APPENDIX

AUTHOR INDEX

Preface

The following pages constitute the first volume in a projected annual series initially referred to in our correspondence as THE YEAR'S WORK IN WOMEN'S STUDIES, now entitled WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S STUDIES. As this change in title suggests, the concept of this project has not remained static since its beginning. Instead it has evolved such as to include some features that might appear unusual, and thus a few words of introduction insinuate themselves here by way of explanation.

At the outset we resolved to incorporate the year's (1971) scholarship in women's studies from all disciplines into a larger interrelated totality. This interdisciplinary approach most suitably reflects the study of women as the subject with disciplinary studies as subsets of that subject (e.g. education as an aspect of the study of women instead of vice versa.) But even this interdisciplinary approach remained inadequate to our purpose. For unlike those bibliographies that simply seek to stimulate further studies, we want to stimulate action as well. That is, identifying and understanding the process of sex-role indoctrination and the forms of sexual oppression quite naturally activate ones interest in eliminating them. Thus our scope broadened to encompass theory and practice in the interest of igniting a livelier interchange between the two. Concretely this means that we have included not only the year's studies of stereotyping in children's literature, but also bibliographies of non-sexist children's literature, feminist presses that print such literature and feminist bookstores that sell such literature. Or, as another example, we have listed not only numerous studies of sex discrimination in employment but in addition, affirmative action plans and women's counseling services.

The task of gathering this assortment of material was accomplished in the following way. First, more than 800 form letters went out to all persons listed in the NEW GUIDE TO FEMALE STUDIES (those teaching women's studies courses in 1970-1971) and to all women's organizations listed in the WHOLE WOMAN CATALOGUE. The purpose of this letter was to solicit information on research-in-progress or action projects that the recipients as individuals or in groups might be involved in. Then, as we compiled the responses, we also consulted the bibliographical sources listed in the appendix as well as research-in-progress lists of the disciplinary caucuses also included in the appendix. By this method we have tried to include as much material as possible: research-in-progress, dissertations, pamphlets, innovative projects as well as published research. Unfortunately, due to severe restrictions on our time and energies, we were compelled to exclude the many articles that have appeared in popular magazines. This limitation seemed relatively inoffensive to our otherwise all-encompassing scope since the READER'S GUIDE TO PERIODICAL LITERATURE can easily compensate for this deficiency. Still, much has undoubtedly been inadvertently omitted. In order to rectify this we eagerly welcome any additions or corrections which will then appear in a forthcoming supplement to this first volume. Another regrettable limitation is that we have not been able to examine all our listings first hand. We gathered the somewhat random annotations from the responses to our questionnaire and as condensed versions of annotations or abstracts from other sources. As a result we cannot vouch for the points of view that might be represented in our entries.

Finally, a few words of explanation might be added to confront our lurking concern over the wisdom of our organization, particularly of sections B through E. One might ask, for instance, why an otherwise conventional subject heading such as education has been fragmented into four independent subsets of larger categories. Why shouldn't education, family, employment, etc. be categories in their own right with appropriate subdivisions? The rationale for this lies in our endeavor to organize the material in a way that is intrinsically meaningful to the subject. In so doing we have chosen to present these social structures not as static, inalterable forms, but rather in their dynamic relationship to the process by which women are indoctrinated and entrapped. With this we wish to stress that in this dynamic interaction the instruments of indoctrination and oppression such as education can be turned into their opposite, into instruments of change and liberation.

To conclude we would like to acknowledge our gratitude to Catharine Stimpson and Phyllis Dain for their helpful advice and timely encouragement, to Kathe Shick for her contributions in the area of women and the medical profession, to Dolores Janiewski, whose meticulous typewritten rendering of the final copy should be evident from every page, and to everyone else whose efforts we greatly appreciate.

A BODIES

HORMONES

- 1 Katharina Dalton, "Prospective study into puerperal depression," BRITISH J OF PSYCHIATRY 118(547):689-692, June 1971.
Describes a study of mood changes through pregnancy and puerperium. Suggests that a basic factor in depression following birth is difficulty in adjusting to differing hormone levels.
- 2 Jane Freeman Feierabend, +study of the interaction of estrogens with breast tissue (Pharmacology, Boston University Medical School, Brighton, Massachusetts)
- 3 Gunn Johansson, "Sex differences in the catecholamine output of children," REPORTS FROM THE PSYCHOLOGICAL LABORATORIES, n. 325: July 1971, 5p. (University of Stockholm, Psychological Laboratories, Stockholm, Sweden)
During an active period boys were found to excrete significantly more adrenaline and noradrenaline than girls.
- 4 Vera J. W. McLeroy, "The effect of synthetic sex hormones on serum protein and ascorbic acid concentrations in women," Dissertation 1971 (Florida State University)
Study showing that women receiving oral contraceptives have significantly decreased mean albumin concentrations and mean leukocyte ascorbic acid concentrations.
- 5 "Monoamines and ovarian hormone-linked sexual and emotional changes: a review," ARCHIVES OF SEXUAL BEHAVIOR 1(3):205-18, 1971.
- 6 Lloyd Shearer and Carol Dunlap, "The first woman president of the United States - why not and when?" PARADE MAGAZINE 4-6, February 1971.
Refutation of the argument that women are unqualified for the presidency because of hormonal changes.

PERIODS

- 7 D.D. Diespecker and Eva Kolokotronis, "Vibratactile learning and the menstrual cycle," PERCEPTUAL AND MOTOR SKILLS 33:233-234, August 1971.
- 8 Desmond P. Ellis and Penelope Austin, "Menstruation and aggressive behavior in a correctional center for women," J OF CRIMINAL LAW 62:388-95, September 1971.
- 9 George S. Glass, "Psychiatric emergency related to the menstrual cycle," AM J OF PSYCHIATRY 128:705-711, December 1971.

- 16 Katharine M. Rogers, "The context of Arnold's plea for birth control in CULTURE AND ANARCHY," THE DALHOUSE REVIEW 51:463-74, Winter 1971.
- 17 Cathy Spitz, Alice Gold, and David Adams, +research on the effects of oral contraceptives on sexual arousal in women (Psychology, Wesleyan University, Middletown, Connecticut 06457)
Previous research has used intercourse rate as the measure of female sexual arousal. Since intercourse is very often a male-initiated activity, they are attempting to develop a method by which women monitor their bodies and feelings on a daily basis.

PREGNANCY

- 18 Warren Hern, "Is pregnancy really normal?" FAMILY PLANNING PERSPECTIVES 3(1), January 1971 (515 Madison Avenue, New York, New York 10022)
- 19 D.D. Moir, "Anaesthetic practice and pregnancy" LANCET 1:1027, May 15, 1971.
Points out danger of contact with anaesthetic chemicals leading to spontaneous abortion and perhaps involuntary infertility.
- 20 Elaine L. Mura, "Pregnancy and delivery complications in schizophrenic women," Dissertaion 1971 (Psychology, New School for Social Research, New York, New York 10011)

ABORTION - general

- 21 Norman K. Brown, et al., "How do nurses feel about euthanasia and abortion?" AM J OF NURSING 71:1413016, July 1971.

Analysis of public views on abortion among white Americans. Data are drawn from five Gallup polls and broken down by sex, age, religion, and education. Among all groups, danger to mother's health emerged as a much more acceptable reason for abortion than economic hardship.
- 23 Linda R. Cronenwett and Janice M. Choyce, "Saline abortion," AM J OF NURSING 71:1754-57, Summer 1971.
- 24 Charles V. Ford, Pietro Castelnovo-Tedesco, and Kahila D. Long, "Abortion: is it a therapeutic procedure in psychiatry?" J OF THE AM MEDICAL ASSOCIATION 218(8):1173-78, November 1971. (1000 West Carson Street, Torrance, California)
Evidence suggests it is.
- 25 Norma Goldberger, "Abortion," Dissertation 1971 (Sociology, University of Alberta, Edmonton 7, Alberta, Canada)
- 26 Donald Harting, "Abortion techniques and services: a review and critique," AM J OF PUBLIC HEALTH 61:2085-2105, October 1971.
Discusses the legal aspects of abortion, role of official health agencies, procedures, counseling and referral, avoidance of repeated abortions, and social and economic effects of abortion.
- 27 Alfred Kotasek, "Artificial termination of pregnancy in Czechoslovakia," J OF SEX RESEARCH 7(3):240-242, August 1971. (Charles University Medical School, Prague, Czechoslovakia)
Examines effects of law which grants abortion on medical and social grounds.
- 28 John F. McDermott and Walter J. Char, "Abortion repeal in Hawaii: an unexpected crisis in patient care," AM J OF ORTHOPSYCHIATRY 41(4):620-626, July 1971.
The problems of adjusting to the new form of patient care resulting from the repeal of Hawaii's restrictive abortion law are described, emphasizing sudden role shifts among nurses. Conclusions and recommendations have clinical and administrative implications.
- 29 Sanford Meyerowitz, Aaron Sathoff, and John Romano, "Induced abortion for psychiatric indication," AM J OF PSYCHIATRY 127(9):1153-1160, March 1971. (University of Rochester Medical School)
Study of women considered for induced abortion for psychiatric indication under restrictive state law over a seven year period. Author recommends more liberal abortion laws as a sociological and individual necessity.
- 30 David Kirk Michelman, "Abortion: a psychological study," Dissertation 1971 (Psychology, Michigan State University, East Lansing, Mich. 48823)
A discussion of the causes, incidence, and consequences of abortion integrated with an examination of the effects of restrictive abortion legislation, public needs, and public wants.

- 31 Emily C. Moore, "The major issues and the argumentation in the abortion debate," Appendix B to ABORTION AND PUBLIC POLICY: WHAT ARE THE ISSUES? Presented at the annual meeting of the Population Association of America, Washington, D.C., April 24, 1971 (Staff Associate, Demographic Division, The Population Council)

- 34 Madeleine Simms, "The abortion act after three years," POLITICAL QUARTERLY 42:269-86, July-September 1971.
Discusses the results of the British Abortion Act of 1967. This law gives the doctor the decision of when to abort; the author maintains that freedom for women will come only with self-administered abortifacient drugs.
- 35 Harmon L. Smith, "Abortion, death and the sanctity of life," SOCIAL SCIENCE AND MEDICINE 5(3):211-218, June 1971.
Discusses the moral problems raised by issues involving the preservation and termination of life and the importance of reconciling moral values with modern medical discoveries.
- 36 Phyllis L. Steward, "Normative views of doctors and nurses on abortion," presented at Southern Sociological Society annual meeting, 1971 (George Washington University, Washington, D.C.)
Nurses view abortion as a social problem requiring attention of the social well-being of the patients while M.D.'s view it as a personal problem warranting surgical intervention.
- 37 Egon Szabody, "The legalizing of contraceptives and abortions," IMPACT OF SCIENCE ON SOCIETY 21:265-70, July-September 1971.
Discussion of abortion and contraception in Eastern Europe where both are freely available. The abortion rate is high and use of contraceptives seems to be decreasing.
- 38 Judith Jarvis Thomson, "A defense of abortion," PHILOSOPHY AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS 1:47-66, Fall 1971.
A detailed analysis of the "right to life, showing that it does not guarantee the right to use of another person's body and that it consists not in the right not to be killed but in the right not to be killed unjustly. Concludes that abortion is not impermissible though it is not always permissible.
- 39 Roger Wertheimer, "Understanding the abortion argument," PHILOSOPHY AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS 1:67-95, Fall 1971.
Explores the conservative Catholic position and the liberal argument. Concludes that legal prohibitions against abortion are illegitimate.

STEREOTYPING THROUGH FAMILY

- 90 Matthew Besdine, "The Jocasta complex, mothering and women geniuses," PSYCHOANALYTIC REVIEW 58:51-74, Spring 1971.
Psychosexual development of female geniuses studied using Isadora Duncan, George Sand and Queen Elizabeth I. The personality structures and psychosexual difficulties are similar in male and female geniuses. The key to the psychosexual dynamics in women geniuses appears to be the role of provider to which the female child is conditioned by her Jocasta mother. Impressions are presented tentatively.

Psychiatrists and pediatricians have accepted as necessary and inevitable the model in which the biological mother must provide for all the needs of the child if it is to have normal development. This model is in fact culturally determined and other child-rearing practices might be better for both mother and child, and for promoting social change.

- 216 Peggy Hawley, "What women think men think. Does it affect their career choice?" J OF COUNSELING PSYCHOLOGY 18:193-199, May 1971.
It was hypothesized that men's views play an important although often unrecognized part in the careers women choose. This was supported by 2 findings in a study of 86 women. Attitudes depended upon career group in which they belonged and whether or not they were married.
- 217 Maureen M. Kaley, "Attitudes toward the dual role of the married professional woman," AM PSYCHOLOGIST 26:301-306, March 1971.
Purpose of the research was to understand why relatively few women pursue professional careers at a time when women's status is supposedly changing and there is value in specialized training. Findings indicate that married professional men had negative attitudes and these attitudes were crucial in influencing the professional woman's attitude about herself and the occupational plans of young females.

Study made of 33 male and 33 female first and second graders asking what they really thought they would be when they grew up. Results indicate that sex differences in vocational aspirations develop early in childhood and reflect traditional sex-role expectations. The girls already showed a more restricted outlook.

41 second grade girls in a Catholic school were questioned about their vocational interests/aspirations. Vocations were very sex-role stereotyped. Suggests that sex-role expectations pertaining to vocational aspirations are acquired and solidified far sooner than the time when decisions regarding adult life have to be made.

The study proposed to explore the relationship of academic group norms, group pressures and emotionally loaded, achievement-oriented cues to the demonstration of motive to avoid success. Findings: women demonstrated motives to avoid success independent of the assumed academic group norms. The testing conditions suggest the importance of possible effects of role identification - the presence or absence of motives to avoid success appears to be a function to which a woman identifies with the traditional larger socio-cultural norms.

Some were told that the paintings had won prizes, others that they were entries in a competition. Prize-winning works were judged about the same, but works described as "entries" were consistently evaluated higher where the artist was assumed to be male.

The consistently higher use of mood-modifying drugs by women is examined. An explanatory model is proposed, suggesting that women are permitted greater freedom than men to express feelings, perceive their feelings more readily and hence recognize emotional difficulties. The physician representing society that sanctions this freer expression, expects female patients to behave in this way, and thus expects them to require a higher proportion of mood-altering drugs than less expressive male patients.

- 1112 Keith E. Melder, +BORN EQUAL: THE GENESIS OF FEMINISM IN THE UNITED STATES (Associate Curator, Division of Political History, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. 20460)
A study of the origins of the women's rights issue in this country during the first half of the 19th century, considering the impact of several patterns in the growth of the United States, including changing attitudes towards women's roles inside and outside the home, changes in the means and organization of economic activities, liberal and conservative intellectual currents, the many social movements of the time which involved women directly and indirectly, and particularly the relationship between radical abolitionism and the status of women. It is argued that increasing uncertainty about women's status culminated in the anti-slavery movement in which women participated vigorously and controversially.
- 1113 Keith E. Melder, +WOMEN AND THE TEACHING PROFESSION: 1820-1860 (Associate Curator, Division of Political History, Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D.C. 20460)
Between 1820 and 1860 tens of thousands of women were encouraged to become school teachers, generally at the primary and elementary levels. In attracting females into the profession, educators responded to several attitudes and needs, and in so doing they contributed both to the emancipation and the exploitation of women.

- 1136 Dianne Alstad, +THE IDEOLOGY OF THE FAMILY IN EIGHTEENTH CENTURY FRANCE (Romance languages, Duke University, Durham, North Carolina 27706)
This study illustrates the development of the modern family ideal in the French bourgeoisie and contrasts the bourgeois family with the aristocratic family. A section on social history traces changes from the seventeenth to the eighteenth century in family structure, sentiments, life styles, and ideology, relating these to political and economic interests. A section on the history of ideas on the family places emphasis on the theories of the philosophes and especially, on Rousseau.
