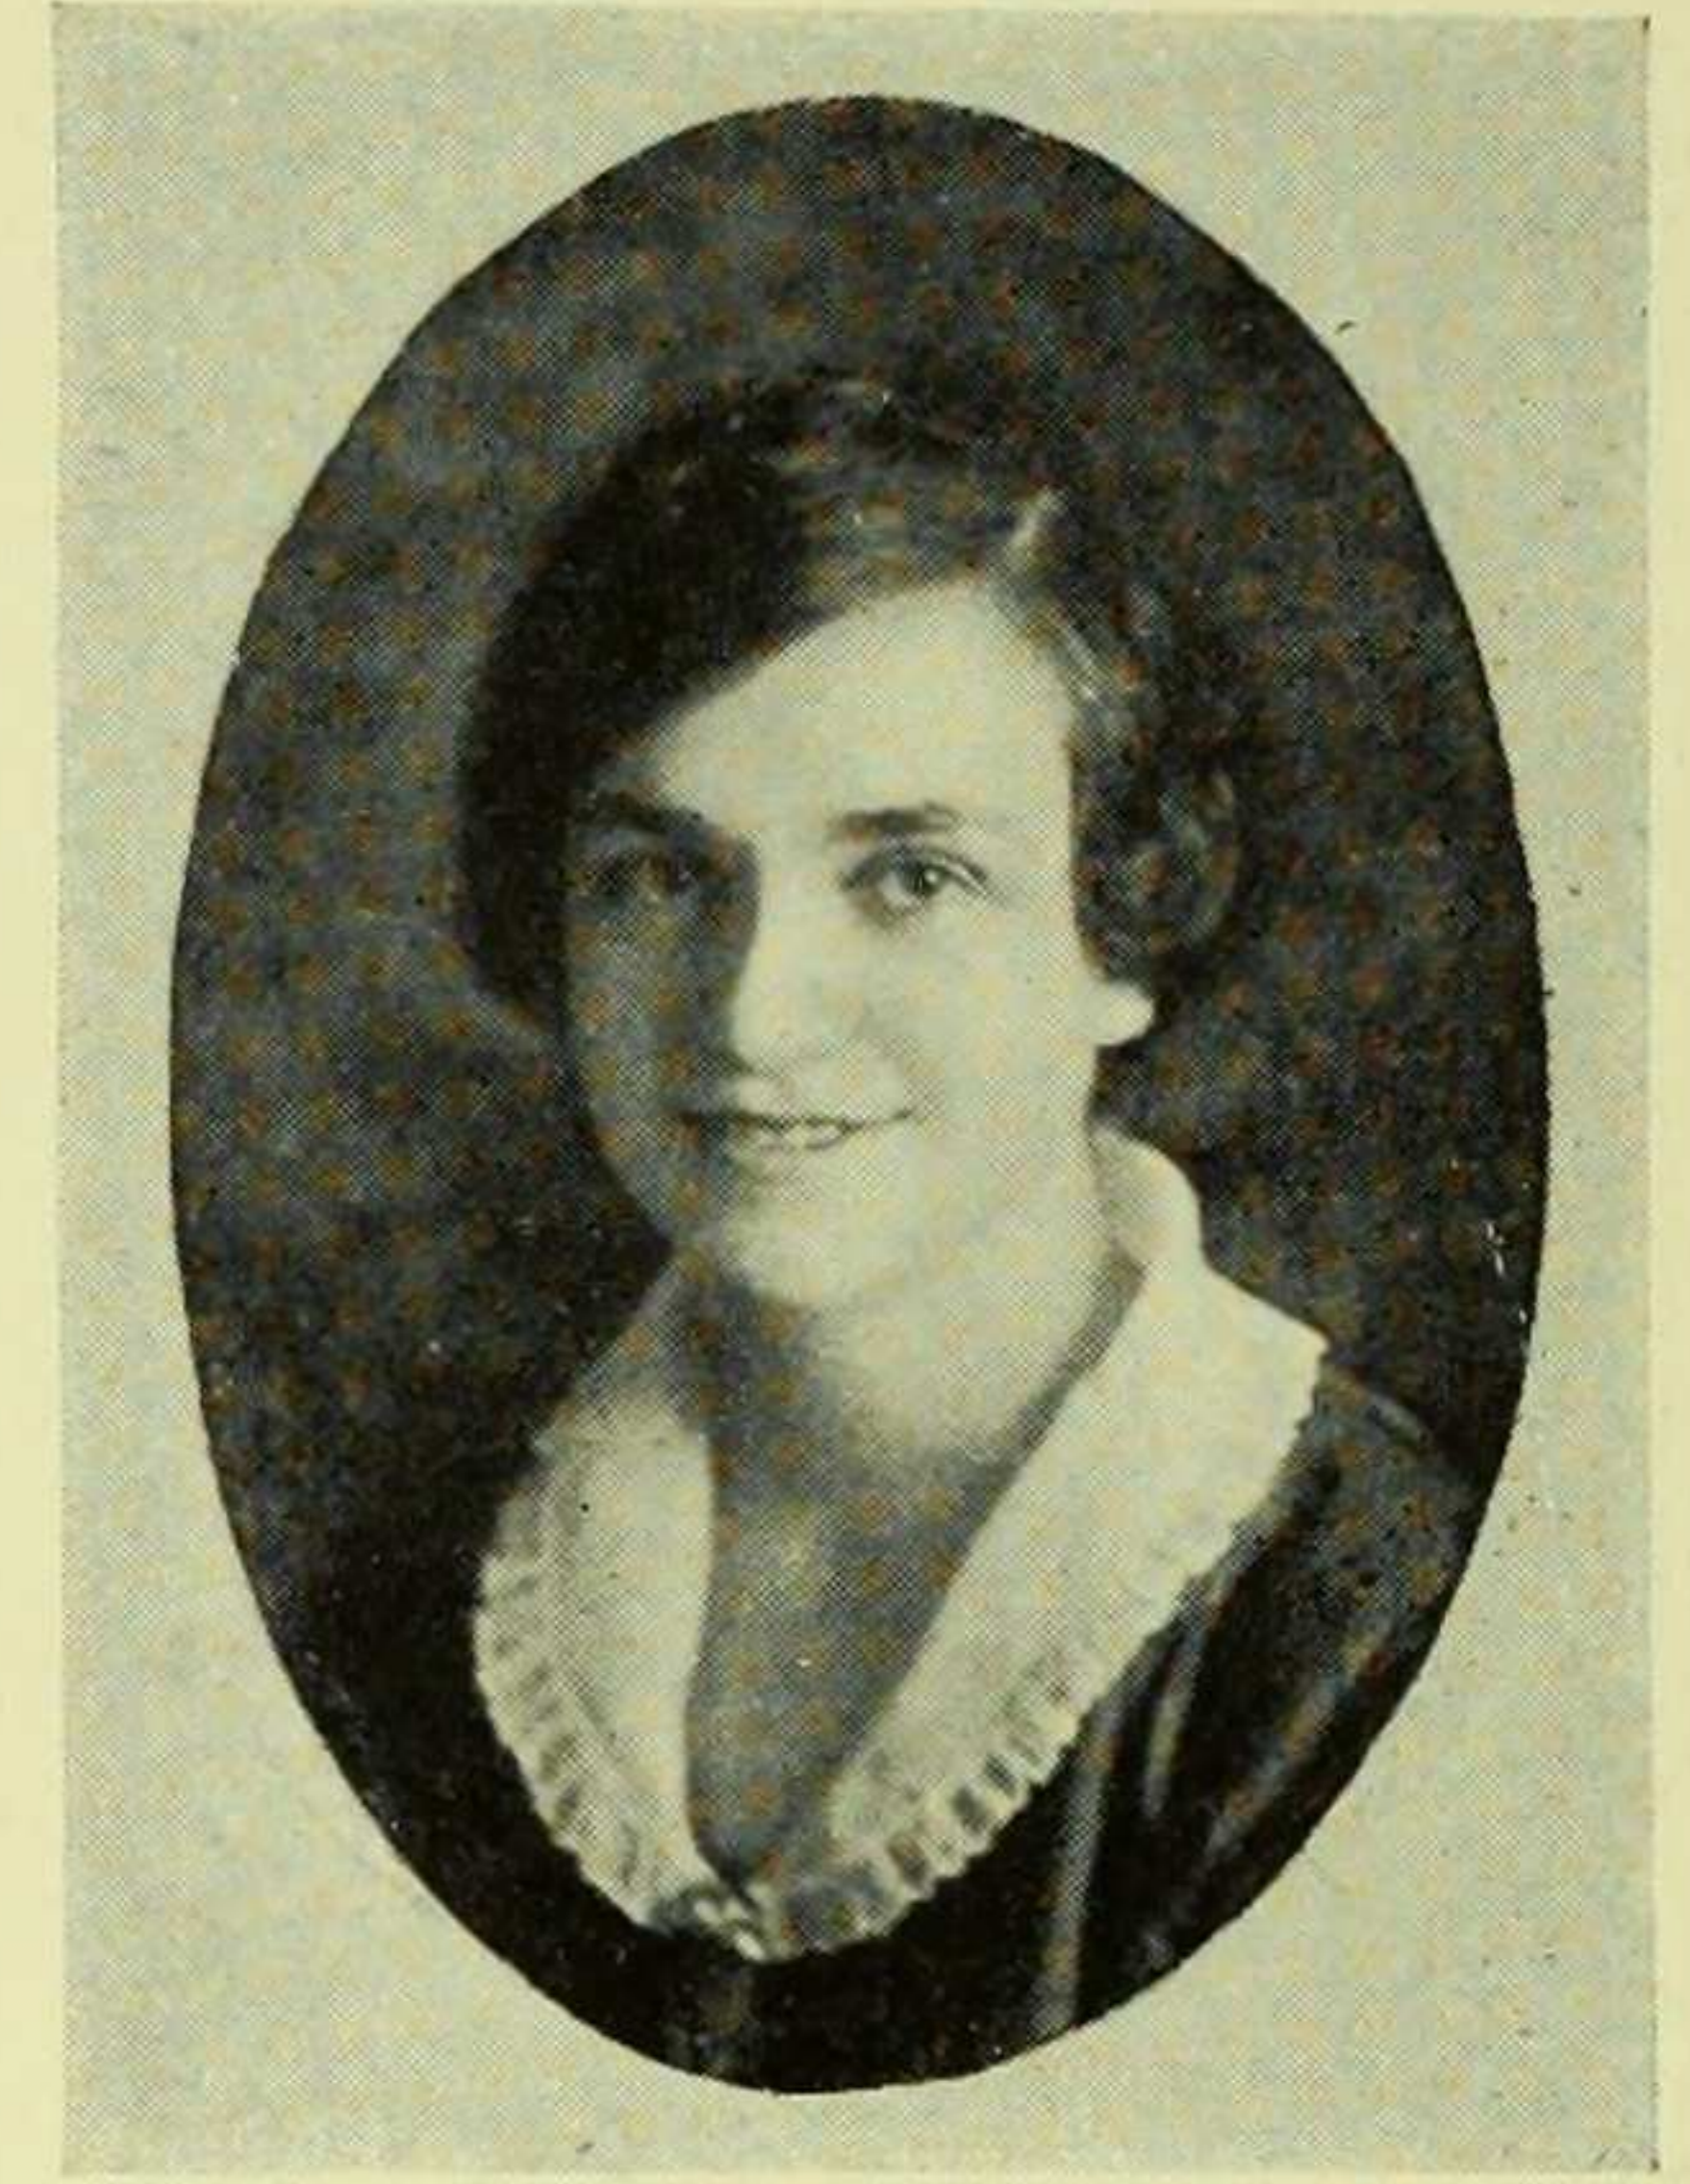

The point is this—she's very square
(Though not a Cubist schooler);
Her line is Math., her talent's rare
At diagrams circular.

MADELEINE GERTRUDE
NEUMANN

"Class butterfly?" we heard her say.
"But, my dear, I'm quite passé."
We look at him with envying eyes.
Would we were passé butterflies!

KATRINA PENN

Bubbling little bits of Southern wit,
Neither testy nor sarcastic, not a bit.

RUTH PATERSON

To heights unthinkable she's stepped;
Ambitious she, and college-y,
For Patty's very special dept.
Is Classical Philology.

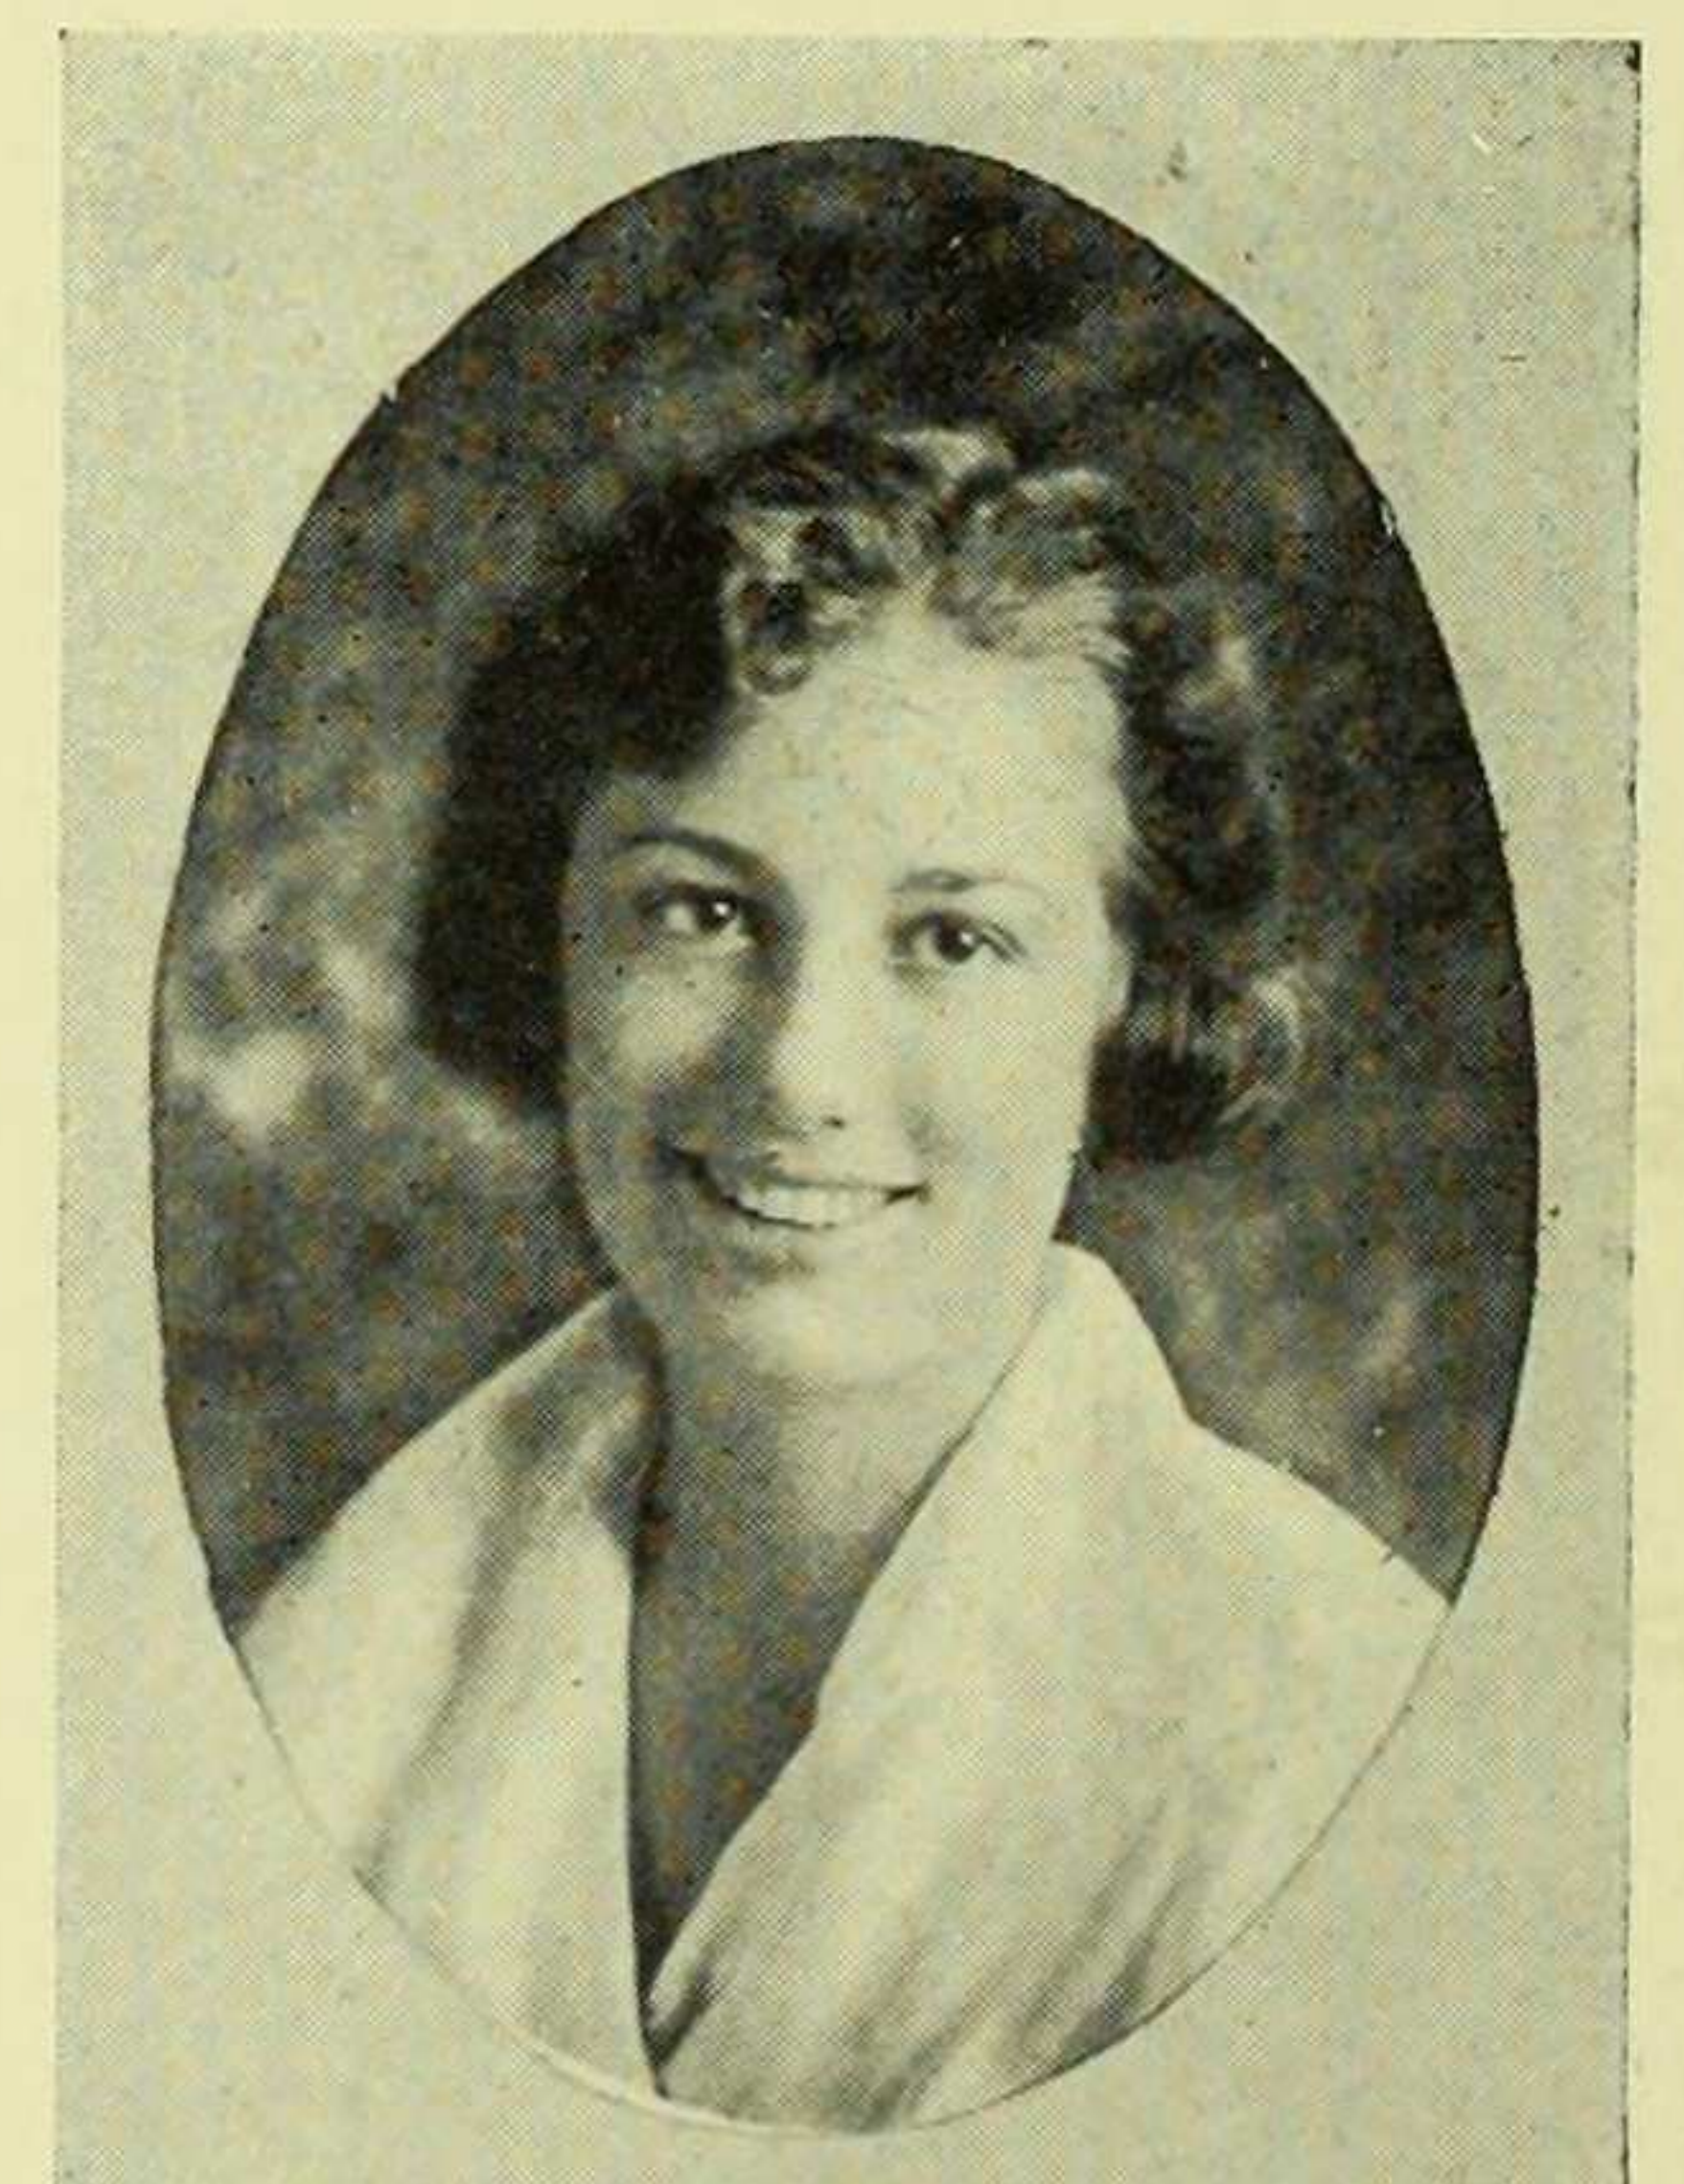

MILDRED CLAIRE
PETERSON

In gym. class Mildred climbs the ropes,
Like her anthropoidal fathers.
About her marks, she vaguely hopes,
But, then, she really never bothers.

SUZANNE A. PAYTON

She studies Woman in the Home,
And subjects equally entrancin'.
To gym. she tears, and doubtless wears
That precious woolen scarf to dance in.

MARION EMILY PETERS

Says Marion Peters
While dropping a tear,
Life's not so complete as
When Sticky was here.

GERTRUDE MARJORIE
PHILLIPS

When Marjorie P. is seen in tears
She's not as sad as she appears,
For you will know, if you are wise,
'Tis laughter makes her wipe her eyes.

ETHEL RAMAGE

Ethel Ramage, Ethel Ramage,
Do your Southern-ness no damage;
Your warm Southern heart you've lost
To a girl whose name is Frost.

PHYLLIS MARIE
PICKHARDT

With a lunge, she tries a plunge,
Nothing seems to drown her.
She can do a jack-knife, too,
With a hair-net crown her.

DOROTHÉ REICHHARD

She tackles little things like track
And Field Day last November;
For Dorothé of old A. A.
Is quite the staunchest member.

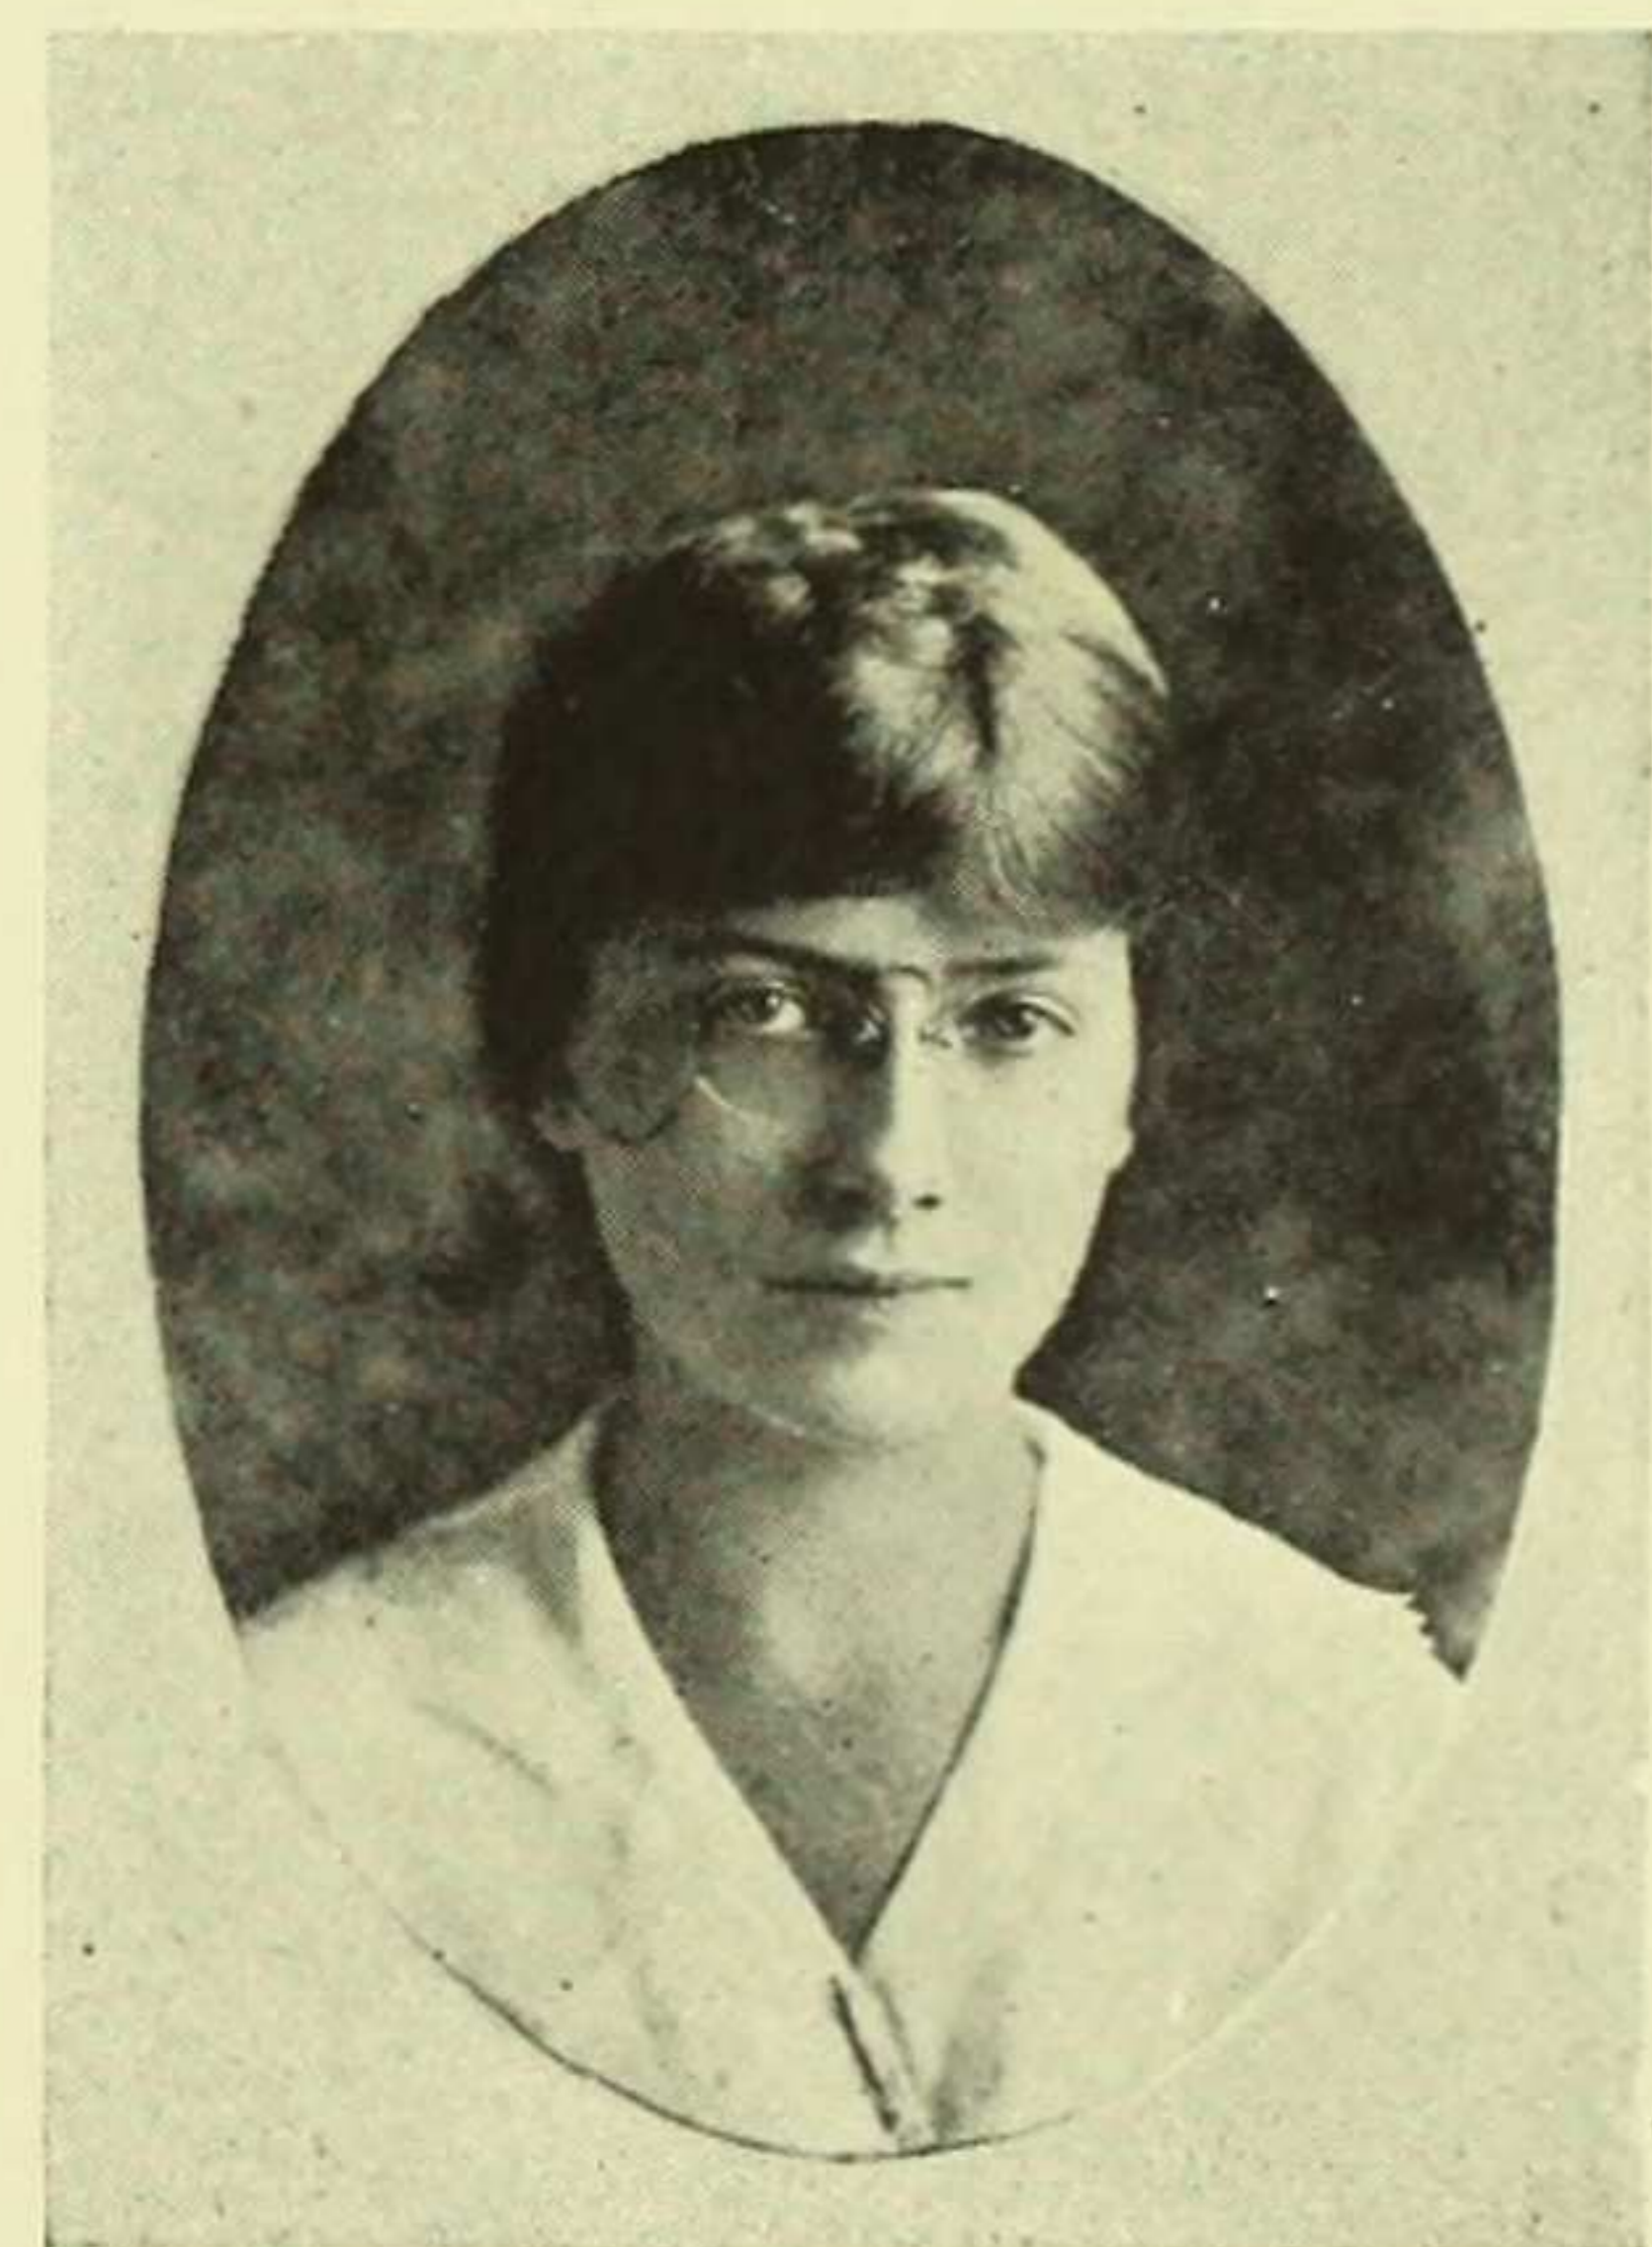

IRMA REYNOLDS

Though confining be the task,
She'll do anything you ask;
Makes no fuss or false palaver—
Twenty-One's in luck to have her.

MAGDALENA LEHMAN
PINDAR

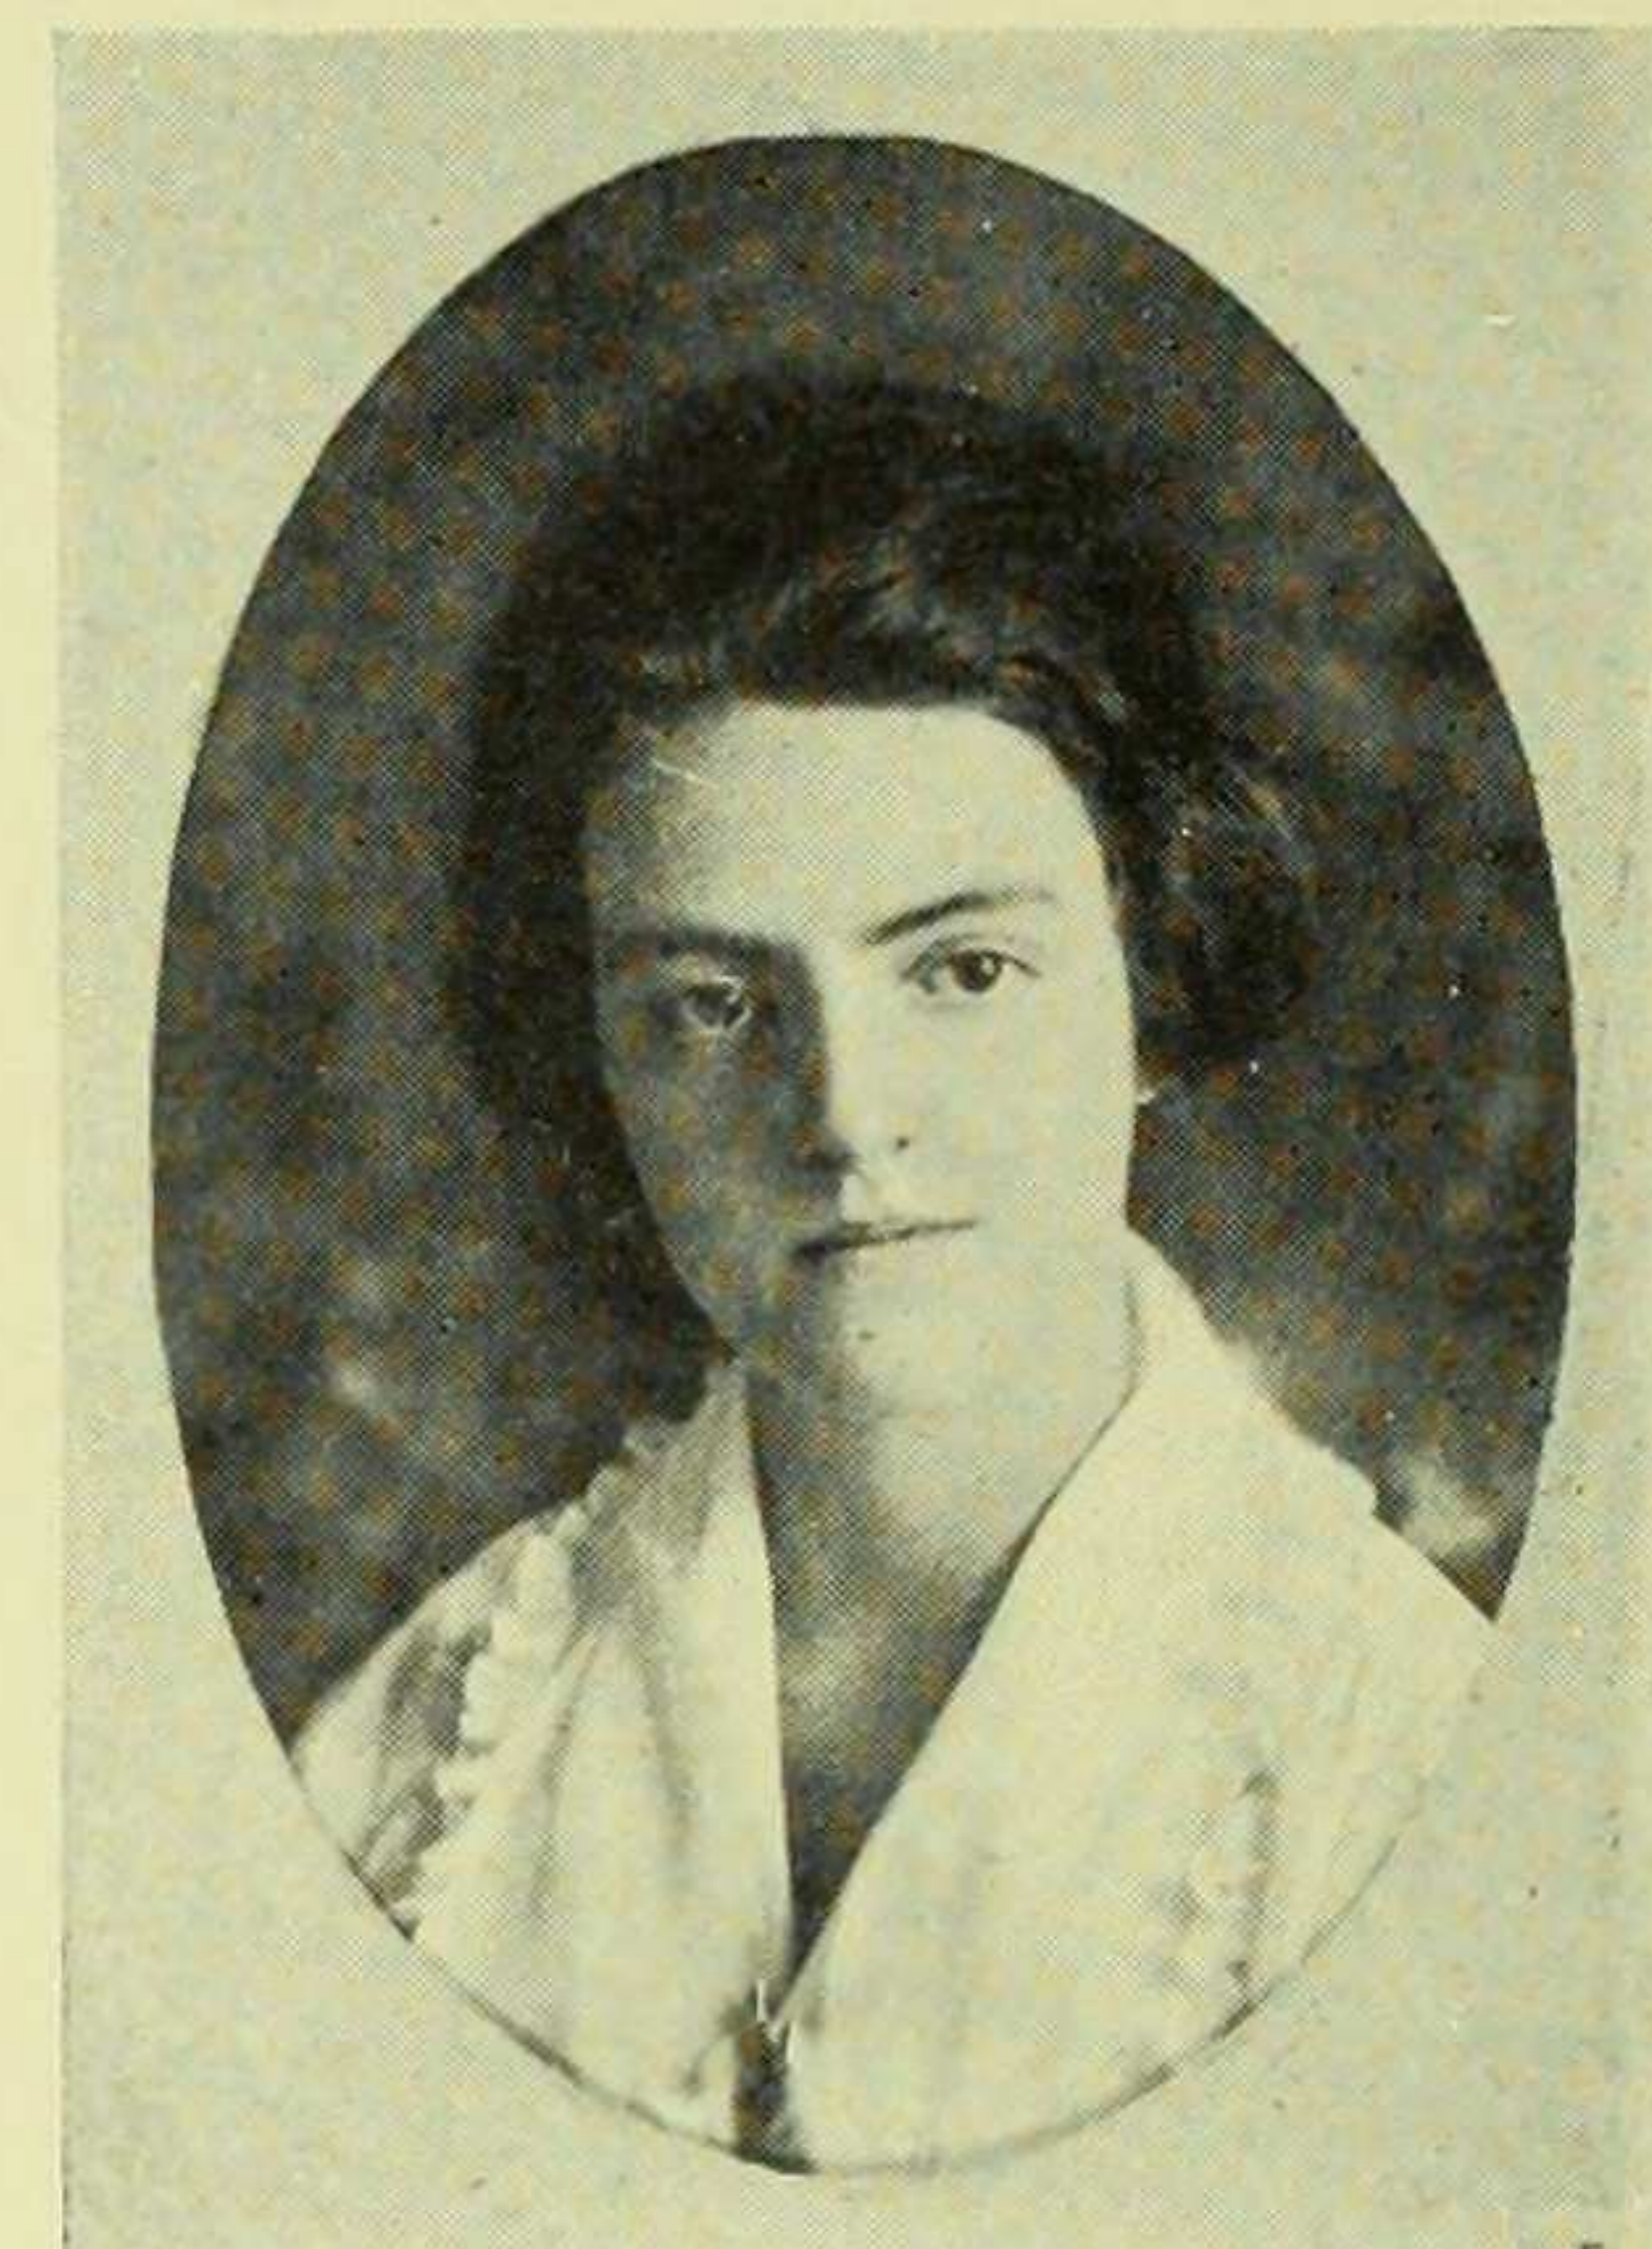

Behold Magdalena
Of proper demeanor;
We're sorry to say it is Seldom we've seen her.

DOROTHY RITA RHOADES

My poise is of that perfect sort
That cannot be denied;
For though I wear my dresses short,
I'm always dignified.

EFFIE ROSS

In a test-tube we will toast her,
For indeed we cannot roast her.

OLIVE RILEY

She gaily hums a little air
(No matter if it's off the key),
And nonchalantly pats her hair
(That is arranged so perfectly);
Her skill in drawing's really rare
(As from this book you plainly see.)

E. FRANCES RUDD

There's a far away look in her eyes of brown,
That gaze at you distantly, up and down.

HELEN RIVKIN

For her powers of quick forgetion, Crown her with a wreath of laurels;
Four whole times in swift succession
She forgot to take her orals.

CATHERINE RAFFAELA
SANTELLI

Dear! How does a person spell a Middle name like Raffaela?

ANNE ELIZABETH
SCHMIDT

Undoubtedly
It's true that she Is prettyish.
'Twould better fit
To say Anne Schmidt
Is Schmittish.

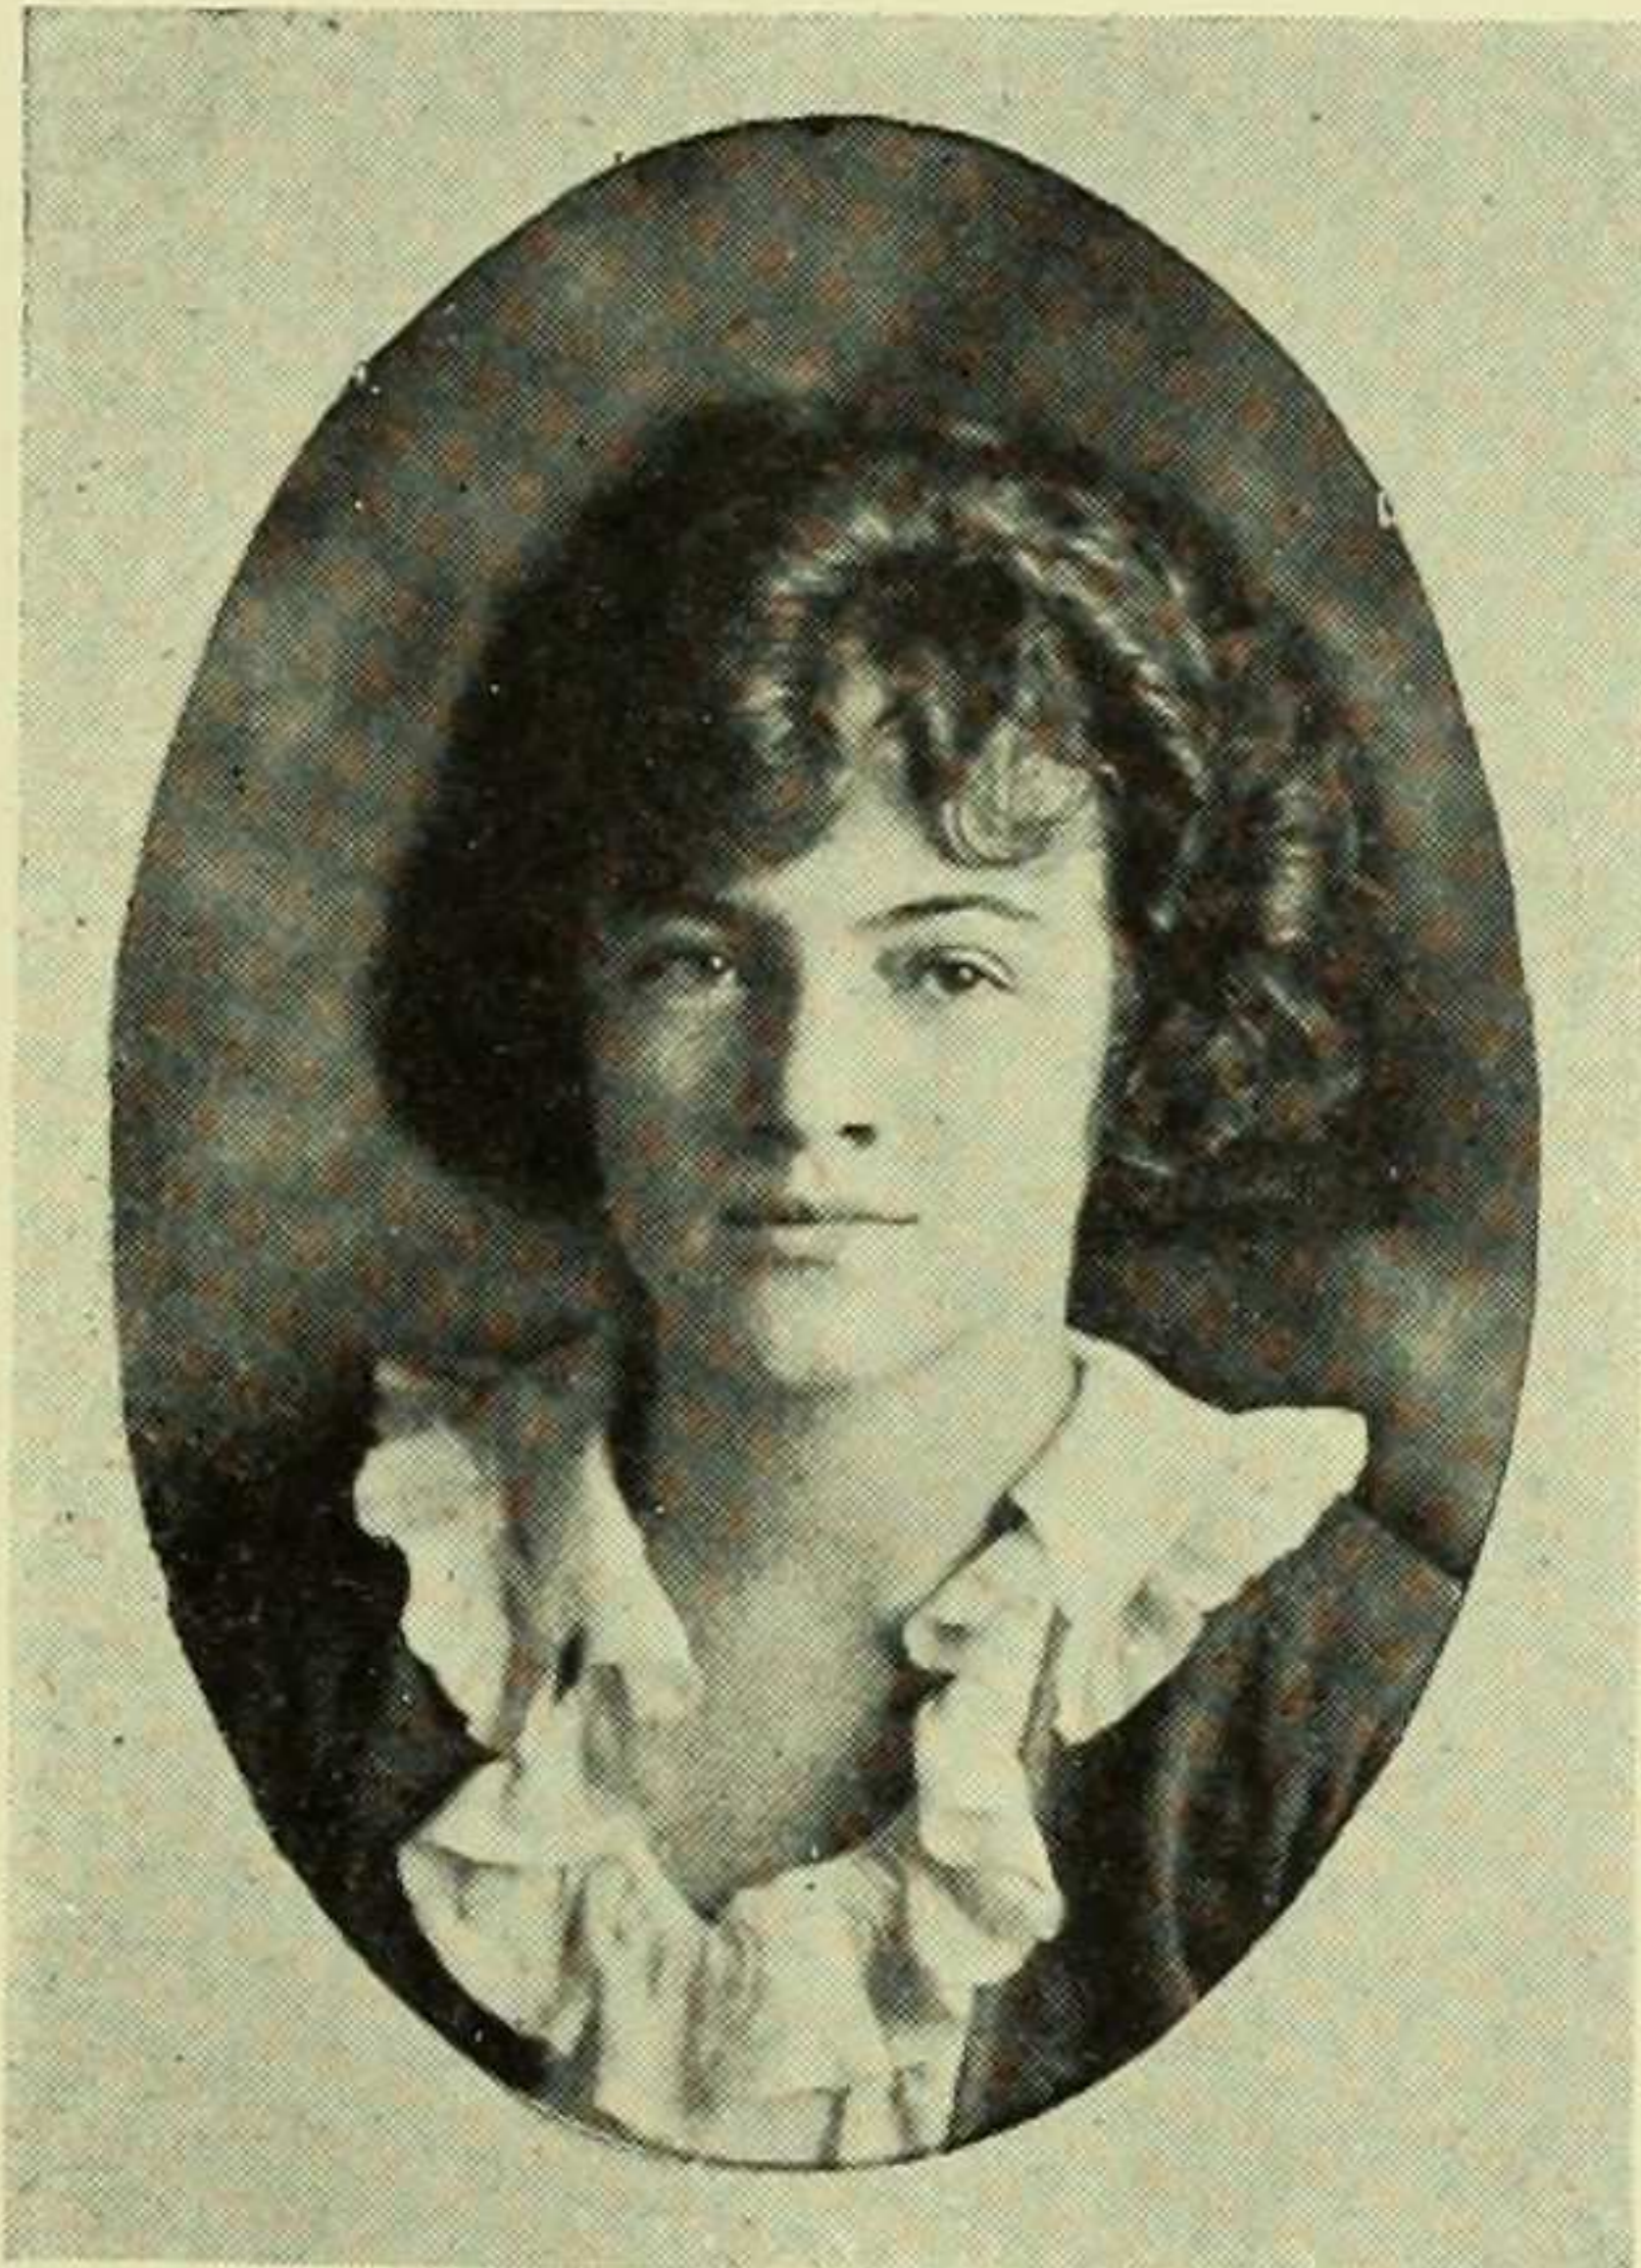

ANTONIA SCHWAB

Poetic fancy I adore,
But Economics—what a bore!

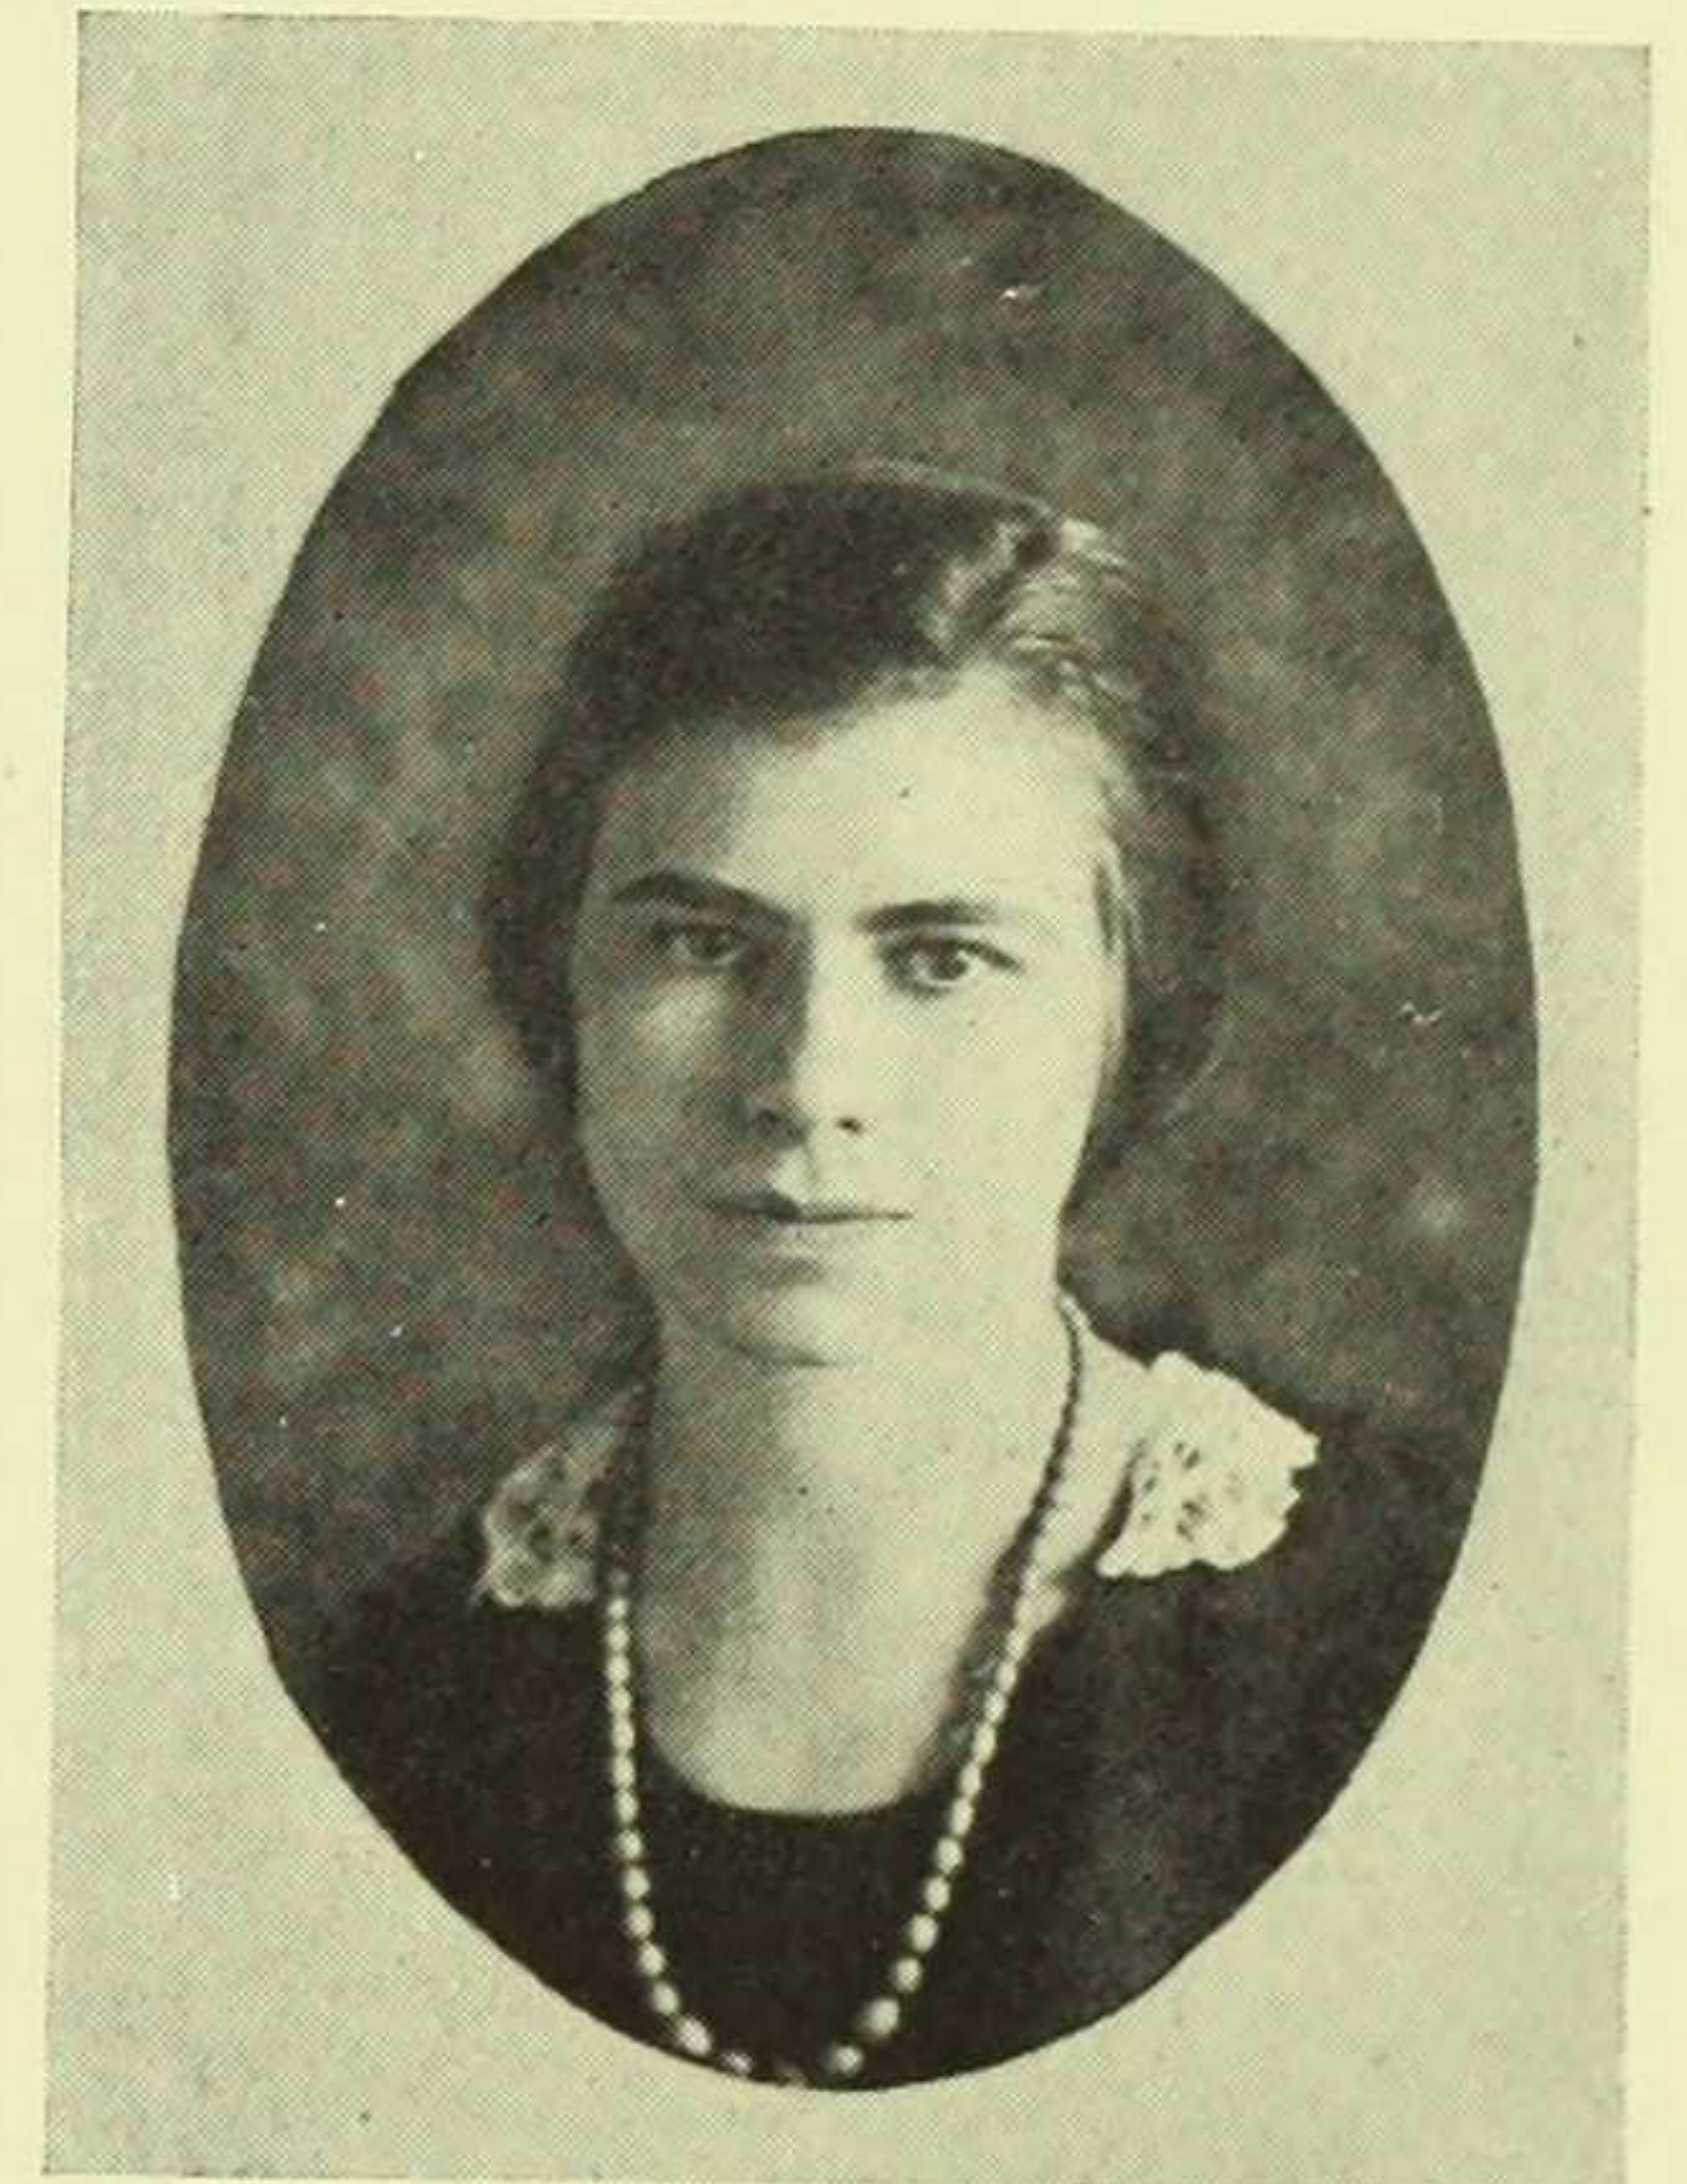

JEANETTE SEELEY

She is so self-effacing,
Publicity non-chasing,
You'd scarcely guess
Such politesse
Our college halls is gracing.

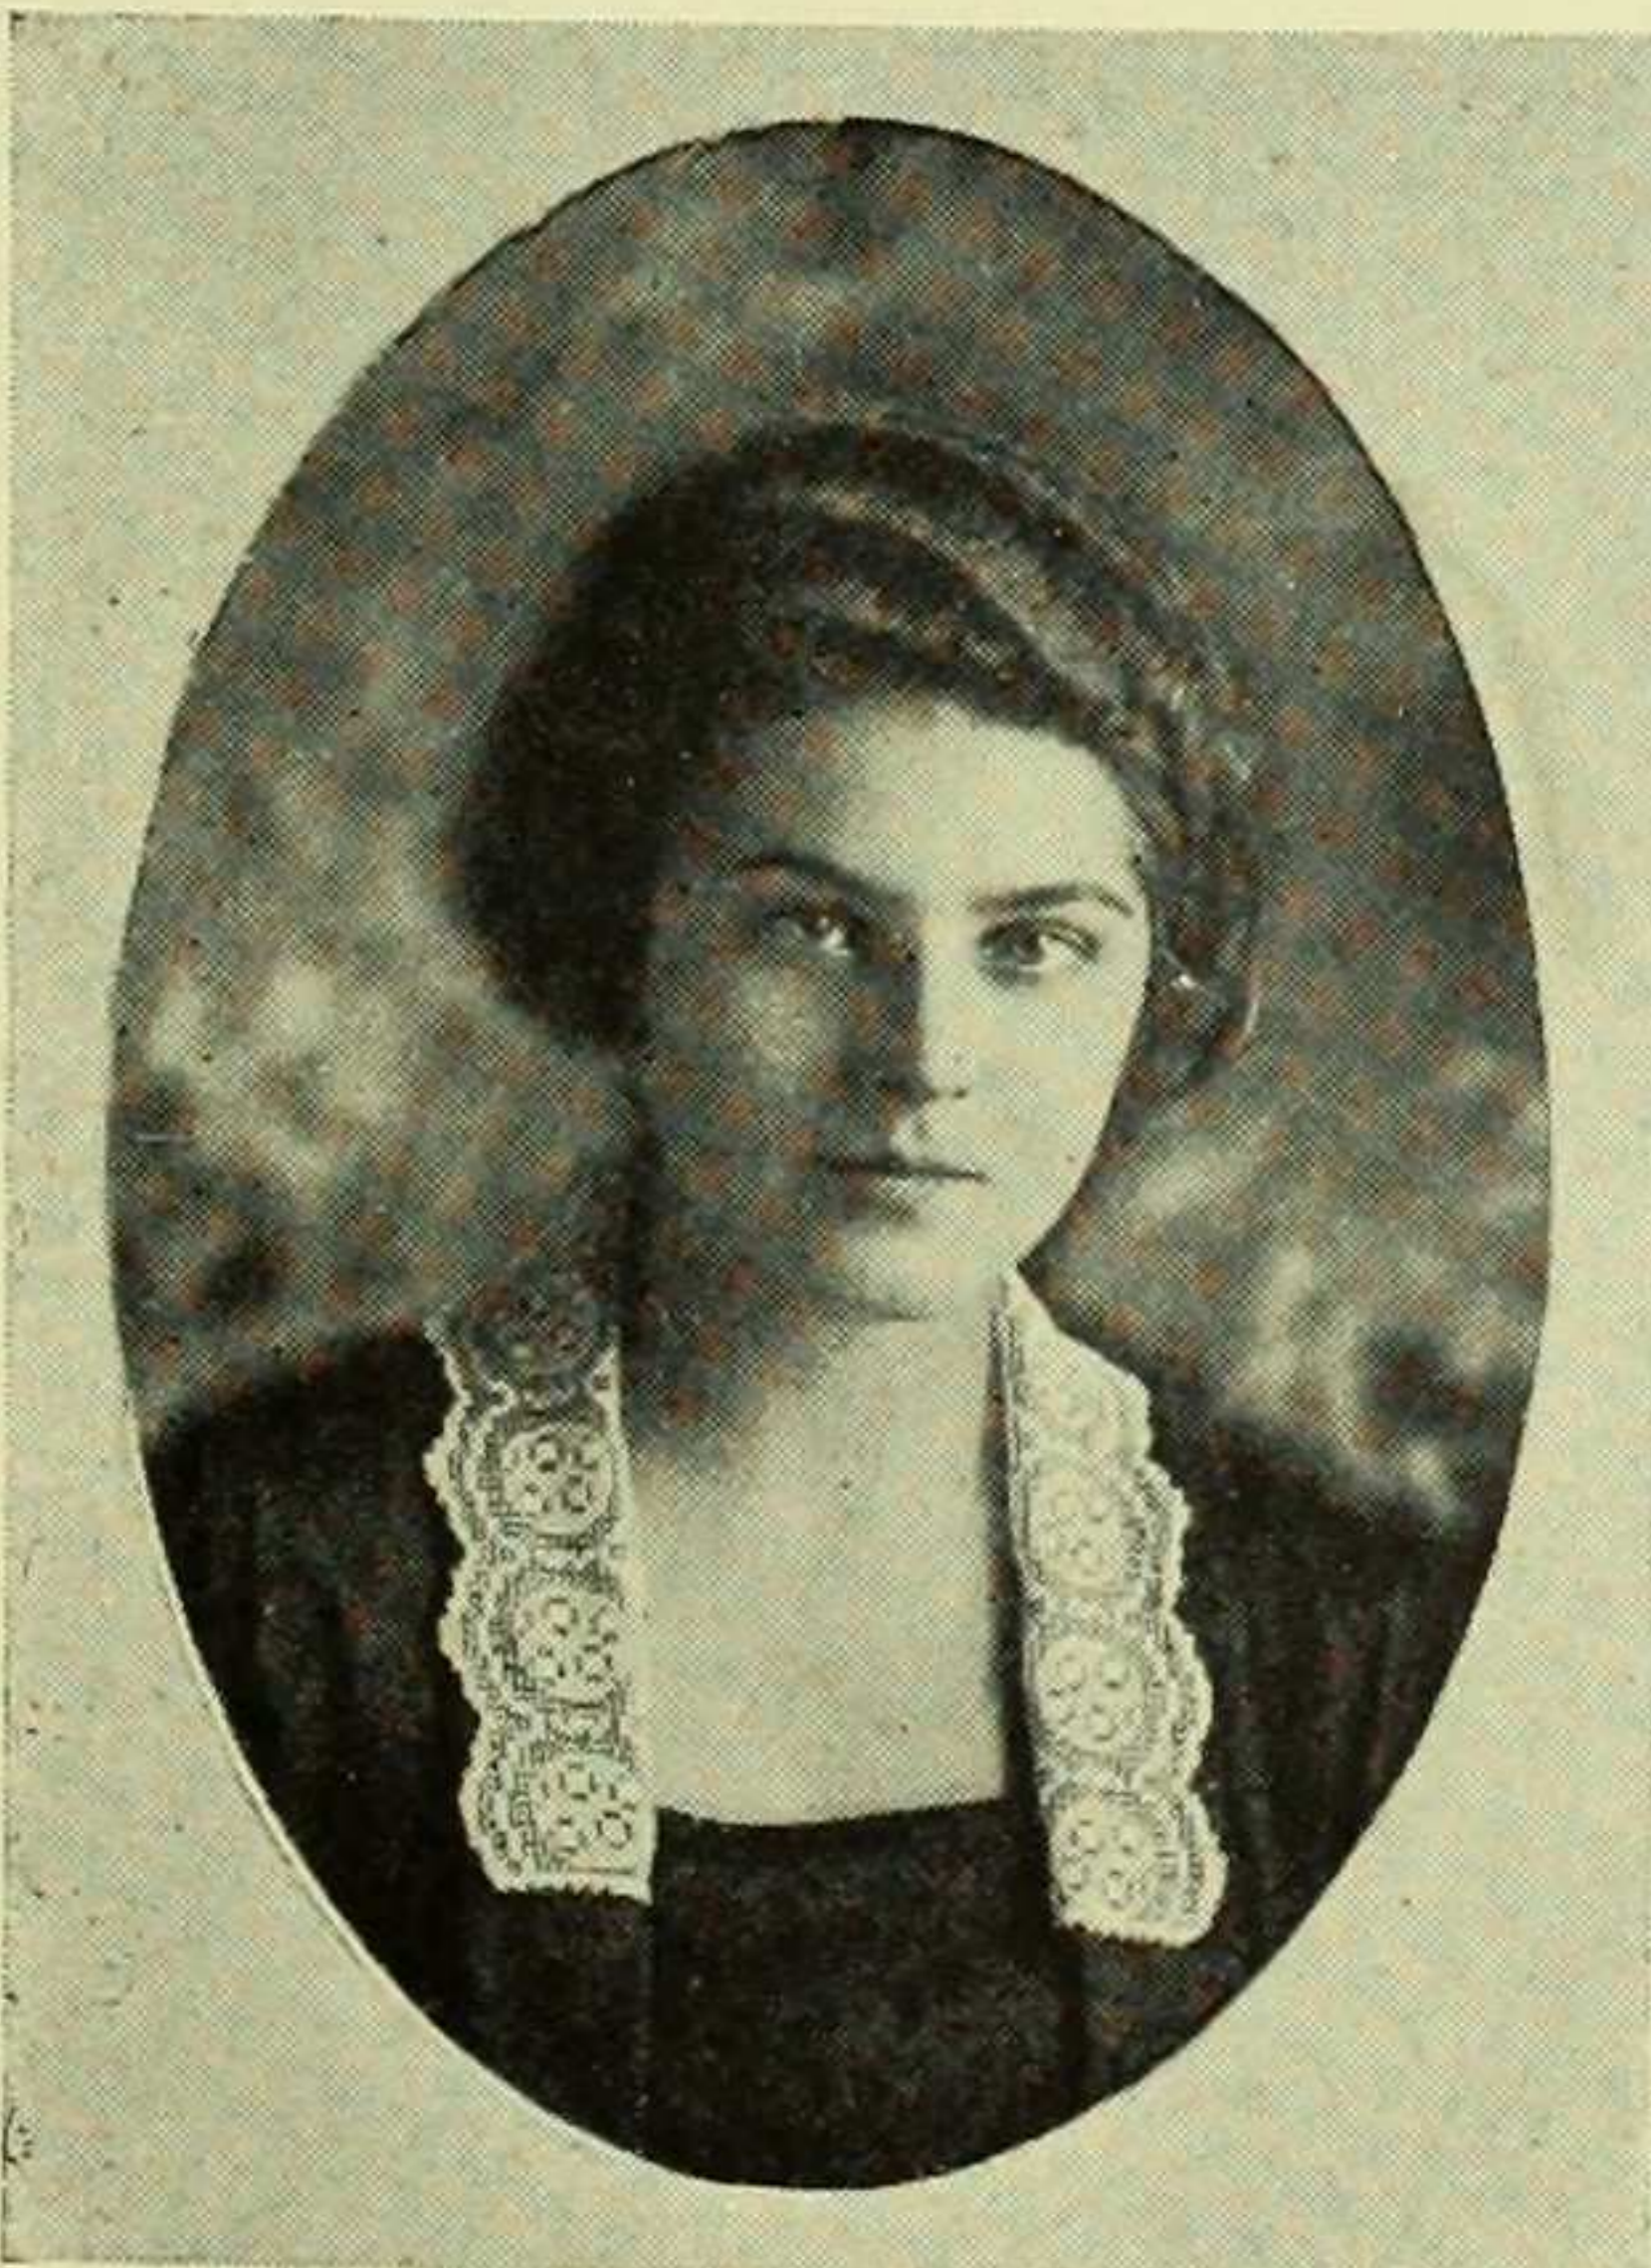

GERTRUD SCHOEDLER

Says Tutsie, "At
This thing or that I'm poor and unreliable."
This isn't true,
Although she's u-Sually infallible.

BERNADETTE SHANLEY

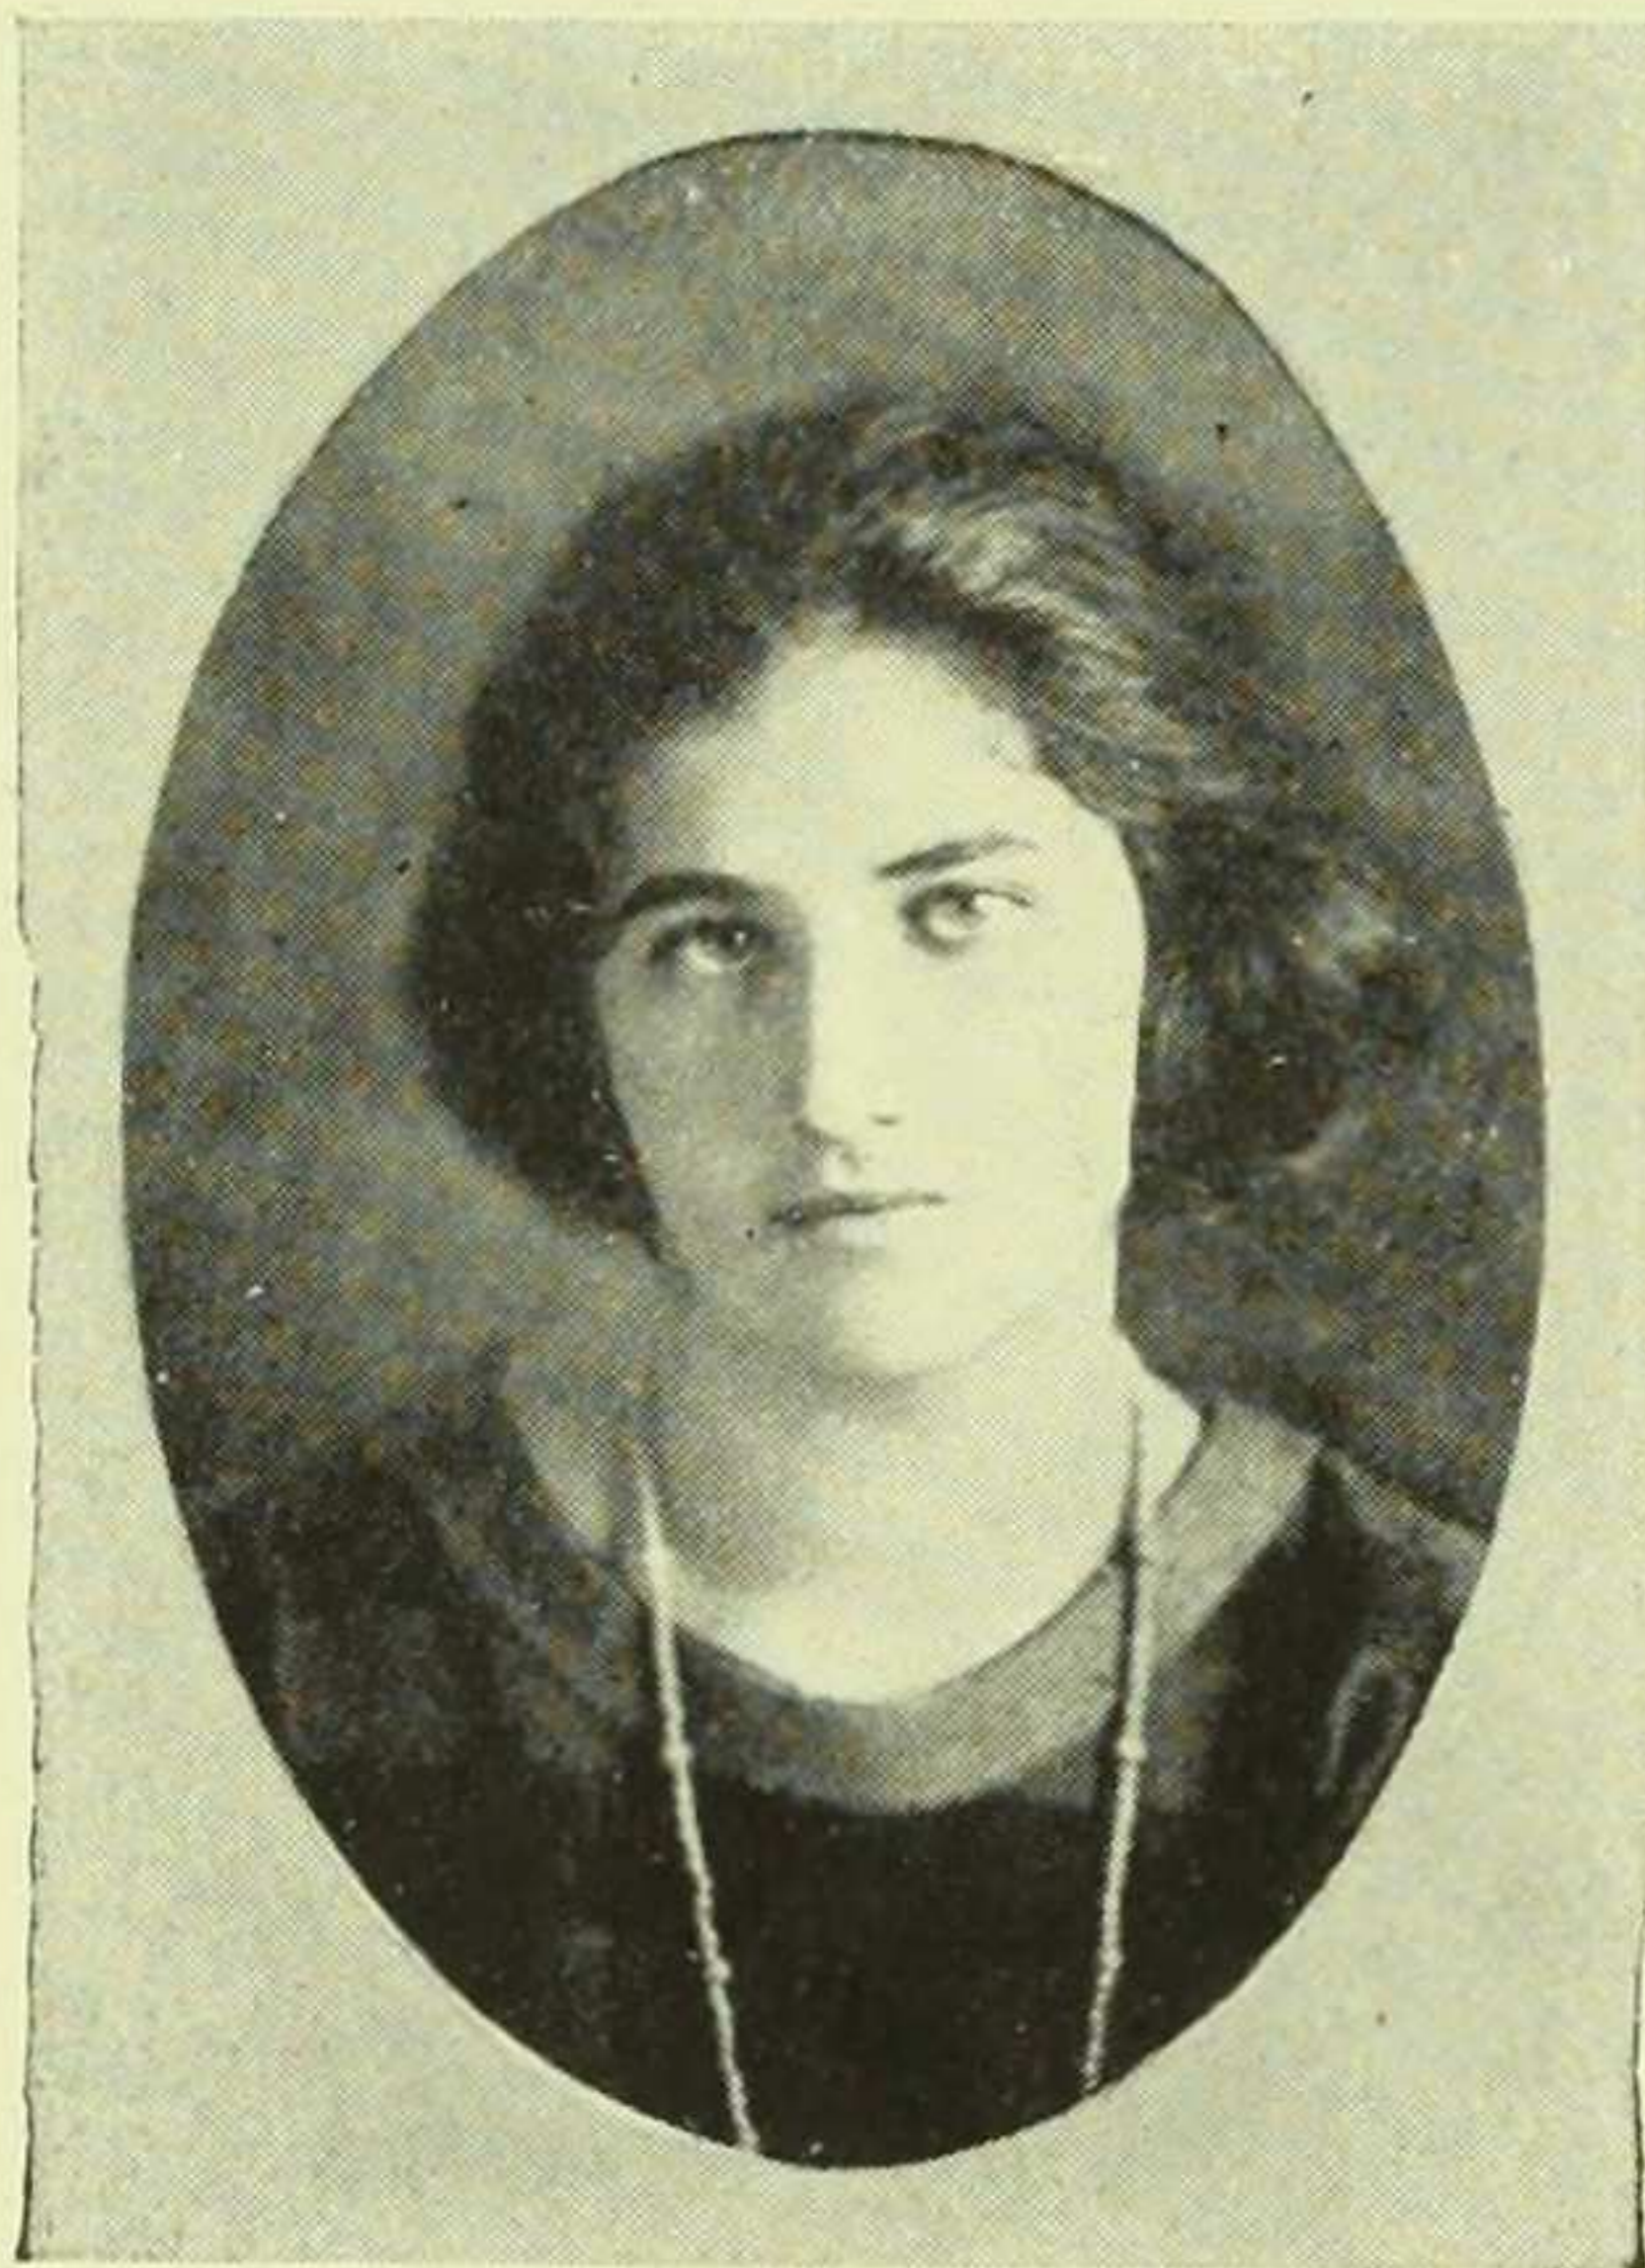

A Western girl is Bernadette,
From mountainous Montana;
She should be wild and wooly, yet
She has a gentle manner.

ELSIE SCHUMM

When a great bacteriologist
She's become,
We'll acclaim a Barnard Collegist
Elsie Schumm.

HELEN MARGARET SHIRE

Although she seems afloat in dreams,
She's not so dreamy as she seems;
In Ec. and Sociology,
She's wide-awake as she can be.

KATHERINE SMALL

Diminutive K.,
As you may know, can play
The piano and plays passing well o.
But picture our plight,
When we found that in spite
Of her height she has mastered the 'cello.

EVELYN SHRIFTE

Evelyn Shrifte
Has a gift
Of tresses that are Titian.
If we said
They were red,
She'd wish us in Perdition.

MARIE LOUISE SOLEY

When her dark eyes dance, they say,
She's with Theodosia Bay.

GRACE JULIA SINNIGEN

Here's a maid of great discretion,
Boasting only one obsession—
Classic she, unto completion,
Save her nose, which isn't Grecian.

RACHEL SOUHAMI

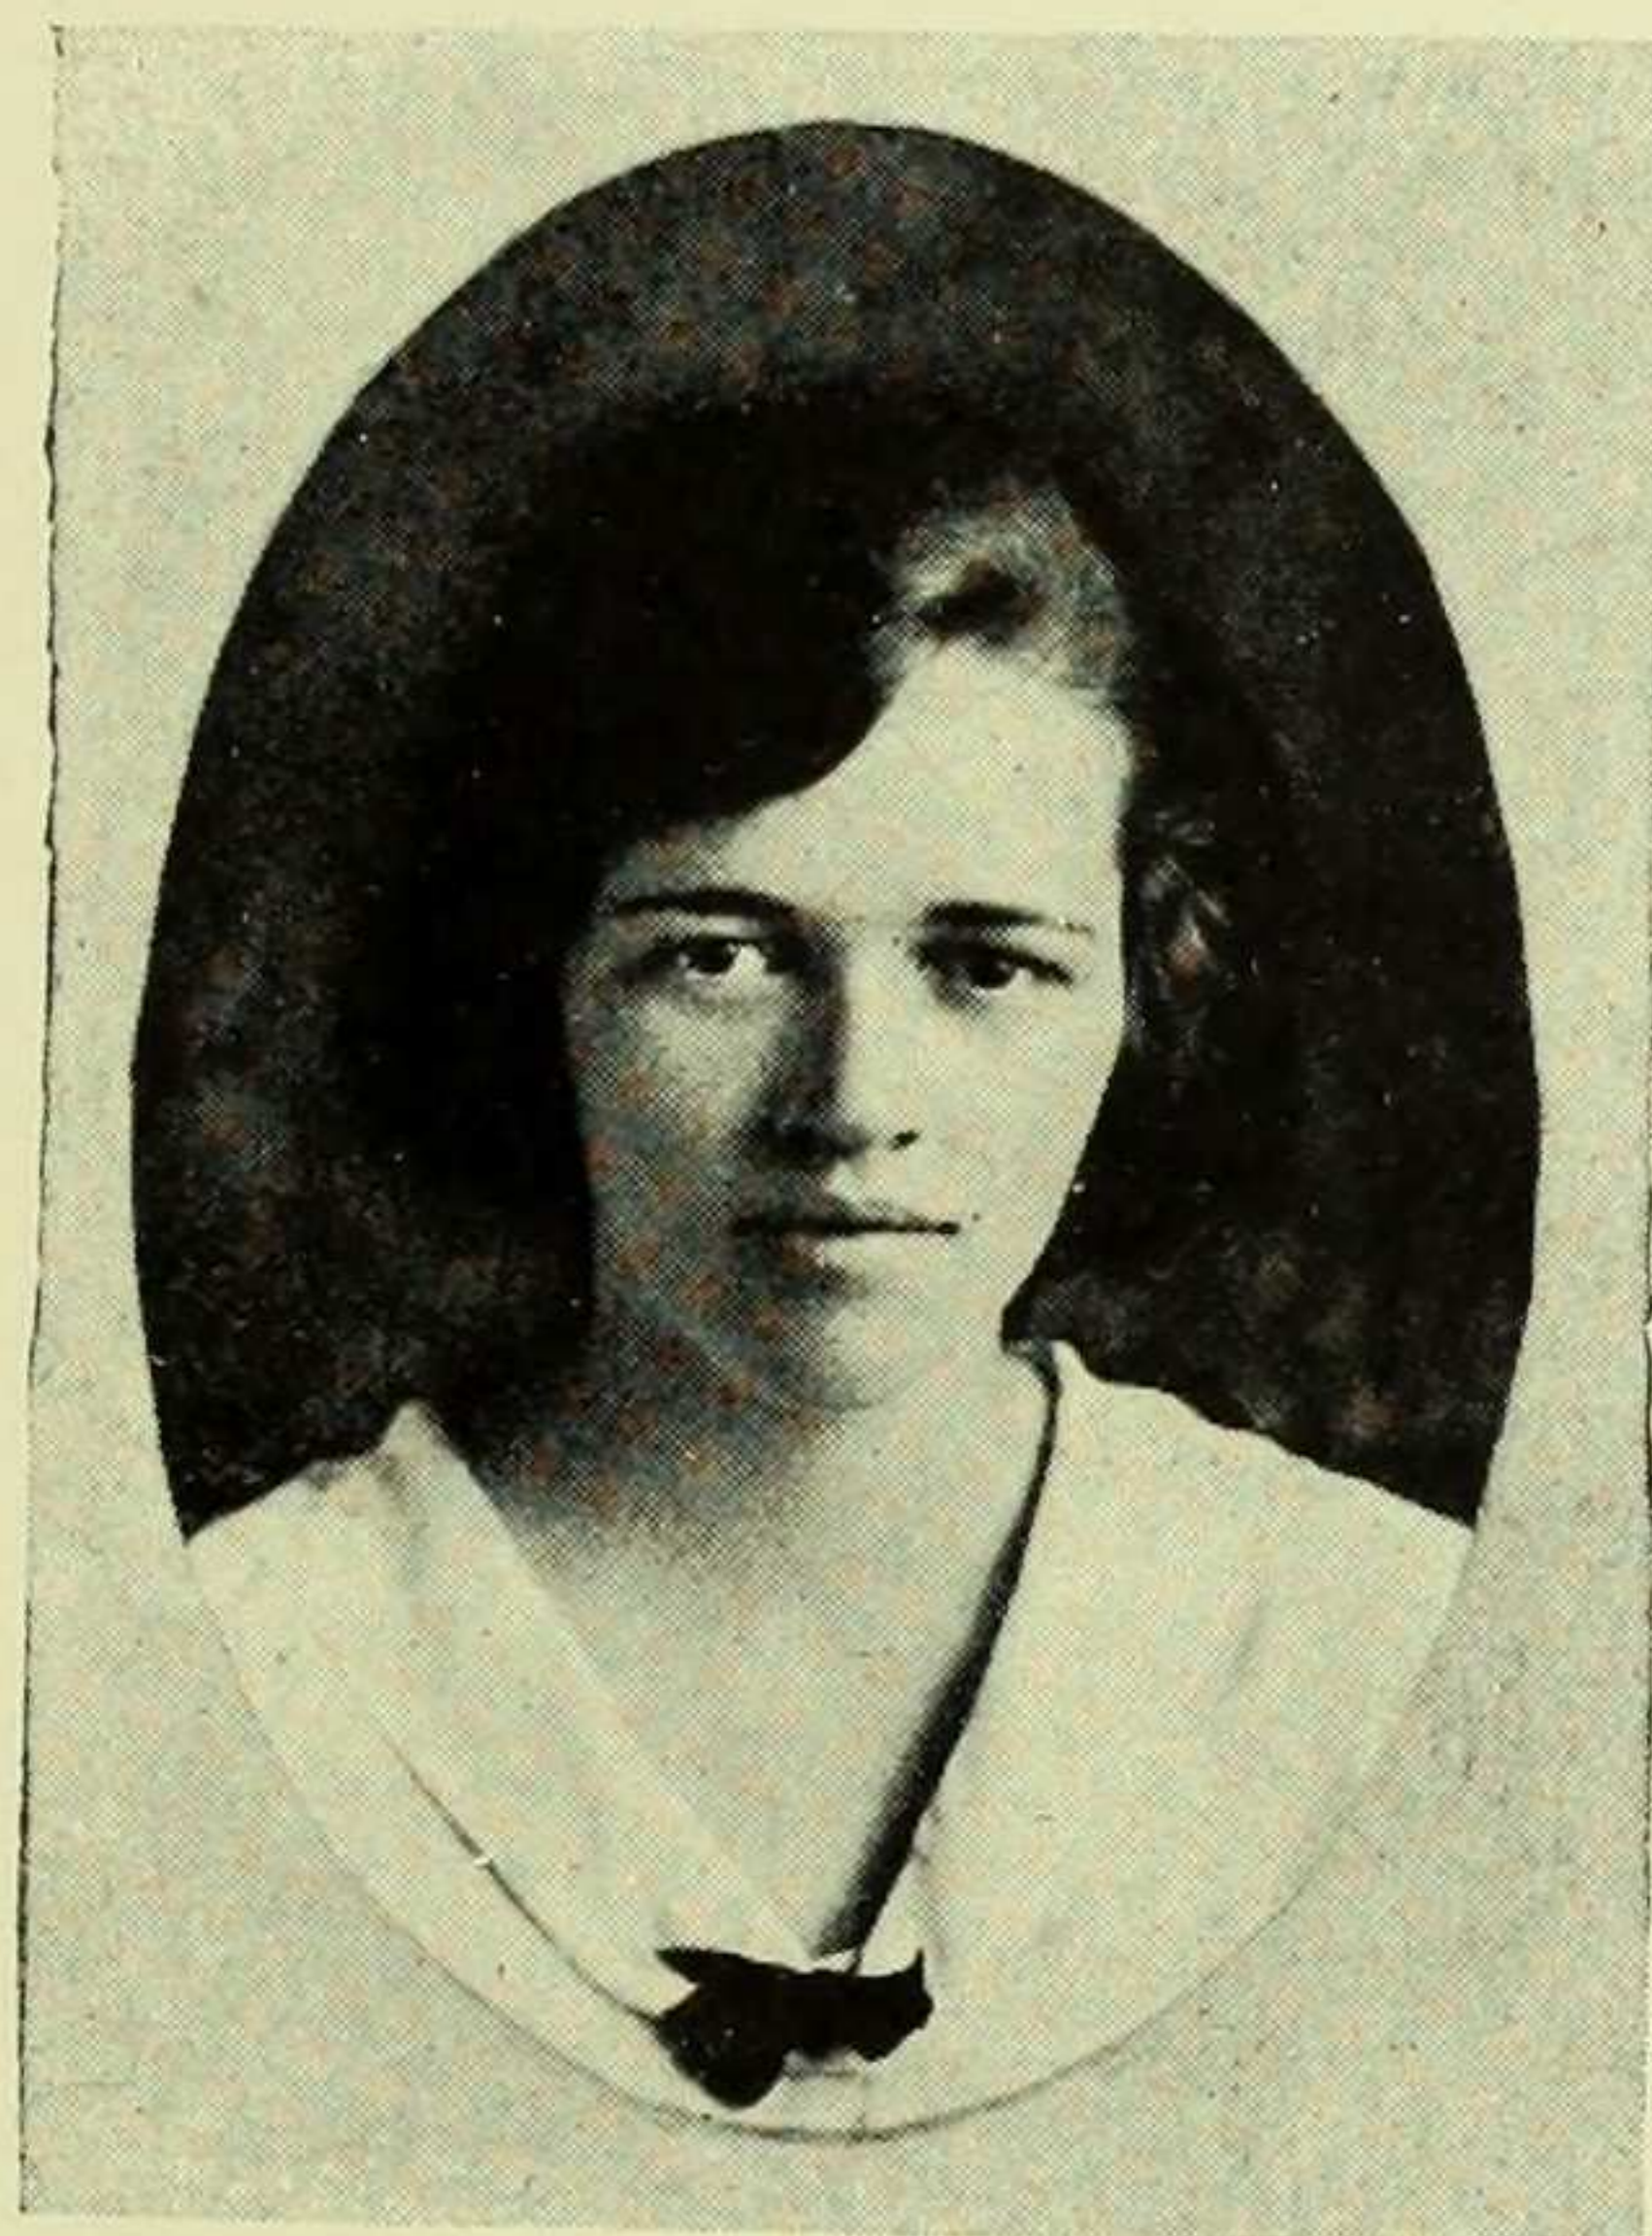

She discusses subjects soaring,
'Spite of, "My, I'm not a highbrow!"
Till we find ourselves imploring,
"Just how high is thy brow?"

VIRGINIA STEWART

My dear, I'm simply dead, you know;
I didn't get to bed till four.
This New York life does wear one
so,
And lecture hours are such a bore!

MARY STUART
Accent of the sunny South
From out your mouth
Makes us love to hear you do it,
Mary Stuart.

ADELE STICKNEY

Last year she dreamed in all her courses
While thinking of new tricks for horses,
But now her dreams have other sources!

ELEANOR M. TIEMANN
She's one of that select small group
That runs affairs athletic;
She's modest and retiring and
She's always sympathetic.

SARAH STRIER

It is our desire
To be like Sarah Strier,
Who always works
And never shirks,
But vainly we aspire.

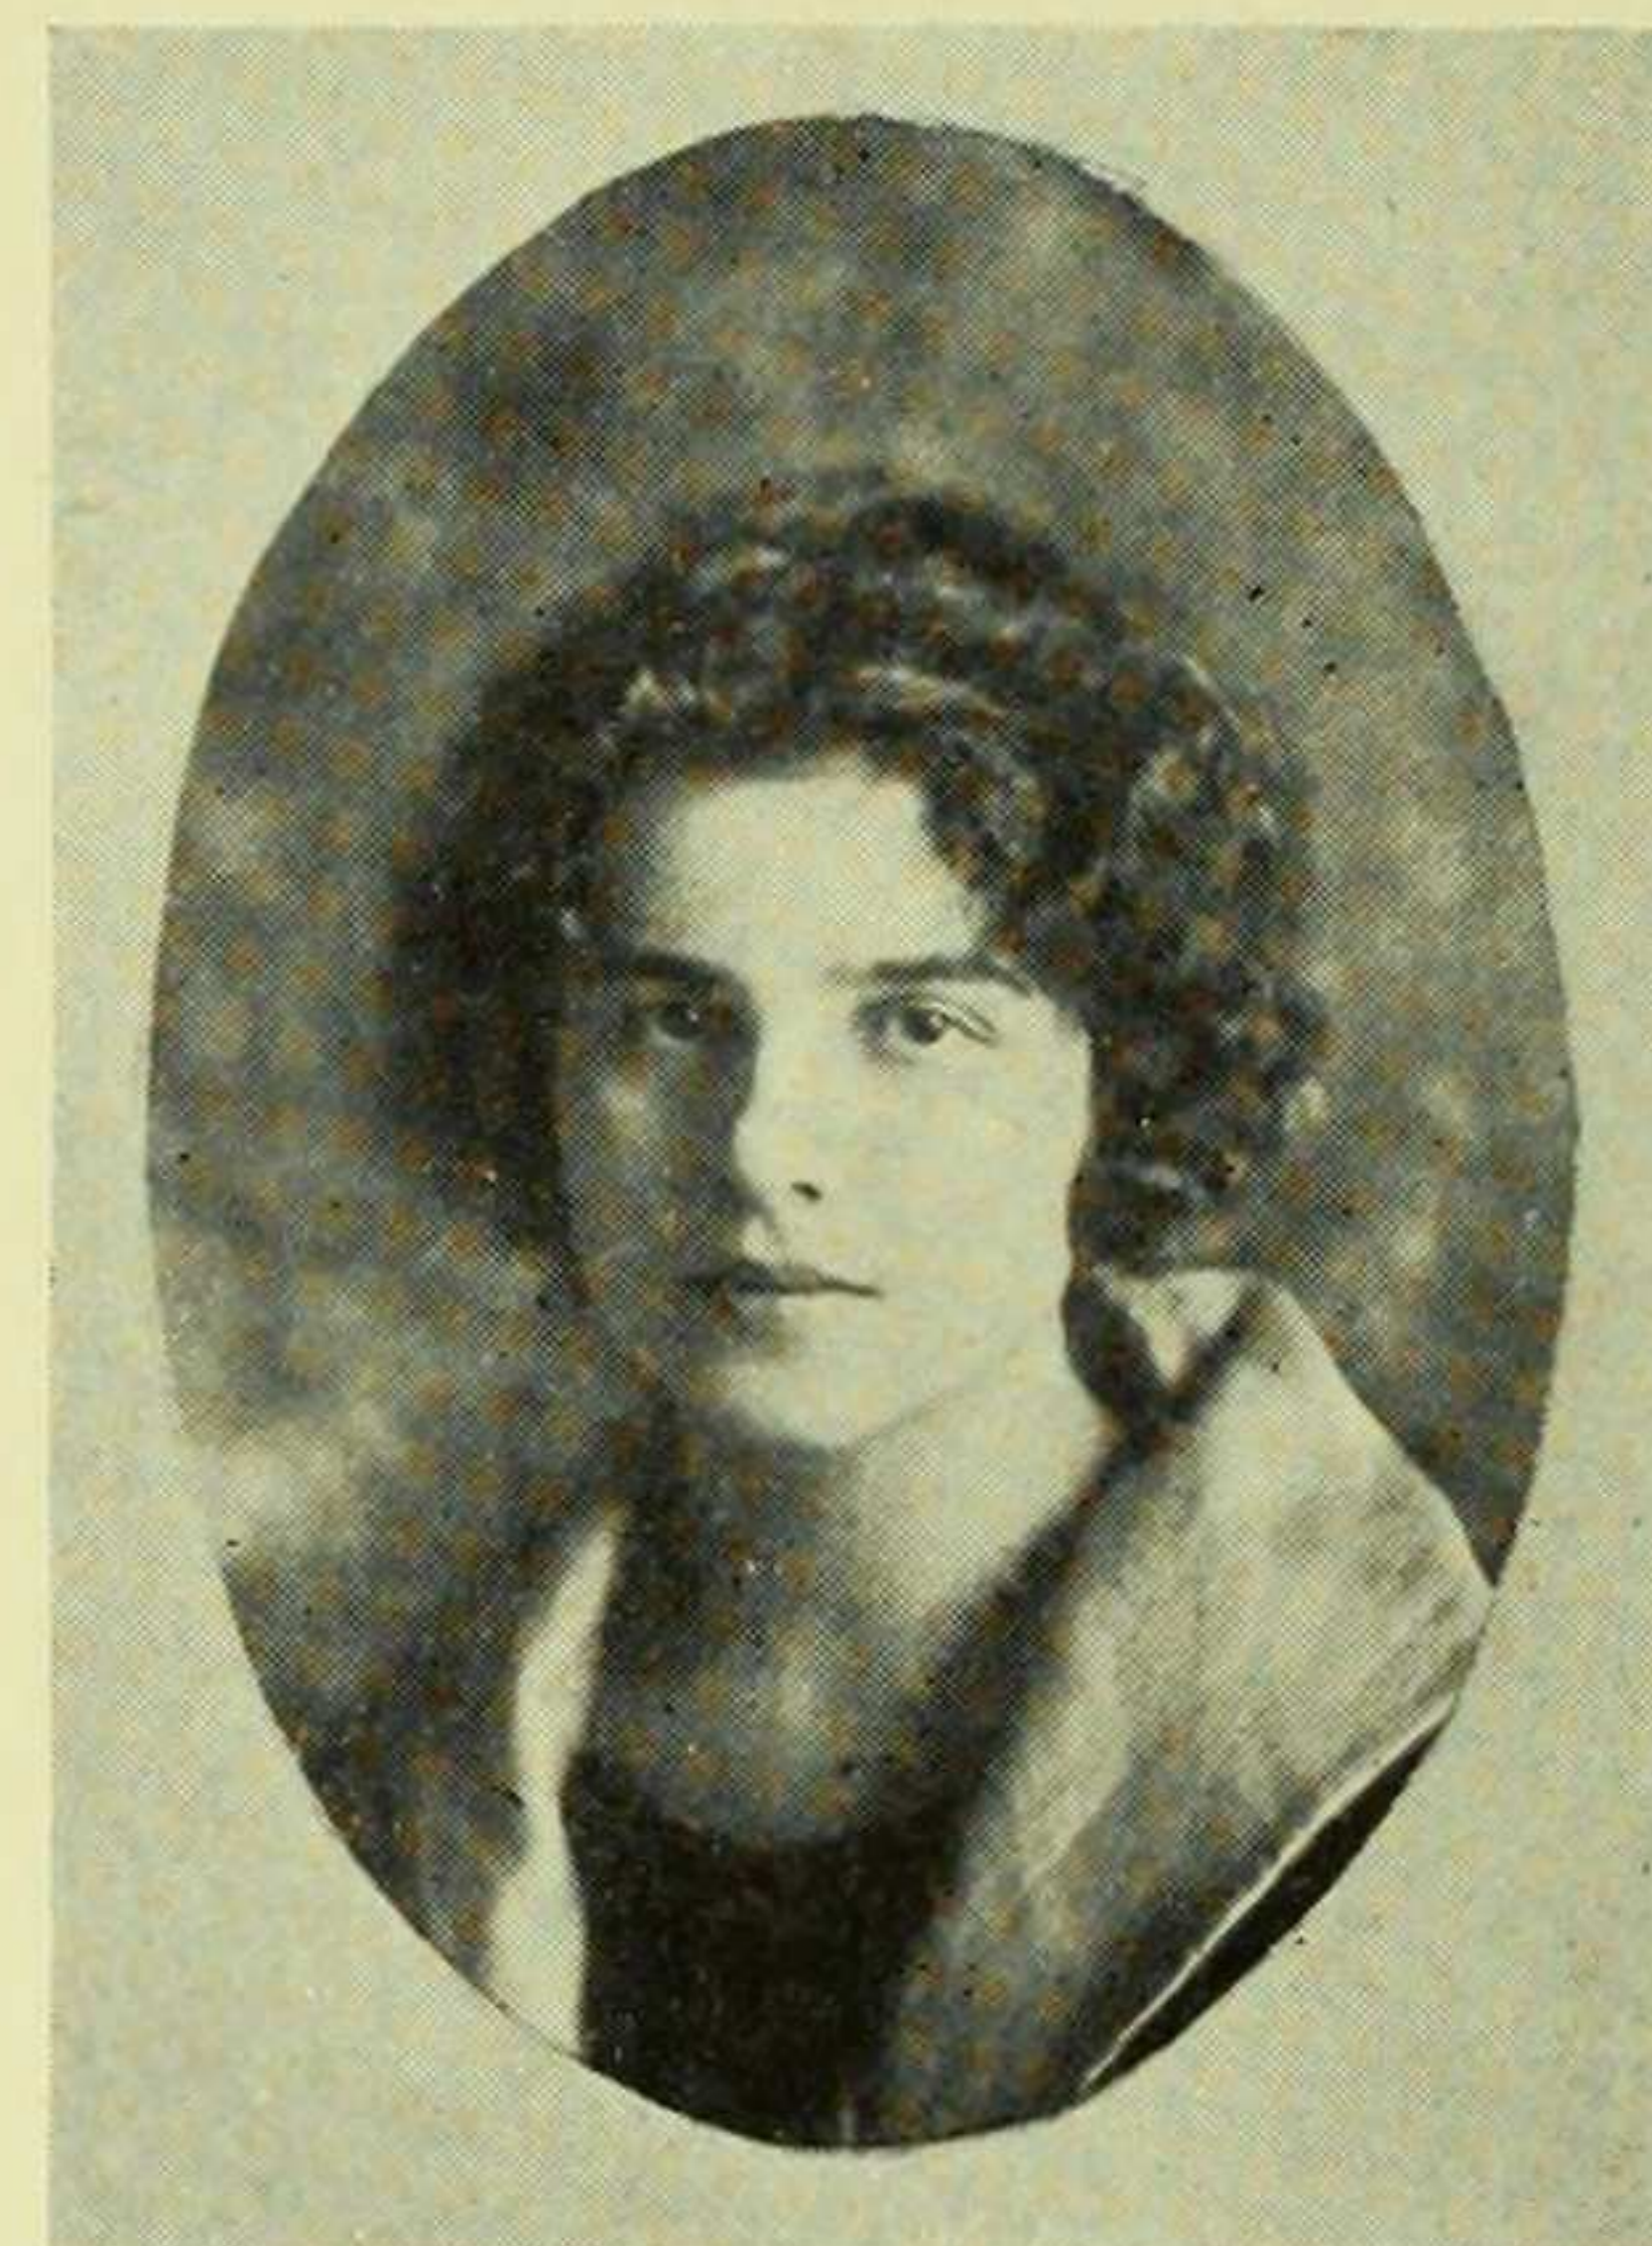

BERTHA CUMMINGS
TOMPKINS
A coasting party—all our bunch was there—the fellows looked a sight.
Oh, oh, I think I'll sleep a while—
I'm going out again tonight.

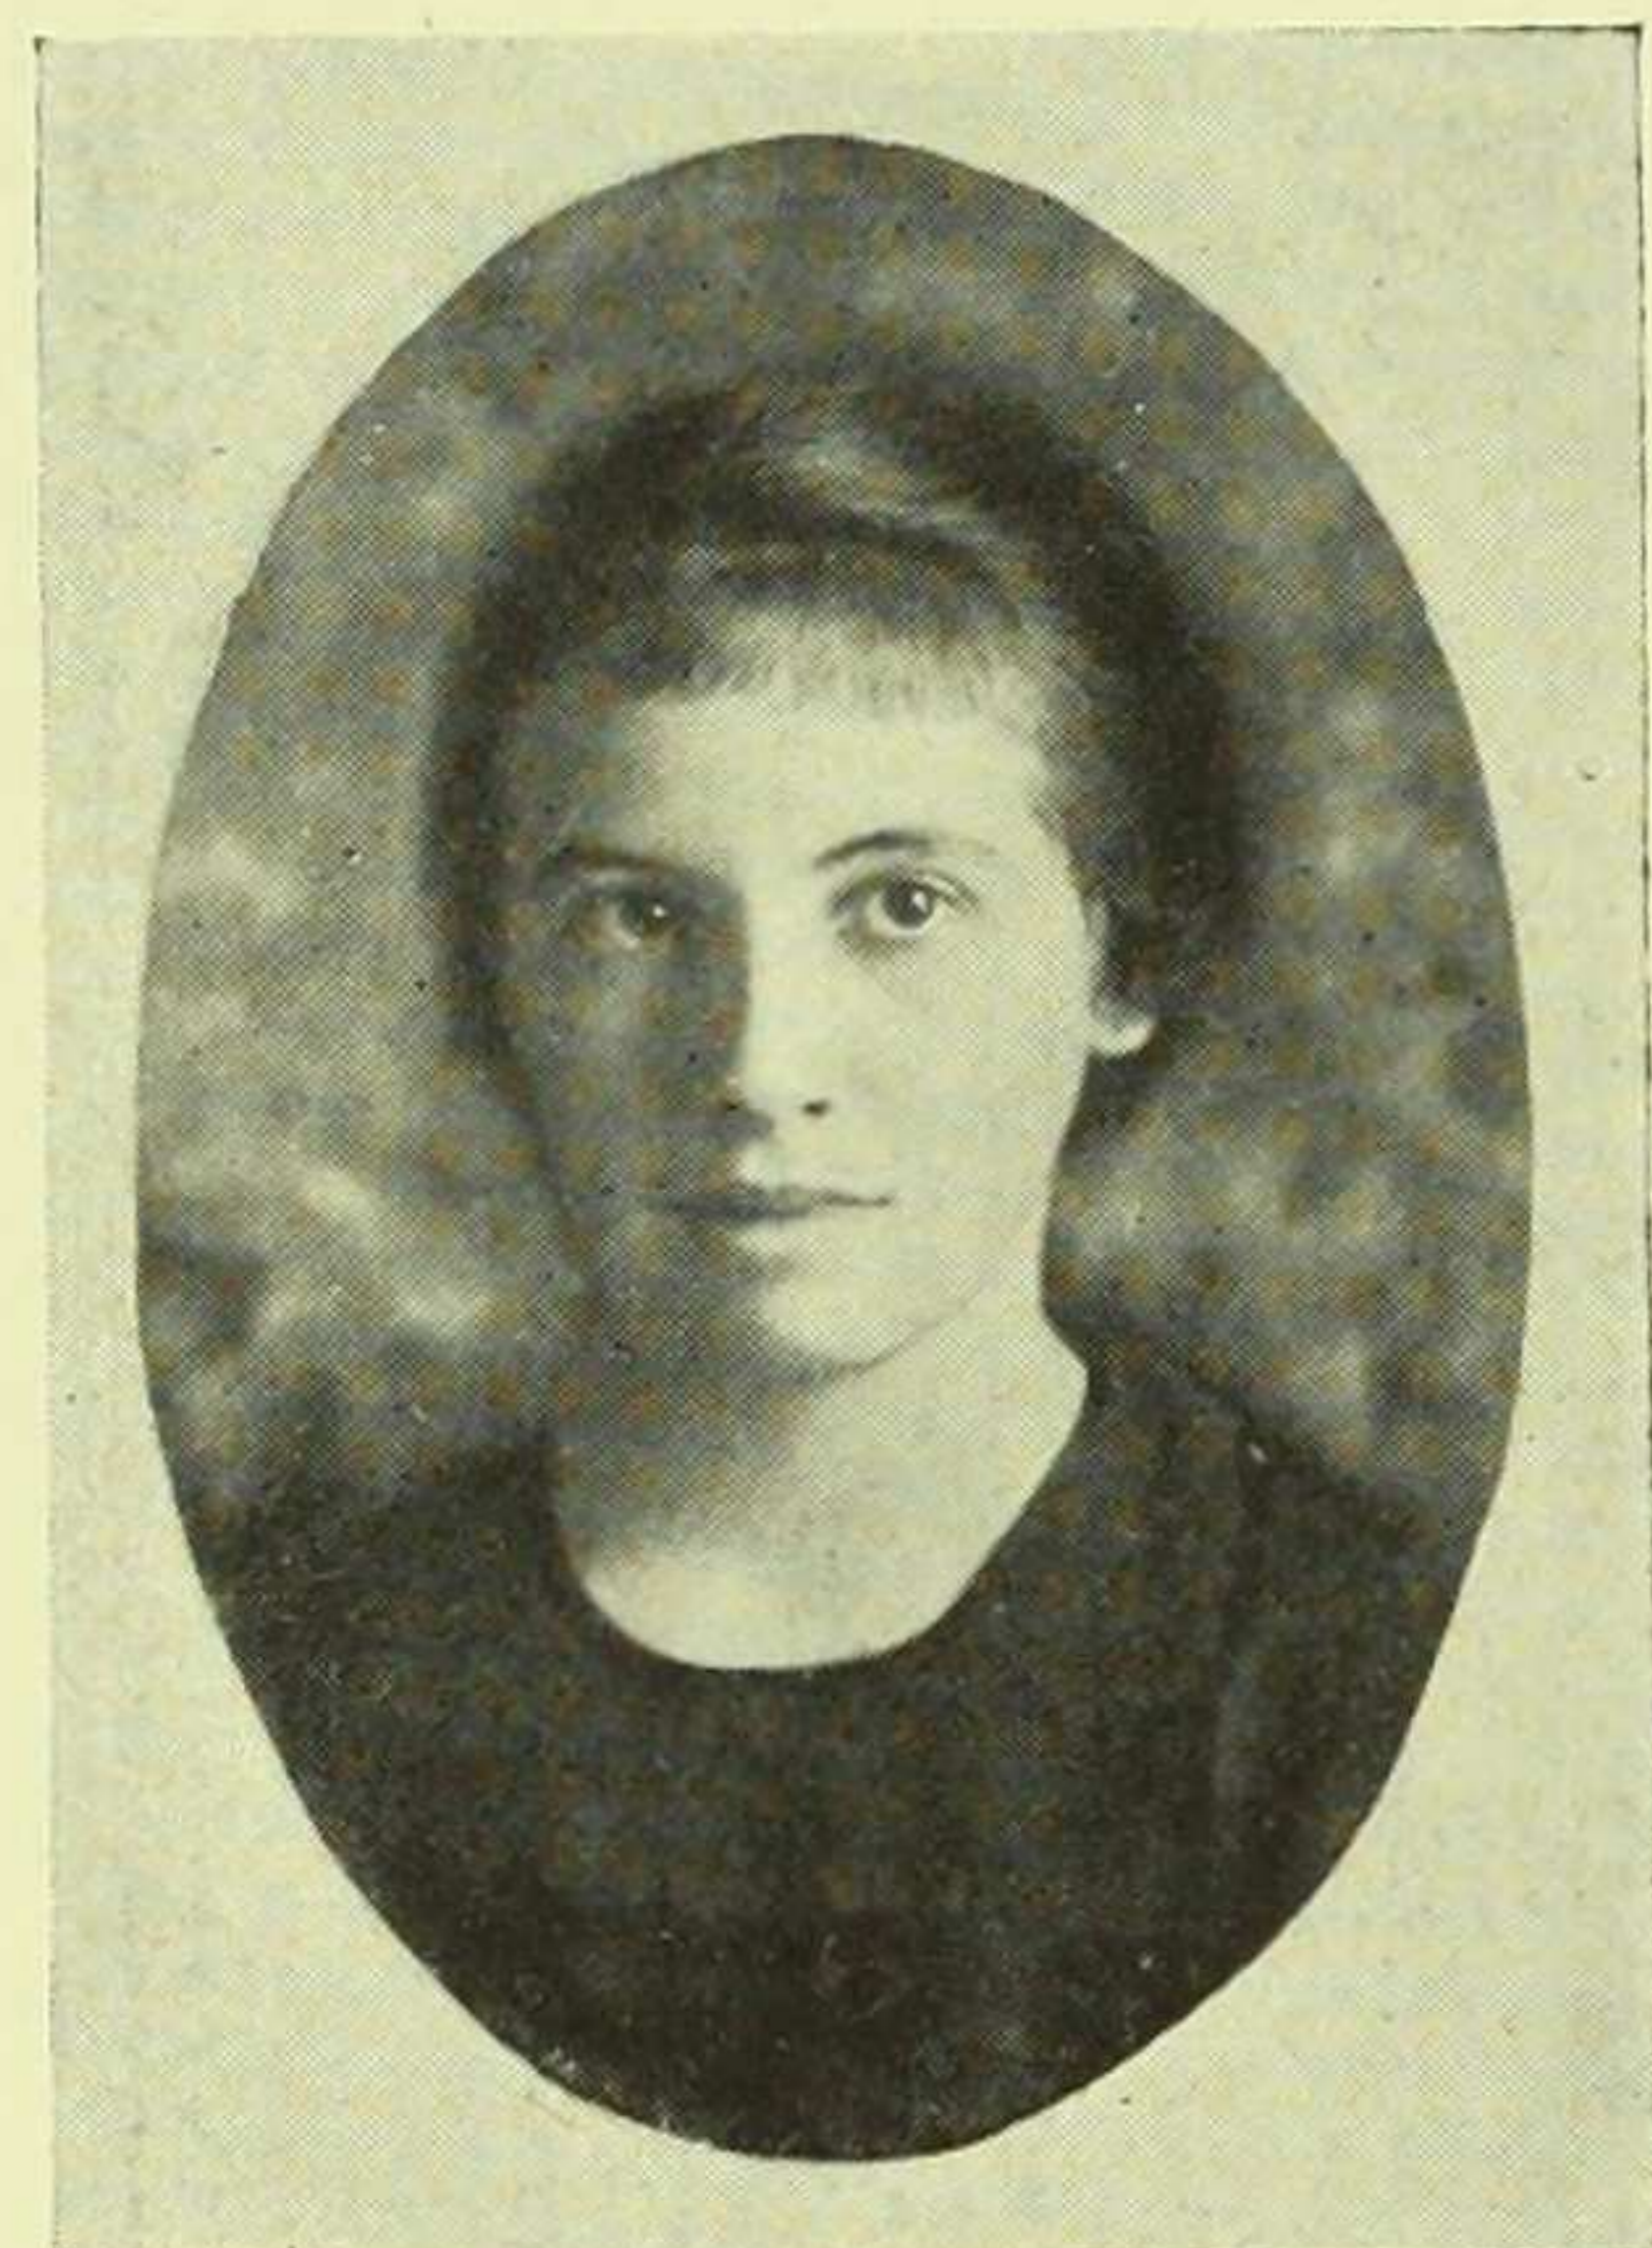

LETHEA TURMAN

Lethea goes
To teas and to shows,
To parties and also to dances.
From her retroussé nose
To the tips of her toes
She possesses a charm that entrances.

GLADYS VAN BRUNT

Glad can write a theme or so
And a song for Junior Show
While befuddling you and me
With amazing repartee.

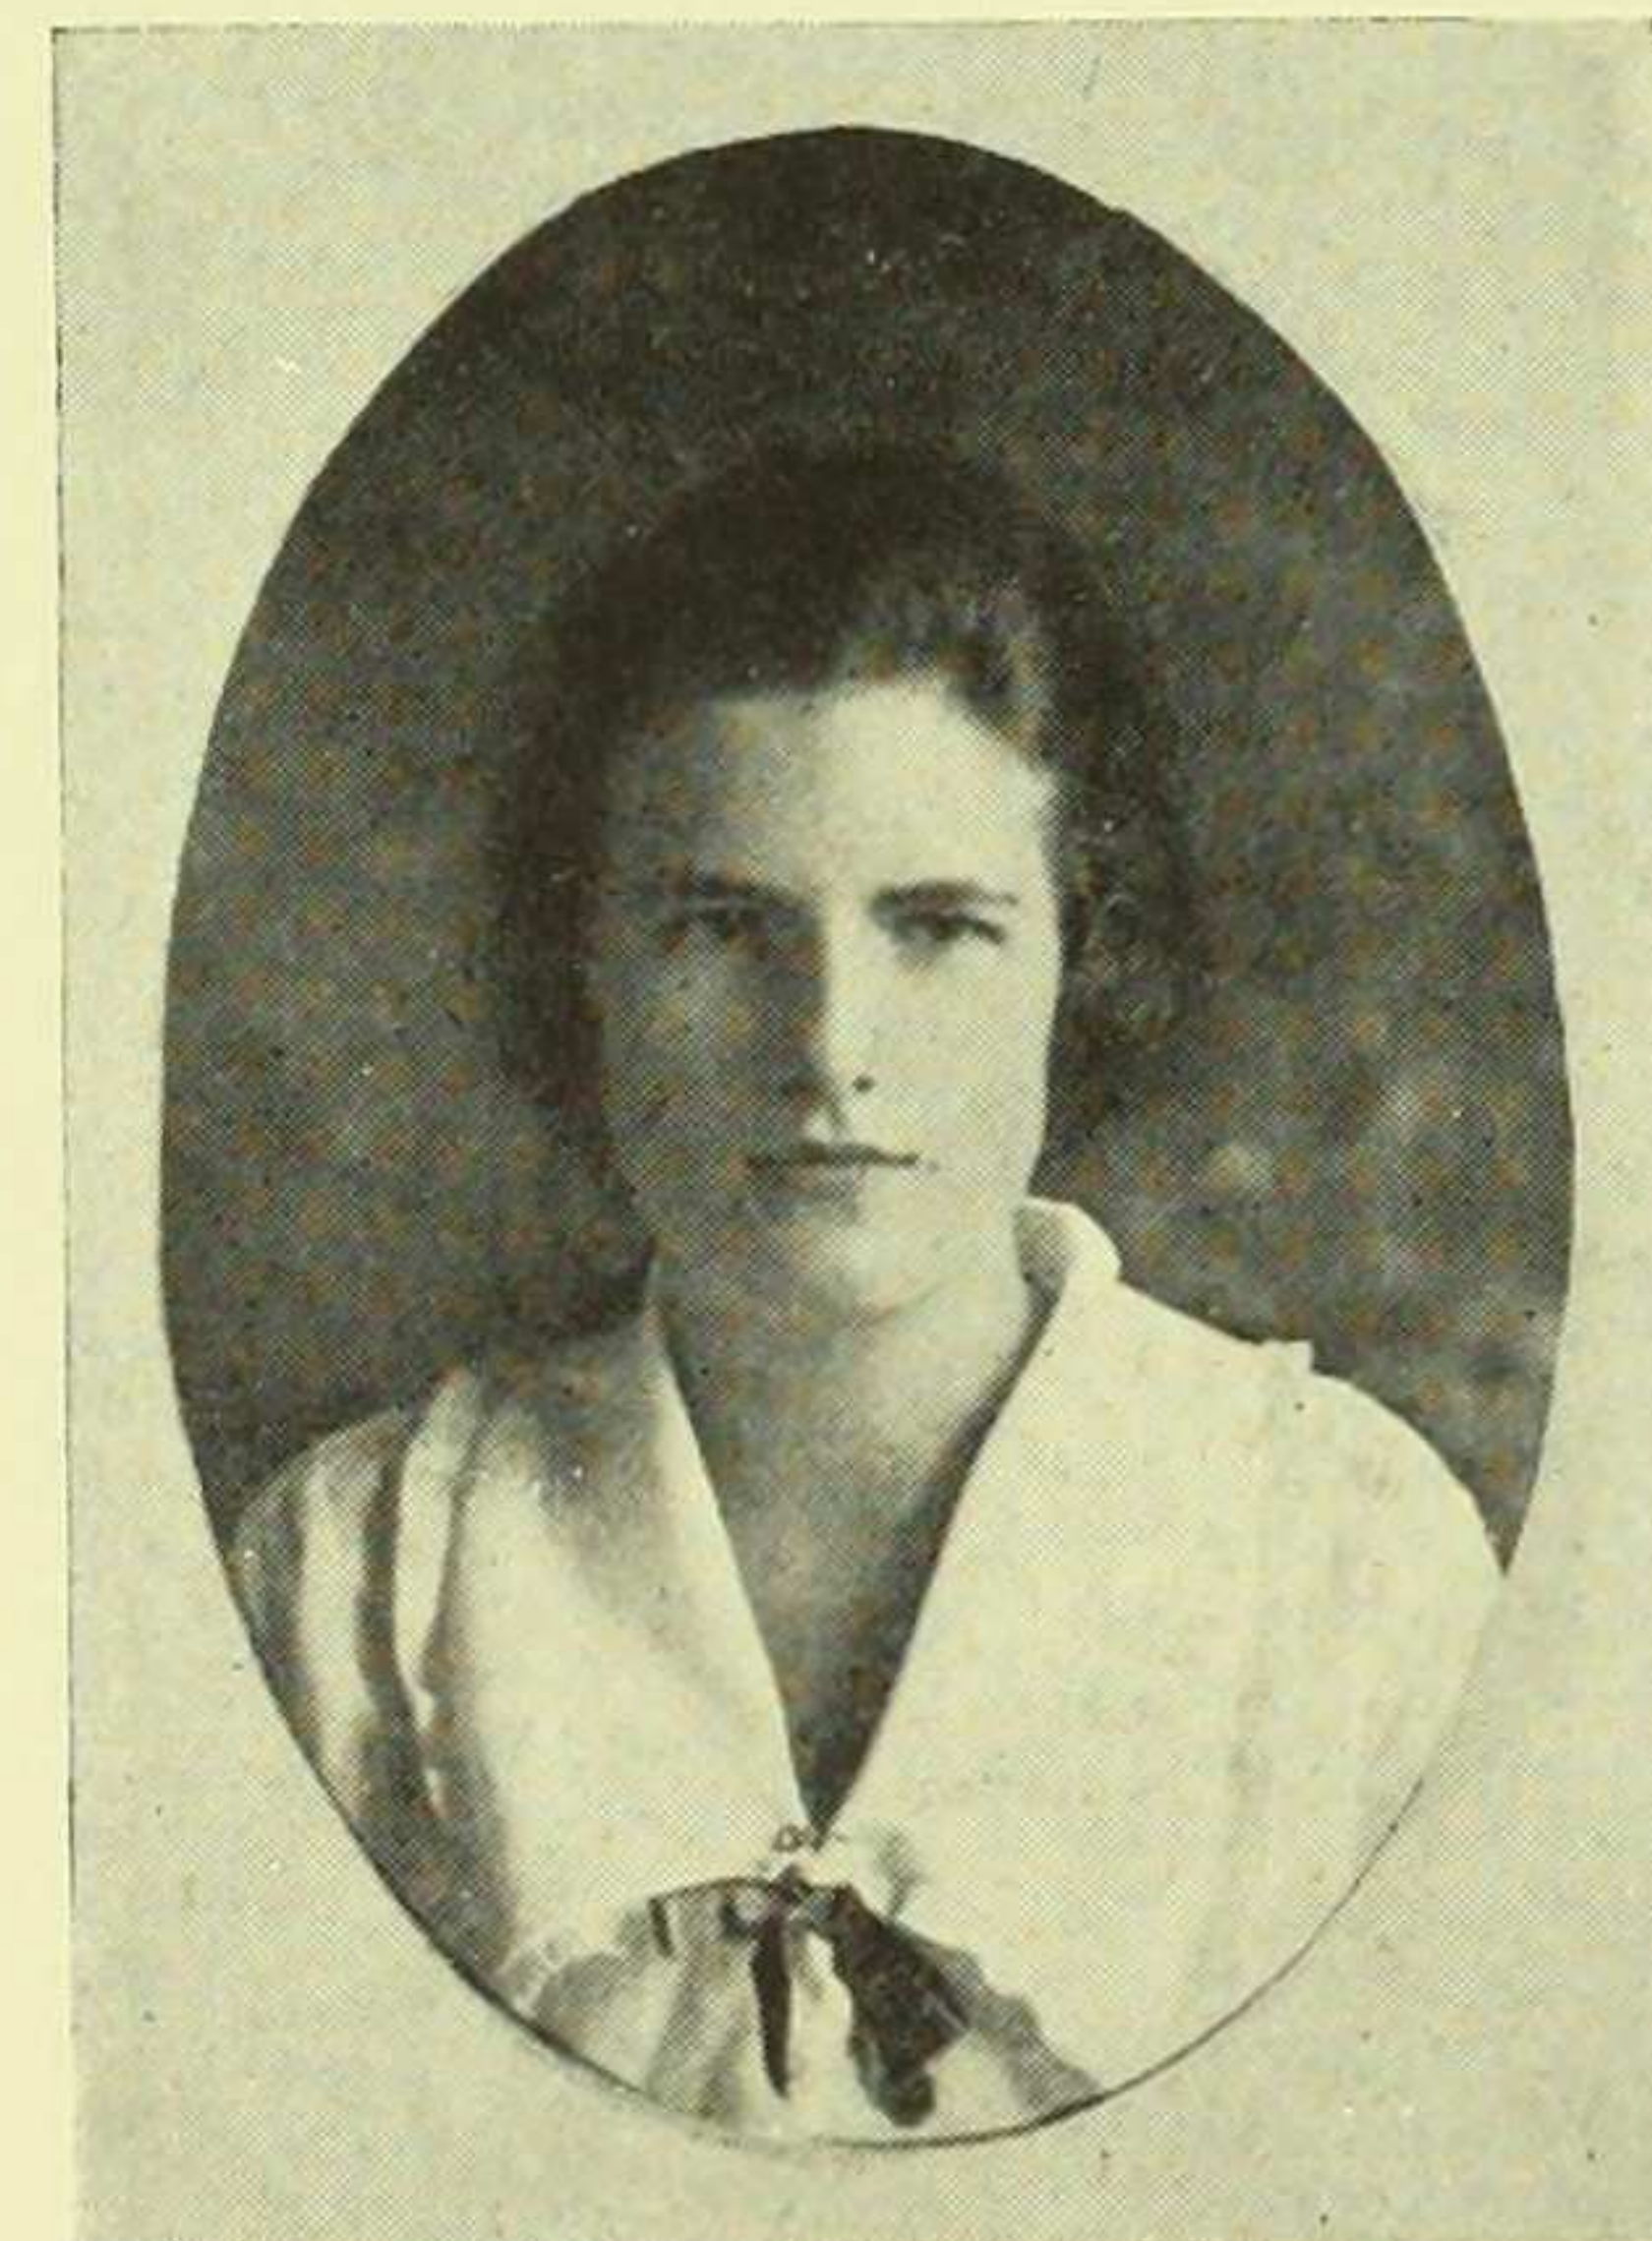

LOIS ADELAIDE TUTTLE

Lois Tuttle's very pat in Classic things, especially Latin.

THERESA VOGEL

Her Aspiration's running high;
It's social work she's going to try.

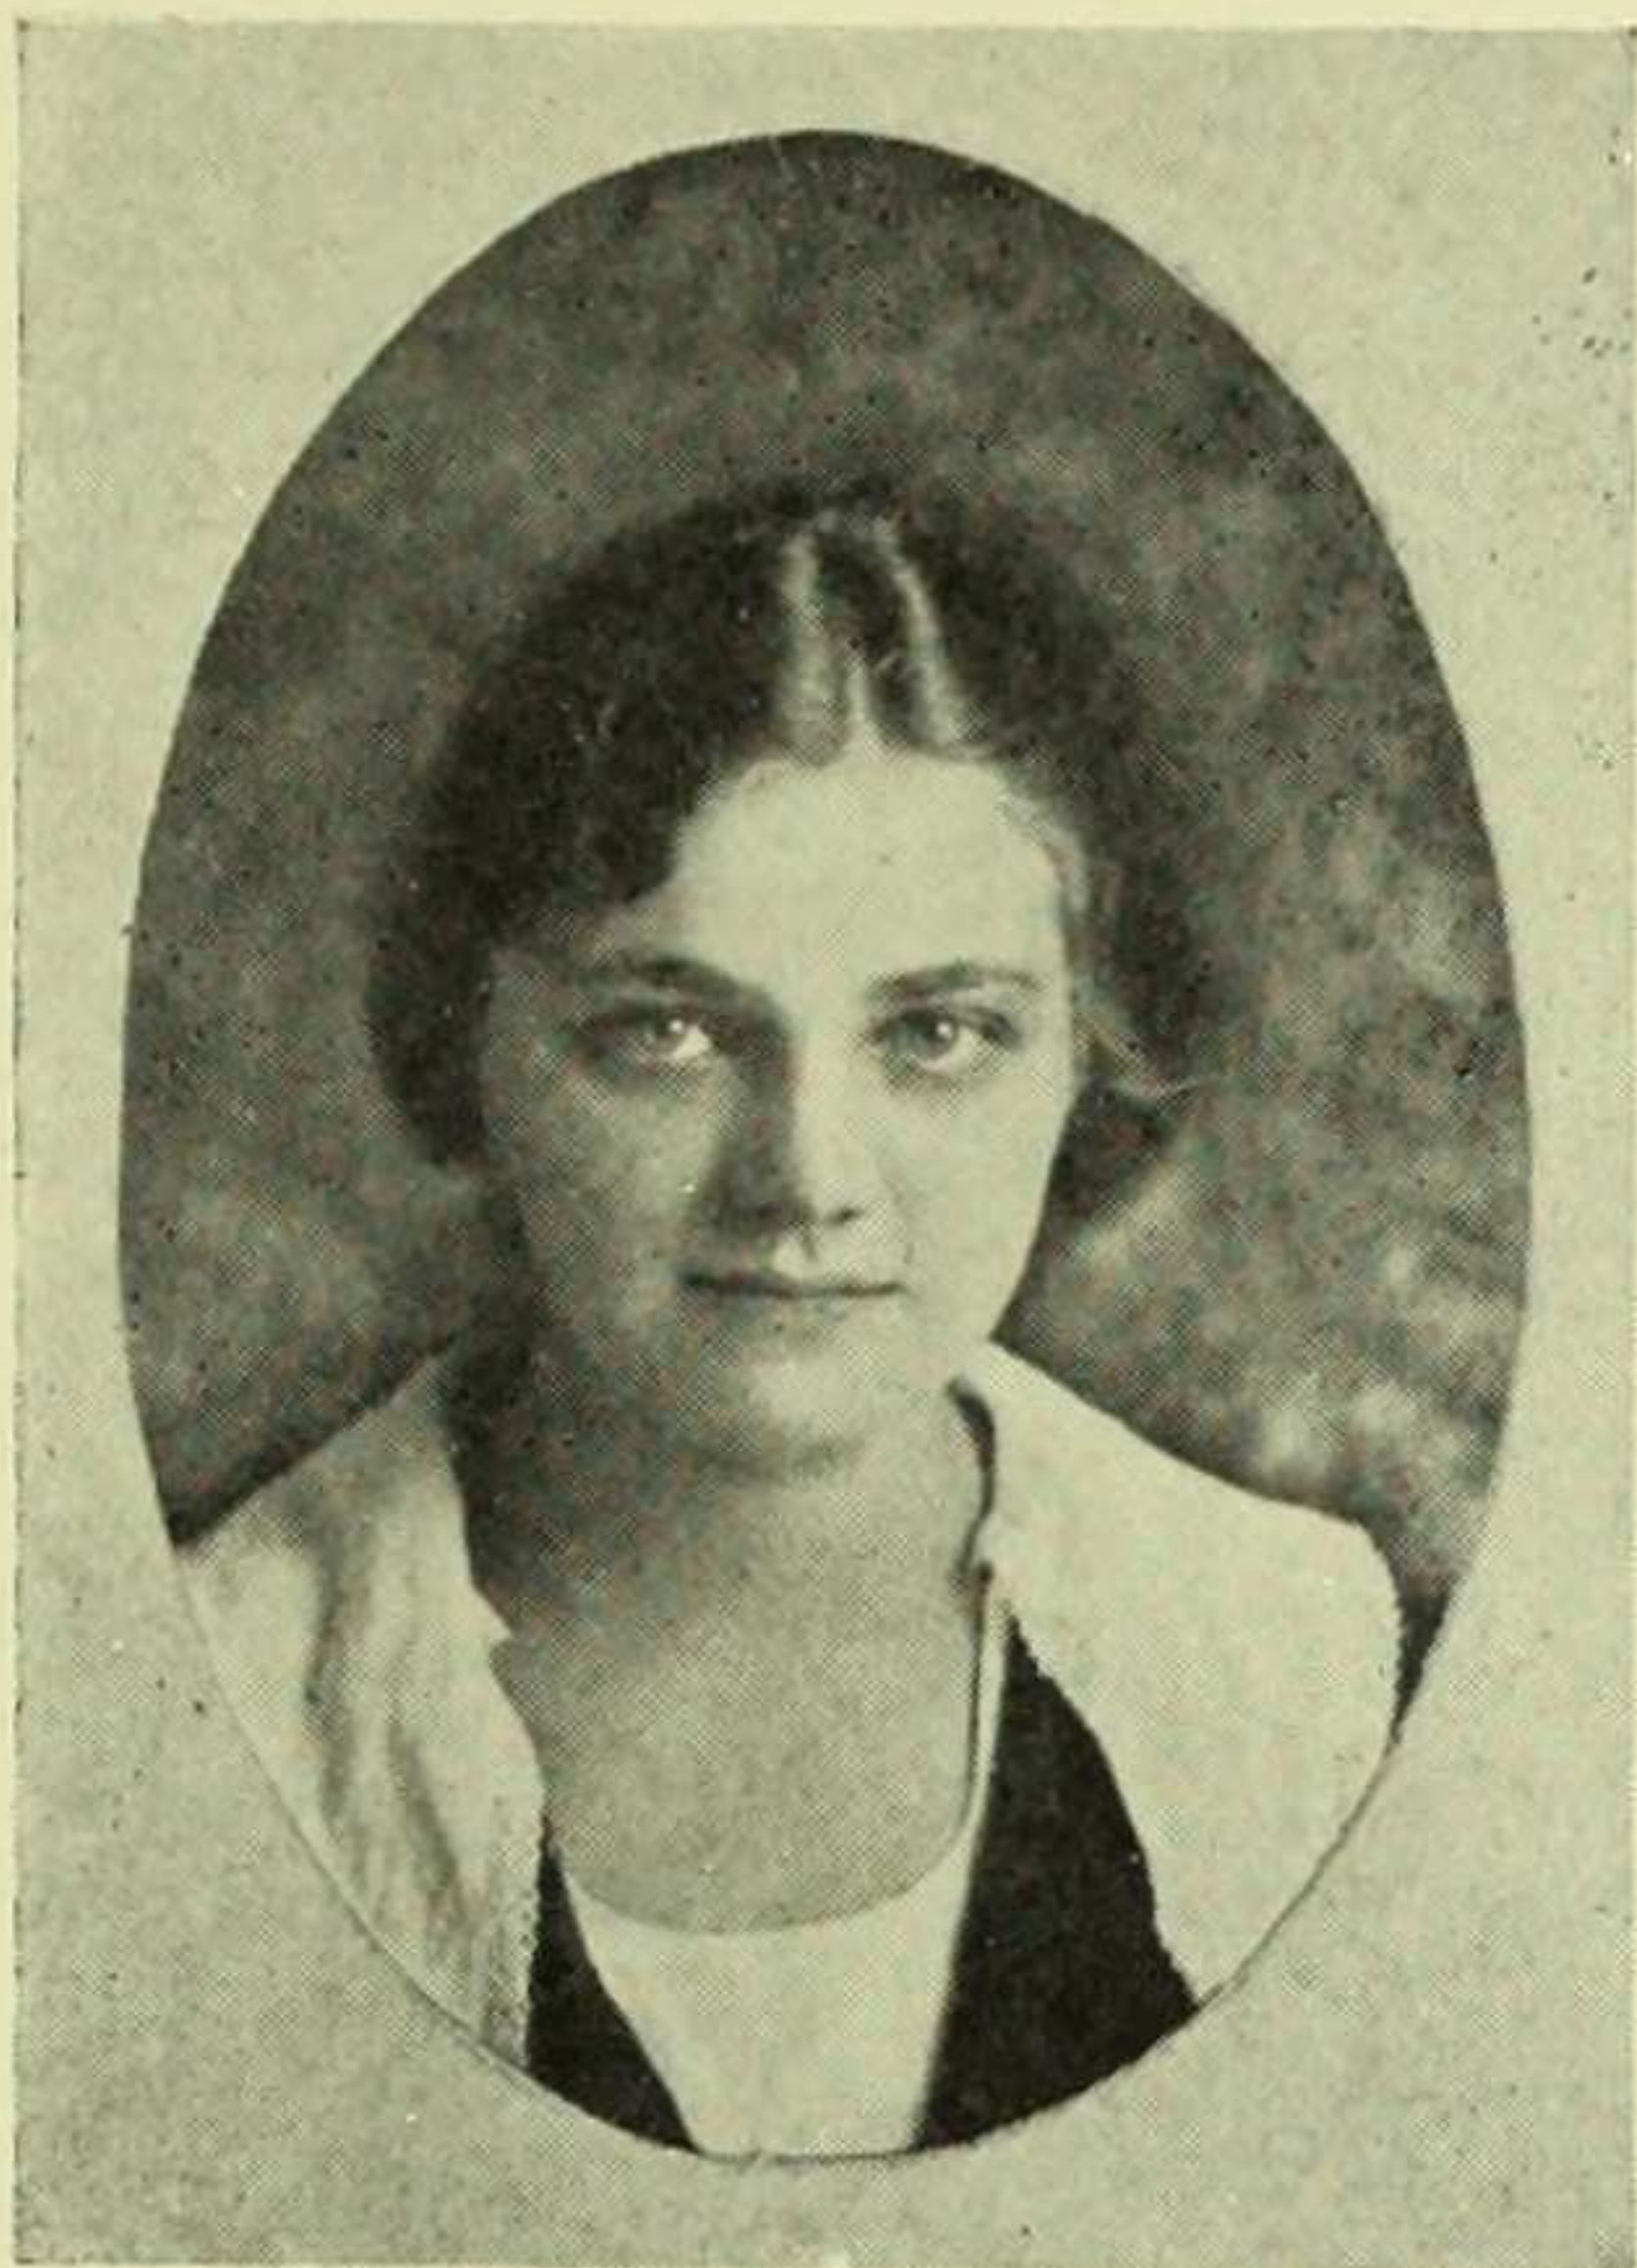

MARY ELIZABETH VAIL

Mary's new with us this year;
We are mighty glad we've met
her.
Pity we so often hear,
"My, I wish I knew her better."

FLORENCE VON DEESTEN

About the town Hoboken
It's really very lame
For us to start a-jokin'—
Flo lives there just the same.

ADELAIDE VON HOLTEN

My dear, and then he said to me—
We didn't get out home till one—
Yes, Chemistry's my favorite course.
Of course it is; ask Marion.

NATALIE EVA WEINER
Here's Natalie,
Who studies in the library
So chattily;
Begowned, behatted, and befurred
So nattily,
Who's had an economic bee
Just latterly.

FANNIE R. WAGENHEIM

Little Fay; oh, little Fay,
We bethought the other day,
If we were as small as you,
We could have a fur coat too.

CLARA ALEXANDER
WEISS

She always has something to say
On every conceivable matter;
Effusive and glib in her way,
She'll chatter and chatter and chatter.

RUTH D. WARD

Things political I thrive on;
I play baseball, too, you know;
And have you seen Tuts or Olive,
'Cause I really ought to go.

SARA GATEWOOD WEST

It's strange that Sara has
That latter appellation;
For she's as Southern as A sugar-cane plantation.

HELEN FRANCES
WILLIAMSON

With joy and elation
And great animation
She plunges right into An argumentation.

BEATRICE E. WORMSER

Smith was great, but just the same,
Barnard's nearer home, you see.
Here's a transfer, we acclaim,
Well versed in diplomacy.

BERTHA WITTLINGER

I want to have a small white house,
All trimmed with chintz and cretonne.
I want a pleasant husband and
A stool to rest my feet on.

ROSALIND A. ZOGLIN

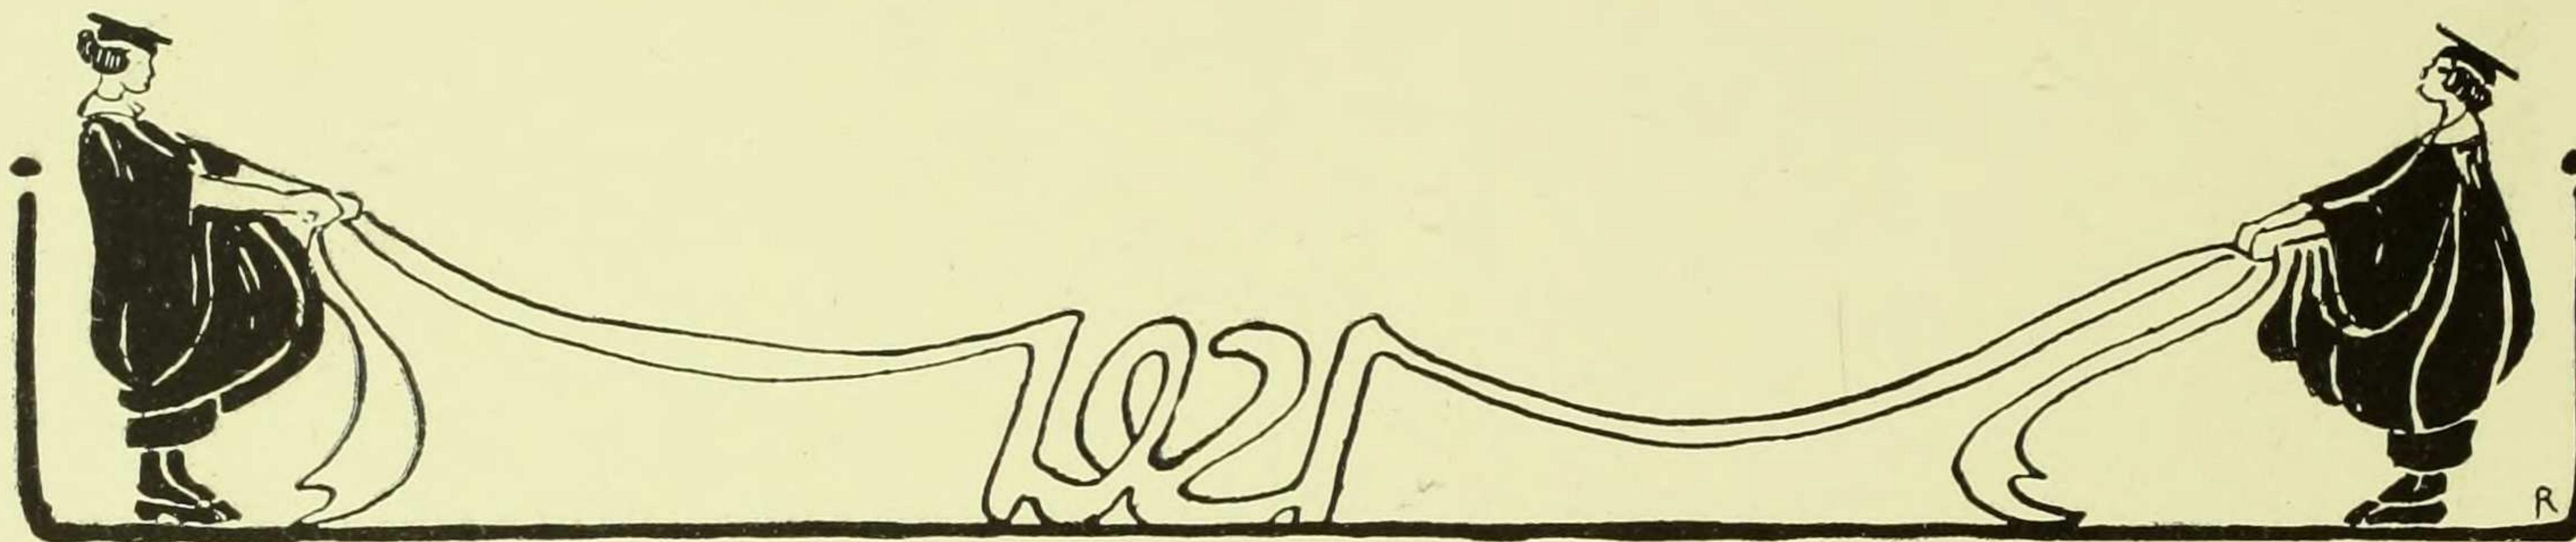

Rosalind with ease can drench
You or me with streams of French.
We should like to sing her praise
In a paean of Française.

OF INTEREST TO WOMEN

While we do not sell women's clothing, it is our experience that there is, on the part of many women, especially those interested in sport, a growing tendency to purchase from us for their own use Motor Coats, Sweaters, Wool Caps, Waistcoats, Gloves, Mufflers, Boots, Leggings, Puttees, etc., liking these articles all the more apparently because, as distinct from being "mannish," they are the very things that are worn by men.

Where Jell-O Helps

It was a wise writer in the Chicago Tribune who said :

“A girl who has to hold in after life solemn communion with stewpans and gridirons had better learn in advance how to use them.”

And a girl who can evolve from this solemn communion delectable things to eat and at the same time make the figures come out on the right side in the account book every month must be adjudged a treasure.
